Petitioners' information raises council concern

By Barbara Brundage

The City Council is worried that "misleading information" concerning the city's vacation of 300 feet of public road and a bridge on Bay Drive to a private owner is being circulated by citizen petitioners who are asking the council to rescind its action.

"People are being told by the group that is circulating a petition that the council gave away public beach access," Mayor Porter Goss told the council last Tuesday.

"That is absolutely not true," Goss said. "There is no public beach access from either the narrow road or the wooden bridge that serves only the Snell residence."

Vice Mayor Mike Klein agreed and added that the council's action "got rid of the city's liability for an old decrepit bridge."

At a press conference at the site last Thursday, Klein and Public Works Director Gary Price reviewed the "facts" for two members of the media.

The council last Tuesday authorized Klein, as vice mayor in Goss' absence, "to tell the council's side of the story and to get the facts before the public."

On March 16 the council unanimously adopted an ordinance that turned over to Larry and Sheila Snell ownership of the narrow sand road and wooden bridge that leads to their property.

McGregor traffic rerouted

By Cindy Chalmers

Visitors and Islanders coming to and going from Sanibel and Captiva will face detours along McGregor Boulevard through January 1983 to allow the four-laning of McGregor.

Sanibel officials were notified last week that effective Monday, April 12, McGregor is closed to all traffic from Kelly Road north to Miners Corner. Traffic will be rerouted to San Carlos Boulevard via Kelly Road until sometime in July.

When four-laning McGregor between Kelly Road and Miners Corner is complete, the boulevard will be closed from Kelly Road south to Shell Point Village. Traffic will be rerouted on Summerlin Road (County Road 869) until four-laning that section is completed sometime in January 1983.

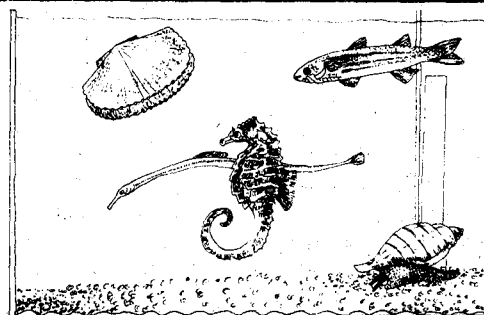

Summerlin Road is still under construction but should be ready for traffic in July. The section of McGregor from Kelly Road to Shell Point Village will not be closed for four-laning until Summerlin is open to traffic.

Kites Ahoy!

Steady winds provided ideal conditions for the throngs of kite flyers and watchers who turned out for Kite Day at the Lighthouse beach Saturday. About 100 people entered the Toys Ahoy! sponsored event and make the sky the stage for an aerial kite ballet.

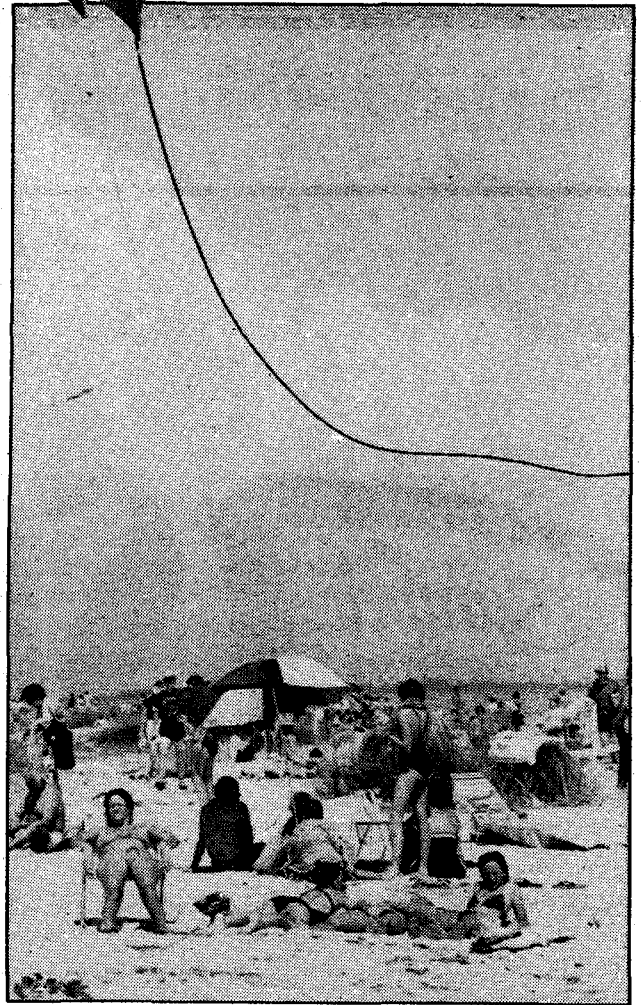

Southerly winds blew several kites into the clutches of the thick mat of pines that line the beach.

"There were a lot of spontaneous awards," said Carol Nix-Hennessey, manager of Toys Ahoy! Dick McWilliams got the Irish Rover award for flying his kite from a boat. Tom Smith was honored with the Most Creative Tangle award for managing to get four kites tangled on his line. And Joe West, flying a parrot kite with the help of his blue front Amazon, came away with the Best Flying Garb award.

"I'll come again next year," said Nicky Kow of Singapore. Kow's kites, under the flying direction of Carl Lorenz, took awards for best homemade (an American flag kite) and highest (more than 3,000 feet).

Sporting a "Go fly a kite" button, former National Security Adviser Richard Allen, who has a home on Sanibel, helped judge this year's festivities.

Joseph West had some kite-watching help from his bird during Saturday's Kite Day festivities.

Last bits of the Algiers sold to highest bidders

By David Meardon

Where a steamboat once towered amidst the whispering pines by the beach now lie the remnants of a bygone era.

Algiers memorabilia -- brass lamp fixtures, lifeboats, fluted smokestacks, carved wooden cupboard doors and unused appliances -- went on the auction block Saturday off Southwinds Road as scores of bargain hunters turned out to take home a piece of Sanibel history. By the end of the day, only a few unwanted old windows and items remained, waiting to be hauled away.

"It's kind of a shame," Dan Valentine said of the grand old steamship's demise. Valentine and his wife Shirley, of Dayton, Ohio, purchased two cupboard doors carved with a sea horse and a whale, which they plan to take to their summer cottage in Indiana.

Auctioneer William Alquist's fast tongue and quick wit kept bidders on their toes. "I want $10 a piece for these doors. I wouldn't sell them for five dollars," he said to a bidder. "They're worth $25."

"I wanted something from the Algiers," said Karie Stern, 13, of Sanibel, whose $3 bid for a light fixture was good enough to make the light hers.

One of the life boats went to Frank Hemelgarn of Fort Myers Beach, who said he plans to use it for a flower bed.

Not all of the remaining Algiers pieces went to private homes. The paddlewheel found a home in Pittsburgh at the Robert Bower Riverboat Collection at Station Square, an outdoor riverboat museum on the Monongahela River. It was taken apart last week and transported to Pittsburgh, where it will be restored before going on display with other riverboat artifacts.

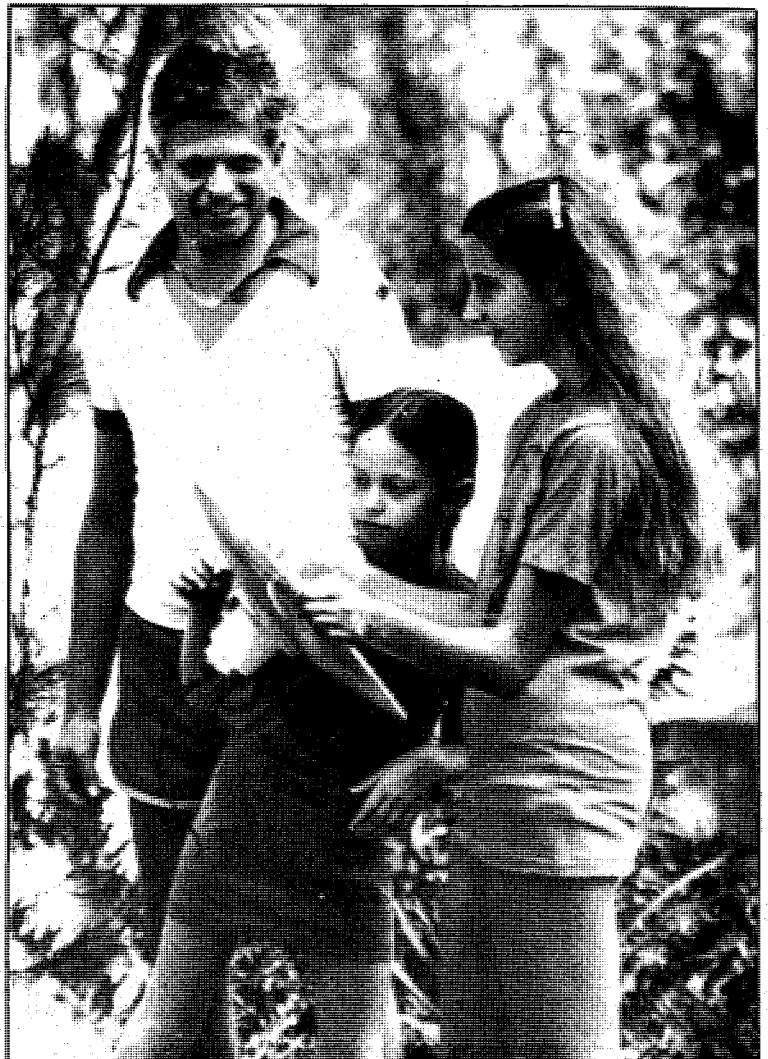

Theodore Harley of Pittsburgh's Vesuvius Crucible Co. paid an undisclosed price for the paddlewheel and shipping costs after Pat Wiley, director of special projects for the Pittsburgh History and Landmarks Foundation, worked out a deal with the demolition crew to preserve the old relic.

Wiley came to Sanibel to inquire about the Algiers after a member of the non-profit group heard of the landlocked steamship. She praised Frank Redmond and his Gator Demolition crew, who "took great pains to dismantle the deteriorating paddlewheel."

At the auction, Wiley also purchased the two fluted smokestacks for $375. The stacks will also be restored for exhibition in Pittsburgh.

By the end of the auction, $2,550 had been raised. The Islands' Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife (CROW) received 10 percent, or $255, of the proceeds.

A public access beach park with 25 parking places, a picnic area and nature trails will take the place of the Algiers and might be open to the public by the summer.

Renourishment gets boost from Army engineers

By Barbara Brundage

There was good news last week for the Captiva Erosion Prevention District Board of Commissioners.

Dick Stevens, project manager for the board's proposed renourishment program for 15,000 feet of beach south of the South Seas Plantation renourishment project, reported that the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, Jacksonville District, had notified him the project "warrants federal participation."

"They are sending our permit request to Washington," he said. "And it looks very encouraging that up to $1 million will be provided for the project by federal public funds."

Board Chairman Dick Butze traveled to Tallahassee recently, where he was assured by the Department of Natural Resources that $710,000 of state monies will also be available for the project.

Stevens also said he had received the first report of the monitoring program of the effects of the South Seas beach renourishment project on Captiva's shoreline.

"It was an aerial photograph taken shortly after that project was completed last October, and it shows the steep profile of the beach with some movement of the sand to the south as was expected by the engineers," he said.

Forty-one of the 100 owners of beachfront property have responded favorably to a survey seeking their consent to the establishment of an erosion control line.

Consent from the owners of 51 percent of beach frontage is required before the governor and state cabinet can approve the project, Stevens said.

Commissioner Ed Olling suggested that the erosion line and the Coastal Construction Setback Line both be plotted on a good aerial photo of Captiva beachfront to enlighten property owners who may be contemplating new construction.

The board also adopted rules of procedure, adapted from Lee County Commission format, that call for the election of other officers including a vice chairman, secretary and treasurer.

Butze suggested the immediate election of a treasurer to assume the duties of Commissioner John Oster, whose resignation has been accepted officially by Gov. Bob Graham, because a second signature is needed for signing district checks.

Dwight Wilson was unanimously elected to the post.

But Butze recommended postponing filling the other offices until the governor appoints a replacement for Oster.

Two Captivans, long-time resident Peg Hofschneider and newcomer Ed Manthei, have announced their willingness to serve on the board.

"Both are fine people and either would be acceptable to the board," Butze said. "I hope the governor will make a decision before our May meeting (the first Monday of the month)."

Wilson, who heads the board's Methods Committee, said ways to prevent beach erosion other than renourishment are being explored.

Lloyd Wright, Finance Committee chairman, said formation of an MSTU (Municipal Service Taxing Unit) was favored as a means of financing the renourishment project.

By this method the cost would be borne only by the beachfront property owners who would be affected by the renourishment, he said.

Butze announced that in the future public input on items not on the board meeting agenda would be heard at the end of each meeting. This does not preclude any citizen from commenting on an agenda subject while it is being discussed by the board, he clarified.

"We are not trying to stifle public comment," Butze added.

Francis Bailey weds June Shaw in Sanibel ceremony

By Barbara Brundage

Sanibel City Councilman Francis Bailey and June Shaw, formerly of Winnipeg, Ontario, Canada, were married Saturday, April 10, at the bayside home of Mr. and Mrs. Keith Trowbridge.

The Rev. Thomas Madden of St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church officiated at the 5:30 p.m. poolside ceremony. Only members of the immediate families attended.

Mrs. Trowbridge, the bride's sister, was her only attendant. Patrick Bailey served as best man for his father.

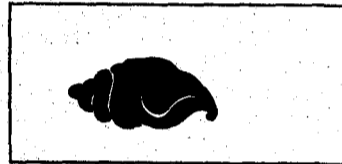

The couple left immediately after the ceremony for a short honeymoon in Bermuda.

The new Mrs. Bailey came to Sanibel about a year ago and has been employed as a secretary in the Interval Resort Management office of Captran International.

Bailey, a native of Sanibel, is the owner of Bailey's General Store, which was founded by his late father in 1899 as the Sanibel Packing Co.

He has been a member of the City Council since the city's incorporation in 1974 and has served one term as mayor.

Resident urges clear-out BMRH standards

To the Editor
The Islander

"There's none so blind as those who won't see," seems to aptly describe Sanibel City Council's actions in its current and questionable demands that the proposed Paulsen commercial supermarket include Below Market Rate Housing as a condition for the project's approval.

Our councilmen have chosen to ignore a publicized Circuit Court's rebuke to the Lee County Commission for a recent similar attempt to impose a special public benefit condition on a single developer as a quid-pro-quo for approval of the latter's project. The court held that such contract zoning was unconstitutional.

Aside from the foregoing indiscretion, a serious question was raised at the public hearings as to the feasibility of mixing housing and marketplace functions in close proximity. Cited was New York City's experience in the early 1920's. It approved the use and occupancy of two-story "taxpayers" with stores on the first floor and housing on the second. The short-lived trial period created such public health, crime and nuisance problems that no formal law was needed to end that "noble experiment." The contemplated "taxpayers" fast became "taxlosers" (Do we need such slums on Sanibel?).

Most significant were the audience's subrosa comments at the hour-long April 6 council hearings on the Paulsen project. Those remarks signaled to me some disappointment with the city officials' ability to decide such vital objective matters with their heads instead of their hearts.

To allay such misgivings, it seems prudent now for the council to publish clear-cut standards by which the siting of BMR Housing is to be smoothly incorporated into the appropriate sectors of the Island. The city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan currently only clearly permits such housing in resort, duplex and multi-family residentially zoned areas.

The new Visitor Center

Campbell defends original 'elegy'

To the Editor
The Islander

Since the appearance in the March 23 Islander of my piece, "The 'Ding' Darling Visitors Center - Dedication or Elegy?" I have had many favorable comments.

The many people who have approached me and commented on the subject totally agree in every way with the criticism made regarding the "Penitentiary Modern" atrocity. This is not surprising, for I have been studying and writing about the mismanagement of the refuge for several years and fell I know the subject well.

Only my friend Dick Campen, whose letter is here reproduced for all to see, disagrees. It is a pity that he has not informed himself on what I describe as vegetation and land destruction and which he denies took place.

I don't quarrel with his comment that only a small percentage of the whole refuge was destroyed. This is not the point. That any land was skinned - after the fashion of old-time Florida developers - is wrong and reprehensible and demonstrates far lower standards than those permitted by the Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

Of course the actual land occupied by a building has to be cleared; there is no disagreement on that point. But Sanibel's quality lies in its natural beauty, much of which is attributable to vegetation and habitat preservation.

Every major developer whose goal is money does a much better job than did the United States Department of the Interior at the Visitors Center, or at the Maintenance Center, or even the Memorial Drive of the Gasparilla Trail for that matter.

I invite Dick Campen to visit all of these places with me - I will be happy to explain

Campen defends Visitor Center

To the Editor
The Islander

This is in response to George Campbell's lead article in Section B of the March 23 edition of The Islander castigating the recently dedicated J.N. "Ding" Darling Visitor Center, its planners and designers.

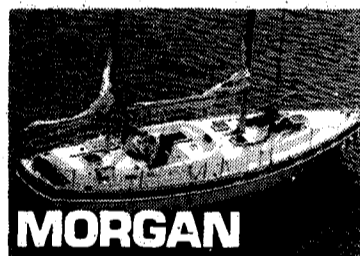

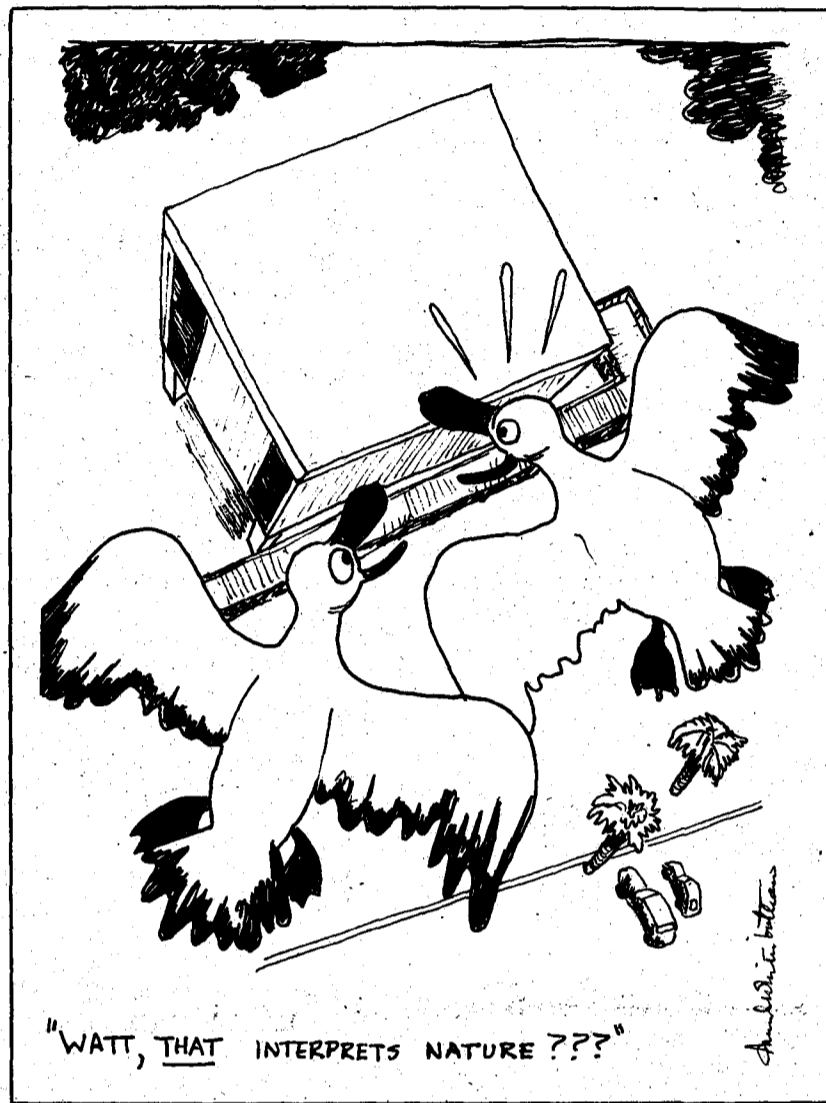

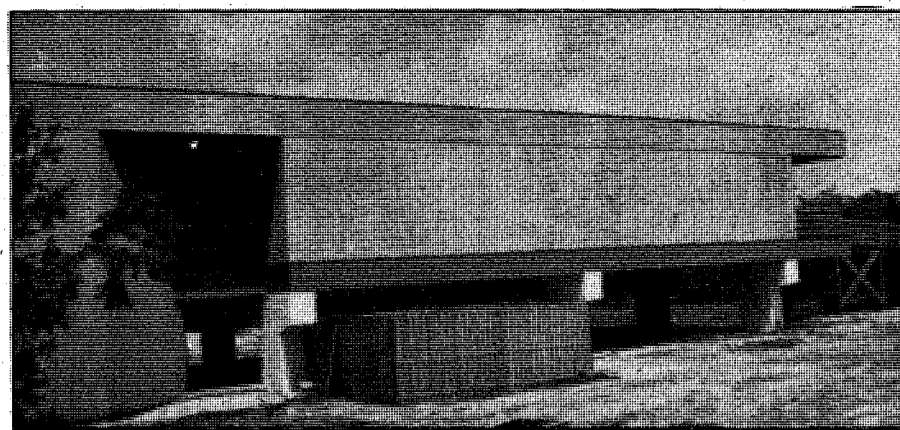

I usually enjoy George's articles about mushrooms, alligators, sea grapes and the nearly extinct Florida panther. However, I find myself entirely at odds with his self-described "critique of the poorly designed...energy inefficient visitor center which (according to George) one architect described as being 'Penitentiary Modern.'" Also, it would seem that important accusations by him are unjustified.

George states that "a lot of land was destroyed to build the center." The fact is that the center itself occupies less than 1/2 percent of the sanctuary's land. Quite to the contrary, no land was destroyed; only a sufficient area was cleared to accommodate a handsome building and its adequate, ancillary parking facility.

George states that "much valuable vegetation was destroyed." Charles LeBuff, whom Campbell praises at great length, advises that most of the valuable trees and plants occurring on the building site, including sabal palms, gumbo limbo, sea grape and native plants, were saved and transplanted elsewhere as in the parking divider strip.

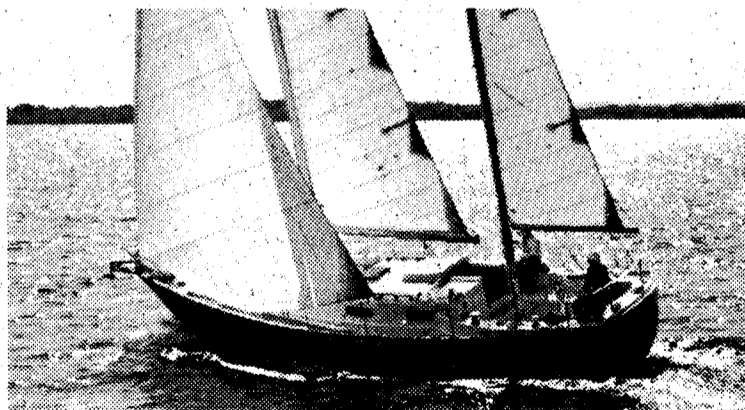

Native plants saved and now stored at the equipment Maintenance Center are to be used in the landscaping of the Visitor Center. Contrary to George's assertion, it would seem that there was no "careless destruction of specimen trees" on the grand scale suggested.

Caribe, Jolly Roger representatives defend resorts

Accusations and denials were the order of the day last Tuesday as representatives of the Caribe Beach Resort and the Jolly Roger defended their "time share" operations that have generated strong neighborhood opposition.

Speaking to a standing room only crowd at last week's council meeting, Morton Rabkin, president of Vacation Properties International, operators of the Caribe Resort, accused the city of "ruining our business" with its support of the Chamber of Commerce campaign to stamp out off-site sales solicitation on Sanibel beaches and in parking lots at Island restaurants and shopping centers.

"In February 1981 when we appeared before the council and presented our plans for the sale of advance reservations there was no problem," Rabkin told the council. "Now suddenly there's this tempest in a teapot."

The complaints stemmed from Islanders' misconception of the operation, he said. "Basically we're renting out rooms on a prepaid reservation basis," Rabkin, who usually works out of his company's Cincinnati, Ohio, main office, explained.

Bob Janes, managing partner of the Jolly Roger, which is currently converting to the time share concept, said his operation is essentially the same as the Caribe -- a prepaid membership program.

Both Janes and Rabkin said owners in their programs are permitted use of the facilities "365 days a year" but on an advance reservation basis.

A thick file of letters from concerned residents represented "significant amount of comment for this Island," Mayor Porter Goss said, adding that most of the complaints stemmed from overcrowding and enlarged use of the beach from the apparent "day visitors" at the Caribe.

Rabkin admitted that the situation had gotten out of hand under a voluntary reservation system.

On April 1 Caribe members living in Florida were notified that prior reservations will be required for a day's visit at the Caribe.

Upon arrival persons with reservations must register at the front desk and receive a day visitor's pass, which is valid only for the day it is issued and which expires at 8 p.m. The pass must be displayed in the car windshield at all times, the owners were informed.

Residents of the Kings Crown condominium next door to the Caribe say the beach memberships have caused them "sleepless nights" and created a Coney Island atmosphere on the beach.

"We are not concerned that you are keeping your units rented all year," Councilman Mike Klein told Rabkin. "The problem is the beach memberships that are increasing the intensity of use."

Goss pointed out that the 60 parking spaces Rabkin said were being used at the Caribe exceeded the 41 spaces permitted on the site and asked Rabkin if he would informally agree to limiting the parking to the legal number.

But Rabkin said that would be impossible until the selling program is completed.

Janes said the Jolly Roger on its development plan is permitted 59 parking spaces and a capacity occupancy of 300 for its 47 units.

"Some suites can accommodate up to 10 persons," he said. "And we intend to regulate our beach club membership either by total occupancy or the capacity of parking."

Janes, who said he opposes hucksterism, explained that it is difficult to control the salesmen who are hired by a separate organization.

Biddy Lang, an Fort Myers resident who owns a Caribe beach membership, said she uses the Caribe facilities about once a month.

"I'll never use the unit in my week. I intend to rent it," she added.

But the majority of the community concern goes to the intensity of use at the resort, Goss said. "One time share site might be all right, but if they start multiplying down the beach we'll have a serious impact on beach space and sanitary facilities," he warned.

Rabkin denied a rumor that the Caribe had bought the Ramada Inn and planned to convert the inn to time sharing.

Bo Veal, representing the views of both the Committee of the Island of which he is chairman, and the Committee of Neighborhood Associations, urged the council to put an end to the sale of beach club memberships before it is too late.

He suggested the memberships already sold should be declared null and void retroactively.

The three-hour discussion last Tuesday pointed up the need for considerable study on several of the controversial aspects, Goss said.

"It signals that further action must be taken by the council in the future," he concluded.

Petition carries 200 signatures

A petition with 200 signatures protesting a definition of single family-dwelling proposed by a planning commissioner was presented to the City Council last week by Islander Peter Valtin.

Valtin, son of Councilman Fred Valtin, represented an unorganized group of about 10 people that includes Debbie Hill, the petition's originator. Peter Valtin said the proposed definition does not limit the number of persons living in a single-family home but attacks the relationship of the occupants.

The proposal, introduced to the Planning Commission by Commissioner Al Edwards, defines a single family as a "group of any size, related by blood, marriage or adoption, and desired household servants; and a group not so related if there are no more than two persons, and desired household servants."

Edwards and other Islanders have expressed concern about the "overcrowding in rental homes in single-family neighborhoods, bringing with it an increase in noise and litter that is disturbing the peace and tranquility" of Sanibel's neighborhoods.

The definition was proposed as a method of reducing this density.

"But there is no connection with what it proposes to do and the way it reads," Peter Valtin said. "It will allow any number of servants and any number of blood related persons," he said.

Referring to Edwards' statement that he (Edwards) "did not want to see Sanibel populated by a bunch of hippies," which was quoted in the Miami Herald, the younger Valtin questioned Edwards' "moral qualifications" as a planning commissioner.

He accused Edwards of "wantonly injecting hysteria and hate into the city's deliberations" and asked the council to consider Edwards removal from the commission.

Former Planning Commissioner Betty Robinson said she saw "in this issue all the seeds of a community breach."

"It really distresses me," Robinson said. "Each side is very important. There is the right to use your property as you please and to live in peace and tranquility and it also involves the right to determine who lives under your roof."

"I don't want to see either set of rights destroyed," she added. "I hate to see the community split. We can never avoid differences of opinion, but there must be some way of avoiding scars that last a long time."

Mayor Porter Goss said he would like to see much public discussion of the proposed definition and added that he hopes the council "can count on fact and not emotion, especially in an election year."

Plans to pave Beach Road approved

Faced with the loss of more than $150,000 of the Causeway bond funds that will revert to the county if not used for road improvements, the City Council last week approved paving of Beach Road.

Several councilman expressed reservations about departing from the city's policy of preserving shell and sand roads to maintain the Island's ambience.

But Councilman Fred Valtin cast the only dissenting vote. He cited as the basis for his opposition the council's denial of the request from residents of Bay Drive that the city pave the dusty sand road. Those resident said they were willing to help pay for the improvement.

In a survey sent to 24 property owners on Beach Road last month, 11 favored paving the road with the cost borne by the city. Public Works Director Gary Price told the council last Tuesday. Four opposed the paving; nine did not respond to the inquiry before the March 31 deadline.

Beach Road was included plans for improvement to 12 roads to be financed by Causeway bond funds. Beach Road was included on the basis that it might serve as a possible evacuation route as an alternate for Lindgren Boulevard, Mayor Porter Goss said.

All five councilmen conceded the road is in "bad shape and potentially dangerous" and is flooded in the wet season and washed-boarded during dry periods.

Robert Schafer and his sister, Mary Lou Bailey, who own seven acres along Beach Road where they plan to build seven single-family homes, urged the council to approve the paving.

Councilman Mike Klein, who leaned toward keeping shell roads to preserve the Island atmosphere, pointed out that a paved surface would result in more traffic and higher speeds. "It might backfire on us by becoming a high speed shortcut," he added.

Goss was influenced by the life saving factor involved in its use an evacuation route. "It would be a public benefit to the community to pave it," he said.

City Manager Bernie Murphy said the city's engineering consultants had confirmed that to improve Beach Road by widening the present road and upgrading the drainage would not qualify for Causeway bond financing.

"It would cut down the cost of maintenance if it were a paved surface," Engineer Rocky VanGuilder said.

The Beach Road project will cost approximately $127,000 and require the acquisition of additional rights-of-way, Murphy said.

To date there is a total of $335,000 unencumbered in the bond project fund of which $176,000 already has been earmarked for redesigning the Periwinkle-Tarpon Bay Road intersection, Murphy said.

Money remains question in Lighthouse agreement talks

There is basically only one point left to be settled in the city's agreement with the U.S. Coast Guard to manage the Sanibel Lighthouse property, City Manager Bernie Murphy reported to the City Council last Tuesday.

Still undecided is the amount of money the Coast Guard will provide for refurbishing the Lighthouse and the two dwellings on the site, which are listed in the National Register of Historical Sites.

The Coast Guard originally offered to contribute $50,000, Murphy said, but after further discussions last week in Miami the figure may be higher.

Murphy will present the 10-year agreement for the city's operation of the property to the council for approval at its April 20 meeting.

The license will become effective May 1.

First readings heard for two specific amendments

The City Council last Tuesday declared first readings on two requests for specific amendments and set May 18 as the date for final action.

The council called Bert Jenks' plan for drainage at Sanibel Plaza shopping center "an innovative approach." But there was no discussion of Jenks' proposed plans for paving the sand and shell parking lot that he says will solve the "dust and mud problem."

Bert Nygren was not present for the first hearing of his request to construct a seawall on two lots in the wetlands zone at 2688 Coconut Drive.

City says Paulsen should limit restaurant seating capacity to 75

A 2,500-square-foot family type restaurant with 100-150 seats serving three meals a day is "too heavy" for the proposed Paulsen Shopping Center, the City Council agreed last Tuesday.

It was council consensus that the seats should be limited to 75 and the restaurant located in the 25,000-square-foot space allocated to the grocery store in the center.

During a presentation of the stipulated settlement agreement recommended by a council-appointed Fact Finding Committee as a compromise to settle Jerry Paulsen's law suit against the city without a court trial, Island architect Ray Fenton revealed that Paulsen planned a restaurant "just like those he has in all his Minnesota shopping centers seating up to 150" and located in retail space adjacent to the grocery.

The council had assumed from earlier discussions of Paulsen's plans for the controversial shopping center that the restaurant would be a small deli-type coffee shop within the grocery store itself.

The dining area only would occupy the 2,500 square feet and would be serviced by the same kitchen as the grocery store, Fenton said.

Ronald Wren pointed out if the restaurant were allowed to operate in some of the 13,000 square feet of space proposed for small, resident-oriented retail shops, the intensity of use of the site would be "dramatically increased."

To protect residents of Gumbo Limbo to the rear of the proposed center, the city must control the hours the restaurant can be operated, he said.

"From experience I know that cleanup operations and preparation for the next day's business in a restaurant sometimes last until 2 or 3 a.m.," Wren told the council.

"If you permit this you are creating a living nightmare for people in Gumbo Limbo," he said.

In clarifying other conditions Planning Director Bruce Rogers reiterated his skepticism that 12 Below Market Rate Housing units to house employees could be developed on the site and still comply with standards of the new commercial development code.

But the council, reluctant to abandon an opportunity to provide badly needed moderate cost housing, retained the stipulation that puts the onus on Paulsen to build up to 12 BMR dwelling units at the shopping center.

Councilman Fred Valtin suggested that if it develops that no BMR housing can be built there, Paulsen might donate a sum of money related to the cost of 12 units that could be used as "seed money" to establish a non-profit Housing Foundation.

Fenton acknowledged that it is Paulsen's problem to provide housing for his help.

The council agreed with Fenton's suggestion that if sometime in the future it is necessary to provide some different form of traffic control at the Periwinkle Way-Casa Ybel Road intersection, the cost should be shared "on an assessment basis" by all

Mosquito district plans to move shed

The Lee County Mosquito Control District will move a turquoise storage shed from the city's roadside park on Periwinkle Way to its new heli-pad on Bowman's Beach Road.

Members of the city's Vegetation Committee, who are beautifying the park with plantings, consider the building an "eyesore" and requested its removal, Planning Commissioner Louise Johnson said.

Mosquito Control Director Wayne Miller, who arrived at last week's council meeting via the district's helicopter, said he had no objections to moving the building.

But the purpose of his presence was to seek clarification from the council on whether the action complied with the specific amendment granted for a fence setback at the helicopter site.

He said the 20-year-old fuel tanks stored in the building will be replaced by new ones.

Miller said the building will be relocated in a heavily wooded area 725 feet from the road and will not be visible to residents of the Bowman's Beach area.

Miller said the district preferred to install the fuel tanks above ground and could screen them with suitable vegetation.

Councilman Mike Klein agreed it would be easier to maintain and detect leaks if the tanks were left above ground.

Councilman Fred Valtin said he initially opposed location of the heli-pad in the residential Bowman's Beach area and would vote against moving the storage building there.

His was the only dissenting vote on Councilman Duane White's motion to approve the move, subject to all of the performance standards of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

Attorney advises against section of soliciting ordinance

An ordinance designed to stop off-site soliciting for time share operations on Sanibel's beaches and streets, including rights-of-way, weakened considerably last week when City Attorney Neal Bowen ruled one provision unconstitutional.

After further research Bowen found that to prohibit solicitation at a "location other than the site or premises which is the subject of the solicitation" is "unequivocally, categorically and without question unconstitutional and should be deleted from the ordinance."

But the council is counting on the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce and Island businesses to implement another provision that prohibits solicitors from operating on residential or commercial premises where "No Soliciting" or "No Peddlers" signs are displayed.

Bowen called that provision of the ordinance "good enforcement mechanism."

Although the ordinance requires a permit for solicitation, non-profit or charitable organizations will still need only to register with the city manager.

The ordinance was approved on second reading by a 4-0 vote, with Councilman Francis Bailey absent.

Ordinances adopted without comment

Following its avowed intention of "streamlining meetings," the City Council last Tuesday quickly adopted without comment four ordinances on second reading.

They included: approval of a one-year extension of Police Officer Betty Weir's lease for the caretaker's cottage on the city-owned Algiers property; vacation of Sanderling Circle and a portion of Sand Castle Road in The Dunes subdivision to Mariner Properties; a specific amendment to permit a fence within 20 feet of a body of water (a mosquito ditch at the rear of the Island Garage) requested by James Thomas; and a specific amendment permitting the extension of a cement pad to make the dumpster at Coquina Beach condominium more accessible.

The council pointed out that all four items were discussed at length when they were introduced to the council for first readings.

Sandbag request withdrawn

A specific amendment requested by Bird Rosen to use sandbags as an erosion control structure on the gulf beach was withdrawn by the applicant, City Manager Bernie Murphy informed the council last Tuesday.

Rosen and his wife are on a cruise and are not expected back in Sanibel until April 15. Murphy said a city code inspector on March 22 found two sandbags partially exposed on the beach in front of the Rosen residence at 4501 Gulf Drive.

"We are aware that this is a violation (of CLUP's provision that prohibits any development forward of the Coastal Construction Setback Line) that needs to be corrected," Murphy assured the council.

The council continued the second hearing of Kenn Keim's request for a specific amendment to permit construction of a rubble revetment and groin and an 880-square-foot dock on the bay at his home on Bird Lane.

Coastal engineer David Tackney and environmental consultant Richard Workman, representing Keim, told the council a new survey revealed more excavation will be required than was first anticipated.

The additional dredging will produce 550 cubic yards of sand as compared to the original estimate of 340 cubic yards.

Workman said he did not know how this material would be disposed of, but the council suggested it be kept on the Island.

City Attorney Neal Bowen reminded the council that a title change in the ordinance would be required.

City Manager Bernie Murphy advised that, "Caution dictates it (action on the ordinance) should be continued."

Fee waived for Algiers auction

Conceding an auction of materials and artifacts from the razed Steamboat Algiers is a "public benefit," the City Council waived the $100 occupational license fee for Island Auctioneer William Alquist.

Contractor Dale Schneider, who just completed the project of demolishing the former car ferry, said 10 percent of the proceeds from the auction will benefit C.R.O.W., a non-profit organization on the Island devoted to caring for sick and injured wild life.

C.R.O.W. staff members assisted with

Bowen to draft charter for shelling committee

At the direction of the City Council, City Attorney Neal Bowen will draw up a resolution outlining a charter for the Live Shelling Committee "to provide its members direction."

traffic control at the sale on Saturday at the former site of the Algiers on the gulf beach at the end of South Winds Drive.

Public Works Director Gary Price said the idea for an auction developed after the city received numerous inquiries from residents on how to obtain a memento of the boat that was termed an historic relic by some and a "white elephant" by others.

The Live Shelling Committee was established as a standing advisory committee by the council in February 1979.

Current chairman Dr. K.C. Emerson said the committee has done considerable research in drawing up six tenets that would serve as guidelines for all future committees and can be used in drafting an appropriate resolution.

Councilman Mike Klein, liaison to the Live Shelling Committee, recommended appointment of five new members. They are Lois Dunham, Dwight Fischer, Fred Sheakley, Ann Winterbotham and Alfred Zuhonne.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

If there is one column I hate to write each year, it has to be the one that comes along about this time and always leaves me feeling, "Oh no, this early?"

It happened just the other day. A guide who works at Tween Waters Marina brought in the first of the season snook. Now, this isn't much news unless you are one of those dedicated (some call them nuts) people who have only one fish in their lives: snook.

These people will tolerate sea trout and catch a tarpon or two in the summer, just to keep in shape. And when the folks from up north come down, they will take them out to catch some grouper, but what really counts is the ol' linesides, the snook.

I guess every part of this nation, and probably the world, has it's crazy season over fish. I recall growing up in northern New York State and watching with some puzzlement the opening of trout season, when people would line the banks of a creek to catch 10-inch fish after paying $100 for clothes, $200 for the fly rod and related tackle, $6,500 for the four-wheel drive and another $100 for doctor bills to cure the cold they would always catch. Trout? Hell no, you don't go trout fishing to catch fish -- you go to look good.

It's the same in every part of the fishing areas of the country, whether the fish are bluefish, bill fish, crappie. But we have two fish here: tarpon (which is not really ready to appear yet) and the ol' snook.

As I said, I kind of hate to see the first snook brought in. One reason is because I rarely ever catch the first one. But more importantly I hate to see the first snook because it marks the end of what we guides call the "social" season and the start of the "fishin'" season.

This year it came about the last of March. Someone caught a snook in Redfish Pass. The next day, half a dozen of us drifted for "the big one."

We are still drifting. As veteran fishing guide Jerry Way said, "Oh, no -- you guys aren't starting that again, are you?"

It wasn't but a few days later that Jerry brought in his first snook, and I was saying that about him. Jerry jumped the first tarpon I have heard of this year. Said it took a trout bait. The fish jumped a few times and was cut off. Light trout tackle is no match for a 100-pound fish. More on tarpon fishing in the next couple of weeks.

So, we look at another snook season. Excuse me, but as usual I assume that everyone knows what I'm talking about. Snook are a designated state game fish. They have to be 18 inches to bring in the boat and keep. They average from six to 20 pounds; some reach 30 pounds, but all are the best -- and that's without qualifications -- the best fish you'll ever eat.

On top of that, snook are magnificent fighting fish that take study, persistence and patience to catch.

People get fanatical over snook. Folks from all over the United States come down in the warmer months to fish only for snook. Given the cost per fish, with travel, rooms, meals, guides and all added in, I bet each fish is worth $1,000 in many cases.

Doesn't matter -- snook addicts put money second. It's the chase and the eating that makes the snook a state game fish. If you haven't caught or eaten snook -- well, you have to take my word for it. If you have, then you can tell the rest of the story.

Frankly, it's still early to even expect to catch a snook. The limit has been changed, so you can take only two per person, per day now.

It will be a few weeks before we have them around a little more dependably, but until then you are going to hear of some caught. Let's hope you are one of the lucky ones.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

One question I am often asked goes like this: "Why are the shells here, and why are they not so easily found in other parts of Florida?"

What makes these Islands of Sanibel and Captiva so special? Well, despite your feelings that there's no more good shelling on the Islands, it's still true that shelling is as good here as any place in the state, but for some logical reasons. This week let's look at why the shells come to Sanibel.

If you have visited our Islands before or have done some reading on the shelling subjects, you know that most knowledgeable people say it is Sanibel's location - giving an east-west broadside to currents - that makes the Island a good shelling spot.

But what about North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands? They run more north-south and are as good and often times much better than the lower island of Sanibel.

And what happens when one ventures just north of Cayo Costa Island, on up to Gasparilla Island and the village of Boca Grande? Well, north of Cayo Costa the shelling is definitely not as good. Some nice shells have been found there, but generally it is easier shelling on the two or three islands south.

And how about Estero Island, the next one south of Sanibel, and the scattered island south of Estero?

If you have been to Fort Myers Beach recently, you know that the average is 25 island visitors for each shell on the beach. Something is just not right there, and what most of us regard as collector shells just don't appear with any frequency. True, they do have some good days, but a bad day on North Captiva Island is like a bonanza on Estero Island. The difference? About 20 miles. But there is a difference that causes shells to appear here and not there.

I've pondered that for some time, and perhaps it's all due to Pine Island Sound. That's the big body of shallow, warm waters on the inside of the Islands of Sanibel, the Captivas and Cayo Costa.

Other barrier islands around Florida sometimes have the same conditions, but Pine Island Sound is a nursery for shells. Of course, some shells die in various stages of growth. They are carried out into the Gulf of Mexico waters, and as sea and wind conditions change they are carried on up to the outside beaches of the Islands.

One contributing factor here is the major passes between our Islands that funnel huge amounts of water in and out of the sound each day. The shells, sometimes dead but often alive, move with the currents.

It's true that other barrier islands have the same type of passes, but the combination of shallow, clear waters, no off-shore reefs to break up shells and a smooth, gradually rising bottom is the right combination to wash up the treasures.

If you are visiting the Island, at times you must wonder, "What's all the fuss about shells on the beach - there aren't all that many to get excited about!"

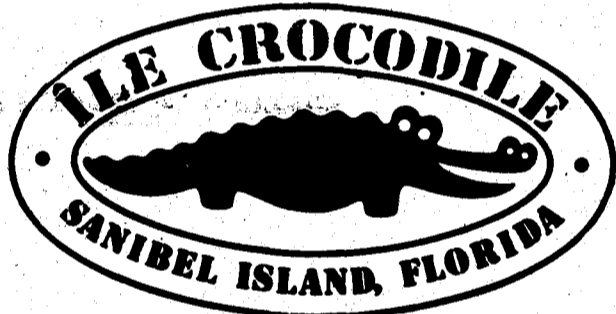

With the peak of the winter visitor season here, unless storms bring in more shells than normal, it is harder to find good shells. But keep at it and work the beaches very early in the mornings and enjoy the outing at the same time.

If you have anglers in your group, some good fish are starting to be caught right off the beaches as the migratory fish start to move into the Islands.

It might not be the best right now, but compared to other beaches in Florida, shelling is very good, and each day someone out there comes upon a great collector shell. Good luck to you and watch for those shells.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Island. Call 472-3459 for information.

Weekly Health Tip

From Len Kessler

ELDERLY HEALTH

People "can make their last years less of a trial...keep on their own feet and out of nursing homes" if they follow 3 precautions to avoid stroke and heart attack, says the Journal of AMA.
1. Check blood pressure at least once a year - medicate if necessary.
2. Don't smoke.
3. Maintain low blood cholesterol by eating few eggs and almost no animal fat.
Breaking even one rule doubles the risk. Breaking all three makes one 10 times more liable to stroke or heart attack.

Calvin Brown, a Rhodes scholar who has four degrees in literature, comes from a family of scholars. His father was the head of the Department of Modern Languages at the University of Mississippi (Ole Miss); his mother received a master's degree in Greek and Latin about 1900 and was a professor at Agnes Scott College, a women's school in Georgia.

Brown has some early memories of his maternal grandfather, a Presbyterian minister who was a soldier in the Confederate Army and who in his later years was glad to recall the time in which the South revolted.

"He said, 'I was a rebel because our rights were infringed on, and if they were again, I'd rebel all over,'" Brown remembers.

Brown received his bachelor's degree from Ole Miss, his master's from the University of Cincinnati and his doctorate from the University of Wisconsin in 1934 -- after he received a bachelor's degree from Oxford University on a Rhodes scholarship.

While in Europe, he met his wife, Rene Hughes, who was studying at the famous London School of Economics, where she earned a bachelor's degree in mathematical statistics. The Browns have one son, Hugh, who lives on Sanibel and has a doctorate in entomology, the study of insects.

After his studies were completed, Brown became a professor at the University of Georgia in Athens, Ga., where he for many years he chaired the Department of Comparative Literature -- often thought of as the "crown jewel" of literature studies by humble English majors because it covers everything written anywhere, anytime, in any place and in any language.

"The study of literature is not absolutely essential, of course," Brown says. "But neither is economics or anything else for that matter.

"It is a Marxist trick to turn everything about man solely into an economic question -- 'What has that to do with the price of eggs?'" the doctor says.

Brown did his doctoral dissertation on literature and Beethoven's music.

He has written several books and many articles and is considered something of a specialist on the late William Faulkner (actually, it appears he is an expert on almost everyone, judging by the amount of literature he seems to be intimately acquainted with).

He says his favorite authors are Faulkner, Fyodor Dostoevsky, Thomas Mann and Gustave Flaubert. He likes to find truths that still hold today. Those truths, however, aren't found in modern best-sellers, which bore him, he says.

"The fundamental point about all art," he smiles, "is how god-awful 99 percent of it is."

He also has some observations on language in contemporary society.

"There have always been obscenities and curse-words," he says, "and they've been widely used. But I think lately they've crept into a higher economic level of society, and also, of course, into mixed company.

"The people who get rid of taboos," he believes, "want to substitute their own set. They won't say 'wop' or 'kike' about a racial or religious minority they favor, but they will say 'WASP,' which is a triple slur -- racial, national and religious.

"I think a liberal should find the word 'WASP' the most offensive of all slurs."

Brown has lived on Sanibel for almost 10 years. He is an active member and former director of the Committee of Neighborhood Associations.

He is one of the leading proponents of permitting only two non-related adults to live in single-family dwellings in areas zoned for those buildings.

Brown served as a crypto-analyst (a code-breaker) in Washington during World War II, working for the Signal Corps through the (then) War Department.

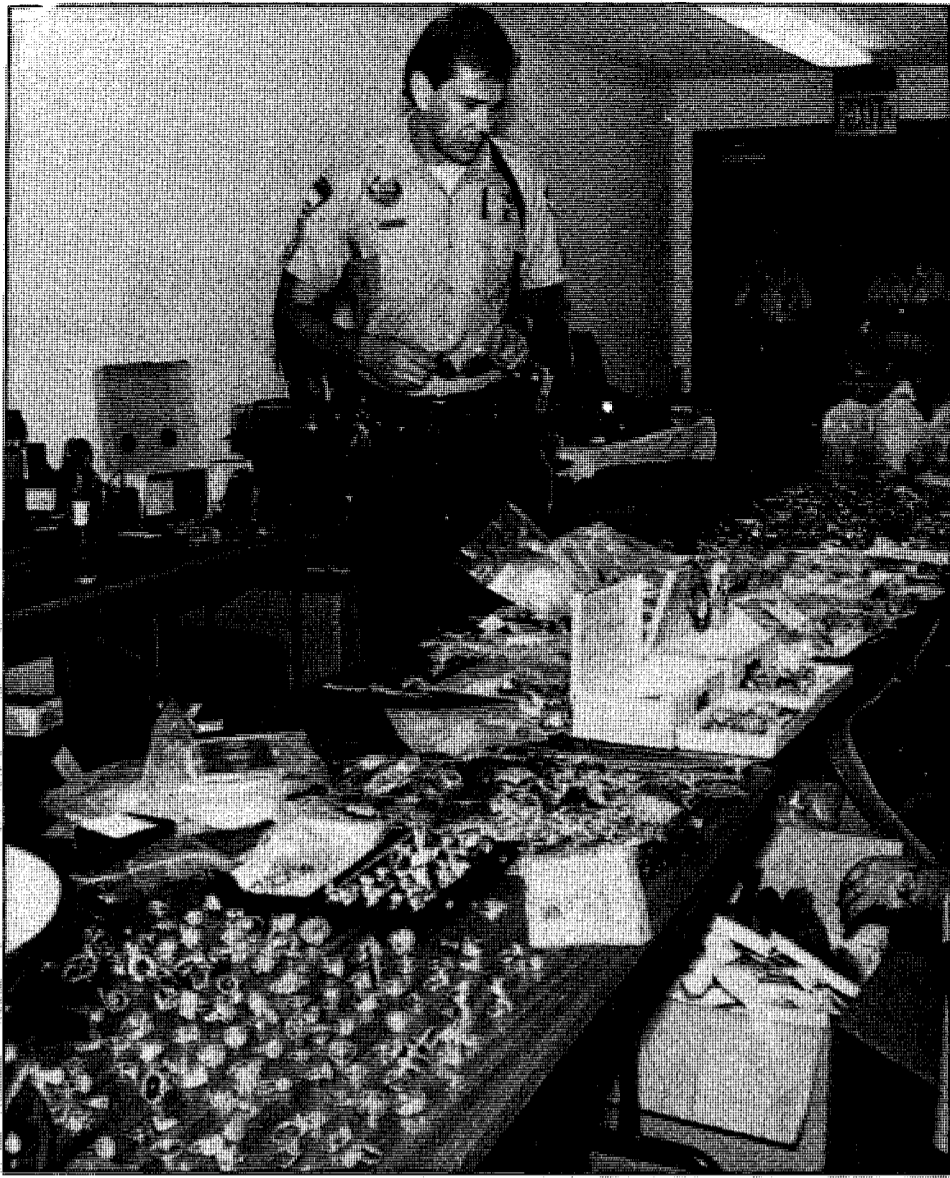

"I guess it was a good public relations move after the war when they changed the name (of the War Department) to the Department of Defense," he says.

He is a conservationist (even though a traditional conservative) and member of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. "I've always been interested in natural history," he explains with a smile. "Although I don't really know what they call it now. I also like to hike, but there are not many places you can hike on Sanibel."

He watches some TV ("with reservations"), such as WKRP in Cincinnati, but his special favorite, The Mary Tyler Moore Show, is no longer running.

He doesn't attend any church much. "I'm not a very religious man," he explains.

Asked what he thinks is important in a world whose values have changed so drastically from the deep-South one in which he grew up in the adolescence of the 20th century, Brown explains, "I think what's important are the points Faulkner made in his Stockholm speech (when he accepted the Nobel Prize for Literature) -- pride, piety and compassion."

Sanibel Investigative Sgt. Lew Phillips surveys the treasure trove of stolen jewelry, coins, household items, stereo equipment and furs that was recently recovered in a Cape Coral home. Phillips says chances are good that at least some of the items were taken in Sanibel burglaries. Photo by Kelly Harding.

Sanibel police suspect 'loot' contains goods from Island burglaries

By Cindy Chalmers

Burglary victims whose Island homes were struck prior to March 15, 1982, are urged to contact Investigative Sgt. Lew Phillips at the Sanibel Police Department for some possible good news.

Chances are good that some of the items stolen from Sanibel homes are among the treasure trove of stolen jewelry, coins, flatware, guns and stereos that was confiscated by Cape Coral Police in a Cape home on March 23, Phillips said last week.

Michael Ware, 26, was charged with burglary and grand theft after Cape Coral Police searched his rented, canal house at 5302 SW 2nd Ave. In the house police found a gold melter, a chemical test kit to check a metal's purity and a sensitive weight scale along with rooms chocked full of stolen items ranging from fur coats to stamps, guns and typewriters.

Ware's girlfriend, 17-year-old Natalie Perry, lived with Ware in the $700-a-month house and was charged with dealing in stolen property.

Phillips examined the confiscated goods last week at Cape Coral North First Bank, where they were taken after the search. He said chances are good that at least some of the items belong to at least some of the approximately 50 Sanibel residents whose homes were burglarized in the three years prior to March 15.

"It's for sure worth going over there to take a look," Phillips said. "Intuitively, I would say some of that stuff belongs over here."

Islanders who would like to arrange a viewing of the stolen goods in the Cape Coral bank should contact Phillips at the Sanibel Police Department, 472-3111, to schedule an appointment.

Residents will be allowed in the bank room one at a time to examine the goods for 30 minutes, Phillips said.

Cape Police Capt. Bill Gilmore called the investigation the largest operation the city's patrol division has ever undertaken. Beginning on March 15, a 20-man task force was scattered at the entrances of Cape Coral's major canals in boats, on foot and in patrol cars, Gilmore said.

Ware apparently used a motor boat in many of his burglaries, according to Cape police. Residents cooperated in the investigation by allowing police to park in their driveways, tie-up at their docks or fish from their seawalls.

Careful preparation paid off the very first night of the operation, when Ware was spotted idling down a canal in his boat. His actions were suspicious enough to warrant closer attention, Gilmore said.

Police made contact with Ware when his boat broke down. After learning his identity it was only a matter of collecting enough evidence to obtain the search warrant, Gilmore said.

Burger Emporium owner Lou Martelli Sr. gave his version of an incident that was reported last week involving an irate customer smearing her sandwich on Lou Martelli Jr.'s shirt at the restaurant.

Martelli said when the Miami woman said her original sandwich was not suitable, he offered her anything she wanted including a full refund.

The woman, however, became loud and rude and began taking food from other customers' trays before she threw her sandwich across the counter, according to Martelli.

Martelli said the woman made no contact with Burger Emporium employees. The incident happened on Monday evening, April 5.

Tax time draws nigh

Form 1040A Department of the Treasury—Internal Revenue Service 1981
U.S. Individual Income Tax Return

By Peggy Dailey

Humorist Woody Allen recently wrote, "I am convinced my life has no meaning — although it may possibly possess a minimal relevance to the Internal Revenue Service."

Many people feel the same way, especially these days as the annual Ides of April approaches and Uncle Sam beckons for your check payable to the IRS.

Elliot Gelberg, director of Island Financial Services on Sanibel, says approximately 25 percent of all taxpayers have waited until this week to file their forms. In addition, however, there are the allegedly 27 million (according to People magazine in April 1981) non-filers — those who just don't file at all.

Gelberg, a New York native and former employee of the Defense Department, where he worked with then-fledgling computers, says 27 million is a "rather high estimate" of the number of Americans who don't file. "But there are lots of people who go for many, many years and never file at all," he says. "I read of one man, I think in New York, who files each year but has had no income — just as a protest."

There have been other protestors. For instance, at the height of her fame in the late 1960's, folk singer-social activist Joan Baez withheld from her taxes each year the percentage of her income she felt the government would spend on the military.

But the average taxpayers can file this week — your return must be postmarked by midnight Thursday, April 15. If you file for an extension, you will face a June 15 deadline.

Few people know how far-reaching the powers of the IRS are, Gelberg says. The IRS, he says, is so far reaching as to be hardly in keeping with the Constitution.

"They can foreclose on your house, they can take your car, they can go into your bank without a warrant or much ado and take your savings account," he says. Gelberg is an "enrolled agent" of the IRS and so can practice in front of its appeals' boards.

"In recent years," he says, "They have stopped going after the big boys — whom they can't convict of fraud or vice or anything else, either."

"Instead, they are going after the masses — the little people who may owe $500 or so. The number of people who owe a little is tremendous," he adds.

"The IRS knows a lot of people cheat," he says. "It's especially easy for people who make cash tips to cheat. It is very frustrating for the IRS, so they nab who they can. And they thus intimidate a great many people who could take legitimate deductions but don't since, 'It'll make the IRS mad and they might question it.'"

Gelberg says the chance of being audited is very small. His firm participated in "less than 10" audits last year, he says.

Those who do receive letters from the IRS announcing that their returns are being reviewed should immediately take the letter to whoever prepared their taxes, Gelberg says.

"We call and see about the appointment in the IRS office, we review the entire return and all supporting documents with our client, we go with him and we answer all the questions unless one is specifically directed to him," he says about his firm's policy about audits.

Gelberg also says one misconception of television advertising for large commercial tax-preparing services is that the service will pay the penalty or additional tax if the IRS disallows a deduction.

"All they mean by, 'We'll pay if we make a mistake,'" Gelberg explains with a smile, "is if they make a mistake in arithmetic — like hitting the calculator wrong. Certainly not over a point of law."

"It's your business to defend the figures you bring in," he says. "People bring me their receipts and W-2 forms. I write down what they show me."

Another misconception is that the statute of limitations applies to taxes. "Absolutely not," Gelberg says. "The IRS can go back to any year — back into their 'dead' files."

However, a taxpayer can only collect his refund for three years if he hasn't done so and is due one. After this Thursday, April 15, taxpayers can receive refunds back to the 1979 tax year when applicable.

"If you haven't filed, and they owe you money — well, they get to keep billions of dollars that way. They certainly won't bother you about it," Gelberg says.

If YOU owe money and don't pay, the penalty is 5 percent of the taxes due per month up to a maximum of a quarter of the total tax bill. In addition to the penalty, interest is charged from the date due to the date filed.

In spite of all the complaints about the dreaded deadline that falls this Thursday, Gelberg says, "Lots of people are more or less glad to pay taxes, because if you pay you're probably working — and having a job in today's economy is an achievement."

the serious destruction and habitat deterioration perpetrated by our federal government agencies, which are supposed to preserve, not destroy, habitat.

I also suggest that Campen read Ian McHarg's Design with Nature to understand current trends in design away from settled and/or urban areas. McHarg, incidentally, is the "M" of WMRT, the authors of CLUP. He has a worldwide reputation in architecture and ecology.

Last week we read that the budget situation is such that perhaps 10 years will be required to landscape (I prefer to think of it as revegetate) the skinned areas. And that after the destruction of some of the very tree species they now want to employ: Gumbo Limbo, Bursera simaruba, and Cat Claw, Pithecellobium unguis-cati.

I would like to state that a number of Gumbos and what was perhaps the largest and finest Cat Claw I have ever seen were callously ripped out and destroyed by federal employees or contractors at the site. Any developer -- really, any developer -- would have saved them and transplanted them to appropriate sites.

In late March two great trees at the entrance to the Bailey Trect, a once free-standing Strangler Fig, Ficus aurea, and a unique Buttonwood Mangrove, Conocarpus erecta, which both were loosened and semi-topped by wind last year, were finished off by heavy equipment. They just lie there, uprooted and deteriorating daily.

Why aren't they saved and placed where revegetation is needed?

By the way, the Conocarpus erecta is quite a unique specimen -- perhaps quite rare. It is halfway between a "silver" (var. sericea) and a regular typical Buttonwood. Examine a leaf, if you can get there before death do us part. See for yourself the densely-pubescent leaves -- not quite so silvery as a commercial sericea, but a lot more silvery than the ordinary common Buttonwood.

Why must this wasteful, poor quality development continue? Perhaps Watt's budget cuts will have some value here -- there may not be money to continue the idiotic destruction.

George Campbell

Now, as for the Visitor Center building itself; I suspect that George Campbell in his travels and perambulations focuses a great deal more attention on the flora and fauna of the Galapagos or Kenya's grasslands than on current trends in modern architecture here and abroad.

I find the Visitor Center to be stylistically pleasing and entirely satisfactory from a functional standpoint. It is not "an ugly, almost windowless, energy inefficient building," as he would have us believe.

Quite to the contrary, the Visitor Center is an attractive, uncluttered, functional piece of contemporary geometry respectful of the built Sanibel environment with its broad, exterior "skin" of vertical, western, rough cut cedar siding.

Far from being "windowless," the offices on the building's north side (an important part of the facility) are light, airy, pleasant working spaces. The exhibit room has a large north window that looks out over what George describes as "a bare, artificial water hole."

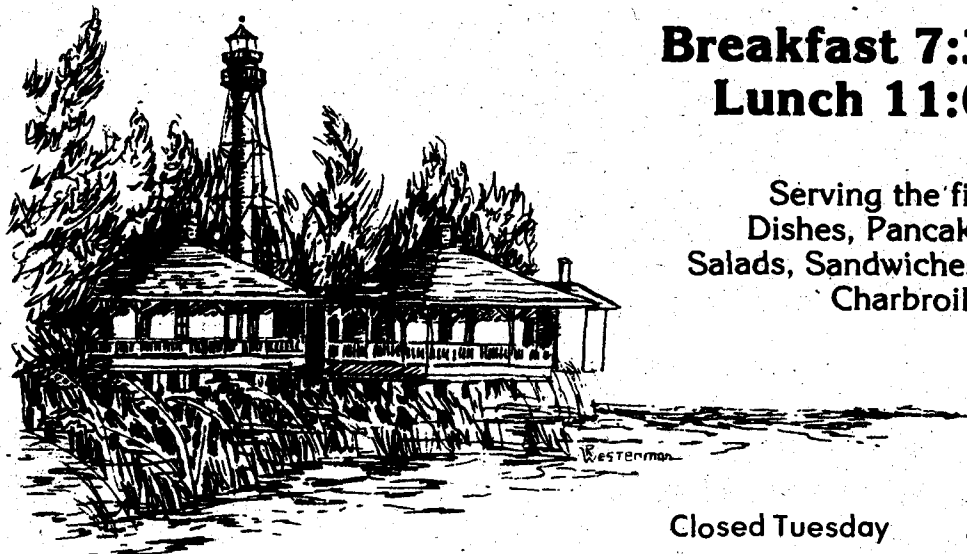

With a little imagination, given a year or two this "hole" will become a beautiful little pond framed by ferns and grasses for the visitor to look out upon and perhaps get a glimpse of the bird life for which the sanctuary is renowned. This is the plan, and it is shaping up.

I particularly like the clean incision of the property owners affected.

Under terms of the agreement Paulsen has agreed to dedicate to the city a 50-foot right-of-way along Periwinkle Way and pay for a 300-foot turning lane on the north side of the street to facilitate entry into the center that will be just east of the Sanibel Community Church.

Parking at the shopping center will be shared with the church, and a landscaped walkway will connect the two properties.

Paulsen also will pay the city $6,000 a year to provide an officer to direct traffic at the busy intersection when needed.

The council agreed to permit Paulsen to use a 1,000-square-foot area designated as an emergency hurricane refuge as a service corridor for deliveries to the retail shops.

The council postponed approval of the settlement agreement until it is determined whether Paulsen will accept limiting the restaurant to 75 seats.

When approved by the council the agreement will be submitted to Circuit Court Judge Robert Shafer, who ordered the two sides in the lawsuit to attempt a compromise out of court.

Paulsen originally wanted a 53,000-square-foot shopping center on commercially zoned property on Periwinkle Way near the busy Casa Ybel intersection.

The project drew strong grassroots opposition from Sanibellians who said the Island doesn't need another grocery store.

The Planning Commission twice denied Paulsen's request for a development permit on the grounds that the Sanibel's human support system could not support a project of such magnitude.

After the council denied Paulsen's specific amendment asking for a clarification of whether his proposed plan complied with the Community Design and Economic Assumption elements of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan, Paulsen filed suit.

building at its southwest corner, accommodating a porch to which access is gained both from the exhibit and projection rooms.

I like the siting of the structure -- set well back from San-Cap Road, from which it is insulated by vegetation. I particularly like the massive concrete piers supporting the wooden block. These in addition to being quite in scale, to my aesthetic sensibilities, are an important stylistic and functional feature.

As for the center being a "mini fortress," no doubt it has occurred to most year 'round Island residents that it would be the safest sanctuary in the event of a hurricane. I see no problem in this, though I find its denigrating description as a "fortress" undeserved.

In conclusion, I believe that architect Paul

Swickerath has created a handsome, functional facility that will well serve the Sanibel community and its visitors for years to come.

We ought not take too seriously its characterization as "Penitentiary Modern" by another frustrated architect; the architectural fraternity is notorious for denigrating and faulting the other fellow's conceptions.

Someday, perhaps, an appropriate wall sculpture, in aluminum, will embellish the southern windowless facade that the architect has fortuitously left to our imaginations. Nothing personal, George!

As the result of a law suit in 1974, the city acquired ownership of a 10-foot-wide, 300-foot strip of Old Bayshore Road (now called Bay Drive) that extended four feet beyond the bridge to the property Snell now owns.

The city was seeking public ownership of the entire road that extended from Bailey Road to the private property then owned by Bradley and Alice Buell to provide an alternate evacuation route to Periwinkle Way.

The Buells went to court to prevent the acquisition and the city lost.

"It was dumb decision by the court," Price said. "It put the responsibility on the city for maintaining the road and bridge for only one property owner."

Because he believed this was "not fair to Sanibel taxpayers," Price recommended a year ago that the city vacate the road and bridge to the abutting property owners.

"I really had to talk Snell into it," Price said last week. He said he was also concerned about the city's liability for the narrow, wood plank bridge with no guard rails.

He said that to put the bridge in first class shape and in compliance with state standards could cost as much as $30,000.

Under terms of the vacation Snell assumes responsibility for maintaining the bridge.

At Thursday's briefing Price demonstrated that it is impossible to gain access to the beach from either the road or the bridge without trespassing on Snell's property.

But he did acknowledge that the iron stakes in the bay that denoted the mean high tide line in 1974 were no longer valid. In the accompanying photo the utility pole surrounded by water is located next to one of these stakes.

A beach is public up to the high tide line.

The city never owned the land on either side of the road, Price said.

He marked out with wooden stakes the perimeters of the public right-of-way, and there appeared to be a three- or four-foot strip of Snell's property between the traveled way and the bay beach.

Frank Harris owns property that borders on about 40 feet of the road at the eastern end of the strip next to a small city park that does provide public access to the bay beach and parking for five cars, Price said.

He said Harris by telephone had verbally agreed to the vacation but added he has not yet received written verification.

Price pointed out the vacation involves only 0.7 acres of land.

"I believe it is worth it to get rid of the tremendous liability of the old bridge," Klein added.

Paulette Burton, who spearheads the petition drive, doesn't agree.

By turning over the road and bridge to private ownership, the council is denying the public access to 1,600 feet of Bay Beach, she charges.

The road from the county park to four feet beyond the bridge is the last piece of Bay Road along the bay that is public property, Burton pointed out.

The ordinance states that, "The council finds that the vacation does not deprive any property owners of access to their property," but Burton stresses that it does "deprive the public access to their property (the waters of the bay)."

The ordinance also states that the city's intent is to reserve for the Snells and their successors in interest, as owners of the property immediately west of the road vacated, a way to travel to and from their property.

Burton claims that the ordinance is not necessary because the Snells already have ingress and egress across the public bridge and roadway to Bay Drive.

There is also ingress and egress to the property from the west from Venus Drive, she added.

Burton and four other Sanibel qualified voters, Norma Leas, Maxine Michl, John McElheren and Thomas Kyle, invoked their right under the charter as citizens to petition the council to reconsider its action in vacating the road and bridge.

The charter provides that if the council does not rescind the ordinance that became effective March 26, any five qualified voters can begin the process for initiative and referendum and place the question on the November ballot.

Signatures of 25 percent of the registered voters at the last general election, in this case 618, are required on a petition asking for rescission.

Burton and the other members of the Petitioners Committee say response to the petition is very encouraging.

Longtime resident and historian Elinore Dormer says her mother, the late Daisy Mayer, in the 1960's put in the present Bay Drive and gave it to the county. At that time the Buells were asked to dedicate a right-of-way but refused.

Records will prove that although the Buells discouraged use of the road through their property and claimed it was private, it has never been vacated, and the county maintained it and the bridge until the city was incorporated, Dormer says.

"Before the developers of Sanibel Isles cut a canal through it, Bay Shore Drive, as it was called then extended from Bailey Road to Woodring Point," Dormer recalled in a Letter to the Editor published in the July 12, 1973, edition of The Islander.

"What's left of Bay Shore Drive still belongs to the public, and it should be preserved in its beautiful simplicity," she wrote almost nine years ago. She maintains the same stance today.

"That road and bridge should not be vacated by the city," she told The Islander last week.

"It is the last untouched piece of bay front on Sanibel and probably is the most historic," she said. "The house now owned by the Snells is the oldest structure on Sanibel, and the small building near by was the first post office," she added.

Burton says the ordinance "allows those who own beach-front property legal access to the bay while denying it to other citizens."

"It is unjust enrichment and unfair to the taxpayers," she maintains.

Make a marine aquarium

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

It is timely to call attention to a fascinating hobby that is largely overlooked here by visitors and residents alike — the maintenance of a small marine aquarium.

The multitude of small fish species and even greater number of invertebrate marine organisms that can be acquired and popped into even a five-gallon aquarium makes for a very interesting pastime. And it's educational, too.

For example, explaining to a child how a male sea horse gives birth to young will be certain to unravel many of the mysteries of the birds and the bees before the confusing phenomenon of male "birth" is adequately described.

Until a few years ago, the marine aquarium was very difficult to manage because most available tanks were framed with metal, and it is unwise to have metal of any kind involved with a marine aquarium because of corrosion and resultant toxicity.

Then General Electric came along with the Silastic latex, a rubbery bathtub-caulking cement that was soon marketed as the best aquarium cement ever discovered. This material, which smells like vinegar, can be employed to fasten sheets of glass into a watertight box that is strong and durable and completely non-reactive with sea water. Such tanks are available everywhere today at modest prices.

All you really need for the marine aquarium is a tank plus specimens that you might pick up either on the gulf beach or in the bay.

Of course the tank needs to be filled with sea water or estuarine bay water; that is, salt water of some concentration. But beyond that, the only rule is, "Don't crowd the tank with specimens." Whenever you have a choice between a large specimen and a small one, always choose the small one.

A greater biomass can be held in healthy condition in such a tank if the water is aerated and filtered with an under-gravel filter powered by a small $3 or $4 low wattage vibrator air pump.

Don't let the man in the pet store sell you fancy marine aquarium sand; simply pick up an inch or two of coarse shell gravel on our gulf beach, place it on top of the filter, turn the thing on and even though the water might look smoky and dirty initially, it will be crystal clear within 12 to 24 hours. It is not a bad idea to wash the gravel with the garden hose to get rid of organic sediment first, however.

Now is the time to begin to think about the specimens you wish to observe. Tiny sea horses and pipe fish are easily netted on the bay shore. Remember — just take one of each (the smallest, so you don't crowd).

You may find live shells or tiny shrimp of interest. Even small hermit crabs. Or pick up a baseball-sized encrusted rock, wrap it carefully in plastic so that it will not dry, and gently immerse it in your aquarium. Watch carefully, for all manner of living creatures will now develop. Anything from fish eggs to various mollusk eggs to echinoderms such as starfish and brittle stars — even tiny sea urchins — may become evident. Or hydroids such as sea anemone, or tiny jellyfish-like medusoid organisms.

In order to prevent your specimens from crawling or jumping out of the aquarium, it is advisable to cover the aquarium with a sheet of glass or plastic.

Your tank should be lighted brightly during observation times and should have several hours of light per day in order that any photosynthetic organisms present may carry out their life functions.

But you must be careful with the aquarium light (and for that matter, the aquarium pump or any other electrical apparatus nearby) for don't forget: salt water is a much better conductor of electricity than fresh water. If you don't exercise proper care, you can shock yourself severely.

To prevent a siphon action from the tank into the pump, the pump itself should always be maintained at a level superior to the surface of the water.

There is a never-ending variety of creatures that you can study and enjoy in this way. Any that don't feed well can be released and new ones brought in.

The tank should never become foul: If it does, it is either overcrowded or overfed. Never feed more food than can be consumed in a minute or two. It's much better to underfeed than overfeed the animals in a marine aquarium.

You will soon find out what the various creatures eat. Starfish will open and eat bivalves. Conch Killers (better known around here as Tulips) will do away with Fighting Conchs. Sea horses will consume minute crustacea or tiny baby fish such as Mollies. Crown Conchs will eat up dead Horsefoots.

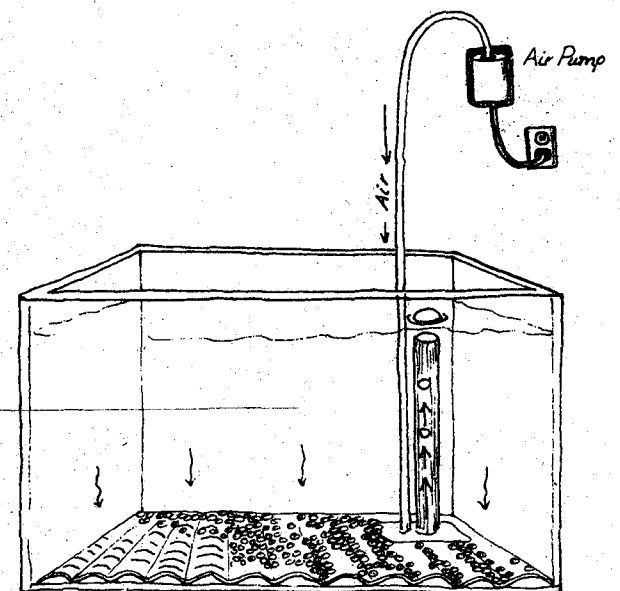

A bit of experience will rapidly show you who is boss predator in your tank and who is the underdog.

Remember to release and renew your captive population frequently. You aren't seeking longevity records, but rather a learning experience.

Your aquarium experience will lead you to the library. Soon you will become well-versed in the many groups and species of marine animals that are all around us — and they are free for the plucking. A starfish, urchin or anemone might cost $10 in Cleveland or Chicago. Here, all you need do is gather them.

A plea for conservation: rotating specimens (releasing old ones when adding new ones) will put you in a conservation frame of mind. You will soon realize that shells, urchins and the like, which in most Florida homes are displayed like colorful chinaware, are, in fact, animals with which we share the Planet Ocean and are worthy of our respect as fellow beings.

Water in all parts of the tank is moving downward through the gravel which captures and holds organic particles and sediment. Filtered water rises in the larger upright tube — moved by air bubbles which act as "pistons".

Vegetation Committee seeks ways to combat illegal dumping

By Peggy Dailey

Members of the city's Vegetation Committee, under the chairmanship of Dr. Bill Webb, met last Thursday and discussed ways to combat the Island's problem with the illegal dumping of dead vegetation. The committee also sought productive ways to dispose of dead vegetation.

The main portion of the three-hour meeting was spent discussing various ways to "chip" dead plants for use mulching other plants and enriching soil.

The two-year pilot program using a small "chipping machine" on land leased from the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation near the Island Inn was not considered a success, Webb said.

In an interview with The Islander at his home on Friday, Webb further explained that a lot of public education is necessary if the problem with dead vegetation is to be solved.

"What we would really like people to know is that their dead vegetation has value," he said. "And it is important to Sanibel and themselves to keep it on their own lots. Leaves and twigs drop and fall to the ground.

"When we take (the debris) to Buckingham (Lee County's public sanitary landfill in east Fort Myers), what we are really taking off is the fertility of this land," Webb added.

Webb continued that, in his opinion, people see green and see beautiful and see brown and think it is "ugly."

"Even the fronds of a cabbage palm are thought to be ugly as soon as the ones on the bottom turn brown," he said. "But that is just part of nature."

Hauling brown vegetation away to the dump also cuts into a big chunk of insect habitat and food for birds, he said, adding that the cost of taking a load of vegetation debris to Buckingham runs around $100.

Webb also said the situation on Sanibel is divided into "black hats and white hats"—the bad guys, who use the local woods to get rid of vegetation, and the good guys, who want a better solution.

Webb said he and many people he has spoken with on the Island believe that picking up and chipping the vegetation, bagging it and selling it for fertilizer and mulch, whether on the Islands or off, would not be a profitable venture, "unless it could be done more efficiently than the city has done it."

Five possible solutions have occurred to Webb. He is forwarding his suggestions in a letter to Mayor Porter Goss, who with the City Council will make the final decision.

One solution would be to use ad valorem taxes to provide a "chipper" to go around on a fixed schedule to different areas each day; a second would be to hire a private contractor to do the same thing.

A third suggestion would be to build a private chipping plant where people could bring their dead plants and vegetation; and a fourth possibility would be to give someone a franchise for the service, much like the way garbage is picked up on Sanibel.

"There are a lot of biological, social and economic questions in this," Webb said. "The way I feel today may be different tomorrow, but I think the best solution might be to have subdivision homeowners' associations make contracts with private operators.

"Like 'We'll be in Gulf Pines every Monday from one to five,'" he explained. "Then if there are problems, the president of the homeowners' association can take them directly to the private contractor or fire (the contractor) if he doesn't do the job properly.

"I've never been a person who believed that private enterprise solves everything, but maybe it could solve this," Webb concluded.

Webb said the main issues facing the Vegetation Committee in the near future are (1) how to get a stable policy on melaleuca removal, and (2) whether to maintain the requirement that a prospective home or business owner must get rid of all Brazilian pepper on his property before receiving a certificate of occupancy.

REFUGE REPORT

By Delano Pierce, Manager
J.N. "Ding" Darling Refuge

Even though the Visitor Center has but few exhibits, is not open after 3:30 p.m. or on weekends and has no scheduled programs, more than 11,000 persons visited the building during the month of March.

A sizeable percentage of the visitors are after basic information regarding the refuge tour route, available trails, etc. We are still looking for volunteers who might be interested in handling the front counter for an hour or more during the week. If we had sufficient help, we would try to have the Visitor Center open on the weekends.

Manatee projects have taken up much of the refuge staff time during the past three weeks. We have been in helicopters, boats and vehicles looking for distressed manatees, and we have assisted in the live capture of a sick manatee that was taken to Sea World in Orlando for observation and blood sampling.

We discovered that even a sick manatee is amazingly powerful once it decides it would just as soon not be loaded into a boat. A couple of us received some bruises and cuts before the animal settled down.

A more somber activity has been our involvement in picking up dead manatees from various parts of the county. Two refuge staff members were instructed in field necropsy procedures so that we can help with necessary data collection.

We have almost completed spraying the Bailey Tract for pepper regrowth. Although regrowth of pepper is still prevalent, we feel this plant is nearly under control on the Bailey Tract.

Bob Ziobro reported for duty on March 22 as Assistant Refuge Manager assigned to the Tampa Bay Refuges. Bob was transferred here from the St. Vincent Refuge in northern Florida.

We have an opening for a laborer. The job will pay $5.14 per hour. Work will consist of janitorial duties, litter pick up and miscellaneous activities on the "Ding" Darling Refuge. Anyone interested is urged to send in an application form (SF-171) to the office.

Foundation organizes advisory committee

The Board of Directors of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation has taken the initiative to organize a J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge Advisory Committee.

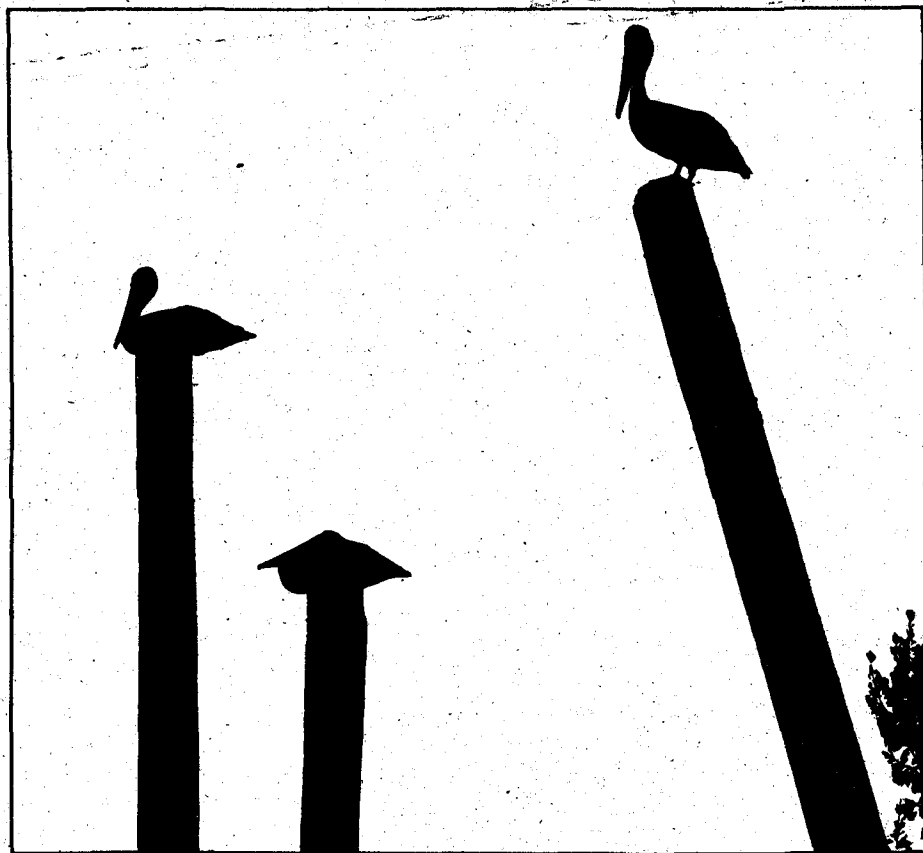

The objective of this committee will be to achieve better communication between the refuge and the citizens of this area. The committee will serve only in an advisory capacity, and its recommendations will not take precedence over U.S. Fish and Wildlife policies.

Dr. K.C. Emerson has agreed to serve as chairman of the advisory committee. Emerson is deeply interested in the refuge and its management problems; he understands federal agencies and how they operate and he has a long personal involvement with advisory committees.

The first meeting of the committee is scheduled for Thursday, April 15, at 7:30 p.m. in the new Visitors Center of the refuge.

Twelve organizations have been invited to attend the first meeting on April 15. They include:

- City of Sanibel
- Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation
- Audubon Society
- Fund for Animals
- J.N. "Ding" Darling Foundation
- Osprey Foundation
- Caretta Research
- Florida League of Anglers
- Lee County Mosquito Control
- Sanibel Historical Preservation Committee
- South West Florida Regional Planning Council
- COTI
- CONA

Bargains abound at Island thrift shop

By Peggy Dailey

There's something for everyone at Noah's Ark, the thrift-resale shop run by St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church on Periwinkle Way.

The only shop of its kind on Sanibel or Captiva, Noah's Ark is a long-time institution started in 1961. It is presently under the direction of Hannah Tremaine, who has the help of 15 regular volunteers and 10 substitutes.

The revenue from the articles that are donated (only furniture is taken on consignment) goes to various philanthropies such as the Humane Society, the Salvation Army and the Dunbar Mission on Gladiolous in Fort Myers, Tremaine says.

Right now all clothing in the shop is half price. The sale will continue until the shop closes April 30. It will re-open on June 15 but will be open only on Tuesdays and Fridays through Aug. 20. Regular hours Monday-Friday will resume Oct. 18.

"We have a lot of good selections, especially clothing and furniture," Tremaine says. "We have a beautiful mahogany Queen Anne tea table right now with a shell carved on it." The table, indeed very beautiful, is a consignment item priced at $200.

Among more unusual items currently in stock are a cassette-like machine that attaches to a television for video games ($35), a binocular case (50 cents), a watch ($10), a green and blue needlepoint purse ($10) and a carrier for dogs on airplane trips ($10).

Noah's Ark also has jeans, lampshades, belts for women, ties for men, a few records, some classical and some nice books such as Mary Gordon's The Company of Women and The Goodbye Look by Ross MacDonald. Shakespeare's Sonnets, an inaugural edition of JFK's Profiles in Courage and novels that sell for $3.50 in paperback also line the shelves at Noah's Ark.

Doris Christensen works in the shop every Thursday. "It's nice to see people come in so happy and get bargains," she says. "Not so long ago we had a Royal electric typewriter that sold for only $5."

"The only thing wrong with the machine was that a couple keys were stuck," she says.

Recent "quick sales" that went fast included a black and white tiny Sony television for $40 "that was in the shop for about 15 minutes" Christensen says.

Nice things happen often in the shop, she adds. "A few days ago, a young woman and her son came in. He was about to make his First Communion. The woman found a three-piece suit for her son to wear that cost only $4!

"It's just things like that that make you feel good," she says.

All in all, Noah's Ark is a good way to creatively beat the system. Through April 30 the shop behind the church on Periwinkle Way is open Monday-Friday from 9:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m.

Sanibel's United Way fund drive now underway

Sanibel's United Way campaign fund drive was officially underway on Monday as hundreds of letters announcing the drive and requesting donations were mailed to Island residents and businesses.

Personal contact with Island business people will be made in addition to the direct mail campaign.

This year's fund drive co-chairmen are Jim Hermes, president of the Bank of the Islands, and Kin Wasson, branch manager of the Island's First Federal office.

Wasson said this year's goal is $25,000. Last year's drive fell short of the goal by less than $2,000. Wasson said he would like Islanders to raise $50,000 for United Way this year and added that to encourage donations the campaign will be publicized more than ever this year.

"Federal cutbacks into many social programs are making the United Way more important than ever," Wasson said. "We can all help ourselves by giving to the United Way."

He said United Funds would be used on the Island for hurricane relief programs should Sanibel and Captiva be struck by a serious storm. United Way also helps area Boy Scout, Red Cross and YMCA programs.

Donations for the United Way can be sent to either the Bank of the Islands, P.O. Drawer X, or to the First Federal office, P.O. Drawer T, Sanibel, 33957. Checks should be made to the Lee County United Way.

Sanibel's campaign drive traditionally kicks off the Lee County effort.

Wheels of Life Bloodmobile visits Island Saturday

"Get the feeling of joy" blood donor t-shirts will be distributed to blood donors on Saturday, April 17, when the Edison Regional Blood Center, Inc. Wheels for Life Bloodmobile visits Bailey's General Store in the Island Shopping Center from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m.

The Sanibel-Captiva Kiwanis and Lions Clubs are sponsoring the joint blood drive to benefit Island residents and visitors and employees of Sanibel and Captiva.

Volunteer blood donors must be in good health, 17 years or older, weigh at least 100 pounds and have no history of heart disease or hepatitis. Participants must bring a driver's license or some form of identification in order to give blood.

Giving blood is a simple procedure that benefits not only the donor but also the hospitalized patient who needed this precious fluid. It takes approximately 30 minutes from registration to post donation snack. The actual donation takes five to seven minutes. Donors may resume normal activities after giving blood.

Persons with questions about their eligibility or who need general information should call the Edison Regional Blood Center, 939-1811.

To get a free "Get a feeling of joy" t-shirt, please call Al Neumeister, 472-4987, or John Cook, 472-2110, and make your appointment to give blood on Saturday, April 17.

The Edison Regional Blood Center, Inc. is a non-profit, full-service volunteer blood donor center and processing laboratory that provides safe, pure, potent blood supplies to seven area health institutions.

Blood must be available 24 hours a day, 365 days a year. Make your donation of life on April 17.

Community association elects directors Friday

The 1982 Board of Directors of the Sanibel Community Association will be elected at the association's annual membership meeting this Friday, April 16.

Nominees for this year's board are Mike Klein, Urban Palmer, Bud Bernhard, Joe Feeney and Art Ford. Klein and Palmer have been nominated as new members of the board. Bernhard, Feeney and Ford have been serving on the board as appointees filling unexpired terms and have been nominated for full terms.

Nominations can also be made from the floor at the membership meeting.

Sanibel-Captiva Lions hold regular meeting

By D.E. Cooperrider

The regular meeting of the Sanibel-Captiva Lions Club was held on April 7 at the Sanibel Community Association. Two Germans visited the club and one, Klaus Peterson, has been a guest for two previous years.

Several interesting reports were made about the success of various fund-raising projects including the car raffle and pancake breakfast.

Lion Lynn Rogers reported on activities at the Lions Camp for the Visually Impaired and said another work day at the camp is planned soon. Lion Dan Baker will head the next party.

There will be a regional meeting of Lions Clubs of the area at Winter Haven on April 18. A sizeable number of the local club members plan to attend.

The following Lions will lead the club during the 1982-83 year: John Wilcox, president; Leonard yaeche, first vice president; Joseph Feeney, secone vice president; David Magill, third vice president; Kin Wasson, secretary; Robert Schneider, treasurer; George Blain, tail twister, Richard Berger, Lion tamer; and Lynn Rogers, Fred Valtin, Robert Sagers, Buhl Burgoyne, Norwood Melcher and Don Cooperrider, directors.

'The King' challenges Island All-Stars

"I will challenge you to a game and use only three other players: a catcher, a short stop and a first baseman. The reason I need four is because you would probably walk us both if I used my catcher."

These words were spoken in 1946 by the strong-armed, ex-Marine shown in the photographs above in response to a challenge -- a challenge that Eddie Feigner (better known as the King) has extended to all takers ever since that fateful day.

In the process, Feigner has become a world renowned softball personality. And Island residents and vacationers can have a first-hand look at the celebrated King and his Court this Sunday, April 18, when the King takes on the Sanibel All-Stars at 2 p.m. at the ballfield next to the Sanibel Elementary School.

The King will be backed by his ever faithful Court: Les Barber, catcher; J.R. Feigner, first base; and infielders Dave Barnett and Gary West in a classic showdown against some of the Islands' finest.

Now who are these Island All-Stars, and do they know what they're getting into?

Well, for starters there's Curt and Chuck Nave. Add Roger Tabor, Walt Ciesiensi, Oscar (the O) Gavin, Andy Kern and Tom Mosca. Blend in a little Mike Courtney, Marshall Keys, Lou Mitchell and Don Case and add a pinch of city celebrities -- Mayor Porter Goss and City Manager Bernie

It was Dr. Millard Phefflinger, that distinguished thinker on the abstract theory of life, who was once heard to comment:

"A friend of mine vorked in za fertilizer factory for crappy wages. His job vas to shovel za fertilizer into square sheets. He vas a hard vorker und a talented shoveler, but it seemed dat za more he shoveled, za more fertilizer dey dumped on him.

"Da oder fellow made more money und he just operated za chute dat deposited za sheets of fertilizer onto za truck.

"Dat taught me right den and der dat a hard vorker und a talented person vill get more fertilizer und crappy wages, vvhile da oder fellow vill get more money for just chuting the sheet."

Dr. Phefflinger was speaking, of course, on the inequity of putting one's heart and soul into something and expecting the same consideration in return. It's a sad but true fact of life dat it just don't vork dat vay.

The good doctor's parable reminds one of an unfortunate career endeavor. In a way, it can also remind one of an unfortunate love. The one you give your heart; you are then primed and pumped, pumped and primed until -- finally -- your well runs dry. The other you offer your soul; until the offered party finds the mystery of the connection too demanding, and in the end there is nothing left to say but:

"OK, keep the fishing pole...And you can have the books...But...Can I have my tapes back?"

And as Dr. Phefflinger's parable clearly points out:

TALKIN' SPORTS

what if certain friends are your friends only as long as you are a friend of the friend they are really friends with, and-- (Ha! Fooled you didn't I? Here you were wondering if maybe another screw came loose during my absence. Or perhaps you found yourself swaying to the impression that your author must surely subscribe to the words of Samuel Daniel when he wrote:

Wrongs do not leave off there where they begin,
But still beget new mischiefs in their course.)

Hold on now. I'm not guilty. On both counts.

This space before you now is but a writer's welcome to the world of the Island sports columnist, where the reader -- (look, I know that, up to now, this has been a cheap shot, but how else was I to warn you about the endless rows of opinionated words that are destined to fill this space during the months to come? How else could I let you know, in advance, of the controversy, the attempts at humor, the solicitation of your hard earned money and the constant pleas for community involvement?) -- and the writer meet on shakey ground to discuss the past, present and future of Island sports.

What's that you say? What are my credentials?

OK. I confess. I'm the one who started this mess, this audacious attack on your sensibilities. It was last year, when I had the misfortune to invent an Island sports column while working (I vas a hard und talented vorker, too) for the publication down the street.

What? The same opinionated raincloud of a writer who pushed swimming pools, gymnasiums, rec complexes, SWAT, tennis, softball, little league, golf, bowling-- Enough!

Now I've completed my walk down the street (Don't worry--it's the same old story). Now it's time to get serious for the task at hand. The die is cast, there is no turning back. You've got me -- good, bad or indifferent -- until I'm replaced by the electronic equivalent of a sports columnist or until I'm tarred and feathered and run out of town, whichever comes first.

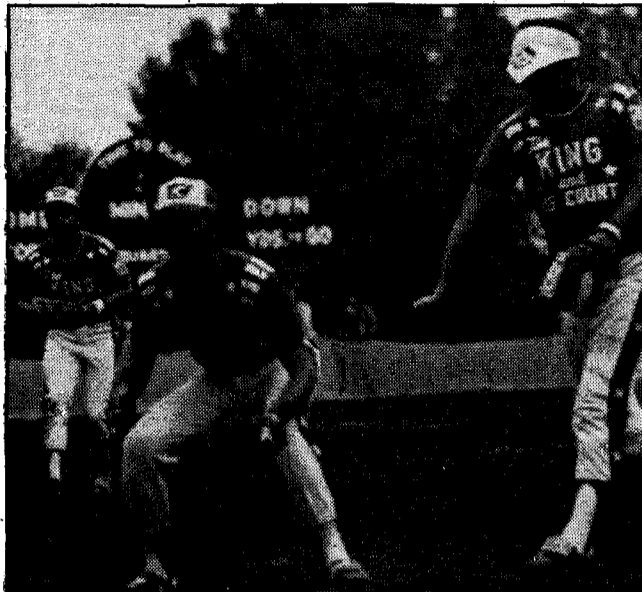

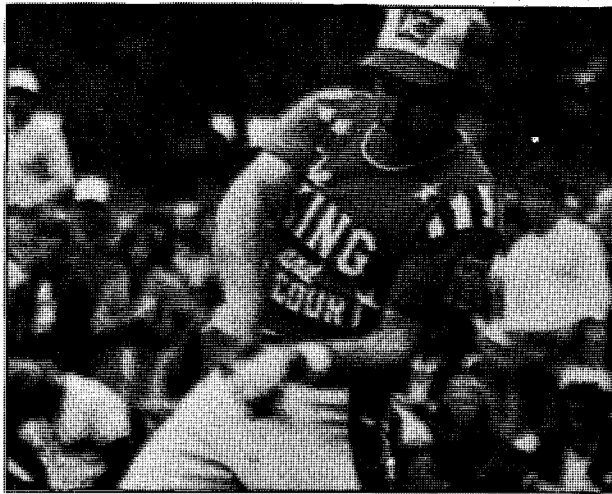

In the meantime, let's make the best of it. I'm looking forward to chuting the sheet with you.

Above: Gary West is the first baseman for the King and his Court, and it is his job to add a comic element to the game. We hear West has much success with humor and with holding down the first base position.

Top left: Dave Barnett is the King's lead off batter, and he roams the field to stop the occasional hit ball. Barnett is a former Major leaguer and is known as one of the fastest baserunners around.

Right: J.R. Feigner, protecting his father who is pitching blindfolded, is a 20-year veteran of the Court.

Are you into trivia? Does the perplexing questions and answer game have you running for your dictionary, your book of facts, your Fred L. Worth Complete Unabridged Super Trivia Encyclopedia? If so, The Islander has got something for you with our new weekly Sports Quiz, which will be featured each and every week in the new Islander sports section.

If you will study the question (come on, there not that hard) and call The Islander at 472-5185 with your answer, we'll publish your name in the next issue (if your correct that is).

Ready? Here's this weeks question:

What is the name of the trophy awarded, since 1900, to the country whose team wins the International Lawn Tennis Championship? (Here's a hint: It is named for a former Secretary of War and Governor General of the Philippines).

Good luck.

Slated to hold down the task of officiating (and calling all those strikes) are Ray Rhodes, Jack Primm and Gavin.

It looks like it will be a fine day for softball entertainment, and Islanders and visitors should plan to attend because any profits from the sale of tickets -- $3 in advance, $4 at the gate

Tickets can be purchased in advance at the Sanibel Police Department or the Rec Complex.

Boaters invited to participate in blessing of the fleet, parade

All boaters are invited to participate in the Sixth Annual Blessing of the Fleet and Decorated Boat Parade on Sunday afternoon, April 18, in San Carlos Bay.

The colorful event is held annually as the kick-off to the Sanibel-Captiva Island Open Fishing Derby sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce.

In conjunction with the kick-off activities, Scotty's Seafood Shoppe will make Fish Fry dinners, cold beer and soft drinks available at the Sanibel end of the Causeway to the right of the first brige. Barges will be in place for boaters to pick up dinners from 11 a.m. until...

Boats will rendezvous near Marker 6 east of Sanibel Light at 2:30 p.m. Boaters are asked to keep the channel of the Intracoastal Waterway clear during the rendezvous period.

Units of the U.S. Coast Guard will lead the procession, which will depart the rendezvous area at 3 p.m. Following the Coast Guard will be the Parade Marshal, Myton Ireland, aboard his Independence; representatives of the Islands' clergy aboard Phil Nichols' Barnacle Phil; the parade judges aboard Ulrich Boehnks's

Patty Ann; and the Derby Queen, Esperanza Woodring, aboard Ralph Woodring's Dusky.

The procession will move toward the Sanibel Fishing Pier, then turn west and parallel the shoreline toward Causeway Bridge C before turning right toward Marker 2 and dispersing safely. Many boaters will enjoy "rafting up" following the ceremony.

Boaters are encouraged to decorate their boats. All boats, whether decorated or not, are welcome to join the procession and receive the blessing of the clergy. Those wishing to compete for prizes should call Walter Klie, 472-3232, for an entry number that should be displayed in figures at least one foot high on the port side and also the stern.

Cash prizes of $50 will be awarded to the power boat and sailboat judged the best or most originally decorated of those entered for competition. Second prize in each category will be $25.

Radio communication will be on CB radio Channel 11 and VHF Channel 68. All participants are requested to observe safe boating procedure at all times.

The Florida you fell in love with still exists today at the
BOCA GRANDE CLUB

In the 1930's, when Florida was considered a far-away vacation wonderland, settlers such as John Jacob Astor, Barron Collier, Henry DuPont and J.P. Morgan imprinted their special lifestyle on Gasparilla Island.

You can share the legacy of that special lifestyle today ... at the Boca Grande Club.

Designed for your pleasure, Boca Grande's exclusive amenities include a private beach, marina and tennis courts, matchless dining, and the best tarpon fishing in the world — all in a setting that would please Gasparilla's most discriminating forebears. Little wonder ... the Club's developer, Harper Sibley, Jr., also created Key Largo's renowned Ocean Reef Club.

Boca Grande's two and three bedroom villas are most tastefully furnished and fully equipped for your convenience. Each villa has an unobstructed view of the beach.

The Boca Grande Club, tucked away in a special corner of the world, lies north of Sanibel and Captiva Islands and south of Sarasota.

Experience for a weekend or a lifetime the "Florida lifestyle" you thought was only history.

BEACH TAXPAYERS ASSOCIATION

As you know, upon receipt of the trim notices (preliminary property tax assessment notices), it was obvious to some of us and particularly those of us who owned property on Sanibel, Captiva and Fort Myers Beach, that with the increased assessments and without the corresponding decrease in dollar amount of taxes, that something had to be wrong with the appraisal of Lee County property.

Therefore the Beach Taxpayers Association was formed and represented several thousand property owners and several thousand pieces of property before the Tax Adjustment Board, asking for relief from what our attorneys tell us was an appraisal method contrary to the State of Florida Statutes. Expectedly, our request for relief was declined, leaving us no alternative but to appeal to the courts to enforce the statutes. We did find during the course of our investigation and hearings that what we felt was correct - only 1/3 of the property was reappraised for 1981 leaving that third picking up a highly disproportionate share of the tax dollars used to support the Lee County government.

Now we are asking each affected property owner in Lee County to please contribute $25.00 to the Beach Taxpayers Association to financially support the legal effort necessary to (1) make sure that correct procedures are used in years ahead, and (2) return of the excess taxes we were forced to pay for the tax year 1981.

Your check is needed desperately and quickly so that we will know we have the funding to carry this through the court system.

The Condominium Associations of Sanibel has asked its members to make their contributions through their Association. Others may be mailed to:

The Photographers' Gallery announces its third annual Pete Carmichael photography workshop and seminar to be held Saturday and Sunday, April 24 and 25.

Carmichael, a Sarasota photographer, leads his students on excursions into the Ding Darling Refuge for intensive lessons in both bird photography and close-up nature studies.

The two-day course titled Nature Photography begins early on Saturday, April 24, with a slide show at the gallery of Carmichael's macro lens nature studies. Coffee and doughnuts will be served.

Then Carmichael takes his students to the refuge, spending four or five hours in demonstrations of composition and technique. Sunday, April 25, begins with a slide show on the photographer's bird studies and culminates in another excursion into the refuge for lessons on better techniques in photographing birds both stationary and in flight.

Credentials for the course require a good working knowledge of the 35 millimeter camera, both in understanding photographic technology (such as the terms "depth of field") and a functioning 35 millimeter camera with, if possible, a long lens and a normal lens plus a macro lens or extension tubes (although not required).

Students are asked to bring their choice of either Kodachrome 64 slide film or Kodacolor 100 negative film.

that special island known as Sanibel. To all of us it represents the best of what nature has to offer. To us it means keeping within the design of nature. At ferry landing we mean to lay man's mark very gently within the existing environment.

To be sure, ferry landing is intended only for those few who truly believe in Sanibel, in its special place in the sun and its extraordinary lifestyle. Simply, those who do not understand what our Island means will not be invited to live at ferry landing.

Created and overseen by Island architect Ray Fenton, the low density hamlet will be exactly that... low density. Less than a score of homes will be erected. It is designed in the style for which Mr. Fenton is noted.

Located on the Bay, within sight of the Lighthouse, ferry landing is being finalized now. And there will not be more than six buyers allowed, per year, to participate in this, the last of Sanibel's Bayfront residential enclaves.

Today would be a perfect day to lay your claim to this special involvement. Call for your appointment today. Tomorrow simply might be too late.

ferry landing is special.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

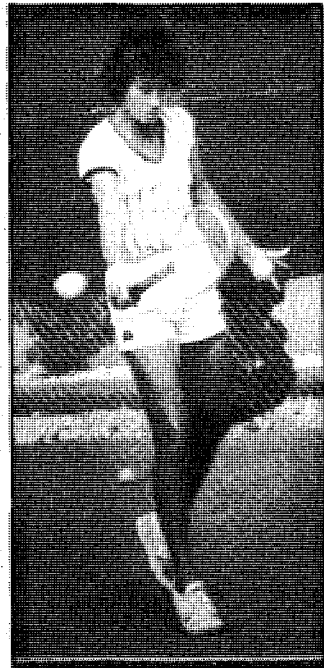

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise!! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island

Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf is well worth a day's out.

Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

DISASTER ALERT

Radio Station WRCC, 103.9 FM, broadcasts details of any emergency such as hurricane alert or any other disastrous occurrence that might affect Sanibel or Captiva.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

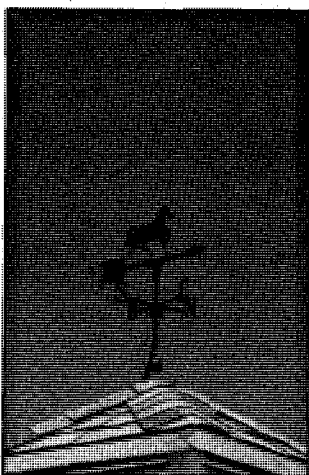

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.

Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

LIBRARIES

Sanibel Public Library
 At the intersection of Palm Ridge Road and Florence Streets.
 (472-2483)
 Open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., daily except Sunday.

 Open Tuesdays, Thursdays and Fridays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Wednesdays from 9 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" x 24" x 12" deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.

Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Drive safely!

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

For removal of a nuisance alligator, call the following representative of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128; or George Weymouth, 472-5128.
