BMR housing gets boost

By Barbara Brundage

The movement to provide affordable housing for workers on Sanibel got a boost Monday when the Planning Commission recommended City Council approval of a variance to the density in Sanibel Highlands subdivision to permit construction of up to three Below Market Rate Housing units.

Peter Valtin, representing Community Housing and Resources, Inc., told the commission Col. John Sawbridge has agreed to give the non-profit corporation eight lots in Sanibel Highlands for BMR housing.

Sawbridge's offer is pending the granting of a specific amendment to the residential densities element of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan, issuance of development and building permits and the start of construction of at least one moderately priced home on the site.

The parcel of land fronting on Casa Ybel Road between Peach Tree and Whitehall roads contains 31,486 square feet of land and currently has no density allocation, Planning Director Bruce Rogers told the commission.

Council applauds new City Hall plans

By Peggy Dailey

Plans for Sanibel's new City Hall were applauded by the City Council last week after architect J. Benton Stewart unveiled his design that was modeled somewhat after the Sanibel Lighthouse.

Work on the $1.4 million facility should begin this fall with a completion target date of September 1983.

The artist's rendition of the complex shows an old-style, wooden, U-shaped Landscaper Gail Borman told the council only native vegetation will be used on the 22-acre City Hall site off Dunlop Street. In the courtyard of the building will be a "stylized Calusa Indian mound" that will provide an informal outdoor stage for public use.

Gumbo limbo trees, which Borman said are symbols of eternal life, will dot the

Gentle, ailing manatee saved at Causeway

By David Meardon

A nine-foot female manatee stole the hearts of curious onlookers last Thursday when she became stranded by an ebbing tide on the bay side of the Causeway.

The gentle sea mammal that weighed approximately 750 pounds was taken to Sea World in Orlando, where she is currently under observation and is listed in "guarded" condition. Sea World officials have administered antibiotics and steroids. Other than several boat propellor scars, "There were no visible signs of internal or external injuries," according to Vicki Blanchfield, public relations representative for Sea World.

First spotted by two Sanibel patrolmen on their way to a Police Academy class at 6:30 a.m., the floundering manatee was kept under close watch by J.N. "Ding" Darling Refuge Manager Del Pierce and his staff, Florida Marine Patrolman Dennis Grealish, Caretta Research Director Charles LeBuff and a steady flow of passersby who waded out to view the endangered mammal.

"I got so attached, I couldn't leave," said Julie Bresser of Fort Myers Beach, who spent most of the day knee deep in water taking pictures and patting the manatee, which was netted to keep it from getting away.

"It seemed so lethargic and close to dying," Pierce said. But, he added, "After we got it to deeper water, it showed signs of life."

At one point the manatee had a minor spasm and threw up shreds of thin rubber, which Pierce said may have had a bearing on its illness.

She would not eat lettuce offered to her by refuge staffers, but did start eating once she was in an isolation tank for study at Sea World.

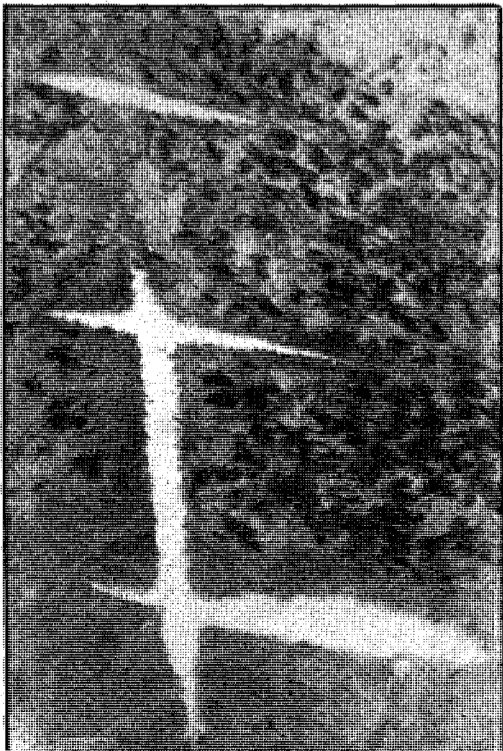

The recent rash of manatee deaths in Lee County, which has claimed 44 of the creatures over the past two months, has baffled scientists who are working to solve the crisis.

One theory posits that the deaths are the result of concentrated red tide toxins found in sea squirts, which make up part of the manatee's vegetarian diet.

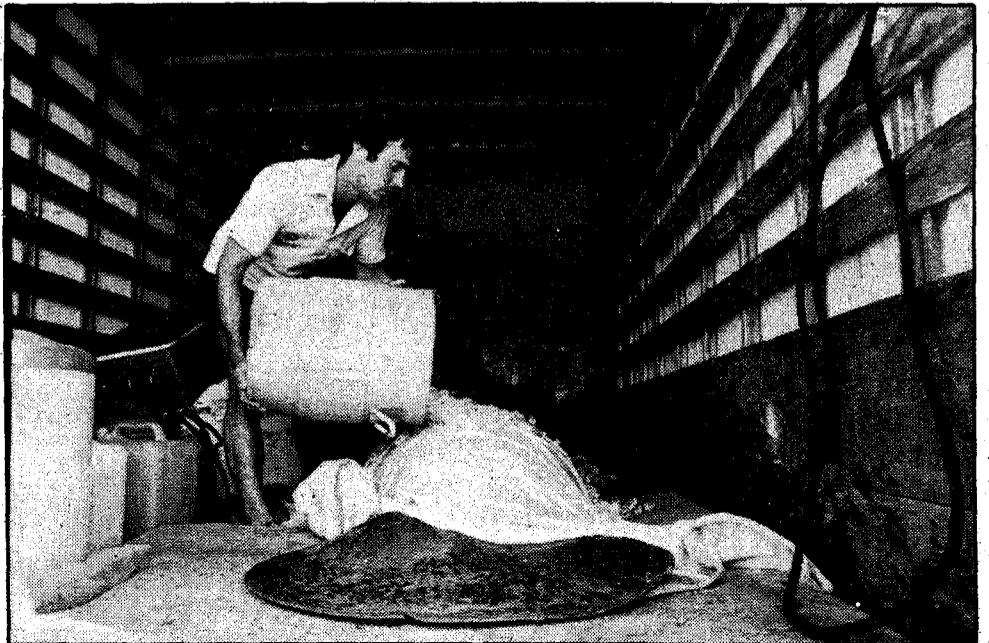

A burst of applause greeted Sea World staffers when their rented truck finally pulled up at 3:30 p.m. It took 10 men with a portable stretcher to load the creature onto the truck lift, where she was raised and placed inside.

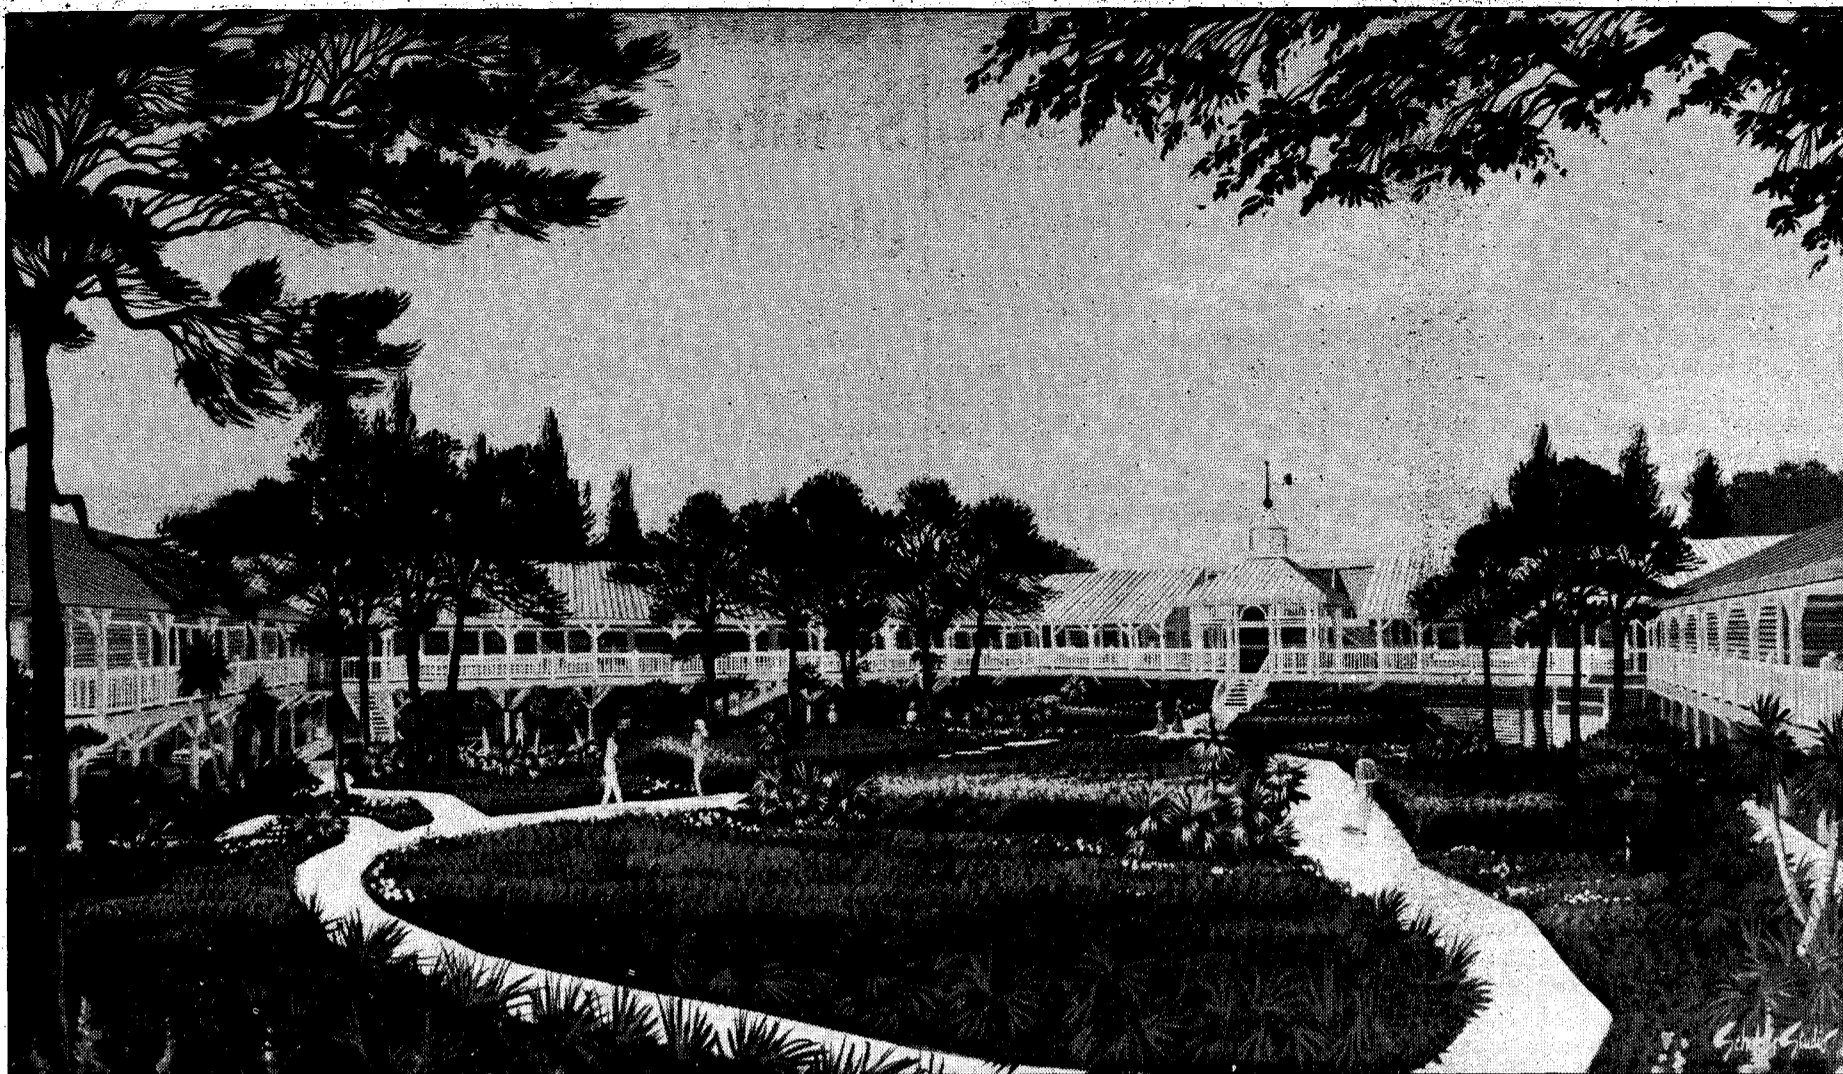

Covered with a sheet and doused with a bucket of ice, the manatee was transported under the close watch of Sea World staffer Pat Sassic.

The crowd that had gathered soon dispersed, with stories of the soft, gentle sea giant to pass on to future generations.

From top, the ailing manatee comes up for air; 10 men lifted the 750-pound mammal from the safety of a retaining net; U.S. Fish and Wildlife staffer Frank Powell keeps a close watch; left, a close-up of the scars that marred the manatee's thick-skinned back; right, Sea World staffer Pat Sassic cools the manatee with ice for the trip to Orlando. council member offices, City Council chambers and the Police Department. The building will be air-conditioned, but ceiling fans will also be installed and all of the windows will open.

The police station, which was originally planned for the center of the building, will be on the end of the structure.

Only the police station and jail will be designed as a "hurricane refuge of last resort." The council considered adapting the entire complex to meet that standard but decided against that move, which would have brought the cost of the building to $1,700,000, Stewart said.

The council consensus after Stewart's presentation was that the proposed style "looks like Sanibel." Their endorsement of the plans means the architects can now begin developing the actual construction papers, a process that Stewart said will take 10 to 12 weeks.

BMR housing

In 1980 Sawbridge reallocated the density from this parcel to another site under his ownership in what was essentially a transfer of development rights, Rogers explained.

A Below Market Rate Housing ordinance now under consideration by the City Council proposes that the city consider relaxation of density as an incentive for developers to construct affordable housing for Island workers.

The continual escalation of land and construction costs along with higher interest rates in recent years have made it difficult for median income families to build or purchase on the Island, Rogers said.

A gift of land such as Sawbridge proposes represents an opportunity to eliminate one significant layer of expense from the cost of development, Rogers said.

CHR has already completed and sold one single-family home on Peachtree Road and as a control to keep the property in the BMRH program retains a 20 percent interest in the property, Valtin said.

The same criteria would be used in the sale of the single-family unit and a duplex CHR hopes to build on the Sawbridge land.

Although the six commissioners present at Monday's meeting favored granting concessions to provide moderate cost housing, Commissioner Larry Simon called a raise in the density from zero to three units "too big a concession."

Bruce Caspar, who lives in Sanibel Highlands and has owned property there since 1974, called the density hike "unfair."

"When the land use plan was adopted I was told I could build only one home on 2 1/2 acres," Caspar said. "Now in 1982 I hear that three homes can be built on only six lots."

I think the land use plan density provision should be adhered to," he said.

Caspar handed the commission a letter from another Sanibel Highlands property owner who shares his views.

"I'm opposed to any variance in the density," the property owner wrote. "Either hold to the plan (CLUP) or dispose of it," she added.

Commissioner Arthur Wycoff pointed out that the commission would consider density concessions only in relation to the Below Market Rate Housing program and its reserve under the Rate of Growth ordinance.

Rogers said that outside of a variance for density, the property could accommodate three dwelling units that would comply with all performance standards of the plan.

Development plans are not yet available, but Valtin said CHR anticipates building small, solar-passive units utilizing a cluster design and a common driveway.

Commissioner Louise Johnson made a motion to recommend approval of the CHR request with the conditions that the final site plan complying with all performance standards be presented to the commission for approval and that the units when completed would be subject to all requirements of the city's proposed BMRH ordinance when adopted.

The motion passed by a 5-1 vote with Simon dissenting. Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham was absent.

Feeney elected to represent Sanibel, Captiva on electric co-op board

By Cindy Chalmers

Sanibel resident Joe Feeney was elected to represent Sanibel and Captiva on the Lee County Electric Cooperative Board of Trustees and the co-op's annual meeting March 27.

Feeney, who has lived on Sanibel for the past four years and in Florida for nine years, replaces retiring trustee Jeannette Hayford as the Islands' representative on the co-op board. Hayford and her late husband, Maxwell, were among the founders of the co-op. In honor of her 25 years on the Board of Trustees, Hayford was named the co-op's first Trustee Emeritus when she retired.

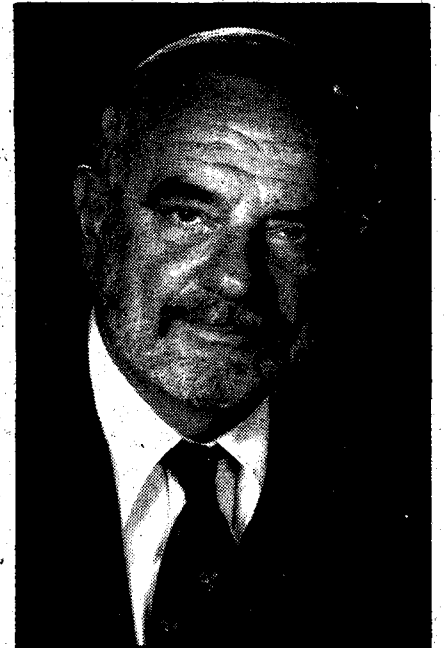

Feeney is president of T. Josephy Feeney, Inc., a Coral Gables-based general agent that represents various insurance agencies.

Co-op spokeswoman Diane Christiansen said she expects that during his three-year term Feeney will add "a certain expertise to the board that has been lacking."

As a trustee, Feeney will help decide management guidelines, set rates and establish operating policies for the public utility. The trustees meet every month and when necessary at special meetings.

On Sanibel Feeney is active in the Lions Club, the Committee of Neighborhood Associations and the Community Association. He coaches Little League baseball and was active in the fundraising campaign for the municipal swimming pool.

Withdrawing opposition to road, bridge vacation

A copy of the following letter was presented to The Islander for publication:

Mayor Porter Goss and Councilmen Sanibel, FL

This is to let you know that I withdraw my objections to the vacation of that section of Old Bayshore Drive that extends from Daisy Mayer Park to the Snell property line.

I had believed, erroneously, that the four feet of public property beyond the bridge extended to the beach. I learn now that it included only the road right of way.

As you know, my mother, Daisy Mayer, donated the land for Bay Drive and the park at the end of it. She also paid the cost of building that road. It was my brother, Ross, however, who planned this project and carried it through.

This small park was intended to provide public access to San Carlos Bay. I'm glad that Gary Price plans to upgrade it by clearly defining its limits and clearing away some of the rubble on the beach. The mangroves will not be trimmed nor the parking space enlarged. This clearly is a refuge for walkers and bikers, and I for one am very glad it's there.

Putting economics in front of environmental preservation?

To the Editor
The Islander

Since when has economics been more important than leaving Sanibel as natural as possible?

If that is to be our policy from now on, then the paving of Bay Drive should be more economical than the weekly or bi-weekly scraping of the roadway which is and has been to no avail.

The road is abominable. There have been accidents due to ruts in the road forcing people to slide into trees, people have had to be towed out of the soft sand not to mention the total destruction of the automobiles and bicycles.

If one is forced to travel this roadway two, three or four times a day to handle family business and activity it becomes detrimental to health and welfare of all friends and residents of the area.

In order not to travel the roadway anymore than necessary, I and many others have taken to walking to the bay area to shell, fish and enjoy the natural beauty with family, friends and grandchildren at low tide.

Have you ever tried to cross the Buell River during the rainy season? The bay areas may be dry due to the low tide but the river flows constantly and is sometimes three feet deep, making it necessary to use the bridge to get to the other side. Now it will be private property, thereby depriving us of one of the areas beyond the Buell River.

Protesting noise pollution

To the Editor
The Islander

I don't know what Jet Skis sound like, but I do know what air boat rides are like. I lost most of my hearing for a 24-hour period.

I wrote Florida's Chamber of Commerce about noise levels, and they referred me elsewhere, etc. Obviously, Florida does not have laws against noise pollution, one of the greatest stress factors today.

I agree with you, Pierre Grace, (Letter to the Editor, The Islander, April 13, 1982) but I don't think we'll find the answer unless the appropriate groups of Sanibel-Captiva enact laws. If the response is what I got in other parts of the state, you can forget it.

Criticizing Lee County road policies

To the Editor
The Islander

It's quite apparent that Sanibel authorities have no clout or influence with Lee County. I wonder why we bother paying our taxes. Where is our representative on the Lee County Commission?

Someone with a lot of clout and influence is getting new roads built all over South Lee County such as Daniels Road, Canal Road, Six-Mile Loop, I-75, etc., etc.

Now all of a sudden with no warning Sanibel is blockaded for a year. A new road,

No. 869, is OH SO slowly, very slowly being built (no one working on it visibly today - April 15) to connect with Colonial. The sections from Shell Point road to Gladiolus end haven't even been cut yet. Wouldn't it have been common sense to have had at least this section complete before the blockade at Kelly Road? -- or is that too much to ask? Whoever blocked McGregor at Kelly should be fired.

Anyone who thinks we will be able to get off this Island in case of a hurricane is sadly mistaken. I hope the new million dollar

CITY HALL will be built to withstand a hurricane and have room for the Sanibel population for 24 hours.

For this season I suggest an airlift and a boatlift be immediately alerted. For the future, how about a small bridge or causeway from Captiva to Boca Grande?

Lee County has no interest in us and is slowly blocking our only exit. This will be completed if the new 10,000-person project is approved.

Outlining objections to Bay Shore Road vacation

To the Editor
The Islander

As one of those involved with the petition to reconsider and rescind the ordinance pertaining to the vacation of old Bay Shore Road, I do not believe that the salient points have been presented in sufficient depth to bring the real issues to the public attention.

As none of us who are objecting to the City action were informed of the press conference that was held, nor did CONA nor COTI ask any of us to explain our position prior to endorsing the city action, this leaves the letter to the editor route available as our most general means of stating our position.

My reason for being involved in this effort is that I believe it was an unwise decision based on the following:

1. The road has been public property for a long time and has been used as a car-foot path to cross the man-made canal, thus bypassing some rugged terrain at water front, particularly at high tide. For those of us who prefer the Bay side, it was a special area.

2. CLUP gave a priority to a northern bypass to Periwinkle, and to relinquish any section of road in that area will certainly weaken any future efforts Sanibel might make to have two alternate routes for evacuation.

The judicial decision of 1974 has lost much of its validity with the continued growth (even controlled) on the Island.

As health, safety and welfare of all the residents is the cornerstone of CLUP, this should not be weakened by an acknowledged act that says we do not need such a road. The right of Eminent Domain for the good of the people should not be weakened. I am truly amazed that the City did not appeal the early ruling. Planning is, as we know, a long range thing.

3. It was stated at the press conference that the mean high tide line marker at that section of the beach is no longer valid. Prior to relinquishing the road, the city should have determined where it is.

A brief trip down the road at high tide (even a moderate one) would seem to indicate the line is somewhat south of where it was marked several years ago. The possibility exists that no trespass would be involved at several points on the road.

4. The city expended or plans to spend $700 in repair of the bridge in order to make a gift to two property owners. This is direct enrichment.

5. Seven-tenths of an acre of bay front property is indeed a handsome amount and is sufficient in many areas of the Island to alter the authorized density under our land use plan. As we are trying to restrict growth, does it not make more sense to retain all the controls we can?

6. Liability has been mentioned as a reason for the city action. It is the nature of government to have liability to its citizens. There is a degree of liability on all government property, and to relinquish this road for that reason establishes a precedent that could have far-reaching consequences.

As to the potential costs of bringing the bridge up to standards, these are established by the type of use. To restrict weight and use could reduce the estimated cost as stated by the city to only a fraction of the figure given and still retain the use for the safety and pleasure of all of us.

7. This is not the first road the city has vacated, nor is it the last. I believe that a policy of giving up that which belongs to all of us without our specific approval as voters and taxpayers is a policy that needs close examination.

As we have an active citizen participation community, would it not be a stronger community to permit us to state our position by that most valued instrument, the ballot. The cost is minimal compared to the worth of the will of the people.

8. As the recipients, Mr. and Mrs. Snell had to be "talked into it" (taking the property) and as there seems to be no direct communication from the other property owner, there should be no difficulty in the City Council at least reconsidering the issue now that they are aware of the concern of many of the residents.

If you are still with me, I quote Thomas Jefferson speaking of town meetings, which he writes are "called to discuss and decide matters of public policy. Now in that method of political self-government the point of ultimate interest is not the words of the speakers but the minds of the hearers. What is essential is not that every one speak but that every thing worth saying shall be said."

If you would like to help bring this matter of basic policy into clear focus, it is only a matter of signing the petition.

Questioning Islander sports coverage

To the Editor
The Islander

I was surprised upon reading The Islander last week (April 13) to see the kind of sports information you are publishing.

Is Mr. Rainwater really a sports writer, or is he seeking some personal vengeance?

Being only a visitor here, I am not privy to any personal details to which his meanderings obviously refer. I would have preferred some information about the Island Fishing Derby and Blessing of the Fleet, which would seem a more relevant subject for a sports column.

Or perhaps Mr. Rainwater has invented a new Island sport -- jibing at one's rivals.

Coast Guard funds to refurbish Lighthouse quarters

A facelift is in order for the keeper's quarters at the Sanibel Lighthouse and will be funded with up to $60,000 from the U.S. Coast Guard.

The funding is part of the agreement finalized last week between the city and the Coast Guard for the city's management of the property at Sanibel's eastern end.

The agreement allows the city to keep the beach area surrounding the Lighthouse open to the public provided the city properly maintains the area and its buildings, which are on the National Register of Historic Buildings.

The Coast Guard can withdraw its financial assistance for the refurbishment of the keeper's quarters if it feels the agreement is not being followed properly by Sanibel. It can also extend the agreement another decade in 1992.

City Council members indicated that whatever trouble or cost involved in maintaining the property would be worthwhile because of the attractiveness of both the Lighthouse and the surrounding beach to both Island residents and tourists.

Residents complain of helipad, fuel tanks

Robert and Bordina Thompson, who live near the Mosquito Control helipad and storage tanks for gas and jet fuel near Bowman's Beach, are disturbed by the ugliness of those items and appeared before the City Council last week asking that some alternative arrangements be made.

The area off Bowman's Beach Road was chosen as a home for the helipad and tanks for the same reason the Thompsons picked their property there -- for its relative seclusion.

"We've retired here," Thompson said.

"We really like it. We liked the quiet and peace of the place we bought."

They are disturbed, however, over the tanks, the helipad and the fencing they can see from the second story of their piling home. They are also concerned over the possibility of an explosion around the fuel tanks.

Councilman Mike Klein said he was distressed that Mosquito Control District Director Wayne Miller had "gone beyond" the proposals he had presented to the council.

"He has appeared before us three times," Klein said. "And each time he has given us proposals and we've agreed to them. But then he has always gone beyond what he said he would do."

Councilman Duane White told the Thompsons, "I don't want you to worry. We're going to help you and find out what can be done."

The council agreed that they would ask Miller to attend the next council meeting to discuss the residents' concerns and outline his plans.

City sees 'no problem' with encroachment

An ordinance granting Robert Kirkpatrick 12 inches of encroachment on the forward and rear setback requirements on one of the smallest lots in Sanibel Harbours subdivision is scheduled for second reading at the June 1 City Council meeting.

Kirkpatrick said the encroachment would give his retirement home "a little more elbow room."

George Carrington, president of Sanibel Harbours, supported Kirkpatrick's request and said Kirkpatrick "is going to be a permanent and year around resident. That really is worth a lot to us."

Planning Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham thought there would be no particular problem with granting the request.

Community Association gets Bingo go-ahead

With little ado, the Sanibel Community Association was granted a license by the City Council to hold Bingo games once a week from October to April at the association hall on Periwinkle Way.

The association will not have to pay the license fee, which by law may be waived for a charitable or civic organization.

Receipts from the Bingo games will be used to help pay off the mortgage on the building.

Rutland home designated for museum, move from Periwinkle Way contemplated

"Uncle Clarence" Rutland's 70-year-old hard pine home on Periwinkle Way will almost certainly become a museum filled with artifacts of the early days on the Island -- but first the house will be moved.

In a letter from their attorney, owners Jerry and Dick Muench offered the Rutland house to the city under the conditions that the city move the house, insure the move and complete the move no later than Dec. 31, 1982.

Charlotte White, head of the city's Historical Preservation Committee, told the council last week she is enthusiastic about the prospect of a museum in the house and is beginning a study of how it should be organized and operated. The museum would be staffed by volunteers, she said.

Councilman Duane White expressed concern that the wood house would be a fire hazard. Councilman Mike Klein suggested that perhaps sprinklers could be installed.

The council discussed the possibility of relocating the house on the new City Hall property on Dunlop Street. The Historical Preservation Committee considered but decided against the Algiers property as a possible site for the house.

Councilman Fred Valtin had only one stipulation about the proposed conversion to a museum. "One thing -- no shells," he said. "This is a museum, not a shell museum."

An unidentified woman on her way out the door said about the plan, "I know this is what Clarence would want. He talked about it for years."

Bowen instructed to re-examine time-share restrictions

An attempt to come up with a motion to tighten restrictions on time-sharing and beach memberships lead to an hour of discussion in the late afternoon of Tuesday's City Council meeting.

Mayor Porter Goss, who said he is becoming more and more concerned about the matter, seconded Councilman Fred Valtin's motion that the city try to control beach use with occupational license fees and enforcement of CLUP's permitted uses regulations.

The audience of citizens appeared to favor Valtin's proposal. Councilmen Duane White and Mike Klein did not, however.

"I know we have to do something," Klein said. "I just don't know whether we can do this without more legal study. I can't help what others think -- I won't vote for something I don't think will work."

White's objections were also based on concerns about the legal ramifications of the proposal.

Valtin's motion ended "in limbo" with a 2-2 vote with Councilman Francis Bailey absent. Bowen will examine the proposal further, advise the council on its legality and make suggestions for dealing with the time share-beach membership problem in the near future.

Council considers ordinance for banning topless establishments

Topless cocktail lounges won't stand a chance on Sanibel if the City Council adopts an ordinance prohibiting such establishments on the Island.

After a recent trip to southeastern Florida, where such bars apparently flourish, City Attorney Neal Bowen and City Manager Bernie Murphy discussed the problem with the City Council.

The council instructed Bowen to prepare an ordinance outlawing topless establishments to ensure that the city will be legally equipped to deny any such requests should they be made in the future.

"I know this may seem slightly silly," Mayor Porter Goss said. "But in this case I think we should be 'forearmed.' I just think it is best to deal with this before it comes up and is already a situation."

Everyone agreed.

Specific amendment request heard

Marie Wood, owner of adjoining lots in Sanibel River Estates, meets all requirements for relief from the Comprehensive Land Use Plan restriction that prevents a property owner from building on two contiguous lots if one of the lots is already developed.

An ordinance granting Wood permission to build on her lot was heard at a first reading last Tuesday and will be heard for a second time on June 1.

Both of Wood's lots average more than 10,000 square feet, they are in a subdivision that is more than half built, and Wood owned the lot on July 8, 1976, when CLUP was adopted.

Charter Revision Committee will make recommendations at public meeting

By Barbara Brundage

Three major changes to the city's charter will be recommended to the City Council by the Ad Hoc Charter Revision Committee at a public meeting this Wednesday evening at MacKenzie Hall.

Expected to be the most controversial item is the committee's recommendation that the Planning Commission should be "institutionalized in the charter as an advisory arm of the City Council."

The Planning Commission was originally created by an ordinance that is repealable by the council and is in effect a "creature of the council," Bo Veal, Charter Revision Committee chairman, pointed out.

The ordinance also grants the commission powers including the granting of development permits that are not appealable to the council, he added.

A second recommendation proposes to compensate city council members as much as $1,200 yearly. Under the current charter provision council members are reimbursed for allowable expenses.

The committee believes a token salary might encourage additional candidates to seek council office who otherwise could not justify the sacrifice required, Veal said.

Thirdly, the committee proposes that council candidates be required to declare their intention to seek office 15 days before filing nomination petitions, which would still be filed 30 days before the date of the election.

This advance announcement would permit a more orderly decision on which council seat to seek, Veal said. It might prevent confusion that has developed in the past when candidates are inadvertently listed on the ballot but decide not to run after seeing the complete slate, he explained.

Concerned citizens circulate anti-nuclear arms race petition

By Cindy Chalmers

A growing concern over the nuclear arms race between the United States and the Soviet Union has prompted a loosely organized group of Sanibel residents to circulate a petition on the Island.

Louise Johnson said the petition calling for global disarmament is a vehicle for Islanders to join the growing grass roots movement all over the country.

Similar petitions have been endorsed by many communities and cities around the country, Johnson said.

The Sanibel petition grew out of a meeting addressed by winter resident and world peace activist C. Maxwell Stanley, whose Stanley Foundation is dedicated to matters essential to the survival of humanity. Stanley is a professional engineer, civic leader and author.

The petition can be signed at Lads and Lassies in Periwinkle Place and at MacIntosh Book Store on Periwinkle Way. In addition, several Islanders are circulating the petition among their friends, Johnson said.

If enough signatures are secured, the petition will be forwarded to U.S. Sen. Lawton Chiles and Rep. L.A. "Skip" Bafalis, she added.

"Maybe it will snowball," Johnson said about the movement. "This is a ground floor opinion we would like to develop - we're not interested in forming an organization.

"Our end goal is to halt the nuclear arms race. We might not have much influence on world policy, but at least we're not just sitting here waiting."

Charter Revision Committee

Other changes to the charter proposed by the committee include some designed to update the charter to conform with state law.

Others are aimed at streamlining council and administration operations primarily by making it possible to conduct routine city business by resolution rather than by the more cumbersome ordinance procedure now called for in the charter.

The City Council is charged with the final determination of whether any or all of the proposed revisions are put to a vote of the people at the November election, Vea emphasized.

He urged all Sanibel voters to attend

Wednesday night's session to express their views and to be better informed on the proposed charter revisions. The meeting will begin at 8 p.m.

Serving with Vea on the committee are City Councilman Duane White, Planning Commissioners Bill Hagerup and Emily Barefield, Ed Underhill and Conrad Lickel.

The committee came up with the draft proposal after six public sessions that began in early March.

May 31 is the deadline for completion of the final report of proposed charter revisions. The committee will be abolished after its recommendations are submitted to the council.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

You can acquire a lot of boating tips either the hard way by paying someone to repair what damage you've had befall your craft, or the easy way by finding things to make boating more trouble free without costing money.

Let me see if I can pass on some ideas to help save potential troubles.

If you own an outboard engine powered boat, as most of us do, you know that the price of oil that must be added to the gasoline has gone up in price while the fuel price has generally moderated or dropped.

The oil you select and how you add it is critical to how long that engine will work. I'm no outboard mechanic, but I've paid enough to send several through Harvard Law School and in the process gained some inside thoughts on engine care when it comes to oil.

Most mechanics say to break in the engine exactly as the book says and not over add oil in the first few hours of operation. Some new boat owners think putting extra oil will make sure the engine "breaks in" smoothly, but with the newer, better engineered powerplant you will only succeed in fouling the plugs and possibly throwing the carbs out of whack.

Some of the boat repair people I know say buy an approved type of oil and stick with that brand -- always. Some boaters buy whatever is available when they pull into a dock. The engine apparently gets used to running on a certain type of oil, and changing brands with varying degrees of additives and grades will eventually get into your piston rings.

This seems to be particularly true of the Mercury outboards. Some of the more experienced Merc drivers carry a case of that company's oil and only use it. Good idea to have a lot of oil on board, too.

The majority of outboards in our area are either Johnsons or Evinrudes. The OMC people, who make both engines, offer oil for either one, but many boaters like one of the several other commercially available brands. One I have used for years is made by Exxon. A guide friend of mine uses only Chevron products, claiming that he has rarely had any ring or internal break-downs with that particular brand.

Of course, any oil you select should be 50-1 BIA certified for TC-W (two cycle-water cooled) use. All brand name oils are, but watch out for the discount stores in many areas that offer sales on outboard oil. Often that oil isn't suitable for water use; some is a combination oil for snowmobiles, chainsaws and so on. Don't put cheap oil in your engine.

One more thing about caring for your boat -- many of you will be heading back home for the summer months. You want to store your boat for the time you will be gone, but smart owners get a marina mechanic to "pickle" the engine for a period.

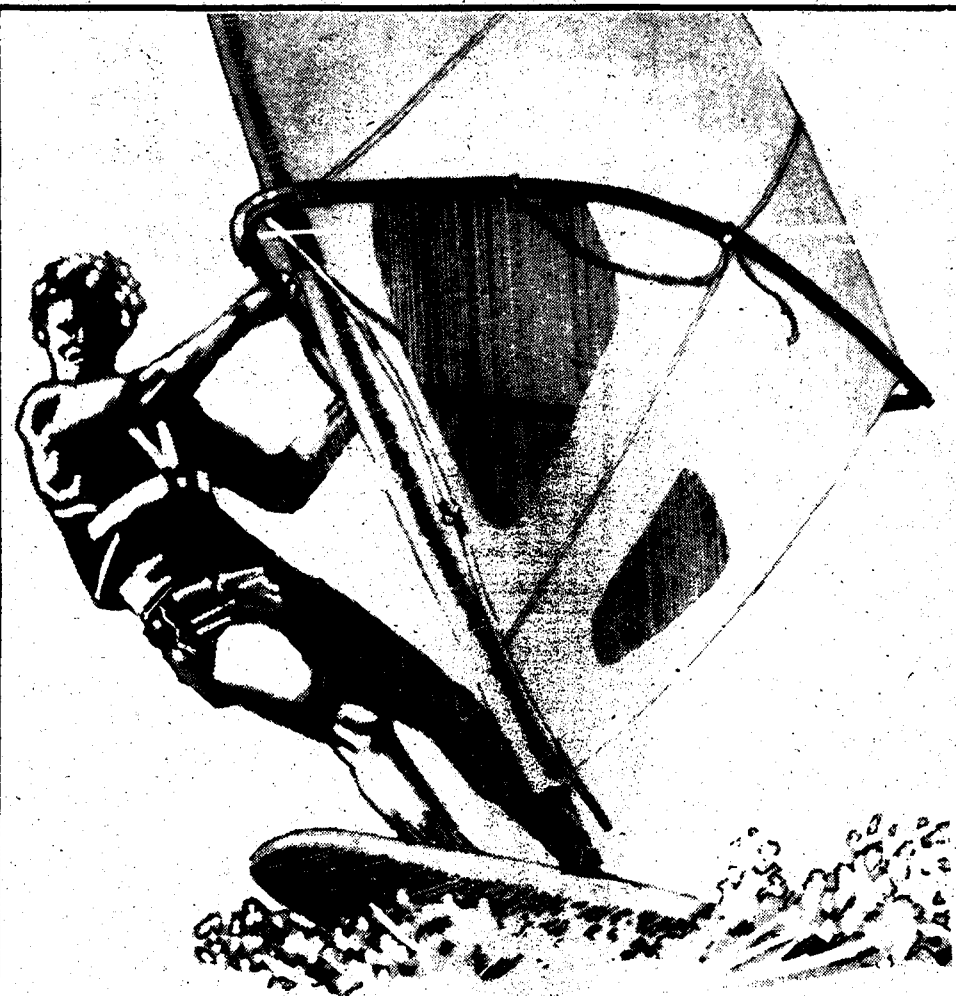

All this amounts to is opening up the spark plug holes, squirting in a special type of oil, draining the carbs and checking over the engine. You want to have it flushed out with fresh water, too.

It sounds like just another expense in the long line of costs related to boating, but "pickling" is the only way to go if you want to return in the fall and resume safe, dependable boating.

And one last tip -- when you run around or get into a shallow area of silted, sandy bottom, shut off the engine immediately and pole or push the boat out of trouble.

As a mechanic friend of mine says, "Never, never back up into that turned-up water." The reason is you will pull silt, sand and other junk into the water pump, which leads to overheating and possible severe damage.

Good luck on the water this week.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

I recently received a note from an avid sheller who was a bit perplexed about not being able to get her collected shells highly polished. She brushed, scrubbed and soaked, but achieved no desired results. This week let's look over some ways to process your shells.

Mrs. Elmer Smitt of St. Louis sent me the letter after returning from vacation on Grand Cayman, where she had collected several shells. Her goal was to polish her shells to a pearlized finish.

Questions on the cleaning process come up quite often. The trouble is that although some shells could be polished, many of them in the natural state just aren't very shiny and never were meant to be. So going to great lengths to make them look glossy probably won't work very well.

However, let's start from the point where you pick up a shell, either alive or dead (hopefully the latter) and you discover that it has barnacles, grass or other growing life on the sides. This happens very often with older whelks or horse conchs that are found in our waters.

I usually urge my shelling groups to discard the badly fouled shells because they often result in too much work for the end product. It's not unusual end up killing a large, live shell by taking it home and trying to clean off the barnacles. That's why I would rather you look for dead shells -- they are much easier to work with (or experiment with if you are new to shelling).

Okay, so you've found a shell you want to clean. The first thing you do is get the barnacles off. I suggest using the back of a common, dull kitchen knife to chip off the barnacles carefully, so you won't gouge the host shell.

If the mollusk is still inside, boil the shell for a few minutes until you can cool the shell and turn out the meat inside. This takes some skill, but be sure to get all the meat out -- or it will smell like the dickens later on. The boiling will also help clean the outside of the shell.

If there is still some grass or "moss" on the shell, then use one of those pot scrubbers made of nylon or some such gentle surface to get what you can off the shell.

Another process, which I often hesitate to pass on, involved muriatic acid. The acid can be purchased in area shops and will literally boil away any grass and even some of the barnacles left on the shell.

However, muriatic acid is dangerous to work with. The highly dangerous chemical requires the use of gloves and has to be rinsed with water frequently. The thing I don't like about the acid is that if it is left on the shell for more than a few minutes it will damage and possibly ruin the shell. Acid should be used for only the most stubborn places.

As Mrs. Smitt mentioned in her letter, there are other ways to clean shells, such as using a 50-50 mix of ammonia and water or bleach and water. Again, however, chemicals can sometimes cause the opposite of the desired effects.

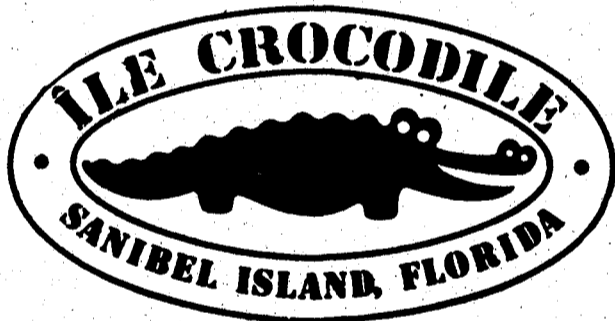

Any shell that is naturally colorful, such as a cone or olive, doesn't need to be exposed to discoloring bleaches.

Shells that are light in color, such as the white angel wings or larger whelks and clams, suffer no bad effects from bleaches and actually look better in the bleached state.

It really depends on the end results you want, but care must be used when working with chemicals.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Island. Call 472-3459 for information.

Anchors

Heads turned and eyes widened last week when Young America dropped anchor by the Causeway.

A Brigantine tall ship, the vessel carries 24 students, two professors, a crew of seven and a cat on a two-month SEAmester program chartered by Southampton College of Long Island University.

The ship set sail from Miami on April 4, bound on a 3,000-mile journey that that has covered the Keys, the Dry Tortugas and Sanibel and will continue back around Florida for adventures that will include canoeing in the Okefenokee Swamp in Georgia and exploring the old seaports of Charleston, S.C.; Beaufort, N.C.; and Newport News, Va.; the Chesapeake and Delaware Bays; Block Island, R.I.; and Nantucket Island, Mass.

The students on board Young America are required to take two or three courses ranging from American Maritime History and Literature of the Sea to Ichthyology and Coastal Ecology Fieldwork. In addition, each student must learn the fundamentals of navigation and seamanship under the direction of Capt. Jeff Bolster and his crew.

"We try to teach a healthy respect for the sea," Bolster said. "I tell people that if we go over, there is a good chance of drowning." Bolster is a veteran of 16 such adventures, the last two on Young America.

Students take part in all phases of the ship's operation, learning instrumental and celestial navigation, course plotting and rules of seamanship. The regular nitty gritty chores such as swabbing decks, cleaning heads, heaving the anchor and polishing brass must also be taken care of.

"With a group like this it's lots of fun because there's a lot to do," Bolster said.

This seamester was the first time marine biology major Larry Sherlow had ever been on a sailboat. "I have blisters all over my hands from having to do everything manually," he said.

Students on the seamester are required to take two or three courses ranging from American Maritime History and Literature of the Sea to Ichthyology and Coastal Ecology Fieldwork. In addition, each student must learn the fundamentals of navigation and seamanship under the direction of Capt. Jeff Bolster and his crew.

"We're a motley one," said literature major at Hamilton College, "but we're all here with open arms at every port."

Indeed, the vessel is impressive. The overall length of 130 feet, a beam of 30 feet. Built in 1975, it carries 24 students and a crew of seven. The square sails on the advantage of trade winds.

While Young America was on the water, her students biked, hiked and explored Sanibel, exploring the refuge. Doug Hardy and Bill Peterson were on the ship to check out other at Timmy's Nook.

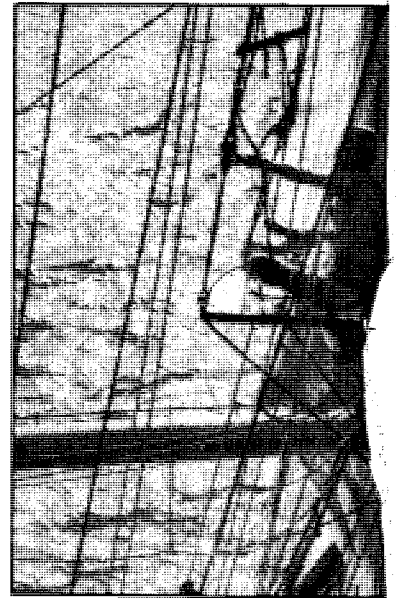

The voyage plans originally to include Haiti, but the Coast Guard's invalidity of the contract between the ship and its owners.

The change in itinerary was made by many, but most adjusted well.

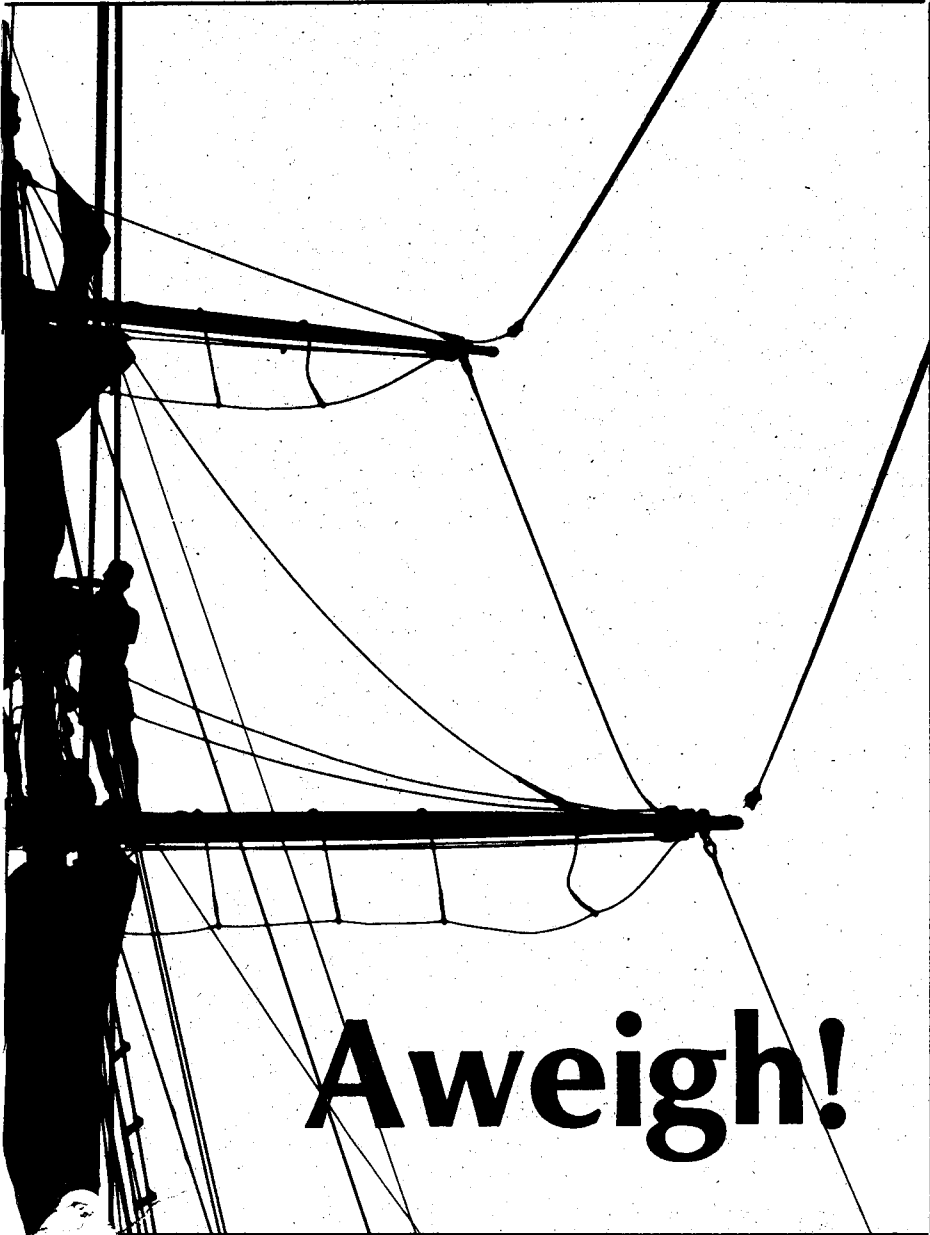

"Everything I've given up for this is worth it because of the sea and Colgate College history major Jenny Rubin said.

Peterson said. His Literature of the Sea course covers Coleridge's "The Rime of the Ancient Mariner" and works of Herman Melville, Joseph Conrad and Jack London, among others.

"An experience of this sort integrates the material probably more effectively than in any other environment," Peterson said.

The ship's cooks, Julia Graham of West Kingston, R.I., and Brenda Lou Sabbag of Armondale, N.Y., provide solid home cooked meals with fresh breads and desserts every day.

"It's been a gourmet experience for me," said Mike Newman.

The voyagers had the good fortune of encountering a shrimp boat near Everglade City, where a case of beer was traded for a barrel of shrimp and lobster tails. That was enough food to satiate 33 hungry appetites and still leave half the barrel untouched.

Alcohol is allowed on board only once a week, when a flag with a heart pierced by an arrow is raised to signal the start of a "swizzle" party. Students try to be as formal as possible under the circumstances.

Four people remain on watch 24 hours a day. By the end of the journey, each student is expected to take charge during one shift, issuing orders that must be carried out for smooth sailing.

"We had no idea what to expect, no matter how much they told us," said Betsy Brown.

Is there anything they miss about life away from dry land? "No. Nothing, really," said Don Torgersen of Lynchburg College in Virginia. "There's no place I'd rather be."

TEENAGE STROKE

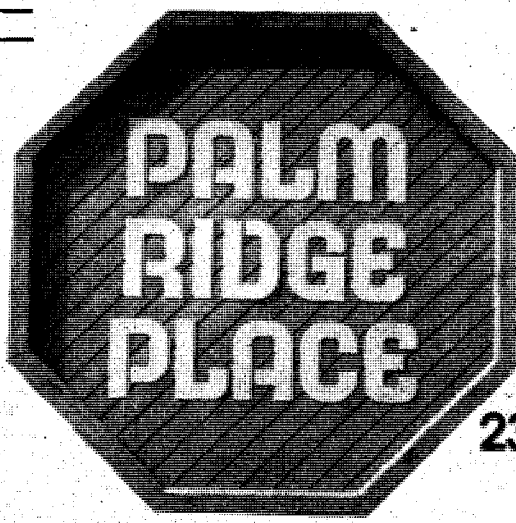

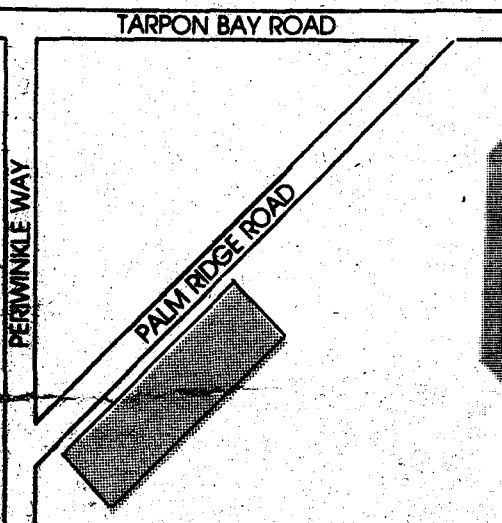

Strokes, which can cause permanent brain damage, with paralysis and impairment of memory and speech, sometimes occur while a person is intoxicated or the following day. This complication of drunkenness is most likely to occur in young people, especially teenagers. They sometimes imbibe too massively and quickly - this thickens the blood, slows its circulation, a blood clot can form and lodge in the brain, causing a stroke.

Dr. K.C. Emerson, who has a doctorate in biological sciences and is a noted area environmentalist, has written several books and lived many places. He chose to concentrate on his military career in this portrait interview.

"A lot of people know me," he explains. "But not many know about this aspect of my life."

He spent more than three years as a Japanese P.O.W. Thirty-seven years later, he says the three years were "the greatest experience of my life," because they led to his book on the experience and the famous Death March in which more than three-fourths of all American P.O.Ws who participated died.

It is perhaps a slight oversimplification, but not basically inaccurate, to say Emerson thinks the military is great.

"For one thing, quite frankly, it's good training," he says.

In college and graduate school, Emerson firmly planned a future researching tropical medicines in Brazil with the Rockefeller Foundation.

But he went to a land-grant school, Oklahoma State University in Stillwater, Okla., and at that time all land-grant colleges and universities required two years of military training courses for all male students.

Emerson took the required courses and then decided to give himself a little "insurance" and took the second two years.

During that time, in 1939, he marched in an unusual parade. When he was 22, Emerson marched in the last annual parade of the surviving Oklahoma veterans of the Grand Army of the Republic -- the Union Army in the Civil War.

"I think they may have had gatherings later than that," he remembers. "But there were eight of them left, and all had to be wheeled down the street. None could walk. So I guess they decided no more parades."

Emerson didn't know any of the old soldiers' ages, but he says he thought they could have been born as late as 1850.

"Ages make a difference in a war," he says. "In World War II, there was a wide age spread. There were 18-year-olds, but there were 'middle-aged' soldiers too -- middle aged army, meaning 25 to 35.

"And there were older men who were career army and had been in World War I. But the Civil War is the youngest in U.S. history. The average age of the Civil War soldier was 17, and toward the end, there were some as young as 12."

Emerson thinks one of the things that went wrong in Vietnam was that all the soldiers were in their late teens and early 20s. "There were no older veterans to show them how to cope and deal with war," he says. "I think that is why there was so much drug use in that war."

In spite of tropical disease and alienation, beating (in prison camps) and brainwashing, Emerson maintains military life is extraordinarily rich, much more so than civilian life.

In his own case, the "brainwashing" did not work because he knew it was coming and had prepared several lines of psychological defenses in his mind. He says proper military training will teach you how to deal with things like that.

"In a prison camp, there are several different types of people," he says. "If you are to survive you have to start with the attitude that you will make it. Even survivors get depressed, yes. But not much oftener than in normal life.

"For one thing," he adds. "There is no time. If you're clearing jungle and digging and doing hard manual labor 10 to 12 hours a day and get up before dawn, by evening all you want to do is go to sleep. You really don't have much time to think about your emotions. That is what is so helpful about manual labor."

When the war broke out, K.C. and his wife, Mary, were living in Manila. She returned to America by ship, accompanied by a lot of other American women. She was also eight months pregnant, and Emerson did not see his first son, William, until he was 5 years old.

Asked how it felt to be parted from your wife and not know if you'd ever see your child, Emerson says quietly, "Those things happen in wartime. I bet two-thirds of the women on that ship were in the same condition."

After the war Emerson came home by boat, and his wife was waiting at the dock. He didn't know she would be there, he says, so he hadn't worn fresh clothes.

The next war was Korea. "It did not end in a declaration of peace," he says. "It ended in an armistice. There is an Armistice Commission. I served on it in 1958."

He lived that year alone in Pan Mun Jun, the town where the war ended in 1953. Gen. Douglas MacArthur had been "fired" by Harry Truman, and the commander at the last was Gen. Matthew Ridgeway.

Emerson explains there was a five-member board on each side -- the United Nations (mostly the United States) and the North Koreans and their allies. Emerson's job was to be an observer and make sure shots were not fired or combat went on in a demilitarized zone that was ap-

... The Queen's Messenger by W.R. Duncan - Marston has completed his assignment and in Bangkok has boarded a plane for London, from which he disappears.

Charlie Excalibur, whose real identity is unknown, is a self-appointed intelligence agent who wanders throughout the East sending messages to Gordon Clive.

Marston was carrying such a message to Clive when he vanished. Clive, who has previously had a bitter experience at the hands of Thai Communists, is sent to search for Marston.

The scene shifts from London to Bangkok, to Hong Kong and Ulan Bator and through the jungles of Laos, Thailand and Cambodia as the plot develops and we follow Charlie, Clive and their associates.

This is a spell-binding puzzle of espionage and intrigue whose pieces finally fall into place in a confrontation in Village 328.

Leaf House by Ruth Engelmann - This is the warm and nostalgic memoir of the author, a third-generation Finnish American who grew up during the 1920's and '30's in a tiny Finnish community, now a ghost town, in Wisconsin near Lake Superior.

She was a rather sickly child, afflicted with a respiratory ailment and a rash that required the bandaging of her hands and arms. However, she recalls a happy childhood on the family farm with her father and mother and brothers and sister, to say nothing of indomitable Grandmother who cards and spins her own wool, chops wood for the fire and tells of life in the old country.

The narrative takes the author through the one-room schoolhouse and through high school, where in spite of time lost because of illness, she wins a scholarship. She describes the years of the Depression when her father took any job available and the family shared what they had with those who had not. It is a heart-warming story, beautifully expressed.

One Smart Kid by Edwin Moses - A tale told by 13-year-old Marvin Hollowell, whose rather aloof father publishes the newspaper in the small Kansas village of Fox Creek. There is a hotel of sorts in Fox Creek managed by Eileen O'Connell, something of a mystery to the residents, and when suddenly there appears to be a guest at the hotel, gossip and rumor are rife.

In typical 13-year-old fashion Marvin gets himself into a frightening tangle, and when he becomes the possessor of $62,000 in stolen money he is really in trouble.

The author spins an intriguing yarn told by his engaging hero.

Library fun facts

Did you know that: When St. Thomas Aquinas was asked in what manner a man might best become learned, he answered, "By reading one book" (Southey - The Doctor, p. 164).

Become "learned" at your local Public Library. Remember ... it's okay to get smart with us.

Who said: "We prize books, and they prize them most who are themselves wise."

The answer is Emerson - Letters and Social Aims. Quotation and Originality."

Who said: "Please return this book; I find that though many of my friends are poor arithmeticians, they are nearly all good bookkeepers."

The answer is Sir Walter Scott.

New emergency number planned

Effective May 1, Sanibel and Captiva fire and paramedics services will operate under a new emergency phone number.

Any persons requiring emergency fire or medical services will call 936-3600 for direct connection to the Lee County Communications Center (Lee Control). Such emergency calls currently go through the Sanibel Police Department dispatcher before they are routed to the appropriate agencies.

The change in numbers will streamline communications for the Police Department, more efficient operations in the near future.

Both the Sanibel and Captiva Fire Control districts as well as the paramedics will operate under the new 936-3600 number as of May 1.

Frederick says Island emergency officials will begin this week circulating a fact sheet and phone stickers with the new number to Island residents to explain and ease the transition to the new 936-3600 number.

The current 472-1414 emergency number will remain in operation for several months until the transition is completed.

The new dispatching services offered by Lee Control will contribute to improved communications, be a source of additional information for fire department related emergencies and provide for a quicker response time for fire and rescue personnel.

The public is encouraged to assist fire and rescue operations by making a special note of the new emergency telephone number -- 936-3600.

CableVision installation underway for Captiva customers

By Peggy Dailey

Construction of the CableVision system on Captiva is presently underway, and changes in the company's plans have lead to inquiries from Captivans.

CableVision manager Fred Valtin said installation of cable lines at private residences was started April 15, a full month earlier than had been anticipated.

Not counting Tween Waters Inn, which Valtin said has more than 1000 units, there are a potential 450 to 500 installations on Captiva, Valtin said, adding that the company has more than 200 stand-by contracts for installation at a later date.

He said CableVision will be "disappointed" if it doesn't pick up 75 percent of the television sets on Captiva by early next season.

Approximately 20 percent of those homes that have contracted for cable are already connected, he said. The rest should be hooked up by the end of next month. "We'll get to everybody as fast as we can," he said.

Installing cable on Captiva has appreciable difficulties because in many instances the individual property owners are the only ones who know where the utility lines are that serve their homes, Valtin explained. However, he added, there has been only a few incidents where utility lines have accidentally been cut.

Lions hear from Medic representative

By D.E. Cooperrider

The regular meeting of the Sanibel-Captiva Lions Club was held on April 21 at the Sanibel Community Building. An interesting program was given by Van Taggart from the private corporation, Medic.

Medic is a program of medical assistance for use in emergency situations no matter where the subscriber may be in the United States. All necessary medical data such as diseases, allergies or adverse drug reactions is recorded on a microfilm card that is carried by the subscriber.

In case of an emergency, there can be immediate contact with the detailed file and medical history of the subscriber. This may be of importance in an accident situation or any other situation where the patient is unconscious.

The success of the recent Bloodmobile visit was reported by Lion John Cook, who noted that 55 participants donated 26 units to the Lions Blood Bank, nine units to the Kiwanis Blood Bank and one to the Edison College Blood Bank. Lion Cook also reported that the Lions Blood Bank had made unlimited units available for the treatment of Islander Judy Hiers, who was critically burned in a fire at her home last month.

Lion Cook also reported the club has collected and packaged 253 pairs of eyeglasses with cases, 86 pairs of eyeglasses alone, three separate frames and 52 pairs of separate lenses for shipment overseas.

Lion Rogers reported the donation of several items of sports equipment and a tandem bicycle for use at the Florida Lions Camp for the Visually Handicapped. He gave a plaque to President Comlossy in recognition of previous donations to the camp.

Lion Duane White conducted an impressive candlelight induction ceremony for new members John van Heemst and Charles LoCicero.

The next meeting will be at the Sanibel Community Building at 6:30 p.m. on May 5.

proximately two-thirds of a mile wide.

During the Vietnam war Emerson worked in the Pentagon doing research. He began as the deputy for science and technology to the secretary of the army. He first visited Vietnam in November 1959. He went again, as an observer, in 1964-65.

Emerson says the Vietnam war was directly attributable to John F. Kennedy. "It was his decision to put the troops in," he says.

"The last people who want to go to war are soldiers," he reflects. "They are not bloodthirsty.

"But the President is the man in the white hat. He makes the decisions, and everyone else carries them out. He makes the decisions on the best judgements he can get."

In Emerson's opinion, "two evils" came out of the Vietnam War -- the military situation of today, which is so very expensive, and the Great Society.

"We're still paying for both," he says.

Emerson began visiting Sanibel after he retired. They moved here in June 1980, and since then he has been active in environmental matters. He is chairman of the advisory committee to the J.N. "Ding" Darling Refuge and of the city's Live Shelling Committee.

He also belongs to Retired Officers, the Audubon Society, Disabled American Veterans and Former POWs: Defenders of Bataan and the Corregidor.

Still an avid bird-watcher, Emerson reads extensively on birds and is also the curator for the Smithsonian Institution in southern Florida, which means decides if area offers are worthwhile for the Smithsonian.

He ends his portrait interview with the same emphasis with which he began -- the military. "Where else could I have gotten these many experiences and traveled and done as many things?" he says. "I started as an infantryman, supervised an automotive rebuilding plant, was a POW -- and that really was the greatest experience I ever had.

"I also taught school for the army, I witnessed the occupation years in Germany, I saw Europe rebuilt after World War II through the Marshall Plan, I traveled, I went back to college and got my Ph.D., I taught again and I served in the Pentagon.

"All of these experiences and jobs are basically available still to any man who has the ability, no matter what his income or his parents' income," he concludes.

Unique Island mollusk

Crepidula fornicata

A "tower chain" of Slipper Shells on a Pen Shell, Atrina serrata crepidula, often employs the Pen Shell as a substrate.

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

There is one locally-abundant marine mollusk that is of interest in a number of ways including the fact that it has an intriguing and complicated sex life.

In the waters about Sanibel, and washed onto our shores by the thousands sometimes, are Common Slipper Shells, Crepidula fornicata (Linne). Many here seem to be associated with the bivalve Pens that are thrown up by the ton on Sanibel beaches.

Often Slipper Shells may be seen in what have been called "tower chains," stacked one upon the other, the smaller individuals toward the top.

The bottom-most shells in these tower chain stacks are functional females. As long as they emit female hormones into the nearby microenvironment they remain "queens" of the tower. This hormone emission causes the smaller shells in the stack to continue to be males, but not really functional males. We might call them "males-in-waiting."

When the females on the bottom of the tower eventually age or die and cease to generate and disperse hormonal substances, the sessile males further up the stack change sex and in a very short time -- days only -- become functional females.

Smaller shells at the very apex of the tower and elsewhere nearby are, at this point, without sex; that is, they are neuter. As the old female at the bottom disappears and one or more males above change into females, these smallest and sometimes highest of all youngsters are converting into males-in-waiting.

I call these stacked males "in waiting" because they are not the functional males that fertilize the old queen females at the bottom of the stack. Sessile males are non-functional; they are simply waiting to turn into females. Fertilization is accomplished by wandering males and not by one of the queen's own sessile males in the stack above her.

This strange phenomenon of sequential sex change has a name in science: consecutive or protandric (male first) hermaphroditism. In this process a wandering male, one which accomplishes the fertilization, eventually may become sessile and join a tower chain and await its turn to become a female too.

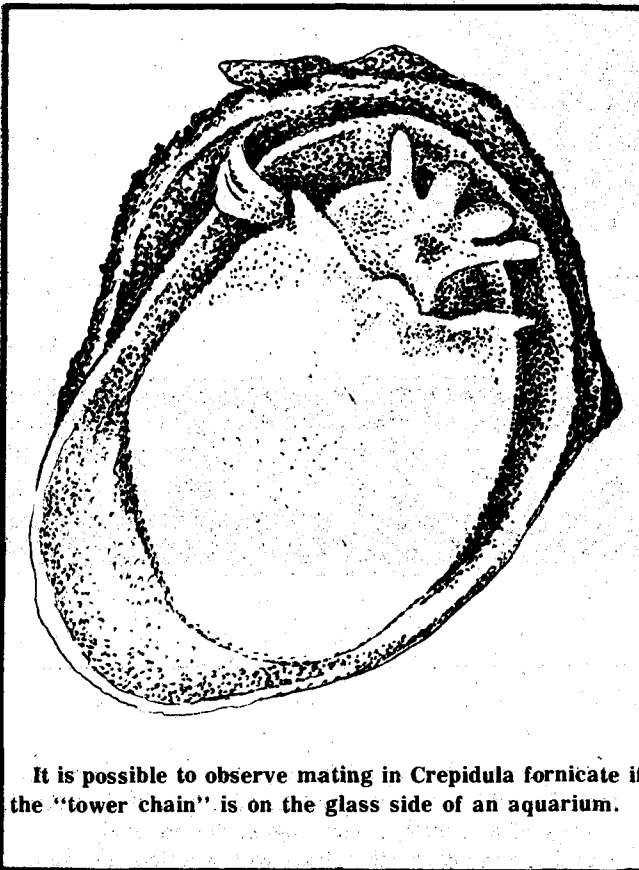

The accompanying drawing shows a queen female being fertilized by a wandering male. To the left side may be seen his copulatory organ passing under the margin of the female's shell.

I haven't been able to find out what the generic name Crepidula means, but I thought the specific name to be quite clear until I looked a little further into the origin of the term, fornicata. A learned correspondent who wishes to remain anonymous has this to say on the subject:

"You are bound to get a lot of flak from some classicists and from some prudes when you inform them that the name fornicata refers to Crepidula's habit of lying one on top of the other in a questionable attitude.

"Indeed one prudish taxonomic authority gives the origin as derived from the Latin fornicatus meaning vaulted. A Latin dictionary adds 'arched' to the definition. If you look in Webster under 'fornicate' you will find that it is derived from Late Latin fornicatus, the past participle of fornicare which in turn was derived from Classical Latin fornic, meaning arch, vault, or brothel.

It is possible to observe mating in Crepidula fornicata if the "tower chain" is on the glass side of an aquarium.

"Linnaeus was a very earthy fellow who was noted for using fishermen's names for his species, simply translating them into Latin. But Linnaeus did not use Classical Latin; he used Late Latin, as did almost all of the scientists and, indeed, all of the literary men of the day. That is why Classical Latin students have to relearn Late Latin. It is a different language.

"Late Latin was far more widely used and for a longer period of time than was Classical Latin which, unfortunately, is the only Latin taught in our schools today.

Thus the earthy assumption as to the meaning of fornicata is quite correct, and those scholars who wish to have a clean-up campaign on poor old Linnaeus are all wet.

"Fishermen thought they knew what Crepidula were doing, though it is now known they weren't. Note how the word slowly changed over to the Late Latin meaning which is our own."

Slipper Shells, in addition to being charming little toy boats for children, have many other interesting properties and uses. For one thing, many tons of them are spread annually to provide a substrate on which oyster embryos may reside and grow. This commercial use is quite widespread, and another of the species' common names, Quarterdeck Shell, is used to describe this activity in the oyster-raising business.

This species is a monovalve or gastropod. It grows from 1½ inch to two inches long; the shell is oval; it is limpet-like, but with a curled posterior apex.

Inside -- and this is why it is called a slipper or boat shell -- is a platform, or septum, that covers the posterior part of the shell like a deck and supports the viscera. There is no operculum but none is needed, for the shell is almost always plastered against a hard substrate.

Some variation in the edge of the shell may be seen in different populations which might be resting upon different substrate. For example, those on Pen Shells might be rougher-edged than those plastered on a smooth-surfaced shell.

As gastropods or monovalves go, our little Crepidula has other interesting characteristics. One is that it is a mucociliary feeder, which is another way of saying that it, in its own way, filters sea water and entraps in the mucous of its mantle protozoan and other planktonic food. Thus it competes with the bivalves or pelecypods such as clams and oysters. In this sense, live Slippers are considered harmful to oyster colonies, for they consume the same food that oysters feed upon and are thus in competition.

Within the G.I. tract is a firm gelatinous proteinacious rod-like organ that rotates. This is called the crystalline style and it produces enzymes capable of digesting the mucous-wrapped, trapped plankton. This organ is most always present in bivalves, while only a few monovalves, like Crepidula, have it.

Although the dead shells are used for oyster embryo substrates it seems that some live ones must have been shipped to our Pacific northwest and also to northern Europe. In both places Crepidula fornicata is now an exotic pest.

The next time you see one of these little shell boats on the beach, consider some of the complicated life processes that had to take place before this simple, small shell could wash ashore.

Inlets provide vital links to the sea, but also pose erosion problems

The numerous inlets connecting Florida's inner waters to the Gulf of Mexico and the Atlantic Ocean are much like other things we tend to take for granted — we don't realize how important they are until they are gone.

The 60 Florida inlets (43 on the Gulf and 17 on the Atlantic) are important to the recreational boater and sport fisherman and handle almost all of the multi-million dollar commercial fishing industry.

They are vital links to the sea, providing passageways to fishermen, yachtsmen and the operators of ocean liners, tankers and cargo ships as well as serving as safe havens for small boats during unexpected severe weather and waves.

Ecologically, inlets are also important in their functions as flushing agents, renewing bay waters by an exchange with outer continental shelf waters. And they serve as important migratory pathways for fish and shellfish.

Unfortunately, inlets also contribute significantly to serious beach erosion problems that affect much of Florida's shoreline.

Hazardous currents and continuous sand drifting cause the channels to become shallow — factors that often present a formidable challenge to ocean engineers who must devise ways of keeping the inlets open and as safe as possible.

The complexities of dealing with inlet problems, as well as the interesting historical role that inlets have played in the early development of Florida have resulted in considerable study and documentation on these areas.

Over the past several years, for example, Florida Sea Grant researchers have studied many of these inlets and compiled geographical, geological and historical data to aid in their future management, use and control.

Glossaries summarizing the more significant available information and known documentation on 11 of the inlets studied have been published by Florida Sea Grant College. The glossaries still available include: Mantanzas Inlet, Johns Pass and Blind Pass; Sebastian Inlet; Big Hickory Pass and Big Carlos Pass; Fort George Inlet; Port Canaveral Entrance; St. Mary's Entrance; and Sikes Cut.

For a free copy of any of these contact the Florida Sea Grant Advisory Program, G022 McCarty Hall, University of Florida, Gainesville, FL 32611.

Saving the gopher tortoise

George Campbell, left, who is licensed to handle this protected species, will care for the animal and return it to its original homesite after all danger due to road construction is past.

Huether cooperated enthusiastically with the turtle preservation effort. Campbell marks each animal with its own I.D. He presently has about 40 animals in his colony. Photo by Karl Krower.

Movie shows manatees in peril

Silent Sirens: Manatees in Peril will be shown every afternoon this week, April 26-30, in the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge Visitor Center.

The film will begin at 2 p.m. each afternoon.

The 30-minute feature film deals with the plight of the manatee here in Florida. It was produced by the Florida Audubon Society in conjunction with the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the Florida Department of Natural Resources.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

Many people say they could never live in Florida because they would miss distinctive seasons, heralded by:

1. Brilliant foliage and gently falling leaves to rake up in the autumn,
2. Wicked blizzards and icy streets in the winter (time to visit Florida),
3. Burgeoning blossoms and the tweet tweeting of birds in the spring,
4. Gaspingly high humidity and scorching city pavements in the summer.

Actually, Sanibel and Captiva have several highly distinct seasons. We have, for example, just weathered The Season, which ends rather abruptly after Easter.

The Islands are now ours to enjoy (with the probable exception of weekends) for nearly two precious months — until schools let out, marking our two-month Family Vacation Season.

The Islands Are For Islanders Season, a period from, roughly, mid-April until late June, is heralded by a wide variety of extremely visible signs. For example:

1. You can answer the phone with a welcoming smile in your voice, for the ringing no longer strikes terror in your heart, and,
2. You can open the mail with a steady hand - without first making a good, stiff drink, because,
3. All your distant relatives, long-lost friends and acquaintances, and vast assortment of potential visiting firemen have migrated back to their northern nests (until the next season, deo volente).
4. You do not have to arrive at Bailey's promptly at 8 a.m. in order to:
 - a) locate a parking space that is closer to your destination than the movie theater or the Coconut Grove

- b) find any of the food you want left on the shelves
 - c) be able to push a shopping cart up and down the aisles without wearing your medieval armor and bearing your trusty mace
5. You can actually buy stamps at the post office at 9 a.m. on a Monday morning — without waiting in line.
 6. If you wish to dine in one of our local restaurants, you do not have to be there at 5.
 7. You will not trail (in first gear) a fleet of mopeds down Periwinkle (except, possibly, on weekends).
 8. In fact, it may now take 15 minutes, rather than five hours to drive from one end of Periwinkle to the other.
 9. Moreover, you can safely contemplate making a left turn onto (or off) our main thoroughfare during dayling hours.
 10. If you have not left your footprints in the sand for several months, you should be able to find a parking space at one of our beach accesses. There may even be a few nice shells left in "the shell capital of the world."

Photographers' Gallery launches 'all-out' membership campaign

By David Meardon

The Photographers' Gallery has launched an all-out membership campaign chock full of incentives the wise Islander would do well to investigate.

Besides introducing a new Contributing Membership for $25, the gallery now offers each new member 10 hours annually of free darkroom use and a choice of an individual or family portrait or a Sanibel-Captiva poster signed by gallery president Emil Frey.

The gallery also offers its members reduced rates on books as well as educational workshops and seminars.

"What we're really doing is seeing if the community will support us," said the gallery's managing director Renee Twombly. The gallery recently sent brochures of the membership offer to all

Island residents and has also sent letters to Island businesses asking for support.

During the past year the gallery has exhibited the works of world-renowned portrait photographer Yousuf Karsh, abstract artist-photographer Robert Rauschenberg and photojournalist Peter Woodard.

Opening May 9 will be an exhibit of works by Lewis Hine, a social documentary photographer who recorded working class conditions in the South during the early 1900's.

None of the exhibits has been a money-maker, but Twombly stressed that print sales are secondary. "We are a community organization, like a museum. We're not here to sell photos. We're here to survive," she said.

Besides the Contributing Membership, the non-profit organization offers host of memberships tailored to fit individual or family preferences.

A $75 Annual Family membership offers Robert Rauschenberg's signed poster, "In + Out City Limits: Ft. Myers." An archival-printed photograph from the gallery's Annual Member Print Series is available for Friends of the Gallery ($150). Annual Patrons ($500) will receive all six prints from the Member Print Series, and Life Members ($1,000) will receive one print annually from the series.

As always, memberships in this non-profit organization are tax-deductible.

Anyone interested in becoming a member of the Photographers' Gallery or in volunteering time to assist in its operation should visit the gallery at 1554 Periwinkle Way or call at 472-5777.

A Taste of

By Cindy Chalmers

Island restaurants, entertainers, residents, visitors and, most of all, Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, got a real "taste of the Islands" on Sunday at the Dunes Country Club.

More than 3,500 people had entered the Taste of the Islands food and entertainment extravaganza when ticket takers stopped collecting admission at 3 p.m.

"We were so far above what we expected, we were running out of food. So we felt it would be better not to keep charging admission if there was a chance the people wouldn't be able to get any food," explained Scott Siler of Marquis Hotels and Resorts.

Siler called the event an overwhelming success that exceeded the expectations of

"I've never been so relaxed!"

"Why don't we relax here forever?"

You can relax forever at South Seas Plantation for much less than you may think. That's the wonder of Interval Ownership — the modern, affordable way to own your vacation home for just the time when you want to use it.

Just pick the weeks you want and enjoy the tennis courts, the swimming pool, the spa, the beautiful shelling beach and, best of all, your own vacation villa tastefully appointed to the last detail.

Your can forget the worries of advance reservations and the ever increasing cost of vacation rentals. Your vacation home will be ready and waiting for you every year — yours to enjoy forever.

"We're still in the midst of counting the money," he said Monday afternoon. "We should have figured out by late this week."

In addition to the proceeds from the $2 admission, CROW will receive money from the t-shirt sales and from many of the restaurants that participated in the gourmet afternoon, Siler said. He added that American Express has also pledged "a sizable" contribution to CROW.

"We couldn't have picked a finer Island organization for this benefit," he said. "We've already scheduled the same thing for next year."

ISLANDER SPORTS

The race of a lifetime

By Allen Rainwater

The Indianapolis 500 it was not, but the 1982 Sanibel-Captiva Pinewood Derby provided Cub Scout Pack 88 and its loyal supporters with many a racing thrill.

For all you former scouts and for those unaware, a pinewood derby is a long-standing tradition that combines woodworking skills with good, clean competition.

The object is for scouts to take a standard kit composed of a block of wood, four axles and four wheels, and with the help of parents transform said kit into sleek, speedy racing machines.

The finished product, the maximum weight allowed being five ounces, is then pitted against similar versions on an elevated track.

Left: Some of the quality manufactured racing cars that were designed by members and parents of the Sanibel-Captiva Cub Scout Pack 88. Right: A large crowd of spectators and enthusiastic parents were there to cheer on their favorites.

It happened at the firehouse April 10, 1981. It will happen again this Friday, April 30.

Dick Muench is planning an "interest only" meeting for all those concerned about the 1982 Sanibel softball situation. The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. Friday at the Sanibel Fire Control District Station One on Palm Ridge Road.

Does the thought of another softball meeting catch you off base?

If so, you probably attended last year's "organizational" meeting. If so, you probably participated in what proved to be a "season of change" for Island softball.

So the first question for '82 is: Is there, really, any such thing as turning back?

At last year's meeting Muench announced he was turning over the administration of the league to the Sanibel Police Recreation Club under the direction of Officer Jack Primm.

Well...Things, as we know, didn't exactly fare well for Island softball last season. No fault of Jack or the Rec Club. In essence, it seems the '81 season was marred by (dare I say it?) a lack of interest.

And you wonder why the preliminary meeting of '82 is labeled "interest only"?

Of course not. You remember.

If you are a women softballer you remember the losing battle for the life of your division. And if you are a veteran of the '81 men's division you remember bearing the full load, and, after all was said and done, providing us with a most interesting season, nonetheless.

TALKIN' SPORTS

By Allen Rainwater

A turning back, or the intent thereof, will most likely be apparent when the attendance figures are counted this Friday. Those who show up for the meeting are at least "interested" in the concept, course, dimension and scope of the '82 season.

But the next question is: Is there really such a thing as a second chance?

If, for instance, a sizable group of ladies show an interest, can they persevere and persuade, reorganize and recruit? Can they aid and abet the "hopes" for an '82 women's division? We here at Island-Mania Sports Control Center are keeping our fingers crossed, just in case.

And what of co-ed softball?

Last season I covered the First Annual Coed Softball Tournament, sponsored by the Dunes. Mike Courtney and Dick Noon have organized similar events (in fact, they have one scheduled for May 2).

One thing can and should be said about this uniting of men and women for the purpose of playing ball on common ground -- it seems to work.

At the Dunes event I heard repeated indications that a number of Islanders would opt for a diamond-studded marriage of curls and chews -- this union being the sole representation of Island softball for '82 -- were they given the chance.

I, for one, will be curious to see if those who spoke out then will speak out now, when it counts.

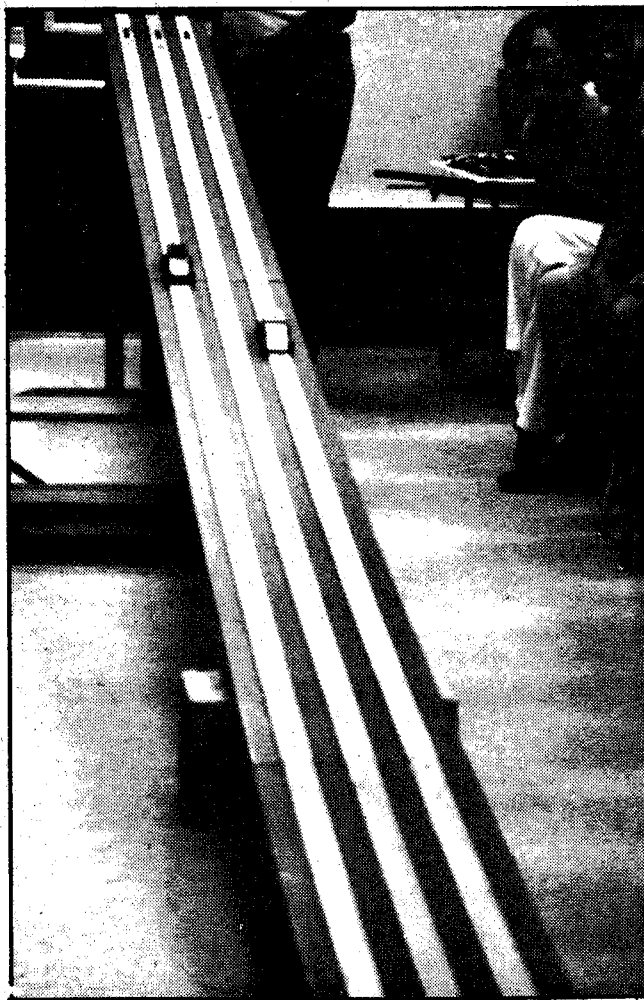

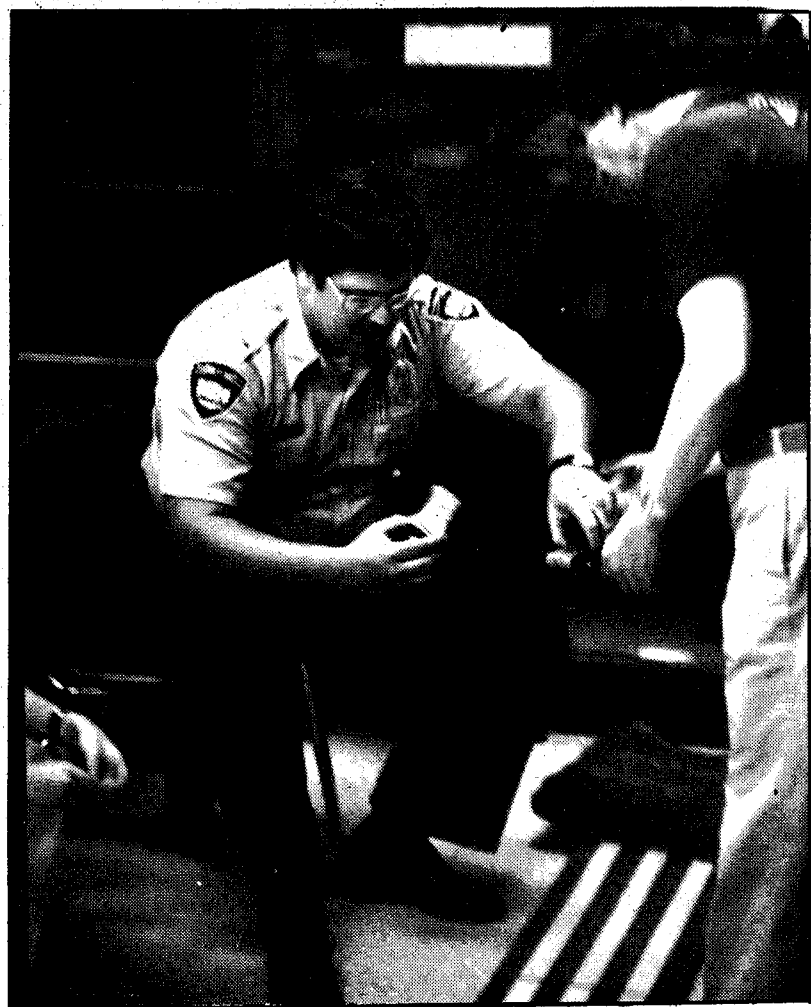

Now wait. Isn't all this talk about co-ed softball a little presumptuous? Who said the current men's division isn't in favor of remaining celibate, so to speak. Not I. And I will be curious, likewise, to see what kind of response is generated from this corner.

Is there really such a thing as turning back, or a second chance? Will the rumor of a possible pending merger of the sexes prove to be true? Who knows how to make softball stay?

The answers to these questions and possibly some that have not as yet been raised or encountered may be decided at the "interest only" meeting this Friday.

We at the Island-Mania Sports Control Center will be on hand. We hope you are, too.

Oh, and bring a date. Just in case.

Left: The track utilizes the principles of the laws of gravity to produce thrills and fast cars for Island Cub Scouts.

The race of a lifetime

The event last Thursday night at the Sanibel Elementary School was the scene of many a sleek, speedy racing machine, indeed. A lack of imagination was not apparent in any of the model cars.

And now for the big winners. Finishing in first place was the car manufactured by Mike Toomey. Following in a close second was Tom Powell's lean, mean machine, and in third place was Eric Tischler's hot rod. Congratulations to the big winners.

The Sanibel-Captiva Cub Scout Pack 88 consists of approximately 40 members and is sponsored by the Sanibel Elementary School Parent Teacher Organization. Tom Uhler, who officiated the derby, is the Cubmaster and is assisted by den leaders Don Hayes, Bill Boswell and Paul Cramer.

A special thanks on behalf of Uhler goes out to Lt. Ray Rhodes of the Sanibel Police Department for his fine performance as judge and to Dick Muench, who was the official starter.

No, it was not the Indianapolis 500. But for the members of Pack 88 it may have been the race of a lifetime.

Live in the shade of our old oak trees. And tall pines. And native palms.

On the side of a winding road. On the water's edge of our own 8-acre lake. In a wooded park-like setting. That's beautiful McGregor Woods.

Beachview men

Starting next week there will be two tournaments each week for the Beachview Men's Association. In the meantime, 51 players were on hand for play Saturday, April 24.

The high team at plus-7 was comprised of Stan Conduit, Bob Dormer, Eben Joy and Carl Wagner. Two teams tied for second. The efforts of Bud Walters, Walter Schmidt, Phil Millson and Don Purcell matched those of Steve Resnick, Don Lawrence, Earl Green and Paul Foley. Both teams finished the day with a combined score of plus-3.

The winner of the high individual honors went to Bob Dormer with a plus-6.

Beachview women

The April 21 tournament held by the Beachview Women's Golf Association found Von Light in the limelight. She scored a plus-4 to capture high individual honors for the day.

There was a tie at plus five between team number three and team number five for high points. Team number three consisted of Anne Alquist, Jean Corace and Ruth North. Team number five was made up of Erna Mikulic, Arline Mercer, Von Light and Shelia Snell.

High score for best of five consecutive holes was Von Light.

Duplicate Bridge Scores

The last bridge game of the current season will be played this Friday, April 30. If you need a partner call Joe Winterrowd, 472-1829. Scores for last Friday's bridge games are as follows:

2. Jean and George Scott		73½
3. Rosalind Wegryn-Don Brown		73

1. Charlotte Heimann-Betty Wakefield		86½

Sports quiz

Dr. Robert Schacht of Terre Haute, Ind., a professor from Indiana State University, was the only quiz-breaker this week.

Schacht correctly identified Citation as the first thoroughbred racehorse to win a million dollars.

Congrats to Dr. Schacht!

Looks like we'll have to go a little easier on you. These questions are getting little response locally. OK? Right. Here's this week's question for local trivia buffs:

The Brockton Bomber was the nickname of what former boxing heavyweight champion of the world? (We hate to do this, but we're going to give you a hint. His initials were R.M.)

Easy enough? If you think so give us a call at 472-5185. Your name will appear in next week's Islander if you are correct.

The Florida you fell in love with still exists today at the BOCA GRANDE CLUB

In the 1930's, when Florida was considered a far-away vacation wonderland, settlers such as John Jacob Astor, Barron Collier, Henry DuPont and J.P. Morgan imprinted their special lifestyle on Gasparilla Island.

You can share the legacy of that special lifestyle today ... at the Boca Grande Club.

Designed for your pleasure, Boca Grande's exclusive amenities include a private beach, marina and tennis courts, matchless dining, and the best tarpon fishing in the world — all in a setting that would please Gasparilla's most discriminating forebears. Little wonder ... the Club's developer, Harper Sibley, Jr., also created Key Largo's renowned Ocean Reef Club.

Boca Grande's two and three bedroom villas are most tastefully furnished and fully equipped for your convenience. Each villa has an unobstructed view of the beach.

The Boca Grande Club, tucked away in a special corner of the world, lies north of Sanibel and Captiva Islands and south of Sarasota.

Fitness caper registrations still being accepted

There's still time to register for the spring shape-up at the Captiva Fitness Caper for Women May 5-12, when Tween Waters Inn will be transformed into an Island-style spa.

For those who prefer a well-planned, vigorous program, classes will be in session from 6:30 a.m. until bedtime, but you are equally welcome to just relax and enjoy the company and participate whenever you wish.

The program will include daily meditation, early morning tennis instruction, three musical fitness sessions, two pool classes synchronized to music and swimming lessons.

Guitars and poolside instruction will be provided as well as mid-Eastern dance lessons, Hatha yoga and visualization and relaxation techniques.

Tori Nethery of Captiva will offer massages, and there will be facials, manicures and pedicures available. Participants will also have the opportunity to enjoy canoeing, cycling, side trips, arts and crafts, sail boat rides, evening entertainment and guest speakers.

Coordinated by Boots Freeman with meals planned with only 900 calories but tones of TLC each day by Cape Coral's Helen Goodman, this will be the sixth presentation of the Captiva Fitness Caper offered in May and November.

Call Tween Waters Inn, 472-5161, or write the inn on Captiva Island, FL 33924, for registration or to be placed on the mailing list.

Photography contest will offer international exposure to winners

The 12 winning entries in a Florida tourism photography contest will be featured in a tourism promotion calendar for worldwide distribution. The contest is sponsored and was recently announced by the state Department of Commerce Division of Tourism.

The 1983 calendar, intended to show Florida's beauty and uniqueness, will be sent to international travel planners to promote Florida vacations.

Contest entries must have been taken in Florida between Jan. 1, 1981 and June 15, 1982. Deadline for entries in June 30, 1982. A panel of five professional photographers will judge the entries on the basis of creativity, technical expertise, subject matter and format.

Entry forms will be available at camera shops throughout the state, as well as art or photography schools. Forms may also be obtained by writing Photography Contest, Florida Division of Tourism, Suite 410, Collins Building, Tallahassee, FL 32301.

In addition to the international exposure, winners will receive prizes including vacations at resort areas around the state donated by tourism industry representatives.

Winning color photographs will be accompanied by a brief biography of the photographer and information about where the shot was taken.

Welcome to that special island known as Sanibel. To all of us it represents the best of what nature has to offer. To us it means keeping within the design of nature. At ferry landing we mean to lay man's mark very gently within the existing environment.

To be sure, ferry landing is intended only for those few who truly believe in Sanibel, in its special place in the sun and its extraordinary lifestyle. Simply, those who do not understand what our Island means will not be invited to live at ferry landing.

Created and overseen by Island architect Ray Fenton, the low density hamlet will be exactly that... low density. Less than a score of homes will be erected. It is designed in the style for which Mr. Fenton is noted.

Located on the Bay, within sight of the Lighthouse, ferry landing is being finalized now. And there will not be more than six buyers allowed, per year, to participate in this, the last of Sanibel's Bayfront residential enclaves.

Today would be a perfect day to lay your claim to this special involvement. Call for your appointment today. Tomorrow simply might be too late.

ferry landing is special.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise!! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights. Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy. At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island

Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

DISASTER ALERT

Radio Station WRCC, 103.9 FM, broadcasts details of any emergency such as hurricane alert or any other disastrous occurrence that might affect Sanibel or Captiva.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES

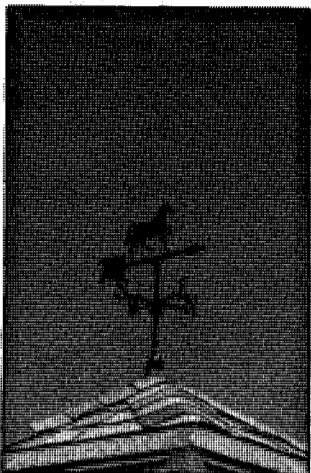

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license. Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

LIBRARIES

Sanibel Public Library
 At the intersection of Palm Ridge Road and Florence Streets. (472-2483)

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" x 24" x 12" deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.

Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Drive safely!

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

For removal of a nuisance alligator, call the following representative of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128; or George Weymouth, 472-5128.
