City, Wulfert Point owners agree on 465 units

By Barbara Brundage

A City Council appointed fact finding team at the eleventh hour Monday came up with what is hoped will be the magic number for an out-of-court settlement in the Chianelli lawsuit that has been hanging fire for more than six years.

The city's three-man negotiating team offered to up the density on a 415-acre tract of land at Wulfert Point to 465 dwelling units. This is 50 more than permitted on the site under the city's Open Space ordinance.

Monday's offer climaxed a 3 1/2-hour negotiating session with attorneys James

Tests show salinity up in river

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation conducted salinity tests of the Sanibel River system last week and forwarded the results to City Manager Bernie Murphy on Monday.

Foundation Chairman Rose Rogers thanked Murphy for his assurance that repairs to the Tarpon Bay Weir will be made following the overtopping of that weir during heavy rains that flooded Sanibel June 17-18. The salinity testing last week involved samples of water from various locations in the river system. Dr. Herbert Rhinesmith tested the samples and found the following salinity in milligrams per litre:

On San-Cap Road south of Tarpon Bay weir -- Total dissolved solids test yielded no answer; salinity of water, also no answers.

At junction of Sanibel River and Lock Street canal -- Total dissolved solids, 5,500;

Non-profit group strives to stop cruelty to animals

By Peggy Dailey

The Fund for Animals is an anti-cruelty organization dedicated to, among other things, stopping the slaughter of baby harp seals and pit bull fighting, psychological experiments on monkeys in laboratories and leg-traps to catch fur-bearing animals.

Island naturalist George Campbell, a member of the Fund for Animals and an international coordinator for the group, says the organization needs more members and more funds.

The founder of the fund, Cleveland Amory, well-born author (The Proper Bostonians), TV critic for some years and now animal activist, is both loved and hated.

Amory's seminal book about the anti-cruelty fund, Man Kind? Our Incredible War on Wildlife, was published by Harper and Row in 1974.

Campbell's hard-cover copy is inscribed in blue-fountain pen, "For Jean and George - with thanks and admiration for the best planned and executed day in the life of this book, weather excepted! Cleveland. Sanibel, Nov. 30, 1974."

And the book, which has been reprinted in several paperback editions, is a muckraking, potboiling expose in the best tradition of Lincoln Steffens and Upton Sinclair's The Jungle. One could never read it and still want a fur coat.

The book begins with a chapter wryly called "Support Your Right To Arm Bears," in which, among other things, Amory demolishes what he sees as the the "sportsman" arguments - the main one being that hunting "harvests" animals and thus keeps a specific population strong.

However, Amory points out, harvesting by hunting takes the large and good and strong animals, while predators take the weak and ill.

He also talks about hunting in the past and famous hunters such as Ernest Hemingway and Teddy Roosevelt and his sons, who often fished in Southwest Florida.

Amory quotes some truly nauseating passages about hunting from Hemingway's writing and says Teddy Roosevelt was possibly psychopathic in his attitudes about hunting.

Amory notes the astonishing record Roosevelt accumulated in terms of numbers of animals. His son, Kermit, for instance, shot seven cheetahs in one day.

Amory then traces the history of trapping, from when it may have been necessary to its present status as a sport. Although some furs are valuable, most skins, such as a nutria and squirrel, fetch from $1 to $3 each.

He discusses the "fake-fur" campaign of the early 70s, which enlisted the sincere efforts of Doris Day, Angie Dickinson, Jayne Meadows, Gunsmoke's Amanda Blake and popular Mary Tyler Moore.

Perhaps the most astute comment was made by Meadows, who said, "I feel very sad for women who continue to purchase real fur coats. They are lacking in woman's most important qualities - heart and sensitivity."

Amory is perhaps most effective in his case for banning leg-traps. Perhaps one of the most fiendish tortures either intentionally or unintentionally devised by man, leg-traps catch a small animal's leg. It is required by law that traps be checked every so often, but the law is not enforced, and animals often starve, die of injuries or are eaten by predators.

One possible solution Amory mentions is practiced by the state of Mississippi - poison-tipped arrows that contain a powerful muscle relaxant that kills the animal within about 30 seconds. However, Amory maintains poison is still too primitive and painful, in most cases, to be "humane."

Amory's non-profit group, The Fund For Animals, is located at 140 West 57th St., New York, N.Y. 10019. Dues are around $15 a year. More information is available from Campbell at 472-2825 or at the SCCF.

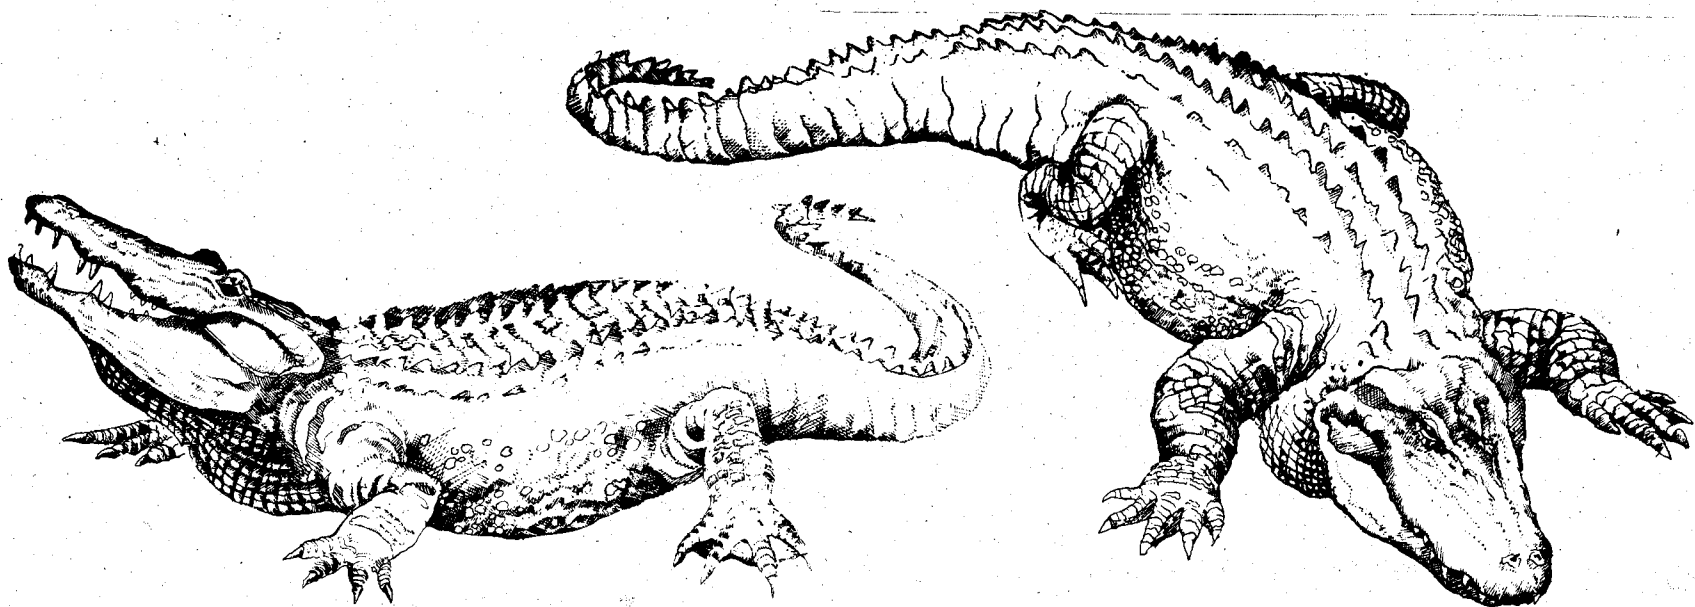

Campbell says action is needed in the form of letters to congressmen and senators, especially in the U.S. Congress, to prevent weakening or loss of important legislation such as the Endangered Species Act, which comes up for renewal this year.

In a recent laudatory article (Fall 1981) on U.S. Secretary of the Interior James Watt in American Opinion magazine, the official organ of the John Birch Society, Watt was praised for his efforts to combat years of efforts by Communist-inspired environmentalists to take away the land from whom it originally belonged to - the males of America.

The article concluded that the environmentalists would like a country in which there are "200 million whooping cranes and 47 people. Let's give the land back to whom it belongs - people."

County plans to implement Simpson hurricane system

By Barbara Brundage

Within the next two weeks the Lee County Commission will be asked to approve an $8,600 appropriation from reserve funds to implement the Saffir-Simpson Probabilistic Hurricane Warning System at the county's Emergency Operations Center.

Assistant County Administrator Bill Neron said the monies will fund the initial cost of computer software as well as on-going operational expenses of the innovative system developed by Dr. Robert Simpson, former director of the National Hurricane Center in Miami and currently a private weather consultant.

Neron said county emergency disaster officials regard the system as a "major aid in making a decision to evacuate when a hurricane threatens the area."

The system extends the warning time to 72 hours in advance of predicted landfall of a threatening storm. Currently the National Hurricane Center can promise only 12 hours warning.

Neron said that when the money becomes available the system can be implemented in a very short time. "Everything's set to go," he said. "Hopefully we'll be in business before (the next hurricane) blows in."

Simpson tested his system for the first time last year when he monitored for the city of Sanibel the approach of Hurricane Dennis, the off-again-on-again hurricane that eventually fizzled out in Florida Bay.

Last week City Manager Bernie Murphy informed the City Council that Simpson has agreed to monitor again this year any tropical storms that threaten Sanibel.

Under an interim agreement that will be terminated once the county has his system operational, Simpson, at the city's request, will begin a continuing program of computing and evaluating strike probabilities for any tropical disturbance that may be headed this way.

His fee will be determined at the rate of $300 a day, as in the 1981 hurricane season, when his services cost the city approximately $1,500, Murphy said.

Simpson will be out of the country until mid July. In his absence an associate, Bill Frank, will fill in for him, Murphy said.

"We received some very helpful and on target advice from Dr. Simpson early on when Sanibel appeared to be directly in the path of Hurricane Alberto," Murphy pointed out.

Although his system was not fully operational at the time Alberto threatened the Islands, Simpson advised Sanibel officials not to over-react, Murphy said.

Simpson said the storm at most would be a minimal hurricane with top winds of 80 mph with the expectation of three-foot tides, he added. Evacuation, except possibly for some waterfront areas, would not be necessary, Simpson told Murphy.

Vice Mayor Mike Klein, who was acting mayor during the Alberto crisis, at the June 15 council meeting recommended the city retain Simpson on the same basis as last year, not relying completely on the county's being able to implement the system for use this season.

Councilman Fred Valtin, who was skeptical of the value of "Simpson's scheme" when it was first introduced as a part of the city's Hazard Mitigation study a year ago, has done an about face.

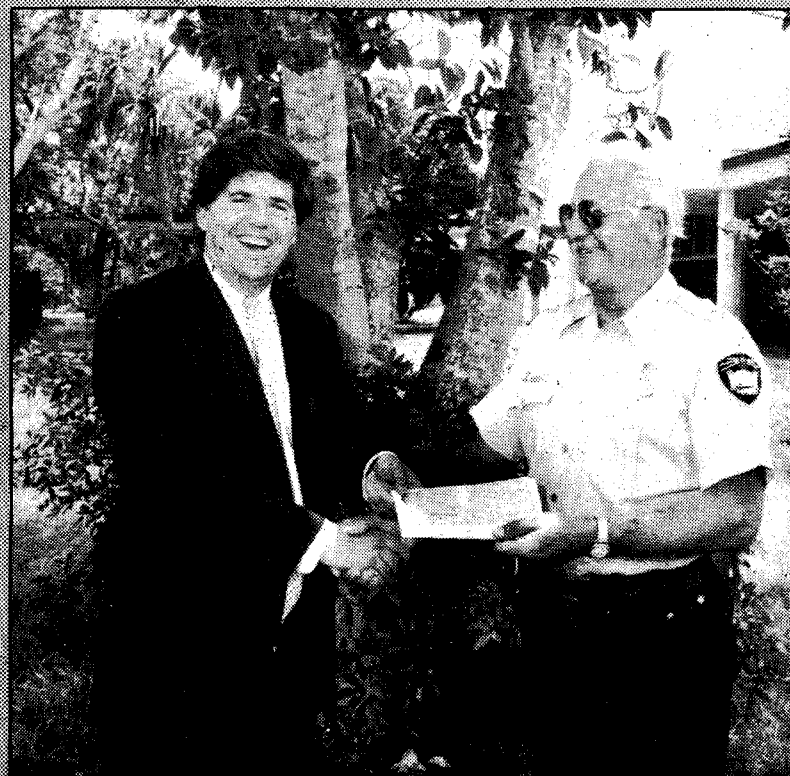

Valtin said he was grateful for Simpson's early evaluation that Alberto was not a catastrophic storm and that evacuation was not even mandatory.

"As an official charged with helping make a decision on evacuation it was comforting," he said. "Neil Frank (director of the National Hurricane Center) didn't tell us anything," Valtin added.

Valtin made the motion for the city to retain Simpson until the warning system is implemented by the county. It was approved by a 3-0 vote with Mayor Porter Goss and Councilman Duane White absent.

The United Way fund drive on Sanibel is $250 closer to its goal thanks to a donation from the Sanibel Police Recreation Club. Capt. Bill Trefny is pictured here presenting a check to Sanibel First Federal branch manager Kin Wasson, co-chairman of this year's drive.

"The United Way is a good cause. It covers so many different things - programs for both kids and adults," Trefny said.

The Sanibel United Way drive has reached 55 percent of its $25,000 goal. "We need all the help we can get," Wasson said.

Resident says petition signers were informed Island voters

To the Editor
The Islander

In response to Elinore Dormer's letter of June 17 suggesting the signers of the Bay Shore Drive petition were uninformed and never saw the area in question, I wish to point out that thoughtful and responsible voters make it their business to learn facts before signing things, and Sanibel has such an enlightened elector.

On the subject of signature withdrawals on the Bay Shore Drive petition through accommodation by City Hall, it is highly unusual in major cities throughout the country for such a procedure to be set up for the removal of names from a petition (considered intimidation in most quarters). Signing a petition is like voting.

It appears that Mrs. Dormer's comments are clouded by personal feelings toward individuals rather than by an objective evaluation of the issue.

Simply put — the signers of the petition have spoken. They disagree with the council's decision. This disagreement has nothing to do with conspiracy or doubt of their integrity. In fact, the petition process is the very essence of participatory politics that make our country work.

Chicago visitor abhors beach littering

To the Editor
The Islander

I recently spent a 10-day vacation on Sanibel Island, and like most visitors I returned home with pleasant memories of a bright sun, warm gulf waters, a beautiful seashore and marvelous seafood.

My time on Sanibel generally was relaxing and enjoyable (despite the scare of Hurricane Alberto), but I am nagged and distressed by a small incident that I cannot forget.

While sunning on the beach one late afternoon, I watched a pelican land a few feet away along the shoreline. The bird began walking the beach, dipping its bill now and then into the shallow water for what I supposed were edibles. (Let me say here that few things humored me more on my vacation than the hundreds of pelicans I saw. I admired those great sea birds as strong fliers and expert fishers, and I never ceased trying to determine where the centerpoint was in their ungainly bodies). It snared something green in color, tossed its head back to swallow it, and immediately began to gag and retch violently. Perhaps 30 seconds elapsed before the bird spat the object out, then flew away.

I got up from my beach lounge to retrieve the object, which was a plastic throw-away lighter. Litter on the beach was nothing new to me, but suddenly its harmful consequences were made clearer. Out of curiosity, I decided to police for litter along the beachfront of the motel where I was staying, covering an area about 150 yards long and as wide as the most recent tide line.

My catch after 20 minutes of pick up was about 10 pounds of you name it — mostly plastics and metals, including 12 beer and soda cans, glass, two hair combs, three ballpoint pens, a water-soaked paperback book, a torn bath towel, a sun hat and a woman's slipper.

All this human trash, most of it non-perishable, was on what is acknowledged as one of the finest shelling beaches in the world. And all of it was waiting to be taken out or covered by the next tide.

I placed the collection in my beach towel and took it to the motel managers. They were distressed. Can't we put a few inconspicuous litter baskets along the beach so people get the hint? I asked. Can't do that, I was told. There's a local ordinance prohibiting items like that beyond property lines, or some such. I said that I thought that there certainly ought to be a law...

I was angry then, and I am angry now. Somewhere, there has got to be responsibility for this sort of thing. Sure, it all comes back to individual responsibility, parents showing their children what to do with waste, how to be considerate of the environment.

It seems obvious to me that the message needs to be reinforced on Sanibel Island, and I believe people would heed it. But they must be reminded, and they have to be impressed with the fact that their thoughtless, irresponsible and destructive actions hurt Sanibel or any other place in ways far beyond unsightly litter.

When I showed my collection of beach junk to the motel managers and explained the episode with the pelican, I apologized for sounding as though I was preaching. Considering the foul evidence, I didn't think I had to preach.

But after years of witnessing similar scarring of other beautiful areas of the world, I am not sure that anyone is listening.

Sincerely,
Robert Saich

ERA workers thank Island supporters

To the Editor

Equality of rights for all persons regardless of gender has been refused by three or four state legislators in three key states despite Harris polls indicating increasingly large majorities of citizens wanting the constitutional amendment to be adopted.

However, the issue will remain alive, and eventually the will of the people will prevail.

In the meantime, many men and women have a sense of satisfaction in having been a part of this struggle for full equality. The Sanibel ERA Task Force co-chairmen wish to thank all of the residents and visitors who were extremely generous with their time and money in support of ERA.

Now that we have been stalled (but not stopped), let us concentrate on electing legislators who do believe that all persons are ready for full equality guaranteed by the United States Constitution.

Proud postmaster lauds Post Office staff action during recent storm

To the Editor
The Islander

Last Friday (June 18) at 6:30 a.m. as I was preparing to come to work at the Sanibel Post Office, my phone rang. It was one of the clerks, Ted Saturnus, who lives in the Villas in South Fort Myers as I do.

Ted calmly stated that at around 5:45 a.m. as he approached the Sanibel Causeway a wave hit his car and knocked him off the road. A few waves later pounding against the car, he decided to leave it. After finally making it back to the highway in the dark, he caught an ambulance that was coming off the Island on the way back to Fort Myers.

I told Ted I would drop by and pick him up and we'd give it another try. So around 7:30 a.m. I picked him up and we headed for Sanibel. The Florida Highway Patrol stopped us around 300 yards from the toll booth. The Sanibel Causeway was closed.

I made repeated calls to the Sanibel Post Office with no answer. Later I found out there was no power from 4:30 a.m. to 11 a.m., so the phone couldn't ring. I finally got through to the Island Exxon Station who had clerk-in-charge Bill Reel call me. Bill's report was heartening to a postmaster who was separated from his "troops."

Somehow all other employees had made it to work. Since the lights were out and there are no windows in the building it was quite dark. The clerks had moved the sorting cases outside on the porch so they could see to sort mail. Newspaper clerk Debra Beam was using a flashlight to see how to sort the newspapers. The carriers could not move their cases outside so they used old fashion lamps (kerosene) to see to sort their mail.

The carriers reported very deep water in low spots on Sanibel Island, yet they did not curtail any mail, driving their jeeps axle deep all over the Island delivering mail only a few minutes behind the regular schedule.

I finally got on the Island around noon and was I a proud boss to find business as usual.

I am proud of the Sanibel Post Office staff - every last one of them - and wanted to share their spirit with the public we serve.

Captivan responds to county commissioner

A copy of the following letter to County Commission Chairman Ernie Averill was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Sir:

If Lee County had not given permission for such density there would not be so many homes and condos here now, affluent or not. Will you also forsake tornado, earthquake and volcano victims?

As for barrier island Captiva, which traditionally protects the mainland, and our very fragile road, County Road 867, it is the county's duty to maintain same.

Getting down to facts, this small island is assessed at $131,000,000 plus, and rising. Approximately $1,000,000 of this assessment supports the Lee County School system. We have an average of 10 children from Captiva attending Lee County schools. That leaves $130,000,000. We have no sewers, street lighting, one librarian, a self-supported Fire Department, self-supported erosion district, unpaid Board of Governors of the Captiva Civic Association and occasional police patrol.

I feel Lee County can well afford to care for County Road 867. If we were to be totally lost to the county -- poof, $131,000,000.

Sincerely concerned about your attitude.

City needs formal policy on fee waiving

The City Council will decide on July 20 whether to continue waiving fees such as development and building permits for churches, service clubs and non-profit and charitable organizations.

The city has no formal legislative policy to follow, and the informal administrative policy of exempting certain groups has not been consistently applied by staff, City Manager Bernie Murphy told the council.

"For example, our records show that churches enjoyed a waiver in one permit application but paid a fee in another," Murphy said. "Fees have generally been waived for the Island Water Association but, another public utility, Lee County Electric Cooperative, always pays," he added.

In the past fees have been waived for the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, C.R.O.W., the Sanibel Community Association, Community Housing and Resources, Inc., and the Children's Center, Murphy added.

He pointed out that a "non-waiver" policy would be clear and fair to all and easy to administrate. But he said the council might want to continue to provide relief for charitable and community oriented organizations by exempting them from city fees.

Murphy recommended that any exemption waiver policy should apply to all tax-supported governmental groups, churches, charitable and community-wide service organizations.

He classified as "a gray area" not-for-profit corporations such as IWA and Lee County Electric Co-op, which provide essential services but charge for them on a non-profit basis.

Corporations for profit, such as United Telephone System and the Sanibel Sewer System, would not be eligible for a fee waiver, Murphy said.

The three council members present at the June 15 meeting agreed they needed more time to study the proposal.

"I'm not ready to make a decision today,"

Vice Mayor Mike Klein said. He added that, "No one would be seriously hurt if the council decided to adopt a 'non-waiver' policy."

Murphy said over the past seven years fees waived by the Building Department totaled $8,500, and those waived by the Planning Department amounted to $3,500.

Murphy urged the councilmen to set some formal policy to provide consistency and fairness.

They agreed to consider the question at their July 20 meeting.

Council postpones action on naming city park on Bay Drive

The City Council has postponed until August or September a decision on whether to name the small city park at the end of Bay Drive in honor of the late Daisy Mayer, who originally gave the land to Lee County.

The city's Historical Preservation Committee has suggested that an appropriate marker be placed on the site that provides public access to the bay beach designating it as Daisy A. Mayer Park.

Mayer, a Sanibel resident from 1919 to 1969, also gave the county land for the portion of Bay Drive that is still a public roadway.

Historical Preservation Committee Chairman Charlotte White, in a memo to the council, said the committee believes the park is of historical significance to the city of Sanibel and should be preserved for the use of visitors, hikers and bikers.

There is parking space for several cars, and the addition of a bike rack is recommended.

Because of the mangrove forest in the vicinity, there is not much room for expansion. But the committee suggests removal of the trash and debris that has collected on the bay beach.

Councilman Francis Bailey has been named as council liaison to the committee, and he agreed with the recommendation that further action be delayed until the historical authenticity of the proposal is checked with Elinore Dormer, Mayer's daughter.

Dormer is currently vacationing in North Carolina.

"There's no big rush about this," Bailey acknowledged. He suggested delaying action until Dormer returns to the Island.

Vice Mayor Mike Klein and Councilman Fred Valtin agreed. Mayor Porter Goss and Councilman Duane White were not present.

City could go to court over zoning

The Sanibel City Council will have a "last chance" July 20 to take affirmative action on a long standing request for a change to commercial zoning to permit a neighborhood shopping center in Sanibel Bayous subdivision.

Attorney Mike Jackson, representing developers Roy Bazire and E.G. Konrad, served notice to the city at the council's first hearing of the specific amendment on June 15 that, "We're running out of time."

If the council denies the request next month, the only alternative left will be to "ask the court," Jackson said.

"I wish you hadn't said that," retorted Councilman Fred Valtin, who had earlier said he was "inclined to believe a convenience store would be appropriate on the site."

"I react emotionally to being told, 'We'll see you in court,'" he explained.

Jackson said he just wanted the council to know, "This is our last try. It's not a threat -- just a statement of fact."

Two previous applications to rezone the 1.5-acre tract on Sanibel Bayous Drive at San-Cap Road were turned down by the council because the requests were premature, Jackson said.

But now the time has come, he said, adding the area is being developed and there is need for a small shopping center to serve the western end of the Island.

There is already a commercial use on the site -- a real estate office -- and with the subdivision's sewage treatment plant adacent it is not suitable for residential development, Jackson pointed out.

"We're not asking for a development permit," he said. "Just the proper zoning so we can get on with the planning."

To call the project a shopping center is probably a "misnomer," he said, "since it will consist of an 8,000-square-foot convenience store and two or three retail shops to serve the needs of the neighborhood." He said the 7-11 chain is interested in the site.

Sanibel Bayous resident Dr. Eleanor Goldbloom said because of the subdivision's isolation, neighborhood shops would be very convenient.

"I know Roy Bazire as a conservationist would not build anything garish," she added.

Valtin outlines need for Fine Arts Advisory Committee

Councilman Fred Valtin has asked his colleagues to consider the establishment of a Fine Arts Advisory Committee to "serve as a buffer between aspiring artists who want to present a sample of their work to the city and the City Council."

Offers to give works of art such as sculpture and paintings for display in the new City Hall are increasing, Valtin said. "And it's embarrassing for a city official who is not an expert to turn down a gift," he added.

Vice Mayor Mike Klein agreed that he had "no background to judge artistic merits and make a decision."

Valtin suggested the advisory committee be composed of a "mix of persons with artistic interests, both modern and traditional, and not be confined to art dealers or gallery owners."

He requested that his proposal be placed on the agenda of a meeting in August or September and that council members be prepared at that time to suggest names of possible members.

ROGO deadline extended for Sea Spray home

Under Sanibel's Rate of Growth ordinance an allocation for a single-family home awarded in March will expire unless a building permit is obtained by June 30.

It is impossible for Charles Huether to obtain a permit by that date because of a Planning Department stipulation that roads and utilities must be completed and approved by the city before construction can begin in the new Sea Spray subdivision where he plans to build a single-family home.

Mark Comer of Comer & Moore Construction, Inc., who has a contract to build Huether's house on Lot 6 in the subdivision, told the City Council that Johnson Engineering informed him Harper Brothers will not be able to complete the roads and utilities before the ROGO expiration deadline.

The council agreed with Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane's assessment that the delay is beyond the control of the applicant. The council approved a request for a 60-day extension of Huether's allocation.

Charter amendments set for Nov. 16 vote

By Barbara Brundage

The City Council last Tuesday gave its stamp of approval to all but one change to the city charter recommended by a special Charter Revision Committee.

The proposed amendments will appear on the ballot for a vote of the people on Nov. 16, the date already reserved for the City Council run-off election if one is required.

Because of the proliferation of state and county questions, there is no room for Sanibel's charter amendments on the Nov. 2 general election ballot, Lee County Election Supervisor Enid Earle advised the council.

The four-member council (Councilman Francis Bailey was not present at last week's special meeting) threw out the revision committee proposal to compensate councilmen $1,200 yearly in addition to the reimbursement for actual necessary expenses currently that is in effect.

Councilman Duane White, who served on the ad hoc committee, said he had "no stand" on the matter. He explained it was committee consensus that the additional compensation might allow qualified persons for whom it might otherwise be a financial hardship to run for office.

Vice Mayor Mike Klein said the amount was "inadequate" to accomplish the purpose.

Mayor Porter Goss said he would rather be compensated for value by another standard such as the honor of holding the office.

Councilman Fred Valtin said that in a basic document like the charter he would prefer "generic wording for the extra compensation rather than a specific figure."

It was the council position in most instances to place the suggested changes on the ballot and give the voters the opportunity to decide.

But in this case Valtin argued that the citizens might be embarrassed to turn down such a "piddling amount." His motion to "strike the $1,200 compensation" was approved unanimously.

The current language in Section 3.03 (Compensation and Expenses), however, will be changed so it will not be mandatory for council members to accept reimbursement for expenses.

In addition to the committee recommendations the council agreed to incorporate changes in Chapter VI (Initiative and Referendum) suggested by the Elections Supervisor.

The changes Earle asked for stem from problems the Election Office encountered in processing the Bay Drive vacation petition.

To simplify the validation procedure street addresses and registration card numbers of signers will be required in addition to signatures in ink with the names printed beside them.

The number of days permitted to determine a petition's sufficiency will be increased from five to 10 days so Earle will have more time to certify the validity of the signatures of the 25 percent of registered voters required.

To avoid calling a special election for an initiative referendum, the length of the period in which the election can be held will be extended from 60 days after the petition has been declared sufficient to 120 days, provided it is mutually agreeable to both the city and the petitioners.

In the current charter an ordinance that is being challenged is suspended as soon as the petition is submitted to the city manager.

To avoid confusion in the future, the council agreed that the suspension will not go into effect until the petition is declared sufficient.

The council gave blanket approval to committee-recommended "housekeeping" changes that will bring the charter into compliance with state statutes including the passage of most legislative actions "by resolution" rather than "by ordinance."

Other charter changes Sanibel voters will be asked to approve or disapprove in November include:

- An explicit procedure for filling a vacancy in the mayor's office that permits the vice mayor to serve as acting mayor until the next regular council meeting. At that time the council will name a new mayor and vice mayor, should the vice mayor be elected mayor.

- An orderly method for filling three or more council vacancies that occur simultaneously due to tragic accident or natural disaster to determine by lot the length of the terms for each of the newly elected council members.

- A provision that candidates for council offices must declare their intentions to run

50 days before the date of the election and at least 30 days before must file petitions designating the seat they are vying for.

● Recognition of the Planning Commission as an advisory arm of the City Council and the possibility of other responsibilities that may be designated by ordinance.

● Provision for removal of the city manager for good cause by an affirmative vote of three members of the city council, outlining the procedure for a public hearing at his request and making the city attorney subject to the same rules for removal.

The council last week hit one snag when it split 2-2 on the precise language required to clarify the relationship of elected officials with the city's administration.

They did agree that an investigation of the activities of the city administration, manager and-or staff may be done only by an affirmative vote of at least three members of the council. But they disagreed on the right of a councilman to make queries of the staff providing it does not disrupt routine business.

Councilmen Fred Valtin and Duane White interpreted this language as being "too open ended."

"It leaves a pretty wide door open," White said.

They insisted that all inquiries of staff should be funneled through the city manager.

White cited "abuses in the past" that were brought on by this practice.

Valtin said that answering a councilman's questions may "take up too much of staff time and screw up the work schedule."

"The request should rightfully be made through the city manager, who is aware of time schedules that may be disrupted," Valtin added.

Mayor Porter Goss, however, said that without an information flow from staff, a city manager can "spoonfeed a blind council."

"That's not a problem now," Goss added. "But in the charter we're etching out rules for the future."

Vice Mayor Mike Klein said he agreed with Goss' position and said if a council member's discussion with staff interferes with the work schedule it's the city manager's job to stop it.

Valtin said he could agree only with the "most restrictive language that leaves no room for interpretation or error."

Recognizing a temporary impasse, Goss suggested the discussion be resumed at the July 6 council meeting, when he hopes a compromise can be reached.

City Manager Bernie Murphy said the staff and City Attorney Neal Bowen would begin work on wording for the amendments as they will appear on the Nov. 16 ballot.

Each question is restricted to a maximum of 75 words with a five word limit for the title, Murphy said. He said the amendments should be ready for council approval at either the July 20 or Aug. 3 meeting.

Sept. 17 is the deadline for submitting the charter revisions to the Elections Office, Murphy said. "But I'm shooting for Sept. 1," he added.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

The month of June has been one of the wettest I can remember in several years, particularly when compared with last year, when we had hardly any rains.

If you have had the hard luck to arrive for a vacation just in the middle of these days when we get perhaps two or three inches of the wet stuff, you have noticed that in some ways it hurts your angling chances. But those who chase redfish might be praying for more rain.

Tarpon fishing is disturbed quite a bit by heavy rains and the accompanying winds. This is evident if you have tried to fish on the south side of Sanibel Island for the big silver fish.

This area, which we call Knapp's Point, is thoroughly exposed to winds, and if the rains come up from the south, as is usual this time of year, then the southern side of the island is exposed to fish.

We know the tarpon are out there this year because some excellent reports of tarpon and large shark action have been in the papers and around the tackle shops for some time.

The trouble is on the outside of the islands, the tarpon stop or greatly reduce their feeding where the waters are riled and filled with suspended sand.

There is always Boca Grande Pass, about an hour and half boat ride from the Sanibel Causeway. This world famous pass always has a good supply of tarpon, but when Hurricane Alberto came in from the south in the first week of June, tarpon action up there even slowed to a trickle. That's very unusual, but as soon as the stormy waters cleared the fish came back and action returned to its usual hectic, but productive pace.

I would rather fish for tarpon on the grass flats near the marina and in the Pine Island Sound area. The only trouble is this area, too, is greatly changed by bad weather. I think the tannic acid washing out of the mangrove islands has some effect on them, but perhaps the stirred up water at depths of seven or eight feet is too much for the fish to take.

As with the pass and on the Knapp's Point, give the weather a day or so to clear up and all seems normal.

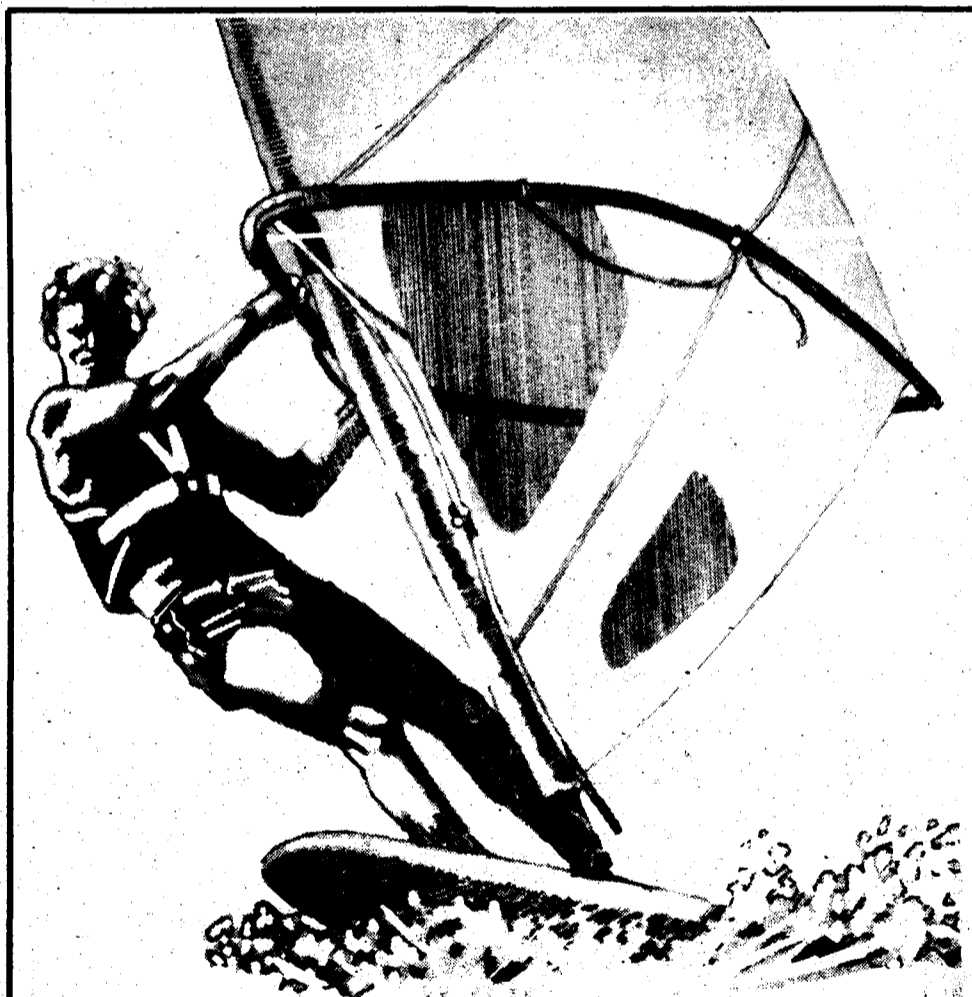

We got spoiled last year with the clear, rarely rainy days. I read somewhere that tarpon feed better in dry spells, and it would appear to be true at this point.

If you have your heart set on a tarpon but can't get out, then you might switch to redfish. These are great eating fish. And something interesting happens when it rains.

Often, just before a large storm such as a hurricane, the reds will go crazy feeding. Usually a hurricane or any large rainy storm brings the tides up higher than normal, and the reds love to work around the mangrove islands to feed in new areas low water kept from them before.

Incidentally, some land-locked lakes on the Island have snook, mullet, tarpon and other saltwater fish in them for just this reason. The tides get abnormally high and the fish follow a ditch or shallow stream and feed where they can. As the tides drop, they get stranded and often adapt just fine to living in fresh water.

Resort islands shouldn't be allowed to have rain during the day, and the sun shouldn't be too hot or set too soon. But we haven't worked that out as yet, so if you are here to fish in windy, wet weather, it's either go for redfish or take up shelling. Or wait until next year.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

A few weeks ago we talked about what it's like to go shelling after hurricane conditions affect the beaches. It wasn't very good. But only a short time later, another storm hit Sanibel, Captiva and Cayo Costa islands. This one never had a name, but it did more damage than any hurricane in many years.

The best part about this summer storm that hit with high winds and seas is that it opened up some new shelling places.

There is an excellent shelling site between Sanibel and Captiva Islands. Most people call it Blind Pass, but it's really Turner Beach on the Captiva side of the bridge. Anyway, several years ago, the pass filled itself in with sand, cutting off any water flow and creating a wide, beautiful beach instead.

This was great for shellers, in a way, because it gave them more sand to comb for specimens. But when the water flowed at a high rate of speed from the gulf back into Pine Island Sound, shells came up to the beach.

This most recent storm once again opened up Blind Pass. Water is flowing through, although not in as great a volume as before. We don't know if the pass will stay open, but for now the shelling is again good around the edges of the stream.

The park on the Captiva Island end of the bridge is free and open to the public and has ample parking and rest rooms, too. The park on the Sanibel Island end requires a permit from the city.

The reopening of the Blind Pass wasn't the only new cut made in the islands during the recent storm. On North Captiva Island, the large waves opened up a small pass about three-quarters of a mile north of Redfish Pass. The waters from the shallow Pine Island Sound are rushing out there, but at this time it doesn't look like it will remain open.

In the meantime, if you have a boat it might be worth checking out to see if any shells were uncovered by the storm.

There was some storm damage on Sanibel Island's Bowman's Beach, but not as serious as that on Captiva Island. Bowman's is a great shelling spot because the beach is wide, has lots of shade and is very quiet -- except for on the weekends, of course.

The waves reached way up on the beaches there, which helped take the sand off shells that were buried there for some time. There is also some chance of shells washing up on the beach in the storm conditions. When the waves come way up on the beach and withdraw with each wave, you might find some good shells.

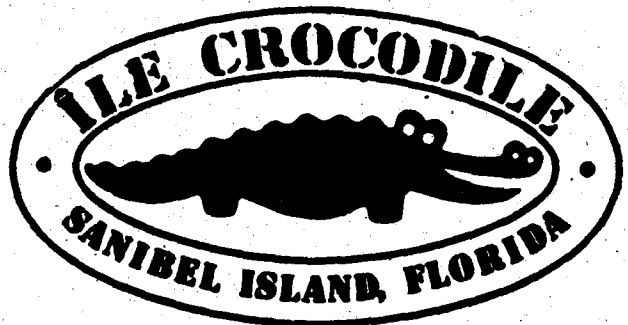

As with almost any violent storm, many shells do get killed. One type that is particularly open to this is the pen shell. These cone-shaped shells are a brownish green color, and some reach a length of six or eight inches.

The pen shells get dislodged from the sandy beach floor and wash upon the beaches in some spots. Sea urchins also wash up in large numbers along with parchment worm casings and mounds of sea grasses.

Check these piles of shells carefully. It's not unusual at all to find good shells washed in and wrapped up in the masses of sea debris from the storm. Good shelling this week.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-3459 for information.

Conversion table: The above tides are for the lighthouse point of Sanibel only. To convert for Redfish Pass (North tip of Captiva), add 55 minutes to the time shown for every high tide. Subtract two minutes for every low tide.
For Captiva Island Gulf side, subtract 30 minutes for each high tide, and subtract hour and 16 minutes for each low tide.
For Captiva Island, Pine Island Sound (Bay) side, add 1 hour and four minutes for each high tide and add 52 minutes for each low tide.
In between these points, gulf or bay, guesstimate and have good fishing or shelling.

Ikki Matsumoto

Sanibel's artist celebrity talks about his work, his roots

Ikki Matsumoto, artist and printmaker, is among the most famous "artistic celebrities" on Sanibel. He is especially famous for his paintings and drawings of birds and for adding touches of humor to his pictures — not like cartoons, but something to make people smile.

Matsumoto has one-man shows all over Florida, in the northern states and as far away as his native Tokyo. He also has two-person shows with his wife, Polly, who is a sculptor and weaver.

All his family — he comes from one of seven — are or were at some point artists. They came by it naturally. Matsumoto's father, Katsuji, is now retired but was a famous children's book illustrator in Japan for many years. He also designed things for children's clothing, sheets, toys, and so on — "any childrensware," says Ikki with a smile.

His mother, whom he called Oka-san, "was and she is a wife and mother. She grew up in a time when she didn't resent that," Ikki says.

Maternal ties in Japan are strong. Ikki's older brother, Nimoroi, was adopted by his mother's family and given her maiden name, Akado, for his surname because the Akado family had no son to carry on the name.

Ikki was almost 6 years old when World War II broke out. His memories are rather vague of the first part of the war, but towards the end, he says, the bombing got bad.

"I remember toward the end," he says, "The sirens would sound and my father would have to put on his Civil Defense helmet and report. I would send my mother and younger brother and sisters to the shelter, but it was required that someone stay in the house. And I was the oldest son. So I always climbed up on the top of the roof and watched the bombs dropping.

"We were in the outskirts of Tokyo and were near fields and farms and in no immediate danger."

Nearby was a town in which there was a munitions plant, and it was bombed all the time, he remembers.

He doesn't remember hearing when the war ended (V-J Day was in August 1945 and you don't ring bells and get drunk if you lose), but he says, "The worst time came afterward. The government collapsed and there was no currency. We had to scratch any kind of food. Everything was black market. My mother traded silk kimonos and wedding gowns to get a bag full of rice. I know what weeds you can eat. I caught crawdads and frogs."

He graduated from a four-year high school in 1953. "It was a regular high school like you have here," he says. "Your general, MacArthur, had decided it would be best to have Japanese schools convert to American systems."

Asked if people with a very ancient culture resented the superimposing of Western ways, he replies, "I honestly don't think the younger people wanted chewing gum and ice-cream and T. In Tokyo, he adds, is thoroughly Americanized Coca-Cola, MacDonald's and Charli' Ang.

"However, in the countryside away from Tokyo, you can still find old Japan," he says. Ikki began drawing when he was 5 years old. He decided to come to the United States, he attended an American Conversation School in Tokyo to learn English.

Then he applied to 20 art schools nationwide and received the best scholarship arrangement from the Herron Art Institute in Indianapolis, Ind. He attended that school for two years, and then went to the Academy of Cincinnati, Ohio, from which he graduated in 1959.

He went to work with an advertising agency and eventually started his own studio. He did industrial pamphlets, corporate greeting cards, children's books, designs for dinnerware and illustrations — and a myriad of other design work.

"Those textbooks were really no fun," he says wryly. "Rather like, 'If you have one apple and one orange, you have two apples,' and I drew the apples and oranges."

During his 17 years in Cincinnati, Ikki started and grew — and so did his doubts about whether he was doing.

He had married his wife, Polly, who is from Ohio, in September 1959. They met at the Art Institute. She had always intended to work with textbooks, since she was a little girl of about 10 years old, she had dresses with the sleeves put in backwards.

They have three children. The oldest, Brian, is training to be a helicopter pilot and is in the Air Force. He thinks he might want to be stationed in Korea, as near as he can get to Japan.

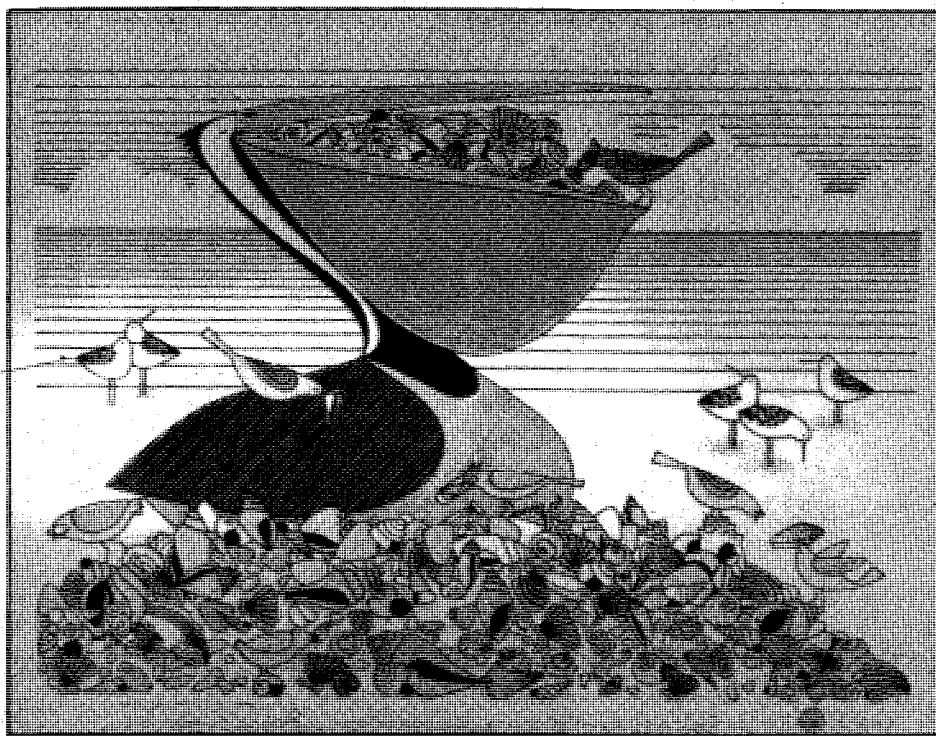

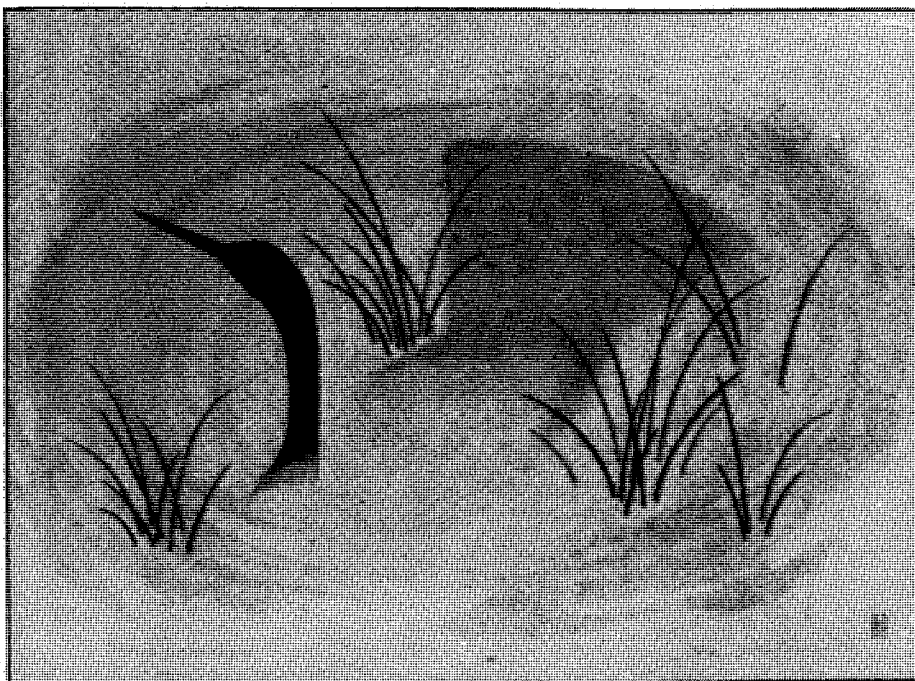

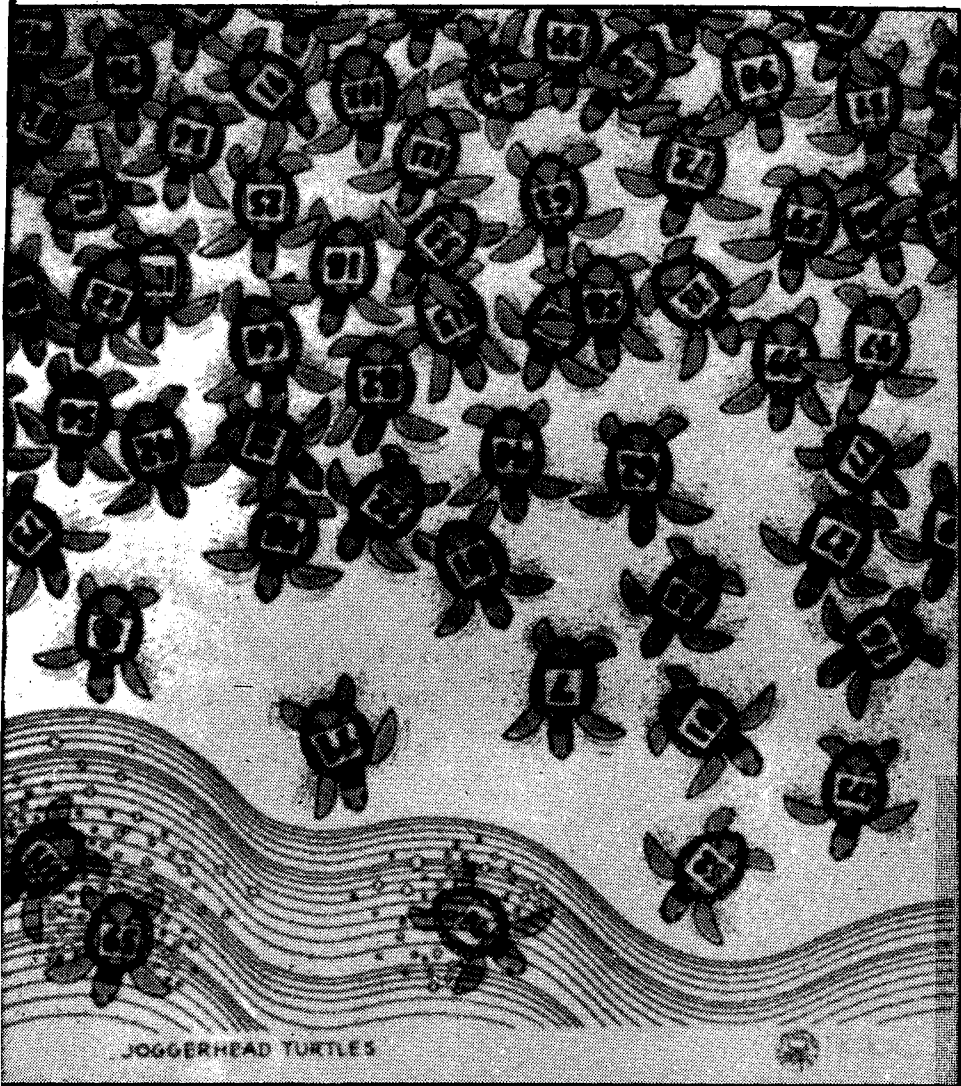

"All my children," says Ikki, "showed an interest in Japan and Japanese things early in life."

The next son, Tai, just graduated from Cypress High School and might attend Edison Community College in the fall. He, however, wants to be a professional baseball player and recently traded places with the Minnesota Twins.

Amy is 13. Polly wanted to name her, since she is his daughter, and so she has an American name. Ikki says, "I call her Emi, which is Japanese, but it's pronounced almost the same."

When Ikki and Polly married, transracial marriages were still rather uncommon. Ask Ikki how it would be difficult to live with a wife who came from a society where men traditionally were more powerful in their own homes, Polly frankly says, "Well, when I got married I was 19 years old and he was 25. If I had been 30 and getting married, I would have thought of that, but I was too young and I

-- and it turned out there weren't any problems, anyway." Ikki explains, "Even in 1959, I was a -- how do you say -- a rather free sort of person." While his family life was great, Ikki began to have doubts about his means of livelihood. "I started seeing, after I was in advertising for awhile, the lies they make up," he explains. "But it was not always just coming out with lies. It was always they wanted the work yesterday; I never had time to do a good job." So he finally had to let it go. The Matsumotos had vacationed on Sanibel, and they chose the Island for their next home after driving down the whole east coast and up part of the west coast. They thought the environment would be good for their young children. Ikki is now a full-time artist. He does some t-shirt designs and greeting cards and designs for charity, but mostly he does watercolor paintings, pen and ink drawings, some acrylics and multi-media, crayons, pastels, majik markers, pencils -- you name it. He makes some of his works into prints, usually 300 apiece, which he signs. "And yes," he says with a smile, "I hate to sound conceited, but sometimes I do have a painting that I would like to keep myself. But I don't. I can't afford to." He exhibits in 23 galleries, including some in Orgeon and California, but most of his work is on display on the East Coast. He still would like to become more widely known. "More cosmopolitan," he explains. "Fifty galleries would be nice." Polly and Ikki do enjoy "Sanibel" things such as sailing. "My sailboat is just called Boat," he says with a smile. "But I drove to Connecticut to get it." They have lived in a series of rented houses, but now they live off Gulf Drive in a white wooden one that is colorfully furnished and looks like it is the home of artists. Their black dog, Ninja ("which means nothing"), runs in and out and is as gentle and friendly as his owners. Ikki thinks he is pretty Americanized now, but he adds, "As I get older, I find I am again drawn to my roots. I don't really know what all I want to do with all the rest of my life. Ask me again in a couple years, and I'll tell you." Asked what he'd like to be remembered for, he cogitated a long time and then said thoughtfully, "If, after I am dead, somebody sees a drawing of mine on the wall and gets a little smile from it, that would be good."

"As I get older, I find I am again drawn to my roots. I really don't know what all I want to do with the rest of my life. Ask me again in a couple years, and I'll tell you."

LOUD NOISES

Because very loud sounds excessively vibrate and damage delicate structures in the inner ear, the noise of jack hammers, chain saws, tractors, or loud rock music - if listened to long enough - can permanently deafen us. To protect our hearing, we have a special muscle which reflexly tightens the eardrum when noises are loud. This dampens the eardrum's vibrations and spares the inner ear. Alcohol and sedatives relax this muscle and interfere with the reflex protection.

Wes Santora

Age: 40

Height: 5'4"

Roots: New London, Connecticut

Pleasures: Fishing and boating

Last book read: House Plumbing by
"I don't know who"

Mentor: "My dad and John Wayne."

Wish: "They've all been answered."

Words of wisdom: "Enjoy yourself and feel good about yourself and everything will fall into place."

Wes (her real name is Wanita) Santora, now the day cook at Timmy's Nook, is already somewhat on an institution at Timmy's, which is itself a colorful institution on Captiva.

Besides cooking, Santora has run a garbage business in Connecticut and driven taxis there and in Fort Myers, raised four children, worked in a sewing factory and spent nine years on the road with carnivals -- "Plus other things I won't talk about," she says with a smile.

She shares a house with a friend from Connecticut and Santora's youngest daughter Dawn, who is 16.

Santora is divorced and has three other children, Linda, 20; Patrick, 21; and Robin, 22.

"I came from a very strict home in Connecticut," she says. "My father lost his leg in World War I and was older when he had us. My mother worked in a factory sewing. In high school I got my first job there, too. I made about $1.25 an hour."

She gives the impression that she is unruffled by almost anything and that almost everything that could happen to her has already happened.

"I knew I had to see things, so I left home when I was 17," she remembers. "And then I got married and had my children."

She was divorced in the early 1970's and ran a garbage business, which she bought from a friend's husband for a dollar and a handshake -- he just wanted to leave it behind, she says.

"We were going to call it W.E.S. -- my initials -- but then everyone started calling me Wes, too," she says, adding that the job was difficult. "On the cold mornings, and it can really get cold in Connecticut, all the garbage would be frozen to the cans, and they were terribly heavy with ice. You had to lift them up and turn them upside down. It just got to be too much for me.

"But we had a good time and we gave the people good service," she adds. "It was a town without municipal garbage collection. My motto was, 'If we don't satisfy you, we'll give you double your garbage back.'"

So she and some friends decided to head for Florida. "We were like a caravan," she laughs.

Once in the Sunshine State, she got a job driving a cab for Jack's Taxi in Fort Myers. She was, she says, always a good driver. While she was a cabbie in Connecticut, she once was the only cab to go out in a blizzard -- to pick up a victim of kidney failure who needed dialysis.

She worked several places and once went to a farewell party for a colleague who was leaving to join a carnival. "So I decided to go, too," she says.

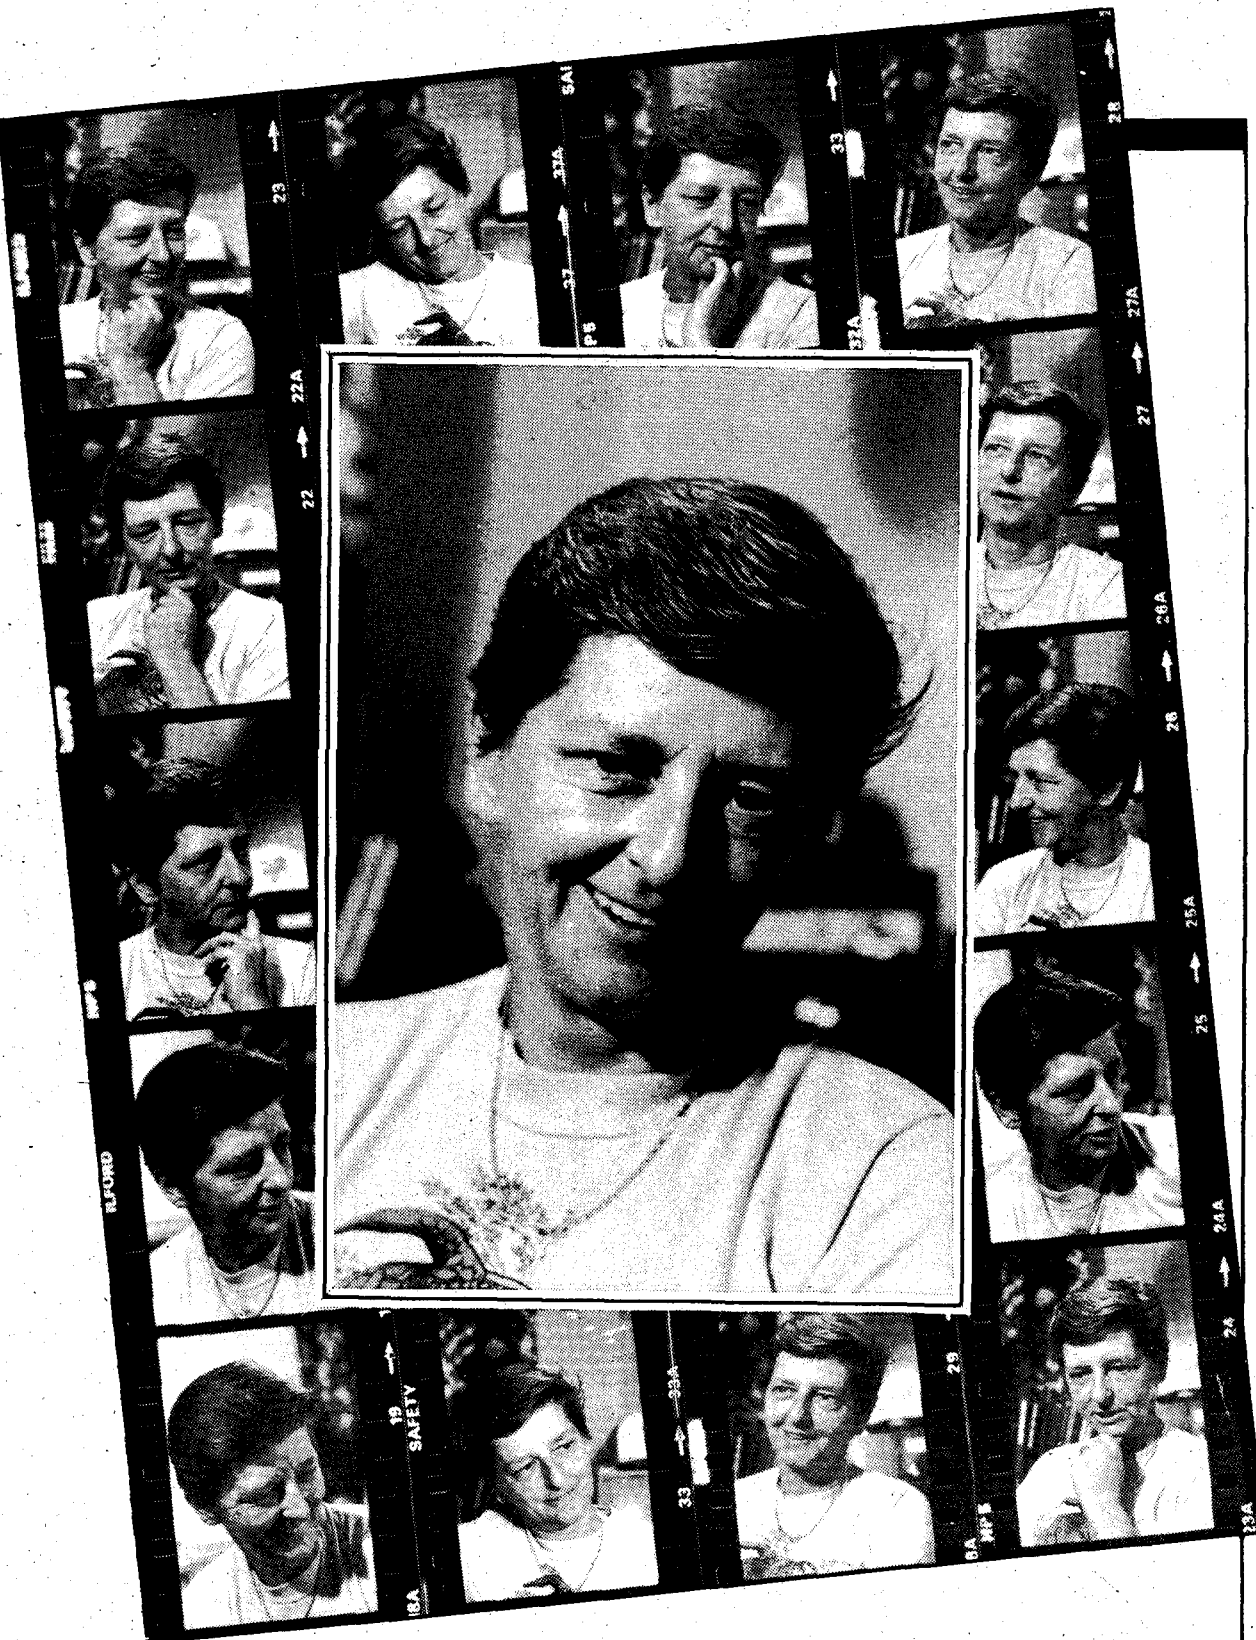

First she worked at a small fair at a "grab joint" -- a concession stand with soft drinks and corn dogs. Later on she worked at a bigger fair at a concession called "The Rat Game."

"You have round table that turns," she explains. "It has holes in it and each has a number. People put money on the number -- 10 cents a hole.

"I spun the table and lifted the cup the mouse was under. The person with the bet on the hole the mouse goes to wins."

Wes eventually returned to cooking. "Although I never really knew what I wanted to do, I kept becoming a cook with progressively larger amounts of food," she says.

She began at Timmy's Nook, where her daughter was already working, in December 1981. "It's a peaceful atmosphere here," she says. "It's small and family-owned, but you don't have the whole family telling you what to do. I'm allowed to make special things and do what I want to do."

By Peggy Dailey

Wes' pleasures include her boat, The Thistle, which is docked right in front of the restaurant. Her car, which she services herself, is a 1970 Ford LTD. She reads a lot of how-to and home-handyman books.

"I prefer not to rely on mechanics," she explains. "They're just too expensive."

She was an early fan on the magnificently competent (at everything) Nancy Drew and still likes detective magazines and stories like those of Agatha Christie.

She also likes to compare restaurants.

Wes says she likes cooking where she is and doesn't want to progress to an expensive French restaurant.

Asked about the difference between a cook and a chef, she says, "To me a chef is someone, not necessarily a male, who can cook everything -- anything at all from any country.

"I don't want to be one," she adds. "I'm a cook and I think I'm a good one. I have the time to prepare a dish properly and there's no rushing. I'm pretty at ease with myself now."

Santora does project a sense of assurance. She has four tattoos that date from her carnival days -- two motorcycles; a standing duck with the name "Brandy" on it, in honor of her granddaughter; and a heart with a name written in the center. The name is not gone, but it's obscured by new lines of ink so it is illegible.

"That person is not in my life now," she says about the name in the tattoo. "It would be painful (to have it removed)," she adds. "I don't care that it's on my arm so long as I can't read it."

Santora says not much really bothers her. "The cold bothered me in Connecticut and it doesn't down here," she says. "Just say I'm really glad to be back down in Florida."

HOWE NOW!

By Paul Howe

The recent "unnamed sub-tropical storm" that smashed into our barrier islands coastal areas brought along mixed blessings. Besides ravishing our recreational beaches, it wrote for Nature a memorandum to the Lee County Commission that the storm-opened Blind Pass should now be stabilized for all time.

In the midst of the Captiva Erosion Prevention District squabble over beach renourishment, The Islander last Sept. 29 published my observations and suggestions on the Blind Pass problem.

CEPD's engineer looked with favor on my corrective plan -- largely because it was based upon a March 1980 U.S. Army Corps of Engineers analysis that had been requested by Sanibel Mayor Duane White's letter of the previous October.

Nature's recent cooperation in reopening Blind Pass at precisely the spot contemplated by my proposal was, indeed, gratifying. That action eliminates the need for a costly and unnatural dredging operation and should command Nature's continued approval of the plan.

The achievement of the stabilized small-boat channel linking Pine Island Sound and the Gulf of Mexico and providing flushing action for the Captiva and Sanibel sectors of the Blind Pass area has been simplified and made less costly to operate and maintain. That result will be attained by a simple seaward extension of the existing stub rock groin and installation of a similar parallel groin at an appropriate distance to the south.

The plan's modern regulating weir at the Sanibel end of the Captiva Bridge and its connecting and buried large culvert to Clam Bayou is still a viable mechanism for constantly flushing the several bayou areas now experiencing stinking stagnation.

The relatively simple closing of the existing Gull Beach opening near Silver Key with rock and sand will provide an unbroken beach for shelling, swimming, fishing and walking northward up to the Sanibel side of the new small boat channel.

The county's recreational program for the Bowman's Turner Beach area should be rounded out by incorporating the acquisition of Silver Key into the regional park complex. The preferred direct access easement to the key from San Cap Road and a one-lane bridge from the key to the Bowman Beach area would provide a circular access roadway for the regional park. More support facilities would result for the increasing day-tripper volume from the mainland.

It behooves our city planning people to look promptly into this general scheme and furnish the City Council with recommendations.

Our City Council might well take time by the forelock in getting the project on the county's front burner for execution and total funding.

LIBRARY REPORT

Librarian
Sanibel Public Library

Poor Richard's Game by G.J.A. O'Toole -- Set in England and France at the time of the American Revolution.

After helping to win the battle of Yorktown, Chevalier Desomnd de Lawless, a member of the Irish Brigade of the French army, is called back to France on a mission of intrigue. His mission is to determine whether or not Benjamin Franklin, American consul to France, is an English spy and traitor.

Before he meets Franklin, he is intercepted by the English and hanged as a traitor at Tyburn. But with help from strangers he manages to survive his execution and proceed to his destination.

As he learns more about his subject,

Lawless discovers a mysterious link between Franklin and an English cult of Satan worshippers. To complete his mission he must uncover the truth about the relationship between the American and this bizarre cult.

The unique format of this exciting novel brings a certain sense of reality to the story. O'Toole combines the ingredients of espionage, historic fiction and swash-buckling adventure to make for splendid reading.

Inside Blair House by Mary Edith Wilroy -
An exclusive look at the guests and life behind the doors of this famous Washington house. It was Eleanor Roosevelt who decided that the president's guests should stay some place other than the White House after she encountered Winston Churchill taking a late night stroll in his nightshirt. In 1942, Blair House was purchased for this purpose.

During the Kennedy Administration, Wilroy became the manager of Blair House, a position she held until her retirement in 1975. Playing hostess to famous international figures, keeping informed of proper protocol and managing the house and its staff certainly were not easy tasks. The author tells of many snafus, most of which were cleverly corrected.

She is cautious in her portrayal of the guests, giving a positive description of most -- although she does have a few unfavorable comments about some members of the large 1973 Russian entourage. Readers wishing to get a glimpse at a part of society few of us get to experience should enjoy this book.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

One of the first tasks of every new Floridian is to acquire a Florida driver's license. Before taking the written examination, I assailed the policewoman on duty with a veritable barrage of questions regarding the real meaning of certain phrases in the official handbook.

Utterly exhausted (or totally exasperated) by my inquisition, the poor woman got rid of me with uncommon celerity -- by waiving the written exam entirely.

Words have always held a certain fascination for me. However, their use in specialized jargon and terminology frequently complicates (or completely defies) comprehension. Perhaps people do not always say quite what they mean to say -- or else they may not really mean what they actually do say.

Our own local government has passed many fine ordinances and resolutions in a truly enlightened effort to preserve and protect the quality of life on Sanibel. In a few instances, however, I have difficulty understanding their meaning, the consistency of their enforcement or both of the preceding.

For example, every local businessman knows only too well that Sanibel has an extremely strict "graphics" ordinance. Webster's dictionary notwithstanding, "graphics" are signs.

Among other stipulations, no store may place any sign in its window that tells what is sold inside the premises. One might (until a competitor complained) paint the word "SALE" on a window -- perhaps in puce or infestive fuchsia -- so long as one did not indicate what was on sale.

Store signs must be so many feet away from the road.

Should one want a more visible sign, one could pay for advertising on one of the bright red trolleys. These rolling billboards managed to receive a "variance" with regard to the graphics ordinance.

Sanibel also has a live-shelling resolution, which should not be confused with an ordinance. The latter can be enforced, while the former is purely a matter of conscience.

In any event, this resolution, clearly posted in key locations, states the following: "Two Live Specimens Per Species Per Person." Unfortunately, someone left out "per what." Per year? Per day? Per shelling excursion? Alas, many a Greedy Gus gathers live specimens with gay abandon, stopping only when his own body betrays him and he can no longer bend over -- or straighten up.

In addition to ordinances and resolutions regarding commercial signs and live shelling, I find some of the parking signs rather confusing. A number of these "graphics" state: "Parking By Resident Permit Only."

(Q) If I pay whopping annual taxes for property on Sanibel, am I entitled to such a permit if Sanibel is not my primary residence?

(A) Goodness no!

(Q) Well then, if I claim Sanibel as my primary residence, even though I may rent and thus pay no property taxes, am I entitled to such a permit?

(A) By all means!

Yet another parking sign is wide open to interpretation: "Parking Between Signs By Resident Permit Only."

(Q) Well, if I'm not a resident, I should park anywhere right up to a sign rather than between the signs, right?

(A) Hopelessly wrong!

Of all the mellifluous phrases to which governments are so partial, and to which citizens fall heir, I find "native vegetation" to be among the most elusive concepts. Precisely what vegetation is really indigenous to Sanibel?

The hurricane of 1926 wrought massive devastation on this Island, ruined tomato farming forever and left quantities of salt in the land. In the words of one long-time resident, "Waves of sand were just about all that was left."

Thus, "native vegetation" must refer primarily to plant growth following the disaster of 1926. However, such vegetation was largely imported by man, or perhaps brought in by bird (since birds have a propensity for dropping things thither and yon).

Some "native" vegetation is strongly encouraged by the city of Sanibel, while other specimens are definitely plants non grata. Quite sensibly, the former category comprises whatever is compatible with the particular requirements of our environment. The latter includes such incompatible specimens as the Brazilian pepper (which tends to go quite berserk) and the Melaleuca (which is dreadfully greedy about drinking our precious water).

Thus, in the final analysis, the city is really talking about compatible versus incompatible vegetation -- and there may not be anything very "native" about either one of them.

I really like the idea of waging a non-nuclear war in an indeniably noble cause against an indeniably incompatible tree. However, this inconsistent combat has become rather confusing.

For example, the Periwinkle Trailer Park must get rid of its Brazilian peppers (which, incidentally, are not allowed to run wild there any more than anything -- or anyone -- is allowed to run wild in "The Kingdom of Muenchdom").

On the other hand, the proposed Paulsen shopping center may retain the offending peppers as part of a vegetation buffer. Finally, the city of Sanibel has not yet declared war against its own Brazilian peppers -- because the campaign would be too costly.

There was recently a governmental discussion that I experienced no difficulty whatsoever in comprehending: a proposed ordinance against topless entertainment. Alas, this potential model of clarity and clairvoyance was nipped in the boob!

The Evolution of Evolution - Part I

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

Recently Organic Evolution and the Descent of Species was once again challenged in court by Creationists in Arkansas.

The headline-grabbing case was billed as "the second Monkey Trial." Fortunately, mind won out over superstition, but other legal challenges may be on the way that could affect curricula taught our young people.

Recently, too, I returned from the fifth annual Campbell expedition to "Darwin's Islands" - the "Encantadas" or Galapagos of the Eastern Pacific.

For years now I have been walking in Darwin's footsteps trying to absorb lore and history of the famed voyage of HMS Beagle. And I have been studying the "evolution of Evolution," if you see what I mean.

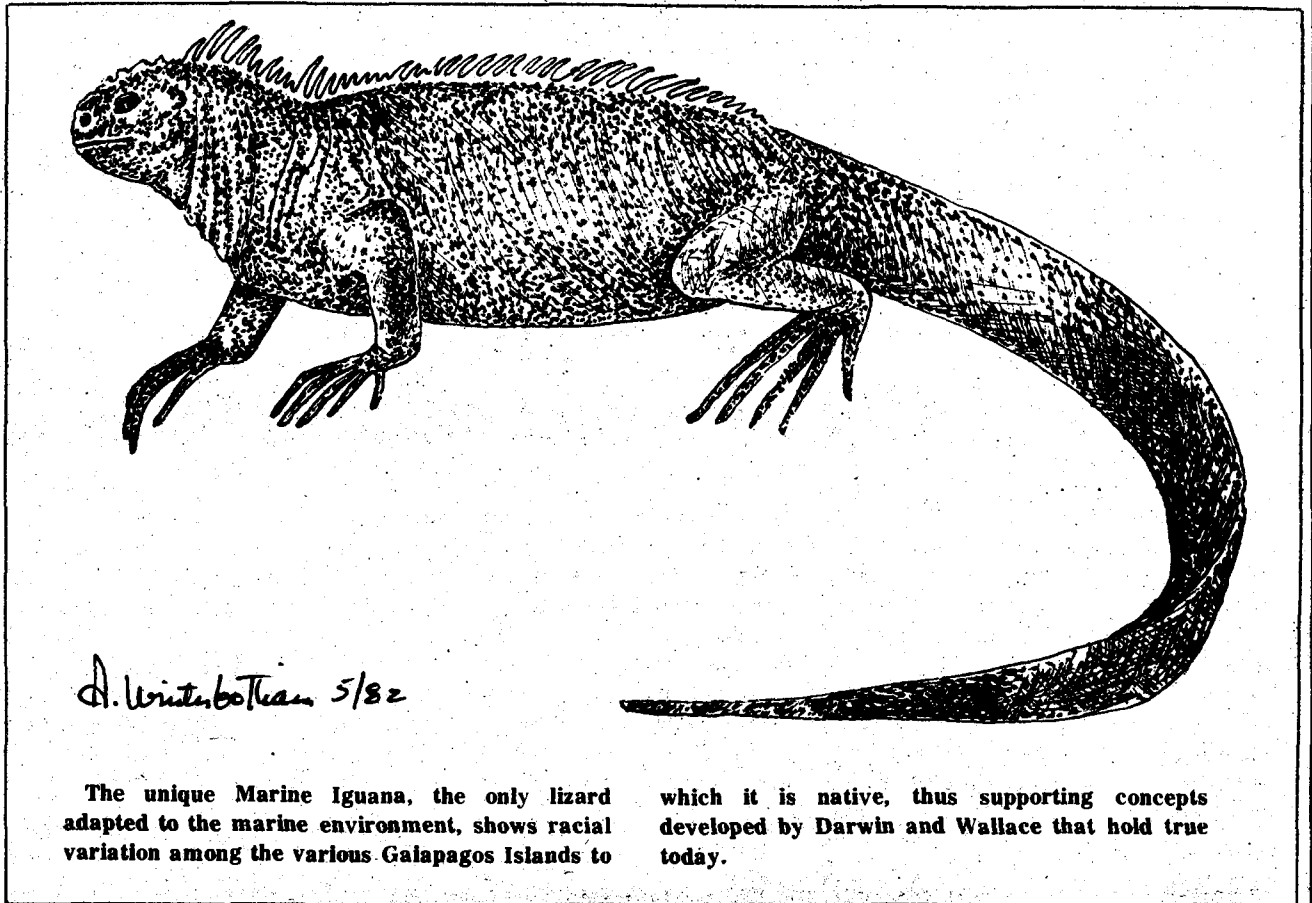

In the Galapagos, Darwin's name is almost deified: "Darwin was lost and wandered in the wilderness for two days near this place;" "Darwin didn't make it to Tower Island's Darwin Bay, but his name did."

Graffiti at Tagus Cove is abundant. Nineteenth Century ships' names are painted on the cliffs. Ships' masters' signatures are carved in stone. "Darwin carved his name here, too." But today this historic relic can't be found, we are told.

At Academy Bay, the Charles Darwin Foundation, a multi-national scientific and conservation organization that advises the Ecuadorean government on Galapagos nature preservation, maintains the Charles Darwin Research Station. The ghost of Darwin is everywhere about.

But in the Galapagos, Alfred Russel Wallace is a name seldom heard. And on the rare occasions when it is brought up it is promptly swept under the rug - or, more appropriately, washed into the scuppers.

Yet after the celebrated five-year Voyage of the Beagle, which ended in 1836, Charles Darwin did not publish one word on the Theory of Evolution until The Origin of Species

The unique Marine Iguana, the only lizard adapted to the marine environment, shows racial variation among the various Galapagos Islands to which it is native, thus supporting concepts developed by Darwin and Wallace that hold true today.

While Darwin had been educated to be a clergyman and his training was most rigid in that respect, Wallace was more flexible in such matters. In the cases of both, however, it was very radical indeed even to question the calculations of the Reverend Ussher.

The history of the development of the Theory of Evolution by Natural Selection points an accusing finger at a guilty Darwin who snatched priority, and with it his place in history, from the hands of the true theorist, Alfred Russel Wallace.

It was Wallace who wrote the Ternate Paper and sent it to Darwin, who received the manuscript in Britain in June 1858. The Ternate Paper was the first coherent description of what today is known as "Darwinian Evolution." It is Wallace who should really be credited with the great leap forward because of his prior publication - not the sanctified Darwin who went to his grave recognizing his own guilt and even admitting it to some.

Ternate is a small East Indian island near the western part of New Guinea. Wallace was collecting insects there when he fell ill with malaria - a disease that most European travellers of the day repeatedly contracted. Lucid, though bedridden, Wallace was inspired to write the first clear description of "Darwinism."

He trusted his treasured manuscript to the vagaries of the mails - as chancy then as today. A Dutch ship carried the packet to Singapore, and a British vessel took it on to London. A horse-mounted post rider carried it to Kent, where Darwin lived at Down, and delivered the package in June 1858.

Darwin realized with considerable shock that the Ternate Paper contained missing links in his own thinking. His concern at the possible loss of priority drove him to deceitful connivance with some of the great scientists of that day, including Lyell, the renowned geologist, and Hooker, the great botanist of The Royal Botanic Garden at Kew.

On July 1, 1858, some fragments of Darwin's work were read at a meeting of the Linnean Society on the same program as Wallace's complete "Darwinism" theory, the Ternate Paper. Thus Darwin squeezed delicately into the picture as a co-discoverer. This was accomplished with connivance and the aid of the leading scientists of Britain.

Years later, Wallace - simple, good fellow that he was - recognized the hand that had been dealt him and bowed out gracefully, allowing Darwin full credit for the discovery.

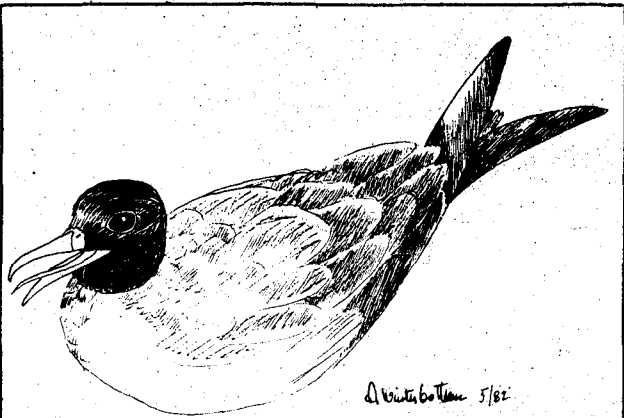

How had Wallace's paper come about? Actually it was several years earlier, in 1855, that Wallace first shook Darwin and entered what Darwin felt to be his very own province - the study of the "Species Question." In that year, having been an inspired guest of the White Rajah of Sarawak, James Brooke, and using the Rajah as a conversational sounding board on which to test his theories, Wallace wrote in Borneo (in February) and published in England (in September) the Sarawak Law.

The 1855 Sarawak Law, in short, states that every species has come into existence synchronized in time and space with a pre-existing, closely-allied form.

Darwin, for his part, having appropriated Wallace's work for his own, was never again a happy, healthy man. He was guilt-ridden and with each passing year became more feeble.

Before he died, Darwin attempted to assuage his con-appeared in 1959.

The long silence was forcibly broken by an innocent, kindly, self-educated zoological collector 14 years Darwin's junior. He was a Briton of a lower social class than the wealthy and aristocratic Darwin, who had already made his name and fame as a leading English naturalist in areas other than evolution and natural selection.

Wallace made a meager living as an insect collector. He loved beetles best, as did Darwin, and shipped them to private collectors and museums in Great Britain. During four years on the Amazon and more than six in the East Indies, Wallace, like Darwin, was preoccupied with "the Species Question" - how did species really originate?

At that time in England, it was generally accepted, as calculated by the Reverend Ussher who was born in 1581, that God created the earth and all the species of animals on Oct. 23 in the year 4004 B.C. at 9 o'clock in the morning.

Moreover, both Darwin and Wallace had been brought up to believe in that doctrine as well as to believe every word in the Bible to be the literal truth.

There are two sea lions in Galapagos. One came from the north (pictured) and is the local race of the California Sea Lion. The other came from Antarctica via the cold Humbolt Current and is generally called Galapagos Fur Seal even though it, too, is a sea lion. Both species have evolved differences from their northern and southern ancestral stock.

science by seeking a royal grant for Wallace, who had fallen on bad times. Darwin's influence with Queen Victoria got Wallace an annual stipend of $200, a paltry sum even then.

Today Charles Darwin has full credit for the developing concept of Organic Evolution, while Wallace is almost unknown.

Next week we shall consider some refinements to evolutionary thought that are being currently debated.

Wildlife artist works on vacation

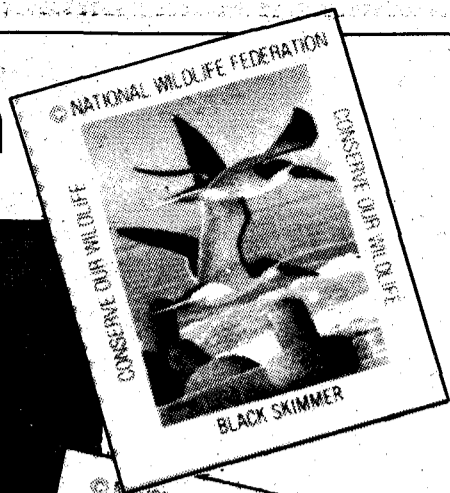

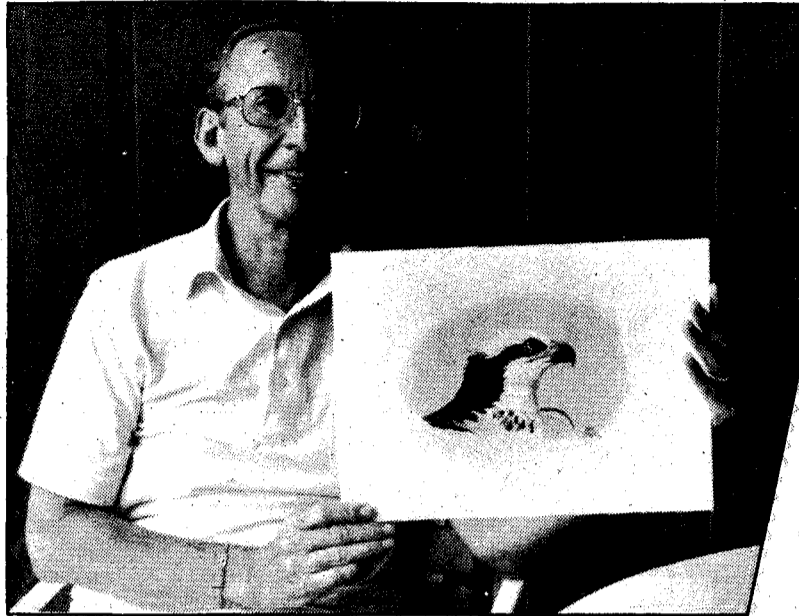

By Peggy Dailey

Ripper, who painted the 1981 15-cent "Coral Reef" stamp for the U.S. Post Office, also has illustrated many nature book and magazine covers. He does many of the stamps published each year by the National Wildlife Federation.

The artist, who is married and lives with his wife, Virginia, in Huntington, W.V., travels most of the year to places such as the Cascades, the Rockies, California and northern Wisconsin seeking new animals and especially birds to paint.

The Rippers have been coming to the Islands for about 15 years equipped with binoculars. "There's quite a bird show, if you know how to see them," Virginia said. "Chuck can see all the birds even coming down places like I-75."

Refuge film focuses on animal babies, ideal for all ages

The film Wildlife Babies, produced by the North Carolina Wildlife Resource Commission, has been a favorite film for a number of years and is showing at the J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge every afternoon this week.

Ideal for children of all ages, the 30-minute film focuses on fawns, baby muskrats, young waterfowl and a variety of other newborn animal life. The film demonstrates that with a little help from man, "wildlife babies" will be here year after year.

This film is the fourth of the Wildlife Film Series scheduled this summer at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

Wildlife Babies will be shown at 2 p.m. every day through Friday this week in the auditorium of the refuge Visitor Center. The Visitor Center is located at the entrance of the Wildlife Drive on Sanibel-Captiva Road. Admission is free.

If you are considering summer camp for your youngster, the Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission still has openings at its Conservation Youth Camps.

There are a few openings left for the camp in Ocala and for the camp in the Everglades, according to commission officials.

The camps are open for boys and girls from 8 to 14. The back to nature programs teach conservation and responsible use of Florida's unique natural environment. Nature crafts, fishing, hunting education, natural history and water sports are just some of the areas of instruction campers explore. All are taught by qualified instructors.

Camping sessions last one week and cost $75. The fee includes housing, meals and insurance. Applications can be obtained by calling toll-free 1-800-282-8002.

ISLANDER SPORTS

The Sanibel Fire Control District played host to the Lee County Emergency Services and South Trail Fire Department in the Last Annual Emergency Services Softball Tournament on Saturday. EMS won the tournament by knocking off Sanibel in the final game. Next year SFCDD will host the Next To The Last Emergency Services Softball Tournament.

If you followed Island sports last year you are no doubt aware of the sad demise of women's softball. This column hammered at the problem of lack of motivation, begged, pleaded and cried week after week as the end drew near.

So far this season we (me and my shadow of a column) have, well, played it cool. Not to mention down.

And lo and behold, the women are close to getting their act together and, if all goes well, will field a division consisting of four teams!

I've learned something from this observation -- something to the effect of not being able to beat a dead horse.

So I'm not going to do that anymore. But I will hammer, beg, plead and cry, if need be, to help in any way possible to keep this ball rolling.

The reasons are simple enough. Softball is a way of keeping in touch as well as in shape. Women need that every bit as much as men do. Just ask them.

From a purely selfish standpoint, it gives us few bewildered sports writers and photographers a little more flexibility in our weekly presentations. The more varied, organized sports activities to cover, the better. Just ask us.

TALKIN' SPORTS

By Allen Rainwater

The gals gathered last weekend for their long awaited jamboree that was to serve as a kickoff for the season and as an indicator of the amount of genuine interest there is to be found among local ladies.

Well, there were only enough ladies to field two teams. But that's a start!

Now, partly due to the word getting out about what a great time these gals had, and thanks to the efforts of Trish Weekly and Sherri Anderson, women are crawling out of the woodwork expressing an interest and desire to participate.

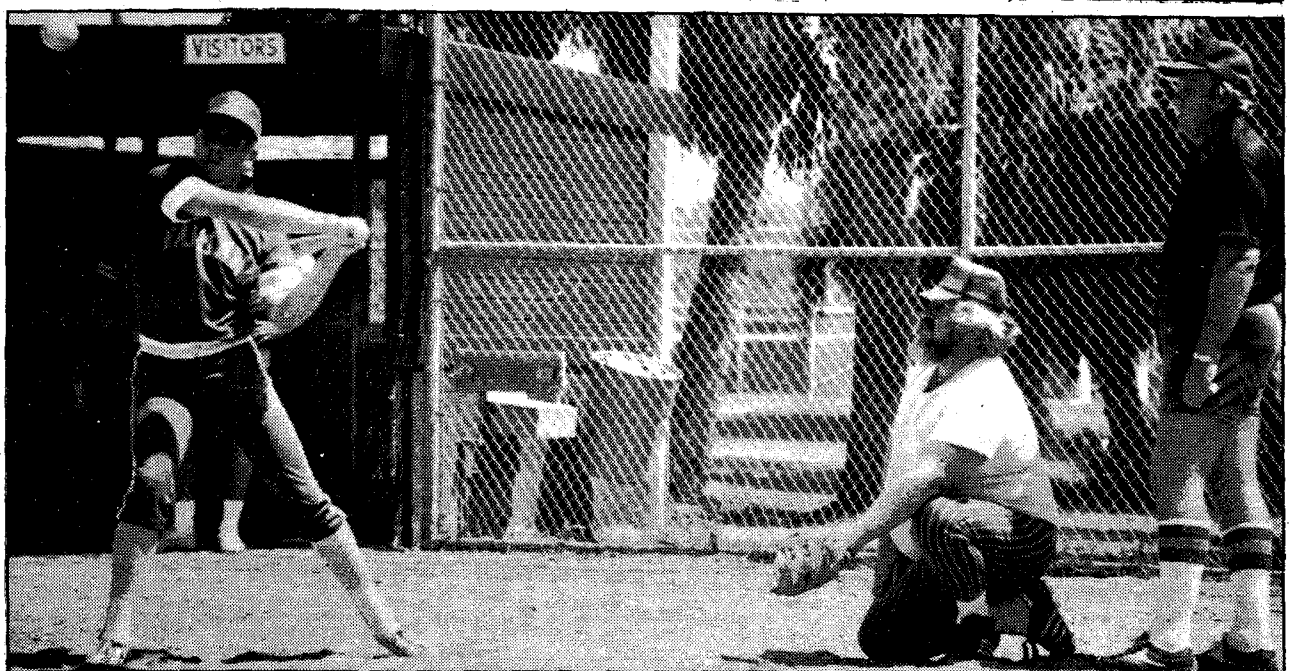

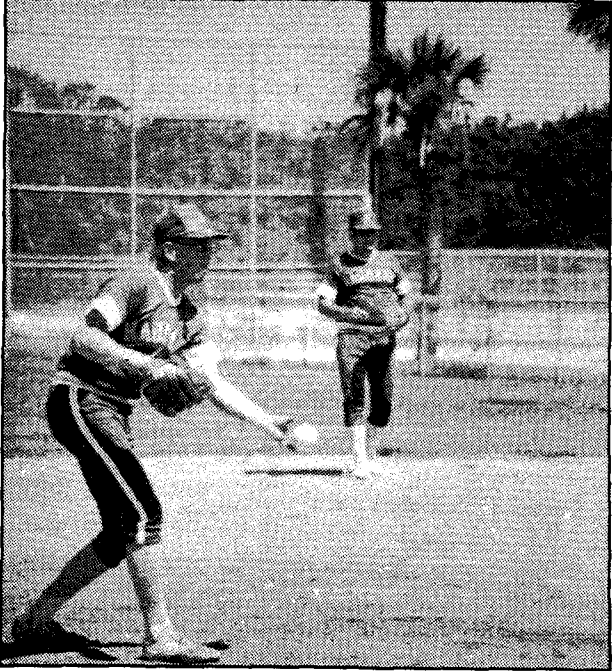

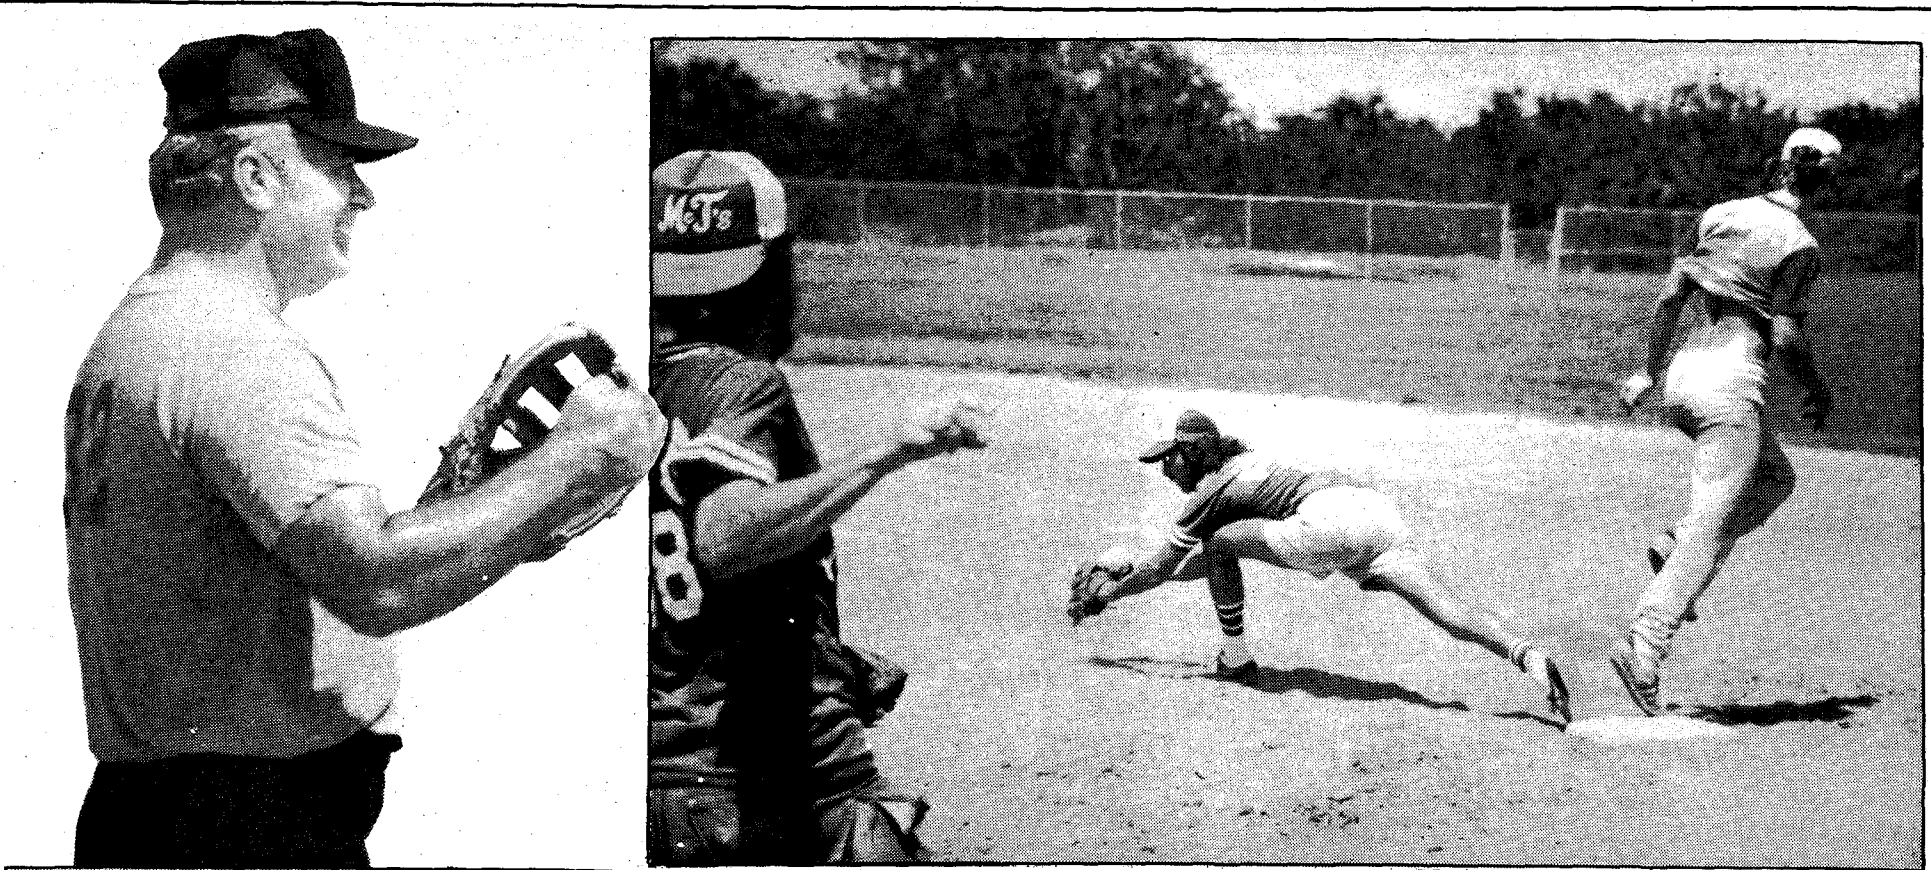

As it stands at the present, Periwinkle Players, Timbers, Baileys and one as yet unnamed sponsor (rumor has it that it may be Pro Com) are ready to field women's teams.

Let's hope the ladies will match the willingness of these local businesses, merchants and restaurants to establish a league this season.

Weekly and Anderson are encouraged by the strong interest that is apparent by the number of phone calls they receive daily from interested women. But they're not holding their breath in anticipation that a league will in fact materialize.

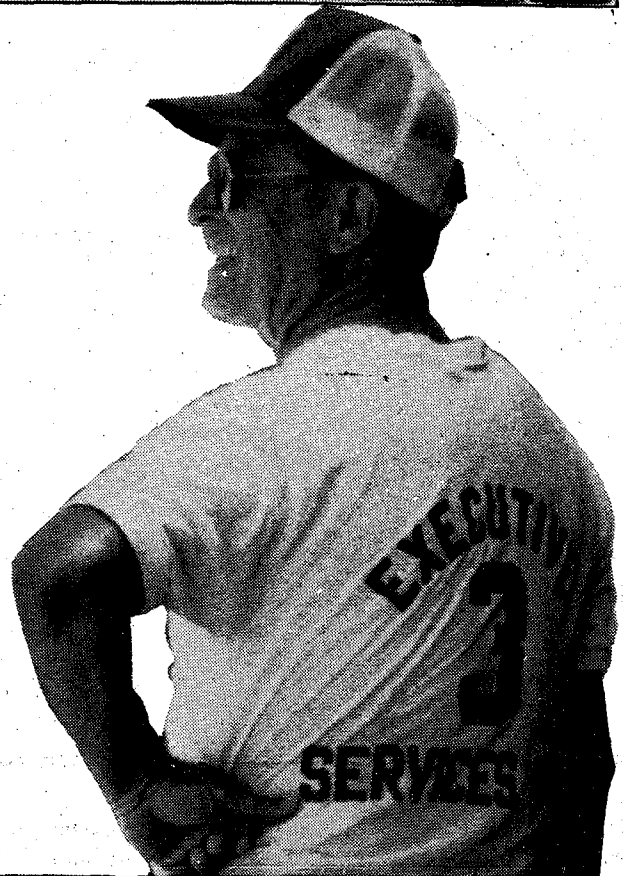

They've adopted a wait and see attitude much like myself (it seems I'm not the only one whose whip has withered), but they are ever hopeful, as we all know that 1982 will see the rebirth of softball for island gals.

Come on, ladies. Play ball!

Volleyball: The 7th inning stretch

After McT's loss against Mariner on Sunday, some of the team members got together with friends and spectators for a seventh inning stretch that included a fast paced game of volleyball. Organized volleyball sounds like a good idea for all age groups on the Islands. Maybe someone should take a crack at organizing it.

Islander sports quiz

Rose Marie Best, Don Tabor, Chip Keys and Jim Jankowski were all big winners in this week's Islander Sports Quiz. They correctly identified the New York Yankees as the team Don Larsen pitched for in the 1956 World Series when he pitched a perfect game (the only ever) against the Brooklyn Dodgers.

Congratulations! Here's this week's Islander Sports Quiz:

Remember the American Football League (AFL)? OK. Which AFL team was the first to win the Super Bowl, and against what NFL opponent? Just to make it a little harder, name the year and the city the contest was played in.

Good luck, sports fans!

Dunes summer workshops

The Dunes Golf and Tennis Club will hold two more Junior Summer Recreation Workshops this summer. The first session is already underway, but children can still register for the sessions from July 12-30 and from Aug. 9-20.

The programs for children ages 6-12 are held from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Directed by tennis pros Bill Fous and Greg Parker, the programs feature tennis and golf at the Dunes. Other activities include swimming, crafts, beach picnics and field trips to attractions such as Edison's home, the water slide, Jungle Golf and the Ding Darling Wildlife Refuge. All activities will be supervised by an experienced and competent staff.

Eggs are laid on dry ground in salt marsh regions and reach their larvae stage when the area is flooded by summer rains. This is where Mosquito Control steps in with an aerial spray program to kill the salt marsh mosquito larvae.

Stewart surveys salt marshes to determine where to spray. "This is probably the worst I've seen it. There's a lot of standing water," he said. A spot check at the midsection of the Island turned up more than 1,000 salt marsh larvae in one small saucepan.

Next, in an Army surplus UH-1B helicopter loaded down with 300 gallons of Abate chemical, pilot Keim criss-crosses the Island spraying the salt marshes and standing water. Each run takes less than five minutes, and the chemical is sprayed at the rate of about five gallons per acre.

From the air, Sanibel's open space of mangroves, sub-tropical jungle and water is ever-apparent. At the mid-section of the Island near Bowman's Beach, several manmade landmarks catch the airborne eye -- the helipad cuts a diagonal patch out of the green below; the Island Water Association's water tanks look like giant buttons; and electric cables slice through the Island.

The mosquitos that make it to adulthood -- and last weekend their numbers were felt by anyone who spent more than a few minutes outdoors -- are bombed by a DC-3 loaded with the chemical Batex, which leaves an area in quiet stillness.

Wayne Miller, head of Lee County's Mosquito Control District, said the spray program, which covers a quarter million acres, will continue throughout the rainy season.

Eagle Walk planned to increase public awareness

In honor of the 200th anniversary of the bald eagle's designation as our nation's symbol, an Eagle Walk is planned for the J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge on Wednesday, June 30.

Participants are encouraged to obtain pledges on a per-mile basis for the eight-mile walk. Top fundraisers throughout the state will receive prizes ranging from $350 to a 16-foot fiberglass canoe and a trophy. Local top money raisers will receive t-shirts featuring the walking eagle cartoon by Ralph Dunagin.

One of the goals of the Eagle Walk is to seek public awareness of the need to protect the threatened species and to raise funds for the research and education program directed by Florida's "Eagle Lady," Doris Mager.

Registration for the local Eagle Walk starts at 8 a.m. Wednesday, June 30, at the "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge building. The walk, five miles of which will be inside the refuge grounds and three miles along Sanibel-Captiva Road, will begin at 9 a.m.

For more information call Steve Phillips at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, 472-2329, or Donna Stanek at the refuge, 472-1100.

1982 designated as Bicentennial Year of the Bald Eagle

This year has been designated as the Bicentennial Year of the Bald Eagle, and almost as if on cue, recent developments in the Southeast indicate the endangered species may be launching a comeback.

For the first time in 32 years an eagle pair nested in Arkansas on the White River National Wildlife Refuge. Last year Georgia ended an 11-year period of no recorded nesting activity when a single nest was spotted. This year two additional active nests were found.

Other states with nesting eagles include

South Carolina with 25 active nests, Louisiana with 15 and North Carolina with one. Florida is the overall leader in the Southeast with nearly 350 nests.

Populations of the southern bald eagle plummeted during the 1950's and '60's as DDT and other pesticides caused egg shell thinning which led to nesting failure. Even prior to that, many eagles were thoughtlessly shot by those who mistakenly believed the great birds to be a threat to poultry and young livestock. Some states even placed a bounty on eagles and other raptors.

The bald eagle was first afforded national protection with passage of the Bald Eagle Act in 1940. That law was later reinforced with passage of the Endangered Species Act.

While the increasing nesting in the Southeast is a good sign, the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and the wildlife agencies of the various states are taking other actions aimed at helping the species recover. One of these is a process called "hacking." It involves the gradual reintroduction of an eaglet into the wild. The young bird is placed in a cage containing a simulated nest. Those feeding the bird are careful not to be seen so the birds do not associate man with food or security.

Efforts in this area are underway in Georgia, Tennessee and Arkansas.

Other activities to help the eagle's recovery include cooperative studies, rehabilitation of injured birds, various surveys and the like.

Biologists emphasize that the key to viable bald eagle populations is maintaining adequate suitable habitat.

Baby herons have big appetite; CROW needs shiners

These six-week-old yellow crowned night herons, young and fuzzy, are voracious eaters of shiners and other small bait fish. In fact, the baby birds that are being raised at Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife eat some 60 shiners daily, keeping CROW staffers busy tracking down supplies of the fish.

"We don't have any source of supply for them except from donations. The situation is critical. We need small bait fish now," said CROW staffer Heidi Heinrich.

So, fisherman and bait store operators, if you would like to see these babies well fed, and if you have bait fish to donate, call CROW at 472-3644.

Lee County Coalition for Peace establishes goals

Concerned about the escalation of the arms race and the threat of nuclear war, a group of Lee County citizens has formed the Lee County Coalition for Peace with the immediate aim of promoting the national campaign for a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze.

The first action at the coalition's organizational meeting May 20 was to unanimously support the nuclear freeze petitions and resolutions that are currently circulating throughout the nation. The petitions read:

"To improve national and international security, the United States and the Soviet Union should stop the nuclear arms race. Specifically, they should adopt a mutual freeze on the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and of missiles and nuclear aircraft designed primarily to deliver nuclear weapons. This is an essential, verifiable first step toward lessening the risk of nuclear war and reducing the nuclear arsenals."

The local coalition will encourage area individuals, groups and churches to sign the petitions and send them to President Ronald Reagan and to the Congress.

The group also plans to support present local programs of peace education already in effect and to initiate new activities in cooperation with other civic groups.

Sanibel residents who are founding members of the group include: Brigid Bock, Helene Edmonds, Mary Emerson, Minnie Fleischl, Fran Levy, Vera Moretti, Helen Moe and Hilda Rush.

The coalition invites all persons who are concerned about nuclear war to join future meetings. For more information call 549-1039.

Nuclear freeze petitions available

Petitions for a bilateral, verifiable nuclear freeze are available for signing on Sanibel at Lads and Lassies children's store, MacIntosh Book Store and the Unpressured Cooker.

Lions install 1982-83 officers

By D.E. Cooperrider

The Sanibel-Captiva Lions Club installed its 1982-83 officers at a banquet-dance on Saturday evening, June 26.

More than 100 Lions and their wives attended the banquet at the Sanibel Community Center. The caterer was Plan-A-Party from Cape Coral, and an excellent meal of roast beef was thoroughly enjoyed by those attending.

Outgoing President Fred Comlossy reviewed the achievements of the past year, in which the projects raising funds all were successful and resulted in the club being able to donate more than $23,000 in money or materials to local and statewide charities.

Comlossy said more than one-fourth of the money was used to assist Island organizations or needy people who either work or live on Sanibel.

Awards of plaques or statuettes were made to those Lions responsible for the success of the various Lions projects, and letters of thanks or acknowledgement were displayed from recipients of Lions charity.

Lion Francis Bailey received special recognition for his dedicated support of the Lions. Secretary Don Cooperrider was named the recipient of the R.D. Amon Lion of the Year Award for his efforts in helping the club attain its objectives. Cooperrider was also recognized for his 18 years of perfect attendance at either the Sanibel-Captiva or the Kissimmee Lions clubs.

Lion William Potts, a recent transfer from Bethlehem, Penn., was also recognized for 22 years of perfect attendance at Lions meetings in Pennsylvania and Florida.

The installation was conducted by past District Governor Ken Williams of North Fort Myers. The officers and directors, led by President John Wilcox, pledged support for the club for the coming year.

Outgoing Lions President Fred Comlossy pins the president's pin on new President John Wilcox, top.

Slade Cole attends Boys State

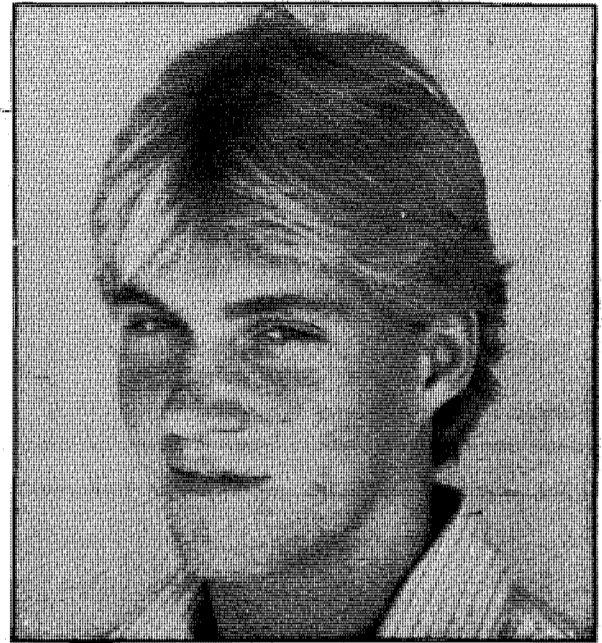

Sanibel student Slade Cole, 17, is attending the Florida Boys State convention in Tallahassee this week. Cole is one of six Cypress Lake High School students who were chosen for the American Legion sponsored convention.

Participants in Boys State take part in a "miniature state government" and campaign for offices ranging from governor to sheriff to tax collector. Cole said he hoped to run for governor.

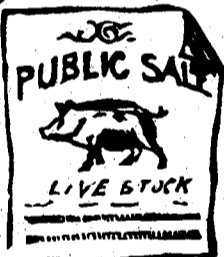

Candidates for Boys State are chosen by their school counselors on the basis of scholastic record and extracurricular activities. Two candidates from each state are selected for the Boys Nation in Washington, D.C.

Cole attended Sanibel Elementary School and is in the accelerated academic program at Cypress Lake. He was a member of the swimming team and Quill and Scroll and was business manager of the high school year book.

He is the son of Ted and Theresa Cole of Surf Sound Court.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This is true for many island businesses, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers, featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf. The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too. There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires. An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit. After you have had your beach party, please assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license. Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents. Minimum Legal Lengths Blue Fish 10 inches

Flounder	11 inches
Grouper	12 inches
Mackerel	1 1/2 feet
Mullet	1 1/2 feet
Pompano	10 inches
Red Fish	12 inches
Snook	18 inches
Trout	1 1/2 feet

Snook fishing is outlawed from June 30-Aug. 1.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous. Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to feed on you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets. For removal of a nuisance alligator, call the following representatives of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128; or George Weymouth, 472-5128.

First Federal Savings and Loan

 Sanibel-Captiva Road and Andy Rosse Lane
 Captiva
 472-6666
 Hours: Monday through Friday from 9 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. Closed weekends.

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress. This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.
