County plans to adopt Sanibel's evacuation system

By Barbara Brundage

Lee County hopes to implement Dr. Robert Simpson's Probabilistic Warning System if Southwest Florida is threatened by a hurricane this year.

Gil Haas, the county's director of Disaster Preparedness, told more than 100 members of Sanibel's Emergency Preparedness and Evacuation Relief Team gathered for the annual Hurricane Breakfast last Monday that he is "very excited about the Saffir-Simpson System" that was developed as a part of Sanibel's Hazard Mitigation Study last year.

Haas said the county has applied for a grant to help fund the system.

The color-coded time windows charting activities in preparation for evacuation starting 72 hours prior to an expected storm landfall are already set up in the county's Emergency Operations Center, Haas said.

Although Lee County is one of the most vulnerable areas for hurricanes, a major storm has not struck here since Donna hit in 1960.

"Probably eight out of 10 persons living in Lee County today have had no experience with a hurricane," Haas said.

At last week's breakfast meeting, EPERT team leader and Sanibel Police Chief John Butler reviewed the city's plan for warning and evacuating residents when a hurricane threatens.

Added to the notification team this year are leaders of Neighborhood Watch groups, who will use their own telephone network to alert residents of an evacuation order.

Butler said the Police Department has ordered 60 weather alert radios that will be distributed to all police officers and EPERT notification leaders for use in their homes.

The compact radios make a loud, bleeping noise when activated from a central point and guarantee instant attention, Butler said.

This system is superior, he said, to the current method of broadcasting warnings over WRRC-FM Radio, which to be effective requires that all residents remain tuned to that station.

Butler said he will encourage all Sanibelians to purchase one of the weather alert radios, which will be available at the police station for about $50.

He also said the "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge new Visitors Center will be an additional refuge of last resort.

Other refuges for the use of EPERT members and emergency workers include

Inspection shows pier 'in good shape'

By Barbara Brundage

An inspection of the Lighthouse fishing pier last week found the 10-year-old facility "in good shape," Public Works Director Gary Price said.

Engineers from Howard Needles, Tammen and Bergendoff said some of the cross bracing under the pier had rotted away.

"That probably caused the rocking motion of the structure that fishermen had complained about," Price said.

Price said there is a possibility that additional pilings may be needed at the bay end of the 162-foot long pier to reinforce the existing pilings.

"That will depend on how extensive the scouring is on the bay bottom, which will be determined when the final inspection report is in," he explained.

The pier was closed to fishermen during the inspection. "Both the people and the weather were very cooperative, and we were able to complete the work in one day," Price said.

CROW makes room for Southern bald eagle

CROW head Holly Davies fed the eagle a healthy diet of beef heart and vitamins especially mixed for birds of prey. The mixture worked its wonders, and the great bird was released on Saturday.

A Southern bald eagle, exhausted from a struggle with a fisherman's net near Marco Island, took up residency for a few days last week at CROW.

The eagle became entangled in the net last Wednesday and was "totally waterlogged," said Holly Davies, head of CROW.

The majestic bird was turned over to Collier County's Fish and Game Commission and transported to CROW by a Lee County Fish and Game wildlife officer.

Thinking the endangered eagle had a leg injury, wildlife officials wrapped his leg up before transporting him to Sanibel. Davies determined the bird had no injuries and was suffering from exhaustion. Nourished on a diet of beef heart and a standard vitamin formula mixture for birds of prey, the eagle soon regained his strength.

Davies said she was on pins and needles when she first heard the great bird would be coming for help. Not knowing its condition added to the uncertainty.

But after a few days of care by Davies and staffer Heidi Heinrich, the eagle rallied and was ready to be released. Normally, Davies would tie the bird and take it out for a few test flights before releasing it. But the eagle showed such strength that it was taken back to Marco Island and released Saturday.

"It's really nice for a bird so magnificent not to be mangled. So many of the birds we get are badly injured."

Before its release, the eagle, which weighed six pounds, was banded. "Of the birds of prey, eagles are just about the most intense," said Davies, impressed by the bird's size and strength.

The eagle's powerful talons made thick leather gloves a must for CROW's Davies and Heidi Heinrich when they handled the impressive bird.

Barrier islands

County plans guidelines for Cayo Costa

By David Meardon

The Lee County Commission last week extended a building permit moratorium for Cayo Costa Island, considered one of Florida's last relatively undeveloped barrier islands.

The moratorium excludes single-family homes, but anyone seeking a permit must first obtain the commission's approval.

"The island is a valuable contribution to the Pine Island aquatic preserve and a fantastic recreational resource. We're interested in protecting its values," said senior County Planner Dick Anderson.

County planning officials are currently working on a development plan for the 2,200-acre barrier island. The plan, which Anderson said would be completed in three to five weeks, will establish guidelines for development.

At present, two-thirds of the island is a state preserve and county park. The other third is privately owned. Anderson said the development plan will attempt to integrate the three facets of the island. With privately owned land subject to development, the county needs to provide guidelines for roads, dockage access, water availability and waste disposal.

Cayo Costa is the top priority for the Conservation and Recreation Lands Committee, a state administered and financed program to purchase sensitive Florida lands. Some property owners said they felt the commission was delaying construction on the island until the state purchases the remaining private portions of the island.

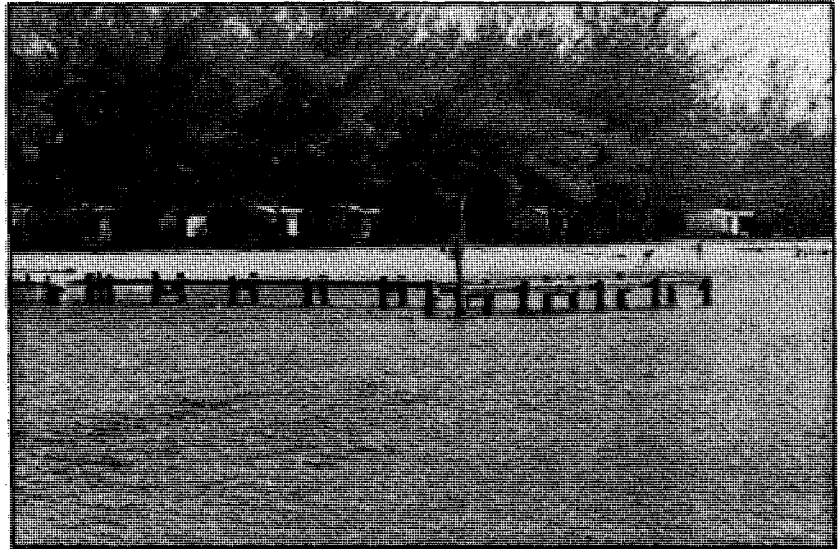

"We are completely divorcing ourselves of that issue," Anderson countered. "Our purpose is to come up with a plan. Once we do have a plan, then we will lift the moratorium. Then he (the property owner) will know what he can and can't do when he builds."

There are presently about 14 homes on the island and more than 1,000 parcels of privately owned land. For an island with no access and no facilities, "There is a great deal of inappropriate zoning, such as commercial and multi-family," Anderson said. "We don't have any rhyme or reason for the zoning," he added, noting that the island was zoned long before there was any awareness of the need to protect Cayo Costa from overdevelopment.

He said the forthcoming plan will attempt to deal with this issue.

The county park on Cayo Costa attracts boaters and shellers who enjoy the rustic accommodations. Lee County planners are developing guidelines for growth on the relatively untouched barrier island that is just north of North Captiva Island. Photos by David Meardon.

Reader disagrees with mayor's assessment

To the Editor
The Islander

Your issue of May 18 (they arrive a little late up here) front-paged the grass roots petition success. Unfortunately, I have a little trouble with something Porter Goss had to say about it.

It's possible Mr. Goss was misquoted, but you folks don't ordinarily do that sort of thing. Here's the way it ran: "It's no great burning issue....at best this petition reflects the sentiments of only a quarter of the Island's voting population" (emphasis added).

Right off the bat, of course, it is a burning issue. It's the first time in the city's corporate history that such a petition drive was launched and successfully concluded.

It must be burning at least one-quarter of the voting population, not to mention those of us who are full-time taxpayers, part-time residents and nil-time voters-petitioners. Unless and until there be a referendum ballot, we will not know what the best Sanibelians (thanks, David) can do.

Nancy and I would like to suggest that you invite the senator from Massachusetts to drive across that "decrepit" bridge some early morning, declare it a National Shrine and then charge the public (Sanibelians exempted) a modest visitation fee. That will take care of maintenance costs in perpetuity.

Sanibelian offers 'solution' to Falklands crisis

To the Editor
The Islander

An idea to solve the Sanibel interval ownership disaster and also the British-Falkland Island problem with Argentina has evolved, believe it or not, among some of Sanibel's good merchants.

The idea is to get Captran's President Keith Trowbridge to get into the act and move to the South Atlantic islands to sell Argentina and Britain on interval ownership. Britain could own certain weeks, Argentina others.

The schedule could be complicated enough so that some good weeks could be extra and made available to South Africa, Israel or even Japan. Then the summer could be divided among well-healed industrial nations. Some of their winter periods -- which are really awful -- could go to nations who are either too poor to participate in good weeks or who are able to cope with such conditions, e.g., Siberia, Mongolia and North Korea.

This system would provide a real challenge to Keith, and the continued intervalization of Sanibel should at least be slowed.

Island naturalist urges live shelling law

To the Editor
The Islander

Tonight (May 24) at 7:30 to 8:30 on West Wind, Beach View and Jolly Roger beaches, there were more than 100 tourists on the beach live shelling and totally ignoring the council admonition to take only two live shells per species per person. The disgusting greed of these people was most unpleasant to witness.

We need a live shelling law. Please help. Let your voice be heard!!

Resident encourages pepper action

A copy of the following letter to the Sanibel City Council was given to The Islander for publication.

Gentlemen,

Your hour-and-a-half discussion of May 18 on removal of the obnoxious Brazilian pepper tree did bring out at least one new control proposal worthy of immediate action.

Councilman Francis Bailey was as right as rain when he zeroed in on the prime need for such removal from vacant parcels that abut on already developed ones. That is not only an appropriate way to slow down the widespread propagation of the weed, but is also a most equitable way to reward an owner of developed land for his mandated effort to retard such proliferation in his area.

As a starter on such a program, I suggest you promptly adopt an ordinance requiring that the private or public owner of an undeveloped parcel keep clear of Brazilian pepper at least the full width of the setback zones of his property.

The unimproved lot owner is reasonably compensated for the expense of such clearance by the substantial differential in his property tax bill from that of his neighbor who has developed his land.

It is truly a DISincentive to require a cooperating homeowner to remove such pests when the vacant lot next to him is a fertile breeding ground for continuous replacements.

Sincerely,
Paul Howe

Resident urges consideration of candidates

To the Editor
The Islander

During a quiet Tuesday night when our high-priced cablevision was out of service, I read with great interest Paul Howe's letter to you concerning candidates for the County Commission.

Those of us who now complain about travel to and from Fort Myers, I can say only that, "We have been asking for this for a long time."

Look around you! The proof that "innocence breeds corruption" lies everywhere in Lee County. Countless millions of taxpayers' dollars are syphoned off annually to pay for "cost overruns" for which there is no excuse.

To COTI (Committee of the Islands) and CONA (Committee of Neighborhood Associations) I say, "Take heed!"

Island students win scholarships

Two Sanibel seniors received $1,000 scholarships from the Rotary Club's Trust Fund last week. In a ceremony last Friday, Cathy Knaff, a student at Bishop Verot High School, and Tammy Powell, who attends Cypress Lake High School, accepted the scholarships. Both plan to attend Edison Community College in the fall.

Rotary Club President Mark Webb said the students were selected on the basis of academic standing and extra curricular activities.

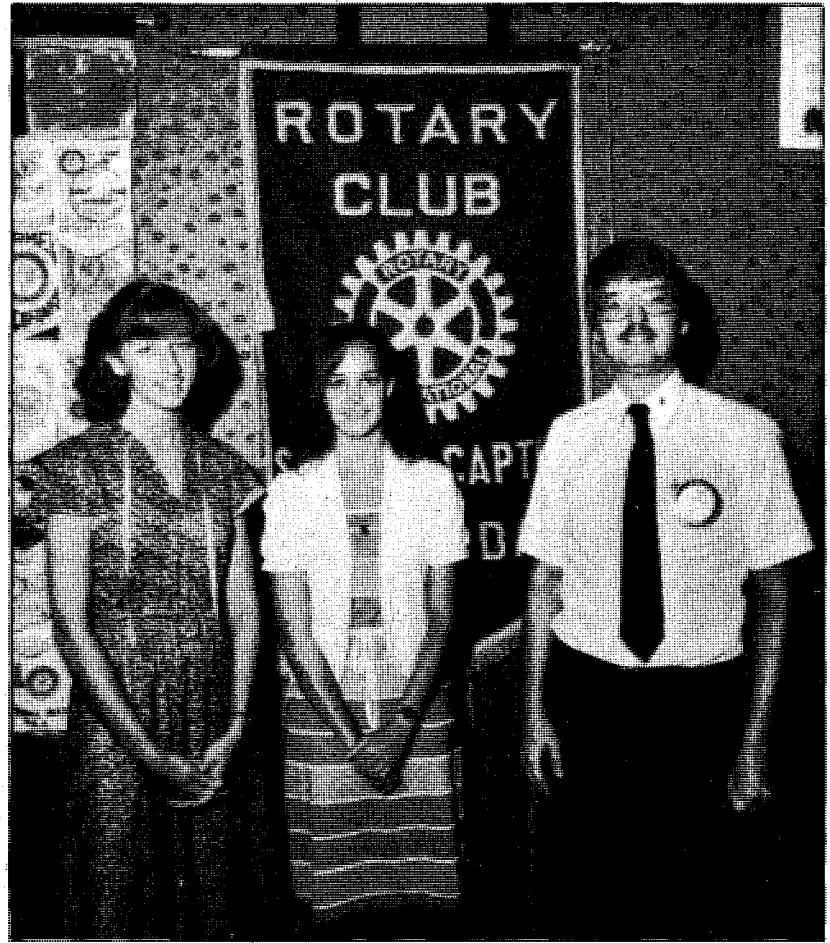

The Rotarians had originally intended to award one $1,000 scholarship, but Knaff and Powell ended up "in a dead heat, so we awarded both $1,000," Webb said.

Knaff, a member of the National Honor Society, is the student government treasurer, works on the school newspaper and is a member of the drama club at Bishop Verot. She plans to study accounting and computers at Edison, and hopes to become a Certified Public Accountant.

Powell, also a member of the National Honor Society, is active in the school band and the Latin Club and enjoys working with people. She plans to study nursing at Edison.

Webb said he was impressed by the caliber of the students who were interviewed for the scholarship that was set aside for Sanibel or Captiva seniors. "We thought they were very knowledgeable and in tune with the issues today. The future of our country is in youth," Webb said.

"We hope to continue this each year," Webb said, adding that donations to the Rotary Trust Fund are tax exempt.

Donald Hiers' death ruled accidental

The March death of Sanibel resident Donald Hiers has been ruled accidental by the Sanibel Police Department. Investigators made their determination based on statements from Hiers' wife, Judy, and on facts about Hiers.

Mrs. Hiers, who was critically burned in the fire-explosion that claimed her husband's life, told police Hiers tried to extinguish the flames on her body when she caught fire. She also said the fire started from behind her rather than from any match or flame held by her husband.

In their ruling of accidental death, investigators also considered that Hiers was known for acts of sensationalism and that he was depressed over the death of his son and over the upcoming lawsuit in that case.

Statistics fail to win 200 seats for Shell Harbor Inn restaurant

Reams of national statistics gathered from hotel industry sources failed to convince the Planning Commission last week that a 200-seat restaurant is required to meet the dining needs of guests at Sanibel's Shell Harbor Inn.

Joseph Gregg, president of GSU, Inc., a North Miami motel-restaurant consulting firm, presented the evidence for John Armenia, new owner of the 71-unit Shell Harbor Inn on East Gulf Drive.

Gregg stated unequivocally that a restaurant with "less than 200 seats could not be operated profitably" at the resort that will be expanded to 100 rooms with the addition of 29 new condominium units on the site.

Gregg quoted facts and figures to support his contention that a 100-room hotel requires a 200-seat dining room plus a 75-80 seat lounge to take care of guests' dining needs. To allow less than 200 "is condemning the business to losses," he said, adding that the city staff suggestion that 50 seats would be adequate to handle the needs was totally unacceptable.

"You can't tell people on vacation what time they can eat dinner," Gregg said. "This is a resort hotel, not a boarding school."

Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham, visibly irritated by the emphasis on economics, told Gregg that, "Armenia's profit is not our concern."

"Our concern is whether his project complies with the Comprehensive Land Use Plan," she said.

"Planning on Sanibel can't be tied to national trends or statistics," Commissioner Arthur Wycoff pointed out.

Armenia said he intended to follow Gregg's recommendation and remove the cooking facilities from 44 of the existing motel units and would book accommodations on both the Modified American Plan (breakfast and dinner included in the rate) or the European Plan (without meals).

Commissioner Larry Simon wondered why Armenia would change an obviously successful operation with a 97 percent occupancy rate and try to generate a new type of business.

Armenia said he was thinking of the future and looking for a stimulus for new business.

Several residents of the Shell Harbor subdivision attended last week's commission hearing and agreed with the commissioners' view that 200-seat restaurant is too big for the primarily residential area. Urban Palmer reminded the commission that former owner David Holtzman's original request was not for a large restaurant but for one "only to get his guests out of the rain."

Palmer suggested the need for more seats was for the purpose of obtaining a full service liquor license.

Armenia conceded that a 150-seat restaurant is one of the state requirements for a full liquor license.

He said the court stipulation that gave Holtzman 29 additional motel units at Shell Harbor Inn also provided that an on-site restaurant would be permitted to serve alcoholic beverages in conjunction with the sale of food.

But Planning Director Bruce Rogers said the stipulation did not require the city to provide a liquor license.

Convinced that a large restaurant is incompatible in the residential area near Lindgren Boulevard and the gulf, the commission unanimously approved Armenia's development permit for the restaurant but limited it to 75 seats -- the same number the City Council has approved for the small, deli-style restaurant in Jerry Paulsen's proposed shopping center.

Island Water Association to drill new well

The Island Water Association will drill a new well 1,350 feet deep in the Ocala Aquifer to increase production at its electrolysis water treatment plant to meet future needs on Sanibel and Captiva Islands.

The Planning Commission last week approved a development permit for the project that includes installation of pipe and fittings from the well to the existing ED facility on San-Cap Road.

IWA's Dick Derowitsch told the commission the water in the new aquifer is less saline than the water currently drawn from the Lower Hawthorne and Suwanee Aquifers, where wells are only 770 feet deep.

Should the ED plant ever be phased out, processing of water from the Ocala well could be switched to the Reverse Osmosis plant, Derowitsch explained.

Permits for the new well are also required from the Florida Department of Environmental Regulation, the South Florida Water Management District and the Lee County Health Department.

IWA's exemption from SFWMD's water cutback in the event of a drought is not affected by the expansion, Derowitsch assured the commission.

Nichols faces problems with sailboat rental business

Tom Nichols wants to set up a private sailboat rental business on the gulf beach 200 yards west of the Sanibel Lighthouse.

But his plans hit a snag last week when the Planning Commission reminded him that commercial activity on the gulf beach is allowed only as an accessory use of a resort.

He learned, too, that parking the boats overnight forward of the Coastal Construction Setback Line is another "no-no."

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said because of the "unified ownership required for accessory uses," Nichols would have to come up with some kind of lease agreement for the rental business with Captran's Lighthouse Resort and Club, where the boats are currently based.

To leave the boats on the beach overnight would require a specific amendment. Nichols was informed.

Federal agency rejects Goss's 'buildback' ordinance

Mayor Porter Goss's prescription for relief to owners of lawfully existing property that must be built back in conformance with CLUP standards if damaged more than 50 percent has been shot down by the Federal Flood Insurance Administration.

Last Tuesday, after four hours discussing the city's proposed "buildback" ordinance, the City Council agreed to Goss' idea.

He proposed to increase to 80 percent the amount of damage (to properties in the "A" Zone only) required to trigger the buildback restriction if the damage is caused by anything other than rising water.

All properties in both "A" and "V" zones will still have to rebuild to required flood elevations when the damage is any more than 50 percent and flood related.

To make sure that it would not affect the integrity of Sanibel's subsidized flood insurance program, Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane notified FIA and the Federal Emergency Management Agency of the proposed change.

FIA responded promptly to the question of whether "rising water could become the sole basis for triggering elevation requirements within the A Zone as opposed to other causes of damage."

Dick Crimm of the FIA informed Duane this would not be possible "unless the city desired to jeopardize Sanibel's participation in the federal flood insurance program."

"He did indicate to me as I had suggested to council members," Duane said Friday, "that the correct relief route is through the variance test outlined in Article IV of CLUP.

"He further indicated that unique circumstances must, of course, accompany any variance as the FIA is required to keep records to this effect," Duane added.

Goss had hopes that his solution would solve the problems of many owners of lawfully existing property who have until 1990 to comply with CLUP standards or revert to the use permitted in the zoning district.

Further deliberations on the ordinance, which will become a general amendment to CLUP if adopted, will take place at a special meeting scheduled for 9 a.m. Tuesday, July 8, at MacKenzie Hall.

Planning Commission views fences as 'increasing problem on Sanibel'

Fences might make good neighbors, but the Planning Commission views them as an "increasing problem on Sanibel."

The commission's stance has been to discourage homeowners' use of fences to ensure privacy and security and encourage instead installation of native vegetation buffers.

Requests for specific amendments to the land use plan to permit fences that encroach on front yard setbacks and the Coastal Construction Setback Line have been considered by the commission on a case-to-case basis with some approved and some denied.

But last week, after hearing two more variance requests, the commissioners agreed there is a definite need for establishing specific standards for fences on Sanibel.

Commissioner Arthur Wycoff suggested that the commission set aside some time in the near future to "analyze the problem and discuss standards for fences that will provide a degree of control."

Emmett McGinley had constructed a rustic wooden rail fence along the property line in front of his new home at the corner of Rabbit Road and West Gulf Drive.

McGinley told the commission he put up the fence to stop drivers from using his driveway as a turn-around when they make the wrong turn on to Rabbit Road.

He acknowledged that he was not aware that permission from the city was required for the fence.

It was the consensus of the commissioners that although the fence is attractive, a vegetation buffer would serve the same purpose and provide additional privacy.

McGinley agreed to the commission's proposal that he plant native vegetation along the fence with the condition the fence will be removed at the end of two years when the plants should be mature.

Island resident Betty Robinson reminded the commission that vegetation buffers are not the best solution for providing privacy and protection against trespassers.

"At best they are a poor second," she said.

Robinson said that for persons like herself it is a problem to take care of vegetation that threatens to overrun the property.

"And it's a problem to get someone to do it for you," she added.

Earlier Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham turned over her gavel to Vice Chairman Bill Hagerup while she explained why a fence is needed along the west property line at her West Gulf Drive home.

Because the wooden fence extends 35 feet seaward of the Coastal Construction Setback Line and encroaches 60 feet into the setback from West Gulf Drive, Winterbotham must have specific amendments to the Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

The fence separates her property from a beach access easement, she told her colleagues, and will prevent people from wandering into her yard.

With Winterbotham abstaining, the commission voted 5-0 to recommend council approval of her request.

Caribe attorney gathers information for possible lawsuit

It's beginning to look a lot like the city will be hit with another lawsuit -- one that could be the Caribe Beach resort's answer to the city's order that the resort stop the sale of beach club memberships.

Last week Tampa attorney Donald Hemke, representing Morton Rabkin, operator of the Caribe, which sells advance reservations for its accommodations for as long as 30 years, visited Sanibel.

Hemke left City Hall with copies of more than 200 ordinances, memos, notes and letters relating to the city's actions with Rabkin, the Caribe Resort, time sharing and off-site solicitation.

In a letter to City Manager Bernie Murphy, Hemke requested access to city documents as an aide to help him determine the Caribe's response to the city's charge that the sale of beach club memberships is a violation of two elements of the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

The letter indicated that the only solution acceptable to his clients is for the city to recognize the validity of the memberships.

The deadline for the Caribe to reply to the city's order expired last Thursday.

Code Enforcement Officer Dick Baker said he had had no communication from the Caribe Resort since Rabkin asked for a 10-day extension of the original deadline.

The Jolly Roger Motel, cited along with the Caribe on April 27 for CLUP violations, agreed to comply with the city's order to "cease and desist" selling the beach club memberships that permitted any purchaser of a week or more advance reservation to use the resort's amenities 365 days a year.

City Attorney Neal Bowen ruled that practice was a commercial use not permitted in the Gulf Beach and Gulf Beach Ridge ecological zones. Use of a resort's amenities by anyone not in occupancy also violates a CLUP regulation.

Rabkin in the past has publicly accused the city of trying to "put the Caribe out of business" by cracking down on off-site solicitation of prospective customers for the time-sharing complex.

City councilmen have pointed out that the Caribe has "administrative relief" available -- the prerogative of filing for specific amendments to the land use plan to legalize beach club memberships.

Rabkin has suggested that going to court is his last resort.

The Islander has been unable to reach either Rabkin or Hemke for further comment.

Mariner seeks change in ecological designation

Changing the ecological designation of a .6-acre piece of the Sanibel Cottages property on Gulf Drive from Upland Wetlands to Gulf Beach Ridge will pave the way for conversion of the cottage colony to a 28-unit interval ownership resort.

Mariner Properties, Inc., which recently acquired the beach front property, maintained the classification of the area as wetlands on the city's topographic maps is incorrect.

To prove the point last week, Ray Pavelka, Mariner's director of development, provided the Planning Commission with the results of a Johnson Engineering survey that shows elevations of the land generally as four feet or higher.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said the Johnson report is more detailed than the city's and added he was satisfied with its accuracy.

Multi-family dwellings and resort housing are not permitted uses in the Upland Wetlands zone.

Density on the six-acre site is five units per acre, Rogers said.

Following the Planning Department recommendation, the commission by a 6-0 vote recommended City Council approval of the specific amendment required to reclassify the area as Gulf Beach Ridge.

Pavelka said an application for a development permit for the proposed project will be submitted to the commission at its June 14 meeting.

Code Enforcement Board finds Courtyard violation

By Peggy Dailey

The city's Code Enforcement Board heard one case on Friday, May 21. The Courtyard restaurant owners Mel Kern and Adolph Reinhardt were called before the board on charges of seating more than the permitted 40 customers at their establishment on two separate occasions.

Code Enforcement Officer Dick Baker said he visited the restaurant in April and in early May and found 66 patrons one night and 58 patrons the second night.

Baker told the members of the Code Enforcement Board he notified the owners of the violation and was told they would comply with the permit limitation for 40 customers.

Kern and Reinhardt said they did not know they were in violation, Baker added.

"We always overbook," explained Kern, who brought his reservation book along. "And the first night Mr. Baker was there was the first night too many came."

"We are honorable men and will keep our word," Reinhardt said.

The restaurateurs expressed concern about the manner in which the seating numbers are determined. Each parking space outside the restaurant allows three patrons inside.

"I'm here to provide a service to the public," Kern said. "Suppose we have 36 people dining and five more people come together. What should I say? One can't eat because of the city regulations?"

The matter was continued to Aug. 19. A formal motion by Bob Haney finding the restaurant in violation was passed. No fine was levied, however. If there is a violation in the 90-day period between this hearing and the next, a fine of $500 may be levied.

"You might as well make (the fine) $10,000 a day. We're men of our word!" Reinhardt said.

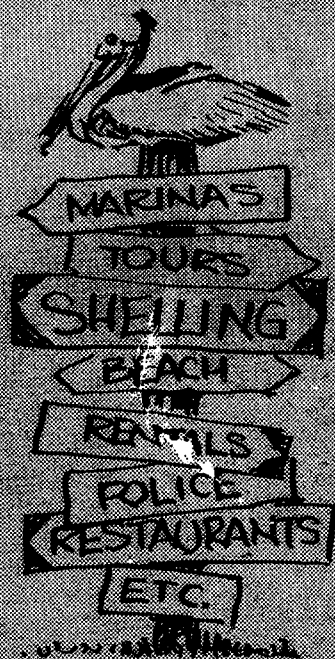

Reinhardt later said he was pleased with the board's finding. "I understand their position," he said. "We will get our plans in order to make presentations to the proper people."

Other cases that were originally scheduled for the board meeting involved Captran, Mariner Properties and Casa Ybel, all of which were cited for structures in violation of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan. But all three companies complied with the code and demolished the structures before the hearing.

A fourth case involving Mimi Kennedy's removal of Brazilian pepper from her property was removed from the agenda when Kennedy appeared before the City Council and made a presentation. She was given some more time to arrange for the removal of the pepper.

The next regular meeting of the Code Enforcement Board will be Aug. 19.

"These are not hurricane shelters but are considered to be the safest places for the people who may not be able to get off the Island before the hurricane strikes," Butler stressed. "Our goal is still to evacuate everyone."

The Bank of the Islands has been designated as a medical center where storm victims can receive emergency treatment.

Dr. Stephan Halabis said drugs and other medical supplies are stored in a vault in the bank and will be readily available when needed.

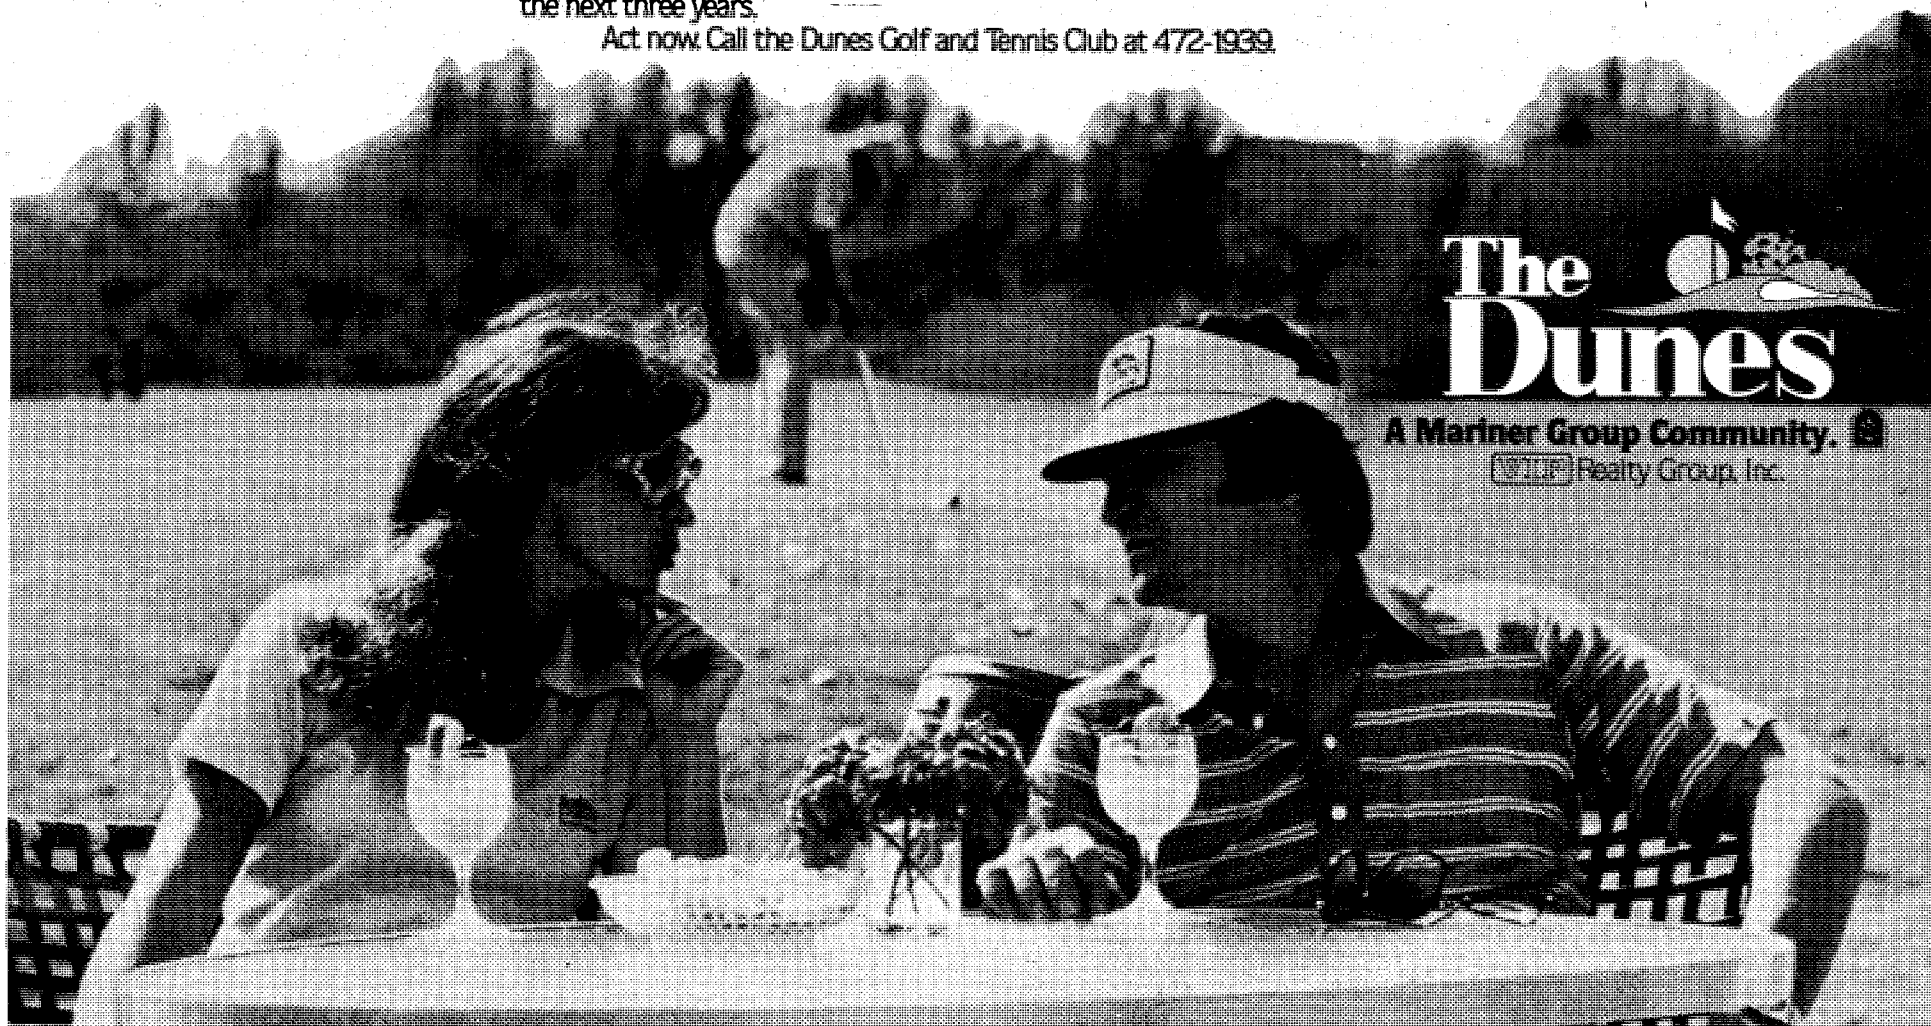

City Manager Bernie Murphy announced that the staff has begun work on a Disaster Preparedness Program for the city that will outline steps necessary to deal efficiently with not only a hurricane but any type of disaster.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

There are two things I hate about tarpon fishing. The first is there's no comparison with the thrill of seeing one on the line. The second is that no matter how well you figure you have them calculated on feeding habits, they will still fool you and take bait when they aren't supposed to and they won't hit when all conditions are right.

Let's talk about tarpon fishing this week and perhaps you can land one, too.

Tarpon are large silvery fish in the herring family. They have a large appetite, especially this time of the year and especially the females.

You see, this is roe or spawning season, and most of the larger fish in the 75- to 125- pound range are female. The males average less in weight but not in fight, and either fish can put a bend in your back bone that will either kill you or make you a tarpon addict for a lifetime.

The smallest fish I brought to the boat last year was 50 pounds - and even that fish was more than five feet long. Based on last year's standards, the average fish is in the five- to six-foot category or in the 100-pound range.

They are large and they are fun to catch, but you can't eat them. Yes, they are strictly game fish, and often, after waiting for an hour or two for our first bite, one of my anglers will say, "Well, if we can't eat them, what are we fishing for them anyway?"

Tarpon are only a game fish. The law says you can take two per day, per person. It's possible to catch two per day, but unless you are going to have the fish mounted, it should be released when brought to the boat.

That's important to remember. We who are fishing guides won't kill one of these magnificent fish just to have an angler to pose with the dead fish. If you want pictures in the water, fine. If you want to mount the fish, great. But good anglers won't kill these fish for nothing. There is no food value, only mounting remembrances. So if you do hook into one, please release it for other anglers to catch.

Okay, so you know what to go for. Now where to catch them? There can be no better tarpon hole than Boca Grande pass, which is 12 miles north of our marina on Captiva Island and a good hour run by boat for most of us.

Up there, even on a slow day, you will see hundreds of tarpon rolling. Most are on top of the water a great deal of the time. Come on. Hundreds of tarpon? Well, that's exactly correct. They don't always bite when it comes to rolling, but you know for sure they are there.

On some of my shelling trips I take my groups up through Boca Grande just to see the tarpon. It's a thrilling sight, even for those who have fished it for some time, just to see so many large silver fish rolling at surface. It's worth the trip even if you don't fish.

If you want to have a try at these fish, I would suggest rising early and being in the pass at 6:30 a.m. for the first fishing time. Use tiny blue crabs if the tide is going out and squirrel fish if the tide is going in.

It's just like any other kind of fishing from trout to tuna. If you have some luck and someone who knows what they are doing, you have a good chance of latching on to one. And partner, it's a thrill. I don't care if you've caught fish around the world, the tarpon is always a favorite of experienced anglers.

Good Luck this week and watch for those tarpon!!!

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

You'll hear a lot of frightened talk these summer days about sting rays, and you'll get more advice than you can handle.

But despite the hundreds of rays in the waters at this time of the year, your chances of being stung aren't very high at all.

I've yet to be hit by a sting ray, and they definitely have had their chances with all the time I spend walking in our shallow warm waters of either the Gulf of Mexico or Pine Island Sound.

What exactly happens when you are hit by a sting ray? The term "sting" is wrong, in the first place. Sting rays aren't bees. They don't have a stinger as such. No, it's much more painful than a bee sting.

Rays are sand colored, which helps them hide on the bottom of the sea and gather food. They can eat small fish, crabs and even shell fish, all of which are found where shellers like to gather.

Rays have a wide range of sizes, but even the smallest I've ever seen, perhaps three inches from wing to wing tip, has the ability to knife that stinger into you.

Some of the largest rays I've seen come from Pine Island Sound waters when we fish for sharks and tarpon. And inciently, these rays can reach 40 to 60 pounds and put up one hell of a fight that rivals in strength and stubbornness that of the shark and tarpon.

But on the average, the rays you will encounter if you walk enough beaches or sand flats will be perhaps a foot from wing tip to wing tip and weigh only a few pounds.

As I said, they have no "stinger" as such, but rather a long, thin barb about three quarters of the way down their equally long, slender tail.

When threatened, rays can whip the tail around and lodge that barb into your flesh. This isn't a surface wound in most cases, but a penetration wound that goes in and sometimes breaks off an inch or so into your foot. It's painful, and anyone who tells you different doesn't know what he's talking about.

Avoiding rays is the best bet, but sometimes you will hear of people perfecting the "sting ray shuffle," where they purposely walk loudly on the bottom to send out warning vibrations to the rays so they get out of the way. The other method is to never take normal steps, but shuffle your feet as you walk. Always wear sneakers in any case.

I've spotted rays and walked right to them shuffling and stomping all I wanted and still not spooked them until I was only a foot or two away. Other times they flush out and away when you get 50 feet from them.

There might be schools or rays right in the surf line along the Gulf of Mexico. Your best bet when swimming or shelling is to get out until the rays pass. Other times, when the water is murky, the rays will be right in there with you and you'll never know it.

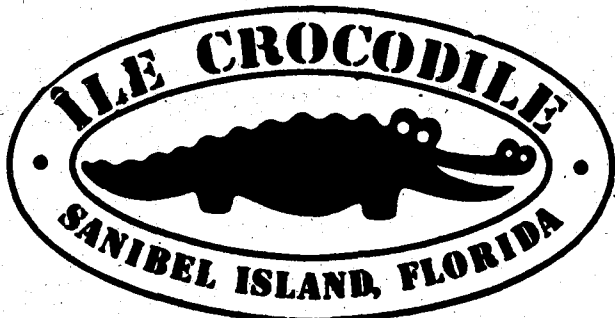

Be sure to understand that there aren't many sting rays in the world that look forward to being stepped on by a 200-pound man. Given the chance, they get out of there and return after you leave that area of the water.

If you do get hit by a barb, soak the wound in as hot a tub of water as possible for a few hours. Let the wound bleed in the meantime. Some people will put meat tenderizer on the wound to help reduce the pain.

Keep a sharp eye out, but don't let the possibility of meeting a ray intimidate you when you look for shells.

Crime watch

Information, involvement are vital in crime control

By Sgt. Lew Phillips

Crime cannot be stopped or controlled without the "I's" of the public. By that I mean information and involvement.

Information is the most valuable tool a police officer has at his avail. Without information, police are reduced to being chroniclers of criminal statistics.

Information comes from many sources, but the singularly most important source is the private citizen.

A citizen should never hesitate to report suspicious activity for fear that it might bother the police. Any condition that is unusual or out of place might be an indication of criminal activity.

The Sanibel Police Department would rather respond to 50 "false alarms" than miss one crime in progress. The public should think of reporting suspicious activity and unusual conditions as reporting symptoms to a doctor - early detection permits early intervention and can stop a disease before it spreads.

Involvement on the part of the private citizen is essential in order to relay information to the police and to keep the community safe from the criminal element. Citizens must work with one another and their police department in a joint effort to curb crime.

Too often I hear tales about crimes that go unreported and criminals who go unpunished because no one wanted to get involved.

Involvement embraces a wide range of activity from just being there to actively taking part in the prosecution of the criminal.

Sanibel would be an extremely unsuitable environment for crime if every citizen would call the police immediately to report suspicious activity or crimes and, ideally, be willing to follow through in the prosecution of criminals.

The members of the Sanibel Police Department are acutely aware that some people fear reprisals, publicity or loss of work time if they become "involved." Employers could do much to alleviate the pressures of the latter by providing time off with pay for employees who are involved in criminal prosecutions.

As for the fear of reprisals and unwanted publicity, we need a procedure that offers protection for those who are concerned and at the same time initiates police action.

When our department is contacted by a citizen to report a crime or file a complaint, our dispatchers routinely ask for the complainant's name, address, telephone number and the nature of the complaint. This is done as a matter of procedure so the responding officer will know who to contact for additional information on the complaint.

No one should allow the fear of publicity to interfere with his or her civic duty to report crime. A way around the problem is to file the complaint as a concerned citizen, a nice person or a Sanibel resident. When reporting a crime to the police, do not hang up. Stay on the line until the dispatcher has all the pertinent information.

The problem with making anonymous complaints is that the investigator may need additional information but has no way to re-contact the complainant. This problem can be alleviated if the complainant calls back at a later time to check on the progress of the investigation.

I urge you to get involved. Report suspicious activity and crime when you see it. Keep your "I's" open.

Kay Schultz

Age: 70

Height: 5'4"

Roots: Buffalo, New York

Pleasures: Needlepoint, swimming, backgammon, bridge

Last Book Read: Prizzi's Honor by Richard Condon

Mentors: My parents

Wish: "For Captiva to stay the way it is now for my grandchildren to enjoy it as we have."

Words of Wisdom: "When you take the food from the kettle and put it into a serving dish, always put detergent and cold water in the kettle right away."

By Peggy Dailey

Kay Schultz has been a full-time Captiva resident since she moved here from Buffalo in 1968.

She and her husband, Willard, live on Binder Drive in the same house her parents, Charles and Emma Alt, retired to in 1948 and lived in together for the rest of their lives.

A graduate of Cornell University, Kay substitute taught before she married in 1934. Her husband was an architect in a firm started by his father.

Although she has always been a homemaker, she remained active in community and civic affairs, which explains her current concern and active involvement with beach erosion and what to do about it on Captiva.

She was active for many years in the National Council of her sorority, Kappa Kappa Gamma. However, Captiva is now her main concern.

Captiva started going "downhill," and the older people who had been on the Island for years began "losing out" about 10 years ago, she says -- "when Mariner Properties bought South Seas and the developers moved in."

She has been active in the Natural Beaches Group since May 1981.

"It was a group of private property owners who got together to protect their rights against the rights of the developers, who buy every nice-sized piece of land that comes up for sale and build condos on it," she says about NBG.

The group consists of about 40 Captiva property owners.

she says, adding that there is no membership list or obligatory dues.

Kay says the group's activities are not secret, nor is its membership list. It doesn't have one. "We're just an organization of private property owners who wanted to protect our interests against development interests," she says.

There are several points to Kay's eloquently delivered and obviously sincere arguments against beach renourishment that are best summed up as price paid, benefits received, is it worth it, and can we find a better way?

"What about cost overruns? What about maintenance? What about repair? What about the rest of the necessary permits? And most of all, what if there are a lot of storms and it has to be done again in two or three years?" she asks.

"This is going to benefit most the people who live between Turner Beach and the S-Curve -- the Gold Coast," she adds. "Seventy-five percent of those people are new since we came for good in 1968. Many of them have bought property within the last 15 years."

But Captiva's beaches have been eroding for the last 30 years, and those property owners should have found it out from the realtor before they bought their homes, she maintains.

"I really hesitate to say this, but I will," she adds. "The people who bought land and homes on the Gold Coast want to protect their half-million investment. When you have money to buy places like those on the Gold Coast, well then, what is $20,000 more to you to protect your investment."

"I think," she continues, "that they should pay for their own renourishment individually. Nobody made them buy land that they could see was eroding. It sounds harsh, but that is their own problem."

Kay is aware that her outspokenness has made her enemies, but says she doesn't care.

"Natural Beaches Group is not a secret, nor are our policies or our finances," she says.

In addition to her interest in the Natural Beaches Group, Kay serves on the Captiva Library Committee and helped select the new librarian, Fran McKinney. She is a representative to the Lee County Library Advisory Board and plays backgammon every day with her husband.

She also does needlepoint, not with kits. She makes her own designs, including one of her own home and local aquatic life.

"I first saw Captiva at Easter 1948," she says. "My parents had just moved here, and I remember thinking how beautiful it was. I never thought I'd live here myself."

"I want to leave Captiva to my grandchildren in as nearly the same condition as I found it when I came to see my own mother -- and she had been coming here since the early 40's."

"Forty years and four generations Captiva has been in my family. I want it to stay beautiful, and that is my one wish."

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

Many people who work on Sanibel and Captiva could not possibly afford to live here. However, a number of these individuals are now happily ensconced in magnificent homes, the splendor of which far surpasses their wildest dreams! They are the off-season, house-sitting brigade, and I am extremely fortunate (and indeed honored) to join their ranks for several months.

Now, every home has its own, very distinct personality, and so it takes a house about two weeks to break in its sitter. During that period of time, every day brings a new adventure, challenge, discovery, obstacle -- or all four of the aforementioned.

Unfamiliar noises and unfamiliar equipment are a home's first line of defense against alien sitters. For example, an incredibly raucous siren went off at two o'clock one morning. A prowler, or a mad rapist, must be on the loose. The shrieking siren would immediately bring Sanibel's finest to my rescue, nobly assisted by every able-bodied male in the vicinity.

Alas, life is not a Harlequin romance. After several minutes of dour reflection upon the lethargy of our men in brown and the utter demise of chivalry in this neighborhood, I padded into my roommate's bedroom -- bearing a small, blaring box. "I unplugged it, but it won't stop -- and all the lights are out!"

"Thurs-probly-aswitch-onda-back, yadumny."

There was indeed "aswitch-onda-back." Apparently, this fiendish little device is activated whenever the electricity goes off -- on the assumption that one would wish to be aware of such a fact at two o'clock in the morning.

A few nights later my roommate received her comeuppance when I slept through an absolutely ferocious assault upon the garbage can. She flashed a powerful beam on a huge, fearless raccoon ("as big as a German shepherd, I swear!") and had the devil of a time shooing him away. (Incidentally, my roommate also claims to have seen a dolphin swimming in the canal, while I am equally convinced that a disoriented hippopotamus was wallowing in the swimming pool during a full moon.)

One problem with living in the style to which one is not accustomed is that it becomes addictive. How can I possibly go back to living without an icemaker that, with geometrical precision, regularly regurgitates crescent-shaped creations in two sizes? What will I do without a microwave that provides instant gratification whenever hunger strikes? And how will I possibly sublimate nasty aggressions without a trash compactor that splendidly smashes everything with a highly satisfying, authoritative crunch?

In addition to its ineffable pleasures, of course, house-sitting carries certain responsibilities. My New England upbringing clearly dictates that I must maintain this lovely, three-bedroom home (with garage and spacious swimming pool) in the immaculate condition in which it was entrusted to my care. Alas, herein lies a home's ultimate revenge upon its sitters: house problems invariably involve repairs.

Just prior to their departure, the owners purchased a fine new washer and dryer -- clearly for my benefit more than theirs. The washer washes wonderfully but tends to spew forth sudsy water that seeps out the garage door. Now, have you ever tried to reason with a recording service about the dire necessity of making a garage call?

Eventually, Plumber Man responded to my recorded pleas and appeared with an assistant. The latter spent an entire morning romping on the roof with a wicked looking "snake," while the former tapped his way through the house. We all agreed that there was indeed a problem -- with which no one knew quite how to cope. So, I'm still doing my laundry under the cover of darkness, lest the neighbors wonder about the Sorcerer's Apprentice!

There is a slow leak in the pool. The owners (in Indiana) call Pool Man to get right out here and fix it. Pool Man eventually appears. He is Sicilian and his young assistant is British. The latter translates the indecipherable mutterings of the former, and my roommate translates the technical jargon of the latter. We all agree that there is indeed a leak.

"Why me?" wails the Sicilian, throwing up his arms in despair. He orders his assistant to dig a coffin-like trench

LIBRARY REPORT

By Harriet Howe

A Turn of Traitors by Palma Harcourt -- In this story of espionage, a young lawyer, Richard Lavery, suddenly becomes of great interest to British intelligence. On the eve of his marriage to Emma Jackson, he learns that his real father is Guy Carey-Ford, an infamous traitor, at present dying of cancer in a Moscow hospital.

Russian intelligence is also interested in Richard and threatens Emma's safety if he doesn't follow orders. All attempts at evasion fail, and Richard finds himself in Moscow. He is taken to visit his father in the hope that Carey-Ford will confide to him information that both the British and the Russians want. It is an exciting and suspenseful story.

Lord Elgin's by Theodore Vrettos -- In the year 1799, Mary Visbet, at the age on 19, married Thomas Bruce, Lord Elgin, then aged 32, and accompanied him to his post as British Ambassador to Turkey.

On their way to Constantinople, Elgin commissioned a Sicilian painter, Lusieri, to go to Athens with an architect to make drawings and take notes about all sculpture and works of art of classical importance. During the years spent in Constantinople, Mary bore three children. Also during those years Elgin was afflicted with a revolting disease that caused the disintegration of his nose. His interest in antiquities became obsessive.

On the return voyage to England Elgin stopped in Athens, where he contrived to dismantle a great deal of what was left of the Parthenon and have it crated for shipment to England.

It is difficult to review this book without telling the whole story. The author has done extensive research to produce this fictional account of historical facts.

Elgin was a scoundrel as well as being personally obnoxious. The antiquities he stole from Greece to be his personal treasure, the "Elgin Marbles," are now in the British Museum. It is an absorbing story.

England have my Bones by T.H. White -- The re-published diary of the author kept from March 1934 to March 1935, a year's account of a love affair with trout fishing, the thrill of learning to fly a plane and much more of the joys of country living.

White has a room in a country inn where he describes the companionship found in the pub where a game of darts is in progress. While he is a lover of nature, he enjoys hunting, which seems somewhat contradictory. The prose is delightful and conveys vividly the author's pleasure in all he writes about.

County libraries adopt system

Effective June 1, all the libraries in the Lee County Library System are operating under a uniform slate of policies, charges and procedures.

Under the new system, patrons can use one card for all the system libraries and return books at any location. Overdue fines are a uniform five cents per day with a maximum of $1. Non-resident fees are $5 per year, and lost borrowers cards cost 25 cents to replace.

one side of the pool. "No leaka. Why me?" He orders his assistant to dig a coffin-like trench on the other side of the pool. "Ah, leaka!" Eureka!

Alas, although I had plied Pool Men with coffee and beer for several hours, nothing would induce them to make the necessary repair that day. "Next week."

Some weeks later, two different Pool Men came to survey the battlefield of Verdun. They admired the site of the "leaka" and promptly decided to enrich the coffers of the Island Water Association by draining the entire pool of its brinated contents. Clearly, Pool Men II were quite intent upon finding a leak that was more worthy of their attention than the seeping trickle discovered by Pool Men I.

They found it, of course, around a light fixture. Naturally, they do not carry that particular fixture -- nor have they yet located anyone who does.

When "the slings and arrows of outrageous fortune" (repairmen) get me down, I often turn to gardening as a relaxing form of therapy. I delight in pulling out things that look dead, suspicious or the least bit offensive.

I soon discovered that the grounds that I should tend contain several species that specialize in sneaky, steady strangulation.

"What's all that green stuff with berries and thorns that's squeezing the life out of those poor bushes out front?"

"Asparagus fern," replied my roommate, with great authority. "Better attack it."

Actually, I rather suspect that the majestic Strangler Fig tree, under which I am writing this article, may pose the most immediate danger. There are strong indications that it may really be a boa constrictor in disguise. In fact, at this very moment I seem to sense ...

Priscilla Murphy Shelski

First lady of Island real estate talks about changes

When Priscilla Murphy Shelski recently gave The Islander an interview, her original intention was to talk about how real estate on Sanibel and Captiva has changed since the days just after World War II.

But as the interview progressed, it became clear that Priscilla Murphy Shelski has more on her mind than Island real estate. She is every bit as interesting and colorful and funny as Sanibel and Captiva ever have been or will be.

Born in Detroit, Priscilla is the sixth daughter in a family of six girls and seven boys. Her father was a baker.

She married Pat Murphy in 1945. They didn't have any children, but they had a series of cats. Priscilla still loves cats, and her current feline companion is 17-pound Caruso (because he sings when he meows, like his namesake Enrico).

The Murphys came to Sanibel around the time the war ended, and Priscilla quickly became a community volunteer activist. Now, almost 40 years later, her energy and cheerfulness are still overwhelming.

She became friends with Mrs. Douglas Chamber and started teaching art to young Islanders, one of whom was Ralph Woodring, in the early 1950's.

She noticed when she started teaching that of all the schools in Lee County, Sanibel's was the only one that did not have an indoor bathroom.

"Well, I raised such a fuss about that," she says with a smile. "And before you know it I was going here and there kicking up my heels -- and I needed a job."

Out of teaching, she started a ceramics shop and made many of the things in the shop herself.

One day a customer came into the ceramics shop thinking it was a real estate office, Priscilla remembers.

"She said, 'Can I buy a lot?' Priscilla says. "'And I thought to myself -- I sold her a little ceramic dish for 75 cents -- how much more I would have made had I sold her a lot or property. So I decided I'd become a realtor!"

She studied for and then took the necessary exam -- twice -- at home. She passed the exam the second time she took it on Dec. 26, 1949.

"Yes, it has changed a lot here since I started," she says. "The laws governing property sales are stricter. I certainly don't think there are any real estate dealers who are dishonest here on Sanibel, but the main thing laws try to do is protect the buyer."

She says she knows of a lot near her home that recently sold for $30,000 -- the same lot she sold in 1953 for $250.

She sold Sanibel gulf-front property for $10 to $15 a foot, and land on Captiva from the S-curve to Turner Beach was 1,500 feet deep and $37 per foot.

What about development versus environment? Priscilla says, "Well, I would ask people this question - 'Do you enjoy being eaten up alive by mosquitoes?'"

"If there aren't nice people here, I don't know where else they are. I think everyone on the Islands is nice, and I like them better than the mosquitoes."

She advises young people to buy all the land they possibly can on Sanibel and Captiva because, "It's just going to get more and more valuable."

When she passed the real estate test, Priscilla went to work for Douglas Chambers. She opened Priscilla Murphy Realty in 1955 and sold it in 1968, by which time it was extremely successful.

She and her husband were divorced in the early 1960's, and after her retirement Priscilla was free to travel.

Right now, she and her second husband, Leo Shelski, are planning a trip to Aruba, and from there they will travel more or less around the world, stopping at "all the islands" in the South Pacific.

Shelski (nicknamed Shelley) was a dental technician who owned a dental lab in Mount Carmel, Penn. Shortly after they met at St. Isabel's Catholic Church on Sanibel, Shelski asked Priscilla to marry him. But, she says, she told him, "I just don't know you well enough yet." She was going on a cruise and asked him to come along. ("But I want you to understand," she explains, "that it was on the same ship -- not in the same stateroom.")

They were married in the courthouse registry office in Haiti on Aug. 12, 1976. Priscilla acquired a son and daughter and one grandson.

Priscilla's firm advice to those who want to be successful is this: "Get off your duffs."

She does not think getting older means losing out. Leo and Priscilla have a birch dance-floor platform in their house, and they dance on its varnished floor -- just the two of them.

"We like disco music," she says with a smile, "and jazz and blues and everything."

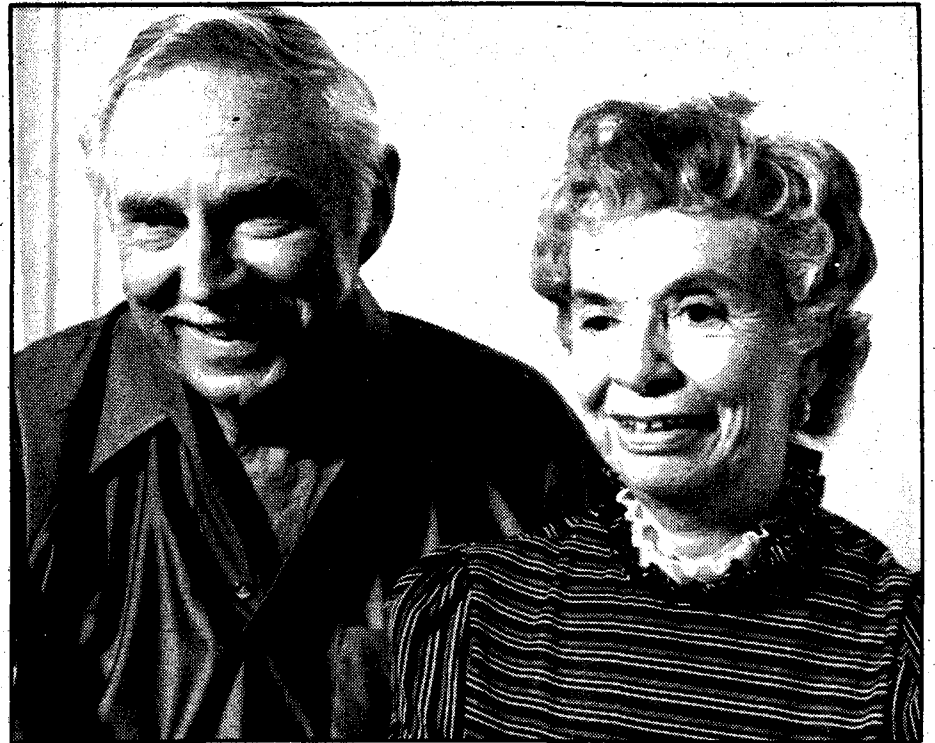

She holds special memories about earlier times and people on Sanibel and Captiva and says news about Islanders always travels fast.

"I remember when Ted Levering caught a big redfish over on Captiva and he wanted to surprise his son. It must have been pretty enormous. So he went back home and said, 'Guess what I did?'"

"And his son said, 'You caught a giant redfish!' Ted was crushed."

Life, she says, has been good to Priscilla Murphy Shelski.

"I've always been pretty happy," she says. "I was happy with my husband Pat and then for awhile I was alone. But I was all right then, too. I never thought I'd meet anyone else. But I did. And I'm happier than ever now."

Battista named ABWA Woman of the Year

Sanibel resident Catherine Battista has been named Woman of the Year by the Sanibel-Captiva chapter of the American Business Women's Association, chapter President Ceil Williams announced last week.

Women throughout the United States are selected for the award by their local ABWA chapters and are then entered in national competition for the top 10 business women of the ABWA.

Battista moved to Sanibel two years ago from Connecticut, where she worked as a registered lobbyist in the Connecticut General Assembly for 10 years. She was also the assistant executive director for the Connecticut Nurses Association, public affairs director for the Health Systems Agency of South Central Connecticut and the executive director for the Alcohol Council of Greater New Haven.

She graduated from the Hospital of St. Raphael School of Nursing and received her bachelor of science degree from Southern Connecticut State College in political science. She minored in art design and English.

Battista is a masters candidate at the University of New Haven Graduate School of Public Administration and also attended the University of Connecticut School of Law.

ABWA women are selected for the award based on their education, experience and service in the community. "Even though Catherine is a relative newcomer to Sanibel and ABWA, she has made an impact on the organization that is especially noticed in publicity and the newsletter," Williams said.

Besides her activities with ABWA, Battista is the public affairs coordinator for the Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, Inc., and has been active with the local Equal Rights Amendment task force.

She is president of Barrier Island Business Communicators, a company specializing in advertising, public relations and multiple association management services.

Previous recipients of the ABWA Woman of the Year award are Pat Slater, manager of the Song of the Sea motel, and Betty Parkes of Betty's Bounty.

Battista resides in the Rocks with her husband, Alfred.

Is It Inevitable?

Part I: Creeping Deterioration

By George Campbell.

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

In Olden Days, when I was a youngster hereabouts, Sanibel had its Central Slough that overflowed naturally at several places into the bay and into the gulf. Such overflow flushing took place during and after heavy rains and when hurricanes struck, bringing with them great surge tides (see map: Original Natural Drainage).

Now we have the deepened Central Slough, seriously but quite inaccurately called the Sanibel River, and many developments that are built near the historic natural overflow sites.

We also have, pretty much throughout the Central Freshwater Wetlands, miles and miles of freshwater canals, lakes and ditches (both real estate and mosquito).

The freshwater system -- river, lakes, canals, and mosquito ditches -- is completely unnatural. All of these bodies of water are either totally man-made, like the lakes in and around The Rocks, for example, or partially man-made, like the Sanibel River, which is really a deepened natural slough (see map).

The reasons for all this artificiality are largely economic. Take the West Rocks lake, where I live, for a familiar example. This lopsided horseshoe-shape was made when soil was removed for fill and so "waterfront" lots could be sold to unsuspecting buyers (like me, for example).

Everything about West Rocks lake and lots was designed to line the pockets of the developers. The lake was dug deep. Why? To get more fill to build higher, more saleable lots.

The banks of the lake are at about 45 degrees. Why? To get as much soil as possible without having the shores cave in. The soil's angle of repose, as it is called, is so steep as to make walking the shore at water level very uncomfortable.

The result of all this is that some lots are about five feet above sea level while the bottom of the lake is about eight feet below sea level.

Where wetlands once drained naturally through a natural slough system, we have today "highland" vegetation such as Sea Grape, Strangler Fig, Gumbo Limbo and others. Most of these species did not even exist anywhere near the original wetlands from which the Rocks area was filled or constructed.

Contrast this situation with Shell Harbor, which is laced with sometimes navigable finger canals, all connected to the bay and thus all fluctuating with the tides and flushed to some extent each day.

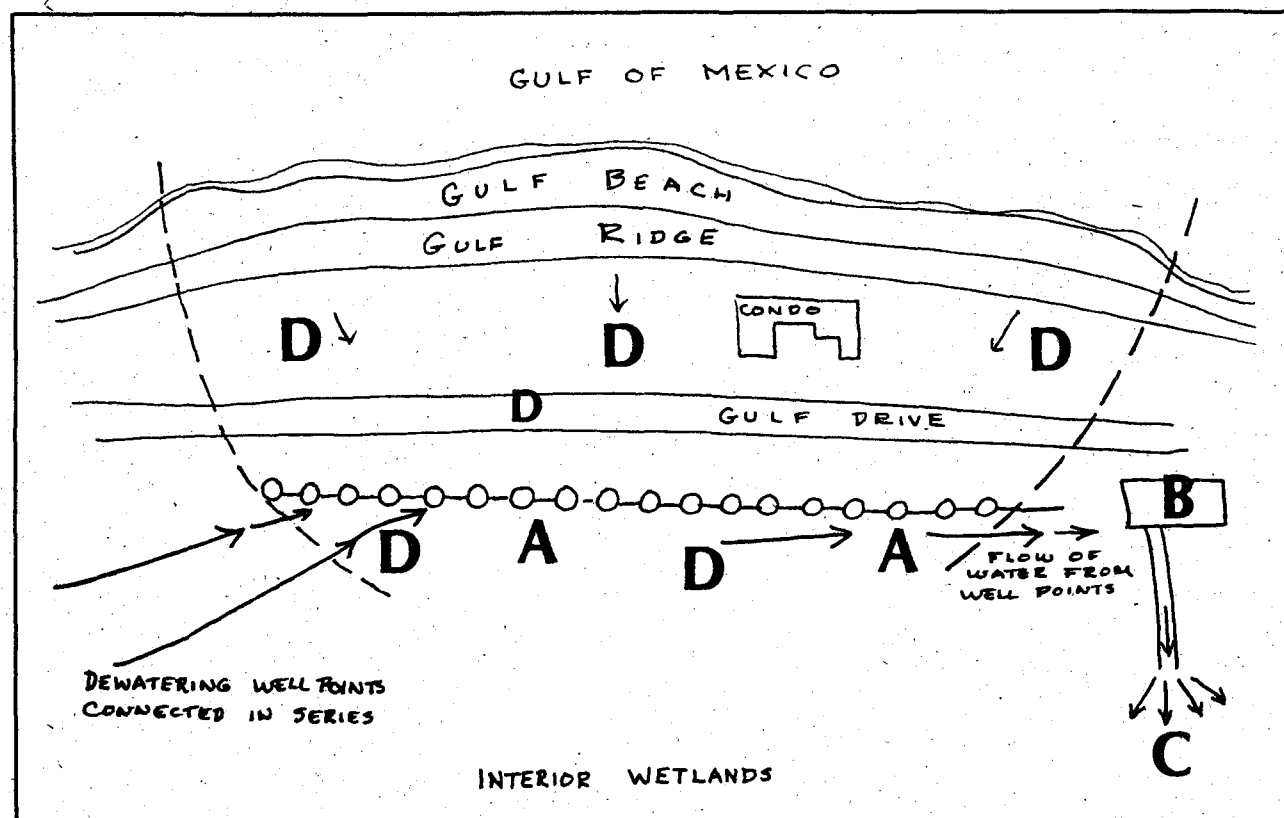

A great hurricane will have an entirely different and less harmful effect on Shell Harbor than it will have on, to use our earlier example, West Rocks or other areas (I hate the word subdivision) such as Tahiti Shores, Gulf Pines, Chateaux Sur Mer (where the Sumerians live on the north and south banks, yet), all of the Foundation wetlands, and parts of the Darling Refuge -- especially the Bailey Tract and wetland areas east to the Beach Road water control structure.

All of the areas of the freshwater wetlands that lie west of Beach Road, north of the beach dune ridge and south of the mid-island ridge constitute the treasured freshwater wetlands.

Treasured because the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation has spent thousands, maybe millions, on the acquisition of this rare barrier island habitat.

Not that it is all that fresh. Certainly it is not pure fresh water. In fact, it is sometimes quite brackish. But it is fresh enough to provide habitat for some 40 species of vertebrates that would not otherwise be able to exist on our Island -- lots of frog species, a rich turtle fauna, certain snakes and a number of mammals as well as, of course, the Alligator.

LEGEND

- A — Well Points
- B — Powerful Pump
- C — Wellwater Discharge
- D — Saltwater Wedge

DEWATERING

Between the dotted lines is the wedge of underground salt water (D) drawn in from the Gulf by the negative pressure created by the series of well points (A) pulling freshwater from the surface aquifer and discharging it into the interior wetlands (C).

Winners announced in Lions' raffle

Two out-of-state women won the grand prizes in the Sanibel-Captiva Lions Club raffle on Monday afternoon, May 31.

Pat Takulak of Warren, Mich., is driving a 1982 Pontiac Phoenix, and Betty Barber of Rochester, N.Y., is watching a new color television this week.

The winning tickets were drawn by Mayor Porter Goss in front of Bailey's, where Lions were a familiar site over the past several weeks selling tickets.

Lion Bob Sagers called the raffle "extremely successful" and added that proceeds from the ticket sales will benefit charitable organizations for the blind and visually handicapped.

A lot of birds also depend on the freshwater habitat, as do many important plants.

Sanibel would be a very different place zoologically if anything major happened to the interior freshwater habitat.

Of course there is always attrition. Developers and utilities "de-water." Have you seen the daisy chains of well points near construction sites? All attached to a powerful and very noisy pump? The idea here is to get rid of ground water so a pipeline can be buried or manhole built (see diagram). Trouble is, when you de-water on a porous island like Sanibel you pull in a "wedge" of sea water and contaminate the freshwater surface aquifer -- whose only natural source of replenishment is rain.

Each year there is creeping deterioration of the freshwater habitat from de-watering. Also from perforation of the aquaclude, a dense layer of clay-like marl that lies under the entire freshwater surface habitat (shallow surface aquifer). This natural barrier is broken daily by pounding foundation pilings.

It has been determined that pilings driven through the aquaclude do not cause leaks. It seems that the compression of pile driving seals the aquaclude around the piling, so that there is no problem of salt water intrusion.

But many developers in their haste to progress (read "destroy") and their avid race after the big buck, scrape too deeply -- perforate the aquaclude and accelerate the destruction of the wetland habitat that the SCCF is determined to save by purchasing large tracts.

Also, not infrequently, developers pull out driven pilings -- perhaps misplaced, perhaps for other reason. I know of a case where a contractor pulled out a lot of pilings because the primary developer had failed to pay his bills.

Such atrocities can mean salt-water leakage -- intrusion -- creeping environmental deterioration. So can old, uncapped salty wells whose rusty, leaky casings cause a mixing of water of different degrees of salinity in different aquifers.

All of this constitutes creeping, slow deterioration. It is so slow that we hardly know of the change unless we can read the signs. One sign is the loss, in the last several years, of two frog species now extinct on Sanibel. Others are impacted and likely to follow.

Next week we shall stop talking about creeping environmental destruction and discuss major, probably permanent, changes -- total changes in the nature of the environment: the Big Bang, Sanibel style, that might well spell the doom and extinction on Sanibel of perhaps three dozen major vertebrate species.

As the curtain falls on the 1982 Sanibel Little League Season we thought it appropriate to present a photomontage of the youngsters and scenes we recorded weekly in the name of posterity.

Photography Editor David Meardon and myself spent many weeks recording these images of youngsters experiencing that part of the American Dream know as baseball.

We handed them back to you bit by bit, as time, space and the progression of the season allowed.

So we thought it might be nice to paint a fresco for a change. One all-encompassing image to sum up the many heartfelt emotions these kids experience on the ballfield.

Look at the faces. You'll see a full spectrum of human emotions from total concentration to idle daydreaming.

TALKIN' SPORTS

By Allen Rainwater

You'll see scenes ranging from the big hit to the big strike. Pitchers winding up and firing, baserunners rounding the bag for home. Coaches instructing at the plate and on the basepaths.

You'll see some of the dedicated men who risked life and limb and the scorn of disgruntled parents to officiate fair and impartial games.

And you'll see the winners (the Rangers finished 17-3 in the Boy's Division) proudly giving us the finger, signifying, "We're number one," once and for all.

Yes, you will see a large picture of a small yet essential facet of our community, children, learning to compete, to improve, to go that extra mile. The lessons they learned about teamwork and good sportsmanship will carry over into their adolescence and adulthood, which in turn makes for a better community. Part of the American Dream.

This is for you kids. One big image to remember by.

ABWA sponsors film depicting sexual harrassment

The Workplace Hustle, a film on sexual harrassment of working women, will be shown on Thursday, June 10, at the Community Center.

Sponsored by the American Business Women's Association, the 33-minute film presents an "opportunity for both men and women to get a better understanding of the problem and its effect on business," said program chair Kate Aune.

The film, which is narrated by Ed Asner, depicts examples of sexual harrassment in universities, factories and offices. It has been used by several Fortune 500 companies, including IBM, General Electric and Bank of America, to educate employees on the issue.

Today, Aune said, women and men are increasingly aware of the problem of on-the-job sexual harrassment, but as more and more women enter the work force, the potential for abuse has also risen.

"I think it's an issue for both men and women. Both need to be educated. And both can be the victim of it," says ABWA member Catherine Battista.

The showing is open to the public, and both men and women are encouraged to attend. A discussion will follow the film, which is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. A $2 donation is requested.

For more information on sexual harrassment, the Federation of Organizations for Professional Women has developed a Sexual Harrassment Kit providing legal information, prevention measures and action checklists.

To order, send $2.50 and a self addressed mailing label to the federation at 2000 P St. NW, Washington, D.C. 20036. Checks should be made out to F.O.P.W.

Infrared film show opens Sunday at The Photographers' Gallery

Soft, lyrical images of Florida taken on infrared film by Miami photographer William Farnsworth will be exhibited at The Photographers' Gallery as the last show before a two-month summer closing.

Florida Silver Landscapes opens this Sunday, June 6, from 5 to 7 p.m. The artist will attend the opening.

On Saturday, June 5, Farnsworth will hold a black and white infrared film workshop starting at 11 a.m. The use and development of infrared film will be taught along with an afternoon field exercise. Cost of the workshop is $15 for non-gallery members and $10 for members.

Participants are asked to bring their 35 mm camera, unloaded infrared film and a red number 25 filter. For more information and registration call the gallery, 472-5777.

Farnsworth grew up in Missouri, where his grandmother developed and printed her own photographs in a darkroom with kerosene safelights. A third generation photographer, he is also photography instructor and head of the Art Department in a Miami high school.

Farnsworth's black and white prints are conceived as environmental fantasies, not actual documents. Taken on infrared film, they concentrate on perception of form and have a timeless quality that reflects the photographer's affinity with nature.

An invisible radiation, infrared lies just outside the boundaries of the visible spectrum. Therefore, infrared photography is capable of displaying details and patterns that cannot be seen. Infrared film is an interesting material that can produce images of great beauty as well as photographs of practical value.

The Photographers' Gallery is a non-profit, educational institution at 1554 Periwinkle Way. Hours are from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday.

Multi-media show opens

A mime group of students from Edison Community College will entertain and refreshments will be served at the opening reception.

The Cape Coral Arts Studio-Gallery is a non-profit facility of the Cape Coral Parks and Recreation Department. Open hours are Monday through Thursday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Friday 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Phone 542-7714 for more information.

Lee County citizens form Coalition for Peace

Concerned about the escalation of the arms race and the threat of nuclear war, a group of Lee County citizens has formed the Lee County Coalition for Peace with the immediate aim of promoting the national campaign for a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze.

The first action at the coalition's organizational meeting May 20 was to unanimously support the nuclear freeze petitions and resolutions that are currently circulating throughout the nation. The petitions read:

"To improve national and international security, the United States and the Soviet Union should stop the nuclear arms race. Specifically, they should adopt a mutual freeze on the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and of missiles and nuclear aircraft designed primarily to deliver nuclear weapons. This is an essential, verifiable first step toward lessening the risk of nuclear war and reducing the nuclear arsenals."

The local coalition will encourage area individuals, groups and churches to sign the petitions and send them to President Ronald Reagan and to the Congress.

The group also plans to support present local programs of peace education already in effect and to initiate new activities in cooperation with other civic groups.

Sanibel residents who are founding members of the group include: Brigid Bock, Helene Edmonds, Mary Emerson, Minnie Fleischl, Fran Levy, Vera Moretti, Helen Moe and Hilda Rush.

The coalition invites all persons who are concerned about nuclear war to join future meetings. The next scheduled meeting will be held on Thursday, June 10, at 7:30 p.m. at the Church of the Brethren, 1624 Cape Coral Parkway West (at Chiquita Boulevard).

For more information call 549-1039.

County schools hold first grade, kindergarten registration

Registration for children who will enter kindergarten or first grade in the Lee County school system for the first time next fall will be held through Thursday, June 17, at each elementary school from 9-11 a.m. and from 1-3 p.m.

Parents are urged to register their children early. It is not necessary to bring your children to the registration.

Registration will not be held on Memorial Day, May 31.

Before school starts each child needs a birth certificate, evidence of a medical examination completed within one year prior to entry in the school system and a certificate of immunization.

Children must be immunized for diphtheria, pertussis, tetanus, polio, measles, rubella and mumps. Certificates of immunization may be obtained from the Lee County Health Department or your family doctor.

Children can begin kindergarten in the 1982-83 school year if they are 5 years old on or before Oct. 1, 1982. However, children who are 5 after Oct. 1 but before Jan. 1, 1983, can enter kindergarten in August by passing the early entrance test. Application for this test should be made before July 15 at the Elementary Education Department of the Lee County District School Board Office, 2055 Central Ave., Fort Myers.

Completion of kindergarten is a requirement for admission to first grade in 1982-83.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.
 At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.
 Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.
 Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

BOATING AND FISHING EQUIPMENT
 Listed under Marinas or Bait, Tackle, Gear

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.
Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.
 At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.
 A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.
 Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.
 At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.
 The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop while others feature some nice gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.
 Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

LIBRARIES

Sanibel Public Library
 At the intersection of Palm Ridge Road and Florence Streets.
 (472-2483)
 Open 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., daily except Sunday.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48" x 24" x 12" deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, it is recommended that you assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.

Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

Planning on spending some time on a bike to enjoy the island sun and sights? Make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Drive safely!

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

For removal of a nuisance alligator, call the following representative of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128; or George Weymouth, 472-5128.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.

Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 residents and $10.50 for non-residents.
