The family that cycles together...

There's no proof that the family that cycles together stays together, but it would seem plausible from the number of sights such as this on Sanibel's bike paths this summer. Read about the city's plans for the Tarpon Bay Road bike path on page 7A. Photo by David Meardon.

Chamber of Commerce opposes tourist tax

By Barbara Brundage

On the basis of a poll of Island resort operators, the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce will oppose the establishment of a 2 percent tourist tax in Lee County.

Walter Klie, executive director of the chamber, said Friday 44 of the 56 resort owners who responded to the poll were against adding the tax on bills for lodgings in hotels and motels.

Klie said 12 respondents favored the tax that is designed primarily to finance advertising and promotion of tourism in Lee County during the off season. He added 28 of the resort operators polled did not respond to the questionnaire.

The Lee County Commission last week voted 3-1 to place the issue on the ballot for a vote of the people at the primary run-off election Oct. 5.

Estimates indicate in the first two years the tax would generate $2.9 million that would be spent to entice more tourists to Lee County, especially in the slower summer months.

Committee organizes forums to acquaint Islanders with candidates

By Cindy Chalmers

Islanders have long been noted for their active involvement and high voter turnout in local elections.

This year a committee of concerned Islanders is determined to keep that reputation intact by keeping Sanibel and Captiva residents informed about elections at the local, county and state levels.

The Community Committee for Candidates Night (CCCN) has scheduled three evenings to acquaint the voters of Sanibel and Captiva with the issues and people at the forefront of this election year.

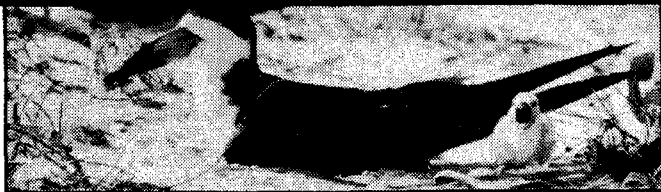

The first forum will be held on Thursday night, Aug. 26, to introduce 14 candidates for the Districts 2 and 4 seats on the Lee County Commission.

Henry Shelton, chairman of the CCCN, last week emphasized the importance of the county seats.

Even though the District 1 seat that serves the Islands is not open this year, Shelton said, the candidates who are elected to Districts 2 and 4 will vote on issues that affect Sanibel and Captiva. For instance, he

Battling the menacing mosquito

There was nothing unusual about the morning of July 27. A rising sun began to dry the morning dew and cast long shadows at the beginning of a hot summer day.

Birds, chirping before sunrise, flew about in search of food. Dragonflies, especially abundant this time of year, plucked mosquitos from the air, while honey bees from the more than 500 commercial and private hives on Sanibel efficiently worked the palm blossoms.

Then the planes flew over, unloading a fog of Baytex, a mosquito adulticide -- and it was quiet.

The spraying took care of the mosquitos quite efficiently. Dead also, however, were bees, dragonflies and a host of other insects in the food chain.

The use of Baytex by the Lee County Mosquito Control District has caused a stir among many Islanders concerned with both the immediate and long-term effects of chemical warfare on the environment.

There is, however, a strong contingent supporting mosquito control. During the last onslaught of mosquitos in early July, one harried observer noted that, "There's nothing more relieving than the calm after they fog the Islands."

Long time Island resident Dr. Calvin Brown acknowledges that though they are nothing like they were in the late 1950's, mosquitos can be "a damnable nuisance."

But overall, Brown sees the spray program as "self-defeating in two ways: sooner or later you develop immune mosquitos if you keep spraying. In the long run you are also killing off things like dragonflies, which eat mass quantities of mosquitos."

In addition, spraying is detrimental to Florida agriculture, which is dependent on bees for pollination, Brown says.

Brown was watching the bees work on two queen palms when the planes flew over the morning of July 27. Soon, they were dead on the ground. When he strolled out to the beach along West Gulf Drive, thousands of dead bees lined the shoreline. "How many there would be in the inward regions God only knows," he says.

Baytex, or fenthion, has been used by the Mosquito Control District since the mid-60's. Applied at a rate of .029 pounds per acre, its use is approved by the Environmental Protection Agency. Its wide ranging effects and the way in which it is used, however, have created a stir among environmentalists.

Fenthion, according to Island naturalist George Campbell in his book, The Nature of Things on Sanibel, is used in some parts of Africa to control large populations of Quela birds. "It is employed in Africa to kill birds, and yet it is used on our Sanctuary Island, where birds are among our most important resources," Campbell writes.

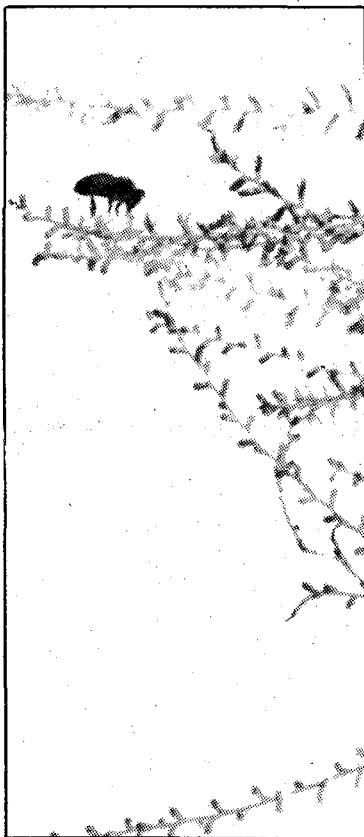

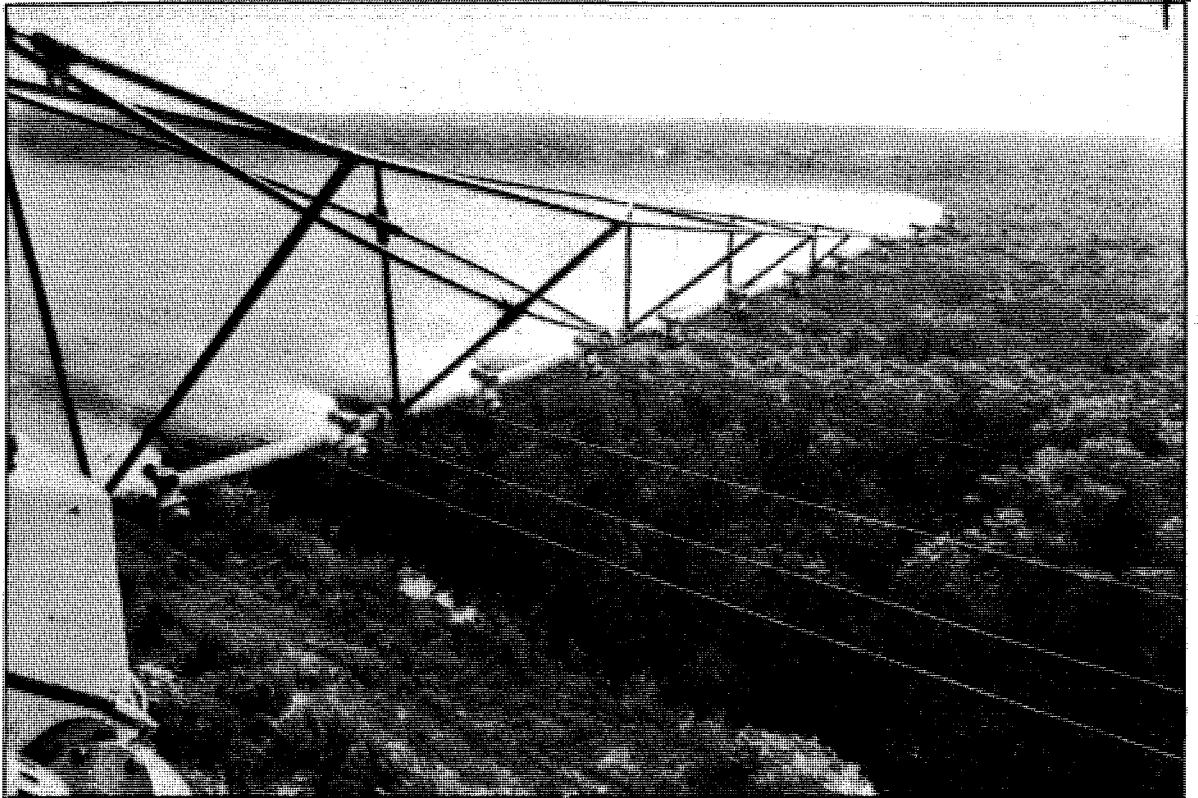

The Baytex-fenthion label, Campbell claims, issues a variety of precautions warning that it should not be applied near water, as it is toxic to fish and wildlife, shrimp and crab larvae, as well as to bees and in some cases birds that feed on insects affected by the spray.

The label also cautions the user not to apply the chemical when weather conditions favor drift from areas to be treated, and it warns that persons should avoid breathing the mist as it may be fatal if inhaled or absorbed through the skin.

"All of the above label restrictions have been violated year after year on Sanibel Island," Campbell writes.

Wayne Miller, director of Mosquito Control, challenges Campbell's assertion and maintains that application of Baytex on Sanibel is well within EPA standards. "EPA has advised us that what we're doing is right and proper. We could triple the dosage and still be quite legal" Miller says.

But Brown says, "EPA ruled -- and this is just incredible -- that those (the label restrictions concerning spraying above water) did not apply because he was not spraying the water, he was fogging the mosquitos flying above the water."

Story and photos by David Meardon

Henry Nachtsheim, who keeps about 50 bee hives in various locations on Sanibel, says he is not totally against spraying -- it's the timing and frequency that bothers him.

"I've seen times when the mosquitos weren't bad and they (Mosquito Control) would still fly," he says. "I think they should use a little discretion, and they should fly earlier in the morning, before the bees come out."

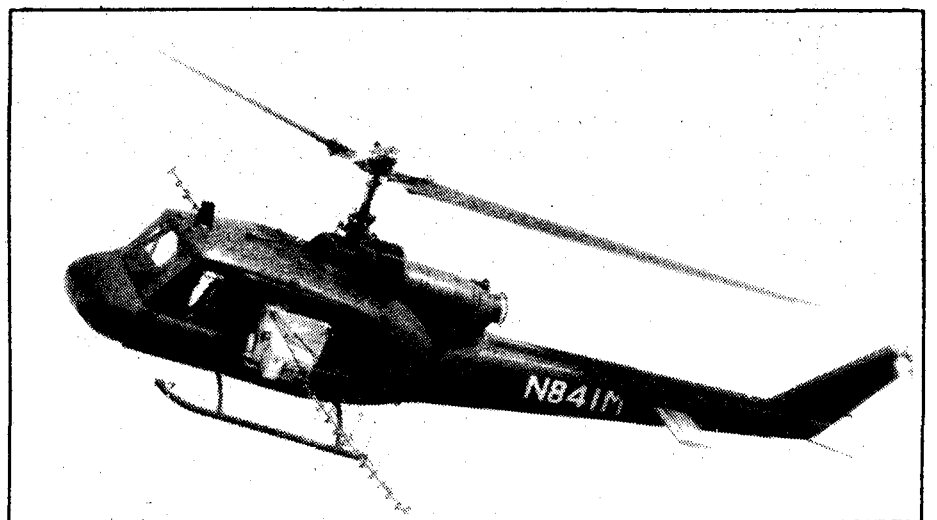

Miller says planes leave the Buckingham base at dawn, reaching the Islands a short time later. He points to a study that suggests beekeepers cover their hives to protect their bees from spraying.

But there just isn't enough time to do this, Nachtsheim says.

"It's (the spraying) got a bad effect on the bees," says Harold Curtis of Harold Curtis Honey Company in LaBelle, which keeps up to 500 hives on Sanibel. It is difficult to estimate Curtis' losses from spraying, but that it is just part of the business of beekeeping, he says.

Nachtsheim favors mosquito control by natural process -- through insect-eating dragonflies and other predators that feed on mosquitos.

Mosquito Control alters this natural process, killing not only mosquitos but also their natural enemies, Nachtsheim says, adding, "We're getting to a Catch-22 situation."

Caribe agrees to stop 'daily use rights' sales

By Barbara Brundage

Caribe Beach Resort will no longer offer "daily use rights" to buyers of its vacation club memberships.

Creekwood Investments, Inc., owners and operators of the gulf front time share resort, has agreed to cease and desist from including in future sales contracts "daily use rights" that permit members to use the resort's recreational facilities and other amenities when not in occupancy.

The practice was ruled a violation of the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan by City Attorney Neal Bowen and the resort was cited last April for the CLUP violation.

As part of a settlement agreement reached last Thursday, the city will take no action prior to Aug. 5, 2012, against the 800 current owners of week-or-more club memberships who were promised the use of the facility 365 days a year.

To control the daily use of the facility by these members when they are not in residency in one of the resort's 27 units, Creekwood Investments has set up a reservations system based on the availability of parking.

Currently there are 57 parking spaces. By April 30, 1983, Caribe has agreed to reduce the number to 45 to conform with CLUP requirements for the resort.

Five spaces were to be removed by Aug. 10 and the area revegetated under the supervision of the city's Vegetation Committee.

When the Caribe Beach Resort was cited last April for selling daily use rights and ordered to cease and desist the practice, Creekwood maintained the practice was a permitted or accessory use of the resort. Assuming it was neither, the city of Sanibel was estopped from prohibiting it.

Morton Rabkin, Caribe's president, said stopping the sales would put the time share resort out of business and hinted that his last resort was to go to court.

To avoid litigation or adversary proceedings before the city's Code Enforcement Board, Bowen and Attorney Donald Hemke, representing Creekwood, began negotiations seeking an amicable solution.

Last Thursday a settlement agreement resulting from the three months of effort was presented to the Code Enforcement Board for approval.

On July 15 at Caribe's first appearance before the board in response to the citation for CLUP violations, Hemke agreed that Caribe would cease and desist from the sale of the daily use rights for 10 days while negotiations with the city for a settlement of the dispute were concluded.

"We are very, very close to an agreement that will protect our mutual interests," Hemke told the board.

On Aug. 5 the finalized settlement was

CEPD accepts proposed $743,000 budget

By Barbara Brundage

The Captiva Erosion Prevention District at its regular August meeting last week accepted a proposed tentative $743,300 general administrative and maintenance budget for 1982-83 and set Sept. 13 as the date for the first public hearing on the budget.

After public input the budget will be adopted at a second hearing on Sept. 20.

A tax of 5.7 mills will be required to fund the budget that includes an appropriation of $550,000 to extend the 150-foot groin at Blind Pass bridge another 200 feet to the north.

Project Engineer Dick Stevens explained that the construction of the terminal groin will be undertaken only in conjunction with the proposed beach restoration project.

The budget also includes $178,690 for residual expenses to implement the project to renourish the eroding beachfront by adding sand dredged either from Red Fish Pass or one of two other alongshore borrow sites.

These start-up expenses include legal and permitting fees, cost of establishing a Municipal Services Taxing Unit (MSTU) as a means of financing the $9 million project and management and engineering services.

The budget sets aside $30,000 to fund an experimental alternative to dredging, the use of sandbags as perpendicular stabilizers along the beach.

This amount will be adequate to cover the estimated $18,000 cost of the sandbags as well as engineering and permitting fees, CEPD Chairman Richard Butze said.

Though the actual funds required for proposed CEPD operations in the fiscal year 1982-83 total $846,708, an anticipated $125,059 surplus from the current year reduced the bottom line figure to $743,300.

By comparison the 1981-82 budget totalled $253,335. But a surplus carried over from the year before reduced the budget request to $59,819, which was financed by a .482 mill tax.

Next year an additional 1.33 mill tax will be levied to fund the proposed $17,251 budget for the CEPD's Interest and Sinking Fund that pays off a previous CEPD bond, Butze told the three other commissioners present at last week's meeting.

Commissioner Lloyd Wright's motion to accept the tentative budgets passed by a 4-0 vote.

Commissioner Ed Olling was not present. In response to a question from Captivan Louise Tuttle, Stevens said that the opening of Blind Pass to the gulf allows the inlet to act as a barrier to the movement of sand from Captiva south to Sanibel.

Butze said that the cost of constructing the groin, designed to protect a renourished beach, is not included in the MSTU and the expense will be borne by the whole Island including South Seas Plantation property owners.

The commissioners passed a resolution asking the Florida Legislature for an additional grant of $893,264 from the Erosion Control Trust Fund in the 1983-84 fiscal year to help finance the Island's beach nourishment project.

The state last April approved the project

Howe urges governor, cabinet to set erosion control line

A copy of the following letter to Gov. Bob Graham from Paul Howe was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Governor Graham

It was most puzzling to read in our local press about DNR's public hearing on July 22 at Captiva Island. The reported testimony seemed to impugn the Cabinet's 1980 policy for establishment of an Erosion Control Line for a proposed new publicly-financed beach renourishment project.

Attention is reinvented to your copy of my July 4, 1980, letter addressed to DNR's hearing officer Henry Dean, Esq. It dealt with a similar privately-funded project on Captiva sponsored at the time by the South Seas Plantation Corporation.

Briefly, that letter discussed the Sidenor v. Pensacola court decision cited by Law Professor Frank Maloney in his 1973 authoritative report to DNR on coastal boundary demarcation.

That decision distinguished between artificial accretions created by off-shore and on-shore sources. It was ruled that the former type always produces publicly-owned sovereignty land which can only be alienated in accordance with Florida's Constitution and Statutes.

News stories of the July 22 Captiva hearing related that DNR's Barbara Matthews expects to report her findings to you "after a 30-day public input period." No mention was made of any testimony being given on the applicability of the above-mentioned court decision and the Cabinet's 1980 policy derived therefrom.

Unless there has been a lawful change in that Cabinet policy, I expect that DNR shall stand firmly with it in this current project. That action would, therefore, set the Erosion Control Line at the mean high water line -- as it existed prior to the start of beach renourishment operations.

Your prompt advice on this matter shall be greatly appreciated. Obviously, a reversal of the 1980 policy could have a devastating effect on Florida's splendid efforts to preserve its dwindling sovereignty lands for use of the entire citizenry -- and particularly for the tourists.

Sincerely,
Paul Howe

Captivan congratulates BOTI action to secure depositors

To the Editor
The Islander

In recent months financial tabloids in this country have reported the alarming news that several of the nation's largest banking institutions (i.e., Continental Illinois, Chase Manhattan, Penn Square Bank, to name a few) have suffered heavy financial losses on loans they had originated in good faith.

Timely action by those bank officials could have lessened the potential jeopardy or the questionable position of security for those lenders and their valued depositors.

This type of news has not only shocked the financial community, but has also caused embarrassment to the banks themselves, their communities and their longtime customers.

As an Island merchant, I think a note of congratulations is in order for Bank of the Islands now as we see these events happening around the country.

Bank of the Islands continues to maintain a professional banking service for its customers that has never failed to provide complete security for its depositors in accordance with standard banking practices. It is refreshing to see on a daily basis the integrity of principle and philosophy exhibited by all the personnel of Bank of the Islands.

The Islands are indeed fortunate to have a neighbor that is so committed to providing strong, decisive and secure banking services to its customers.

Council okays boat ramp east of Causeway Road

Sanibel boat owners who have fought for a launching ramp of their own on the Island have won the battle that began more than a year ago.

Last week the City Council authorized City Manager Bernie Murphy to proceed with plans to construct a simple boat ramp on city-owned property on the east side of Causeway Road at the bay.

The council is counting on the project being financed by a grant from the state boat registration trust fund that is administered by the Lee County Marine Advisory Committee.

Fritz Stoppelbein, who represents Sanibel on the committee, assured the council that the money is available.

"All you have to do is apply for it and I'll do my best to help the city get the money," Stoppelbein said.

The council was influenced to abandon the east Causeway Road location for the ramp, recommended earlier by City Manager Bernie Murphy, by strong opposition from the residents of neighboring Mariner Point and Tennisplace condominiums.

Last Tuesday Rita Kasdan, representing owners of both condominiums, made a strong pitch to the council to put the ramp in the mid Causeway islands.

She said the boat ramp on the east side of Causeway Road would be the first thing visible for traffic coming toward Sanibel and would be an eyesore.

Murphy, at the direction of the council after its July 20 meeting, investigated the possibility of locating the ramp on county-owned land on one of the two Causeway spoil islands.

Last Tuesday he reported that building the ramps on either island would be "fraught with problems." Preliminary discussions with county officials were "not very favorable," he said.

Water depths on both sides of either island are only minimal, and some dredging would be required on the north side. Placing the ramp on the closest island where the restrooms are located would create a mixed use by pedestrians, swimmers, picnickers and boaters.

Altogether Murphy concluded that putting the ramp on the Causeway islands would not be satisfactory and would be an "unwise move."

"Our recommendation remains for the east side of the Causeway property," he said.

Murphy, who admitted the project was "floundering" at this point, requested direction from the council as to how to proceed.

David Owen, who spearheaded move for an on-Island boat launch ramp, reminded the council that 468 Sanibel boat owners signed a petition indicating a launching site was needed. Both privately owned marinas on the Island are in bad shape and hazardous, he said.

"We have shown the patience of a fisherman, waiting for a year and a half for action from the council," Owen said.

Councilman Duane White said he had a hard time reconciling a boat ramp on the causeway property with the objective of low intensity, passive use.

"A ramp and parking are only the beginning," he added. "I'm looking down the road and I can see the next things asked for will be restrooms and a place to clean fish and wash down boats."

The ramp site and parking would utilize only about 25 or 30 percent of the seven acres, Assistant City Manager Gary Price estimated.

"One thing I can assure you that the site will be screened from the road by vegetation," Murphy said.

Councilman Fred Valtin brought the discussion to a halt, complaining that he was "a little tired of Mariner Point's objections to every proposed use of that property." Mariner Point complex is already buffered by casuarinas, Valtin pointed out.

"As long as we're assured of buffering I look at the benefits of the project to the community as a whole," he said.

His motion to authorize the city manager to proceed with the project and seek funding from the boat registration fees passed by a 4-0 vote. Mayor Porter Goss was not present.

City employees chosen to reside rent-free in Lighthouse cottages

Two cottages at the Sanibel Lighthouse listed in the National Register of Historic Sites will be home to two lucky couples after Oct. 1.

Rick and Phyllis Gubbiotti, both employees of the city, and Public Works Department employee David Karczewski and his wife, Nanci, were chosen from among nine applicants to live rent free in the cottages as caretakers.

Phyllis, a secretary in the Planning Department, said Friday she was "still pinching herself." Rick, who is the City Hall janitor, and Phyllis have lived in a rented apartment on Periwinkle Way for the past three years.

Dave and Nanci were married in May and live in Fort Myers.

The fact that neither couple owns their own home was a big plus in the decision as to who would live in the cottages, City Manager Bernie Murphy said. Making the selection from among the nine families, "all fine people," was an "agonizing experience," he added.

Only city employees were eligible to vie for the privilege of living in the Old Florida style cottages that are currently being renovated.

Under a 10-year license with the U.S. Coast Guard to manage the Lighthouse property, the city has agreed to provide caretakers to guard against vandalism.

Leases for both cottages are being drawn up and will be presented to the city council for first reading on Sept. 7.

Dedications of rights-of-way accepted as conditions for development permits

Five dedications of rights-of-way along Periwinkle Way were accepted by the City Council last week. The dedications were conditions of Planning Commission approval for several development permits.

Under provisions of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan council approval is required when the Planning Commission finds it necessary for a developer to dedicate land or contribute funds toward public facilities in order to serve the needs generated by the development and comply with CLUP standards.

James Cipriani offered to dedicate an additional 25 feet of right-of-way along his property line on the north side of Periwinkle Way.

His plans to subdivide the 2.2-acre tract just west of Vinca Way and south of Sanibel Pines subdivision into four half-acre lots were approved by the Planning Commission July 26.

William and Gail Boyd, who plan to expand their Olde House Shoppe by adding 5,700 square feet of retail space, dedicated an additional 10 feet of right-of-way along the property line fronting Tarpon Bay Road. The land will be useful in the city's plan to improve the Periwinkle intersection.

The dedication was deemed appropriate by Planning Commission when the development permit was approved because a larger complex would have aggravated the current traffic situation at one of Sanibel's major business intersections.

Robert Buntrock dedicated a 17-foot addition to the Periwinkle right-of-way in front of property just east of Palm Ridge Road, where he plans to construct a 18,500-square-foot office complex as headquarters for Executive Services, Inc.

The addition will widen the Periwinkle right-of-way at that point to 83 feet.

John Bullard dedicated a 25-foot-addition to the Periwinkle right-of-way in front of the recently completed Sanibel Taxicab Co.'s dispatchers office and garage.

The council accepted Eckerd Drug's offer to dedicate a 24-foot addition to the Periwinkle right-of-way at the southern end of the property on Palm Ridge Road where a 10,700-square-foot drug store will be constructed. The development permit for the store has already been approved.

The council also found the sum of $10,000 equitable as Eckerd's share of the cost of realigning the Palm Ridge Road-Periwinkle Way intersection.

Assistant City Manager Gary Price said that amount is half the original $20,000 estimated cost to improve the busy intersection that is a traffic bottleneck during the winter season.

Some councilmen, however, were not pleased with Price's plan to change the divided intersection to a standard T intersection.

Projected cost of the proposed alignment is $22,000, Price said. "But this could go up or down," he added.

Without the sweeping right turn lane, through traffic to Captiva will tend to proceed west on Periwinkle and use Tarpon Bay Road to San-Cap, Road, Councilman Duane White said.

"The affect on the proposed new alignment at the Tarpon Bay intersection couldn't be worse," he said. "This will defeat our objective in encouraging development of Palm Ridge Road as the Island's primary commercial area."

But White agreed with the three other councilmen that the $10,000 contribution is "more than adequate."

Volunteers recruited for proposed Art Advisory Committee

Want to be an art critic?

Then volunteer to serve on a proposed Art Advisory Committee to screen works of art that might be donated to the city in the future.

The City Council last week set Sept. 21 as the deadline for nominations for the committee.

Councilman Fred Valtin proposed the establishment of such a group to assist the council in evaluating the merits of paintings, sculpture and other objects d'art that might be donated to the city for display in public buildings.

Valtin has suggested that the ideal membership would include a mix of "experts" on traditional, contemporary and modern art and should not be confined to gallery owners.

Any resident who feels qualified to serve as an art advisor should contact any City Council member or call City Hall before Sept. 21.

Seven volunteers have already indicated their willingness to serve.

Three-part policy adopted for opening, closing weirs

A formal policy outlining when Sanibel's two weirs should be opened during a storm received City Council approval last Tuesday.

The city manager will have the sole authority to control the operation of the weirs, which can be opened during or subsequent to a period of heavy rainfall only when three criteria are met.

The bottom gates of the weirs can be opened when (1) freshwater is running over the top of the weir structure, (2) inland flooding is occurring and (3) there is no chance of interior salt water intrusion.

The gates can be left open as long as the freshwater level remains higher than the saltwater level.

During periods the gates are open routine examinations should be made to guard against any possible salt water flooding.

The weirs should be secured by locks and chains at all times to prevent any unauthorized adjustments.

The policy was drafted by City Manager Bernie Murphy with the cooperation of Malcolm Beattie, vice chairman of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, and was approved by the foundation's Board of Directors.

It was based on guidelines drawn up during a council discussion of criticism that stemmed from Murphy's decision to open the Tarpon Bay weir when 10-inch torrential rains were forecast during the approach of Hurricane Alberto in early June.

The rains never came, and the weir was closed with no damage to the Island's freshwater cover.

Island naturalist George Campbell was the strongest critic of the city's action. He said last week the new policy is "a step in the right direction" but should be more specific. Campbell said he would like to see "30 inches above Mean Sea Level" in the guidelines rather than the too general "overtopping" phrase that dictates opening the weirs.

Campbell said the guidelines should also call for someone to actually monitor tides and surge tides during a storm crisis and report to the city manager before a decision on the weirs is made.

Improvements to the old fashioned wooden Tarpon Bay weir neared completion last week, Assistant Manager Gary Price told the council.

Wooden planks that required two men to remove them were replaced by 3/4-inch finished steel gates that can be easily operated by one person, Price said.

The redesigned weir that is similar to the one on Beach Road, constructed at a cost of $2,000, should be viable for "10 to 20 years, maybe longer," Price said.

"If this policy had been in effect during Alberto the weir would never have been opened," Murphy said.

Councilman Francis Bailey emphasized that inland flooding must be widespread to trigger opening the weirs. "Three inches of water in one man's yard is not a flood," he pointed out. Freshwater is a vital commodity to this Island and we must build up our supply, he added.

That freshwater is overlapping the weir is a critical aspect of the policy, Councilman Fred Valtin said.

Councilman Duane White emphasized that all three criteria must be met before the weirs can be opened.

Despite Valtin's objections, council names park for Daisy Mayer

Another small bit of Sanibel's history is preserved with the naming of Bayside Park in honor of the late Daisy Mayer.

The City Council last Tuesday approved a recommendation from the Historical Preservation Committee to place a plaque at the small park at the end of Bay Drive recognizing Mayer, who donated the land.

A resident of the Island from 1919 to 1969, Mayer was described last week by Councilmen Duane White and Francis Bailey as "Mrs. Sanibel."

"She was recognized on the Island for her philanthropic and charitable work," White said. "She provided help for the needy, especially clothing, in the days when the Island was not as affluent."

Bailey said he knew her from when he was "a little boy."

"She was an exceptional person, into everything on the Island," he added.

Councilman Fred Valtin, however, remained consistent in opposition of naming public buildings or property after persons - living or dead. Valtin voted against White's motion to name the park in honor of Mayer and place a marker on the site.

"This is not intended to be disrespectful to the person nor to the committee's suggestion," Valtin explained.

Earlier he urged his colleagues to adopt an inflexible policy from now on not to name public places after persons.

This will remove the possibility of the council's having to face "an emotional crisis down the road by having to make judgments on who's deserving," Valtin said.

"All over the country public places are named after people," Islander Alice Kylo pointed out. "In fact half the streets in Sanibel are already named for people. Do you plan to unname them?"

But three members of the council (Mayor Porter Goss was absent) rejected Valtin's proposal and said they preferred to reserve the right to honor "people who merit remembrance and memorializing" in this manner.

The council, however, deferred a decision on naming the newly opened gulf front park at the site of the former steamboat Algiers.

Valtin said Sanibel City Park, the name supported by White, was "too generic." Other proposals included "Steamboat Park," "Gulfside Park" and "Paddlewheel Park."

The council liked Acting Mayor Mike Klein's suggestion that residents submit names for the park to Historical Preservation Committee Chairman Charlotte White.

She agreed to screen the nominations and submit at least two names for council consideration in a month or two.

Bid awarded, work to begin on realigning, repairing, widening Tarpon Bay, Periwinkle intersection

With a low bid of $220,748, Couch Construction was awarded the contract to realign and repair the Tarpon Bay Road-Periwinkle Way intersection and widen Tarpon Bay Road from Island Inn Road to San-Cap Road.

For 30 days during the construction, which is expected to be completed in 120 days, Tarpon Bay Road between Periwinkle and San-Cap Road will be closed to all but local traffic.

The minor inconvenience during the period the embankment is being constructed will result in a $14,384 savings to the city, Assistant City Manager Gary Price explained at last week's City Council meeting.

The project will include the extension of the bike path on the east side of Tarpon Bay Road from the south end of Bailey's parking lot to San-Cap Road.

Last month the City Council agreed that reserving a portion of the road for the use of bicyclers would be safer than a separate path running too close to the pavement.

The councilmen feared that such a path would be a carbon copy of the Periwinkle path. Motorists frequently use that path to pass long lines of stalled traffic and endanger bicycle riders.

But last week Price said the Tarpon Bay Road path will be entirely different from the one on Periwinkle.

"In the first place this path will be eight feet wide compared to four to six feet on Periwinkle," he said. "A concrete curb can be installed separating the path from the road pavement that will deter cars from crossing over."

Rumble strips can also be utilized to warn cyclists of driveway crossings.

Price said further research had convinced him that a separate path is less dangerous for both motorists and cyclists.

The city's consulting engineer, Rocky Van Guilder, agreed with Price that of the two alternatives a separate path is the safest.

The majority of the council bowed to Price's judgment. But Councilman Duane White, still believing a bike path at that location would be a disaster, warned Price, "If you must have it, keep it as far away from the road as possible."

Referendum scheduled for Sept. 7 to decide Bay Drive vacation issue

It's official. Sanibel voters next month will decide whether a strip of Bay Drive and a wooden bridge will remain in public ownership or be vacated to private ownership.

The question of whether to repeal an ordinance passed last March by the City Council turning over to Larry and Sheila Snell the narrow right-of-way that is the only access to their bay front property will appear on the ballot at the state primary election Sept. 7.

Voters will be asked to vote for or against the ordinance's repeal.

Last Tuesday the council took final action on an ordinance setting the date of the referendum that was initiated by a petition signed by 633 registered Island voters.

Before the council vote Assistant City Manager Gary Price presented a survey made by Johnson Engineering, Inc., that confirmed the city's position that the land between the road and the mean high tide line is private property.

Land exchange approved to facilitate Wooster Lane access to new City Hall

The City Council last week approved the conveyance of .22 acres of city-owned right-of-way at the Wooster Lane cul-de-sac to Willie Compton in exchange for .05-acre triangle of Compton's property. The small parcel will provide access to the new City Hall site from Wooster Lane.

Both deeds will be executed simultaneously, the council was assured.

In addition, a specific amendment zoning Compton's acquisition as primary office and retail commercial district received unanimous council approval.

The city from the beginning has denied a Petitioner's Committee charge that vacation of the road deprived the public access to the bay beach.

The survey shows there is a seven-foot strip of land between the city-owned right-of-way and the mean high tide line that is private property, Price said.

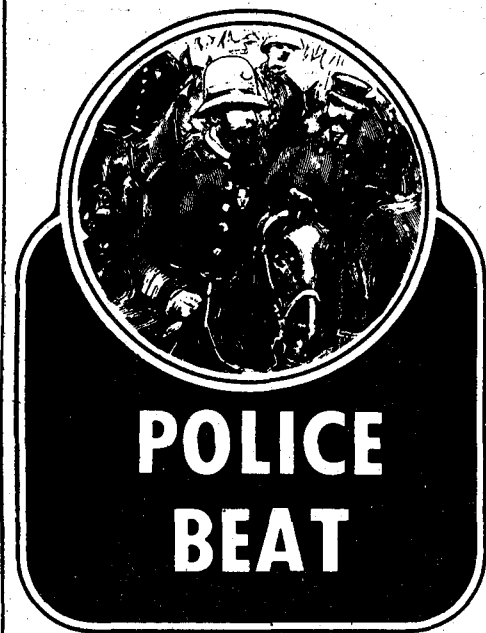

"There is no way anyone could get access to the beach without trespassing," he said.

Council sets Aug. 31 - Sept. 14 for qualifying candidates

Candidates for two City Council seats now held by Porter Goss and Duane White may file nominating petitions at City Hall beginning at noon on Tuesday, Aug. 31.

The period for qualifying to run for office in the Nov. 2 general election ends at noon on Sept. 14.

An ordinance setting Nov. 16 as the date for a run-off election that will be required if no candidate for either seat receives a majority of the votes cast will be adopted at the Aug. 17 meeting of the City Council.

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

It's finally back -- that crazy thing that we call "Snook Season!" This week, for you who are here to fish I am offering a brief summary of what you need in the way of bait and tackle plus where you need to look if snook is on your list.

As of Aug. 1 the two-month ban on taking snook was lifted. Fishermen were poised at midnight to try their luck for these fish.

Remember, the law says snook must be 18 inches or longer to take. Also, there is still a limit of only two fish per person, per day. If you go out in the morning and catch two, then come back and do it again, you are asking for a $500 fine.

Incidentally, on the second day of the season a customer in one of my fishing groups hooked a rare tarpon snook, which hardly ever gets to be more than 18 inches long. It looks like a snook, all right, but it has more of a humped back and it has a tarpon-like, upswept jaw that gives the fish a strange look if you are used to seeing the more common varieties.

We got our pictures and turned the fish free. It only measured 16 inches or so, but for these fish, that's an adult. The funny part is we caught one by accident about a month ago, and the two are the only tarpon snook I've ever caught in all my years of fishing.

Anyway, as for equipment, you will need a rod and reel combination that casts 70 feet or so. That eliminates the fence post models with 4-0 reels and rods that are four feet long and suitable for chin ups.

You want a flexible rod from six to seven feet. The reel should be able to handle 200 yards of line. You won't usually need that much line, but with that capacity, if you get a long run while standing on the beach you'll be glad you have the extra line.

Use from 20- to 40-pound leader. I like clear mono. Don't use wire, no matter how much you have in your tackle box. Select 4-0 or 5-0 hooks. It doesn't matter who makes them just as long as they are sharp.

For sinkers, it depends upon where you are fishing. If you are working the beaches with very little tidal flow, then go with the lightest you can throw. This might be a quarter ounce. If you are fishing around the bridges or passes, you will probably have to move with the flow and go from light to heavy as the tide increases. Buy sinkers from a quarter ounce to one ounce, to be sure. Do yourself a favor and buy some new leader and fishing line if yours has been on the rod for more than three months.

As for bait, you who like to sling lures have a tough job that is rewarded by persistence, but any fish you catch will be justly deserved. That's the most difficult way to fish snook, and if you can fool one into hitting, you have my upmost admiration.

If I had to choose, I would stick with Mirrorlurs. There are a variety of these that look like little finger mullet and shiners. You are going to earn every fish you catch.

For live bait fishermen, buy or net with a cast net either pinfish or shiners. These fish are often found in the shallow grass beds right along the Sanibel Causeway. Not only snook, but red fish, trout and grouper like them, too, so you have a chance of several fish.

Get that sharp hook from the bottom to top of the two lips of the pinfish. With the shinner, I like to place the hook in the gill plate just under and behind the eyes. Some like to hook through the eyes of these fish, but their soft body often tears and you end up fishing with an empty hook.

Fish for them in any of the surf areas, but concentrate on the westerly beaches of Bowman's Beach, along Captiva Island and around the free public fishing pier at the Lighthouse end of Sanibel.

Good luck, and if you can get two snook in a day you are an excellent fisherman. If you work at it, you should be able to see some fishing action.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

Recently we had several days of fairly strong westerly winds coupled with a low weather front, and the result was unusually high waves on the gulf beaches.

No long after the storm front passed we took a shelling trip to one of the northern islands, and some of my passengers were curious as to why so many of the shells had lost their original color even though they weren't worn with age or broken.

You might have noticed this, too. The shells turn a kind of tan, sometimes just a shade lighter than white, and other times they turn nearly grey.

It's on the inside and outside of the shells, and there are sections of beaches where every shell - whelk, tulip or common clam shell - has the same color.

I was also curious about this and asked a couple of folks on the Island about it. We all have seen this happen, and nearly every time it is after a period of high waves and winds.

It appears that at one time, say 10 years ago, there might have been a huge storm that deposited sand way up on the beach. The waves and currents moved the sand and covered the shells as the shore line moved more seaward.

If this did indeed happen, as expected, the shells would be preserved in sand. Some would naturally lose their color, but others would have some traces of their usual designs.

It appears that in these periods of rough weather years ago, shells also were mixed in with sea grasses. When the whole ball of shells, sand and grass was buried in the beaches, that strange change in color began.

The swift, undercutting tide on Cayo Costa Island near Captiva Pass during this most recent riled wave conditions proved this theory quite well. As the tide ripped, I watched it uncover shells that could have been buried for years. And each was packed with sand and old grass. And each was the same dull tan or grey color.

If you do find some large conchs or whelks in this condition, all is not lost. You can use a solution of bleach and water to try to get the shells back to white. That's not exactly the shell's natural color either, but looks a bit nicer than dingy grey.

Some folks leave the shells just the way they were found, and that makes an interesting conversation piece, too.

As I mentioned, how long these particular shells have been buried is very difficult to determine. Several of the larger whelks we found were perfect in form, except for that distinctive little hole in the top, around the crown, that marks where someone opened them up for the meat.

I thought at first that the initial few shells we found with holes in the top were accidental, but others made me wonder if some early settlers or even Indians might have visited the beaches in search of food from the shells.

We'll probably never know, but next time you do come upon a beach where every shell is the same color, you might expect that a storm has uncovered a patch of shells that were buried for many years.

Good shelling this week, and remember the law of only taking two live shells per person, per species. Thanks!

The committee examined problems within the mining industry and drafted guidelines that eventually were incorporated in the state's mining regulations.

By now it was the mid 1960's, and the campus environment that was the Webb's home was afire with tension and discord. "We opened our house to students every Saturday night," Helen says. "They had long hair and jewelry, but we found those students most interesting. They asked us questions and made us think about things that had never crossed our minds."

One thing Helen says she never recognized until the turbulent '60's was the inequality of women in American society. "I had no inkling that girls were different from boys," she says. "I was brought up as a woman to be equal to men, and I certainly have a husband who has never made me feel unequal."

"Throughout our married life we have done what is most comfortable for us, regardless of whether it is a 'male' or 'female' task," she says.

Most of the Webb's life together has been devoted to travel, something they agreed on early in their marriage. "We decided we could do without sterling silver and fine clothes," she says. As a result they have been around the world and in all 52 states.

"When I was young I read a book that made me determined to see the Taj Mahal and the Parthenon at a full moon," she says. "I have seen both, and both were breathtaking."

Helen says at one point in her life she was also sure she wanted to live in a houseboat at Kashmir. That she hasn't done, but perhaps she will settle for the life she has built on Sanibel.

"My heart leaps up every time I cross the Causeway to come home," she says with a soft smile that bespeaks her contentment. "We've never discussed not living on Sanibel."

Headaches are never normal. Headaches that recur, and are not relieved adequately by aspirin should be promptly investigated by a physician. It is the body's way of signaling that something is wrong, and needs to be corrected. In this scientific age, a wide array of medications is available to the physician for treating and preventing headaches. The problem can be serious and corrective measures should not be postponed.

Helen Webb

Age: "Sometimes I'm 10; sometimes I'm 90. But I strive for maturity."

Height: 5'2"

Roots: Eveleth, Minn.

Pleasures: Bridge, watching the clouds, modern painting, "several more"

Last Book Read: 1984 by George Orwell

Mentor: "My parents, my husband, my university professors. I hope I meet a new mentor tomorrow with new ideas I can scrutinize."

Wish: "That we would be wise stewards of this world."

Words of Wisdom: "Nothing is more constant than change."

Wherever she is, from the deep forests of upstate New York to the Phillipines, Helen Webb makes things happen. She has done so all her interesting life.

"I've never had trouble filling my time," she explains as she relaxes in her living room surrounded by her own modern paintings and countless mementos from travels she and her husband, Bill, have made together.

Even during the six years since the Webb's "retired" to Sanibel, Helen has continued pursuing with vigor her various concerns, which range from women's rights to birdwatching and the war against melaleucas.

When they were married 44 years ago, Helen was a reference librarian in the College of Agriculture at the University of Minnesota, Minneapolis; Bill was a professor in the College of Environmental Science and Forestry at the State University of New York at Syracuse.

As the wife of an environmentalist professor, however, Helen left her "city girl" profession for life in a log cabin tucked in the Adirondacks.

"I was seven miles from the closest human being," she says. "I had never even been in a forest. It was absolutely beautiful."

The forest in which Helen and Bill lived for the first years of their marriage was part of SUNY's Research Wildlife Forest. It was there that Helen first read Henry David Thoreau's Walden and began to assimilate her husband's respect and devotion for the environment.

"I spent a lot of time alone," she says. "But that was all right because I enjoyed my own company. I learned the birds by their song because I couldn't see them through the dense canopy of the forest."

When the Webb's left the forest, it was for another environmental extreme - Los Baños, Phillipines. Bill was sent there by the State Department Agency of International Development to modernize the Phillipino College of Forestry.

Helen firmly maintains her entire life has been "more interesting than the wildest of my childhood dreams," but she says the time in Los Baños ranks at the top of her most rewarding memories.

"I wanted to do something of my own in Los Baños," she says. "A lot of people thought I just wanted to 'fill my time,' but that wasn't so. I had to do something worthwhile."

So she visited the Los Baños schools and learned their libraries consisted of "two or three books in a little china closet." That provided the fuel for Helen's drive to secure books - thousands of them, it turned out - for schools all over the Phillipines.

"I knew public libraries in the states had thousands of discards every year," she says. And since there was constant boat traffic from San Francisco to the Phillipines, she asked the San Francisco Public Library for its discards.

"They said they had been waiting for decades for a request like mine," she remembers. Within six months every school in Los Baños and many more throughout the Phillipines had bona fide libraries; Helen even catalogued and set up the ones in Los Baños.

After two years in Los Baños the Webbs returned to the states via an around-the-world trip and settled in Syracuse, where Helen chaired the Land Use Committee of the Syracuse League of Women Voters. "Many of us (Land Use Committee members) were wives of forestry professors, and our husbands spurred our interest in the environment," she explains.

Captivan Leonard Mosley's 27th book makes debut

Captivan Leonard Mosley's 27th book made its debut last week. Marshall: Hero For Our Times is an anecdotal biography of the late Gen. George Catlett Marshall, soldier, statesman and counsel to presidents and prime ministers.

Here is the unknown story of one of America's greatest men, who fought for his nation's interest both as chief of staff during World War II and as secretary of state in the postwar world that followed.

Marshall lays bare many of the anguishing incidents in the general's life. It tells the awful truth about his wedding night. It tells of his torment when his stepson was killed by a German sniper in Italy, knowing that he could have kept his stepson alive.

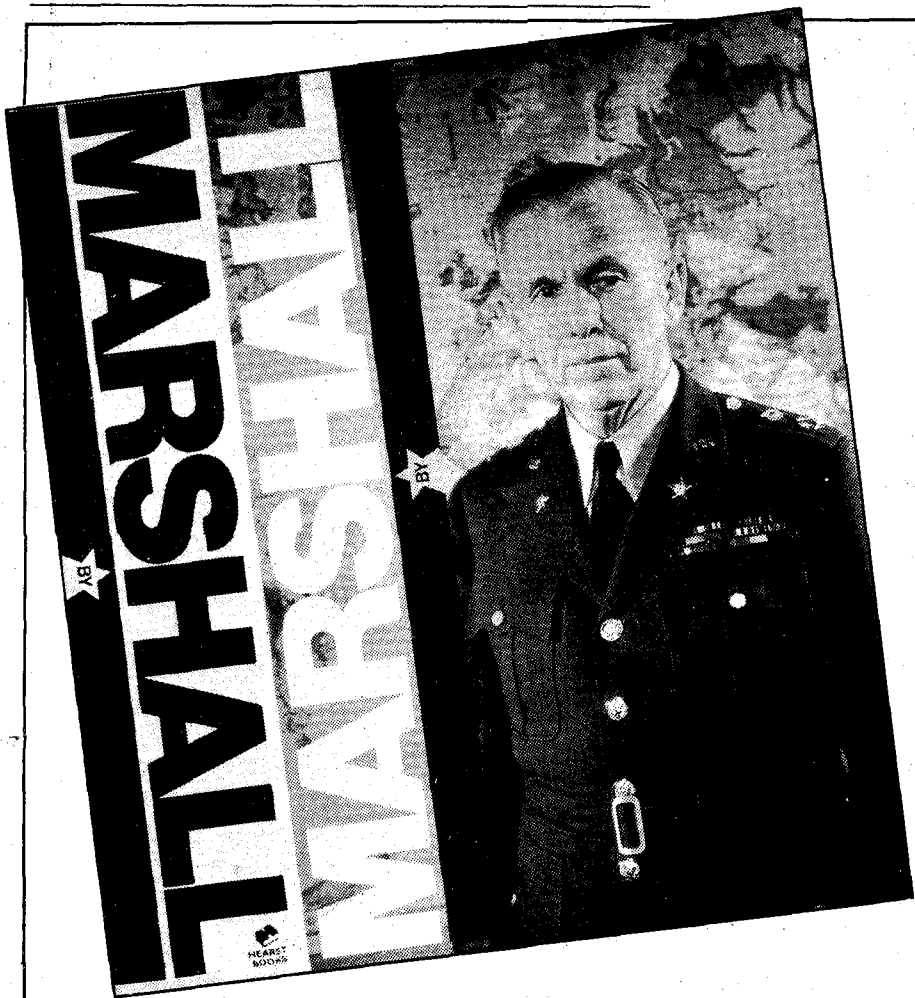

It tells of how Gen. Douglas MacArthur hated Marshall and tried to hamstring his career. It answers the question as to whether Gen. Dwight Eisenhower, who owed everything to Marshall, finally showed his gratitude in an abysmal act of cowardice. It discloses the secret events behind Marshall's mission to China and why it failed.

It reveals untold stories of how Marshall went about organizing and winning World War II for the allies; then, having won the war, how he went on to save the peace by keeping Europe from starvation with the Marshall Plan, by stemming the panic in Washington over MacArthur's behavior in Korea and by counseling presidents and instilling confidence in prime ministers.

In writing Marshall, Mosley journeyed all over the world to interview statesmen who knew and dealt with the general at different periods in his career. This book is the first one-volume work to use the full resources of the Marshall papers and the 40 hours of tape recordings Marshall made just before his death in 1959.

"Marshall is a man for all ages," says Mosley, who in his career has interviewed many of the famous and infamous personalities of the 20th Century, including Avenue of the Dead by Evelyn Anthony, author of many well received historical and romantic suspense novels -- Davina Graham, the popular heroine of Anthony's last best seller, The Defector, is revived in her latest novel.

Although Davina has no plans to come out of her self-imposed retirement, she carries a strong desire for revenge against KGB leader Igor Borisov, the man responsible for the death of her husband, Russian defector Ivan Sasanov. When an assignment from the British Secret Service presents the opportunity to even the score, Davina is unable to resist.

British born Edward Fleming, now an American citizen who has risen high enough in the political arena to become a close advisor of the new U.S. president, has been accused of being a Russian spy and a wife murderer. These accusations stem from none other than his new wife, Elizabeth, who happens to be a former schoolmate of Davina's.

Davina's assignment is to determine the truth behind these rumors and to avert a scandal that could ruin the relationship between the U.S. and the U.K. Her search for the truth about Edward Fleming, for the extent of KGB in Washington affairs and for an explanation for the strange changes in her old school rival, once a beautiful and pleasant scatterbrain and now an embittered, frightened alcoholic, takes Davina and Colin Lomax, her partner and new-found lover, down a series of dangerous paths which eventually lead to a strange Mexican hospital near the City of the Gods and the Avenue of the Dead.

This entertaining tale of romance and intrigue should make Anthony's new novel very popular.

Because of the recent interest in "thrillers," the library has acquired two new horror stories: The Seeding and The Little Red Phone.

unknown form of cancer. Following death a stange but quite pleasant aroma surrounds the body and baffles the doctors.

As Dr. Erickson and his colleagues struggle to find an explanation for these unexpected deaths, Michelle Van Dyne, a former track star, starts experiencing sudden blackouts and hallucinations that remind her of a flowering tropical jungle.

When Michelle is hospitalized for botulism, Erickson saves her life, and the two soon become romantically involved. As he becomes more and more concerned about Michelle's experiences, Erickson discovers a relationship between her problems, the strange deaths and a rare breed of orchids used in secret rituals by the supposedly extinct Mayan tribe.

While the plot is far-fetched, the story moves quickly along, offering enough suspense and "medi-gore" to satisfy readers who enjoy this type of novel.

The Little Red Phone by Henry Kane - Somewhat lacking in both plot and character development, even though it received some good reviews.

Maureen and Stephen Blair move to Maine with their adopted children, twins Josh and Laura. All is well until Stephen begins hearing a child's toy telephone ring and believes that the twins' natural father is trying to communicate with him from the dead.

When Stephen is brutally murdered, supposedly by the town lunatic, Maureen starts hearing the phone as Stephen tries to warn her that their adopted son is a demon who must be destroyed.

The reader learns little about the demonic character, and because the book jacket gives away the fact that the son is supposedly possessed (although there is no explanation as to how or why throughout the story), any mystery to the tale is ruined. Nevertheless, true fans of the genre who have an hour or two to spare may enjoy reading this short novel.

The library is opened from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday-Saturday and from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday.

The library will be closed Sept. 19-Oct. 3 for inventory.

Police club needs funds for fireworks

The Sanibel Police Recreation Club still needs donations from Island residents and businesses to cover the $4,000 cost of the July 4 fireworks display the club sponsored at the Dunes Country Club.

Club member and Officer Mike Blackmore said several organizations that pledged donations before the event have not yet made their contribution.

Checks should be made to the Sanibel Police Recreation Club and mailed to the department, P.O. Box 438, Sanibel 33957, or delivered to police headquarters above MacKenzie Hall on Palm Ridge Road.

Citizens organize tax revolt, file suit against Lee County property appraiser

By Cindy Chalmers

Aided by funds and support from approximately 20 condominium associations on Sanibel, the Fort Myers Beach Taxpayers Association last week filed suit against Lee County Property Appraiser Ken Wilkinson.

In 15 allegations, the suit charges the county was unfair in its 1982 property tax reassessments of property on Sanibel and Captiva and on Fort Myers Beach. The suit also names Randy Miller, director of Florida's Department of Revenue, as a defendant.

"Basically we're asking that the courts throw out the 1981 tax assessments of Lee County property," Sanibel resident Warren Hyde said.

Hyde is secretary of the Condominium Associations of Sanibel, Inc., which contributed $4,000 toward the fight against the assessments. He said 20 of CASI's 40 member condominium association pledged money for the lawsuit.

Hyde, who lives at Sanibel Surfside condominiums, said his own property taxes doubled this year because of inequitable assessments. "(The reassessments) were not done scientifically," he said. "It's a very mixed up situation. Some property evaluations were raised while others were not."

Fort Myers Beach resident Charles Meador, president of the Beach Taxpayers Association, initiated the tax revolt last fall. The BTA is demanding that the court find Wilkinson's assessments of property on the beach and on the Islands were illegal; that a reassessment of the property be carried out; and that refunds be granted on all overpayments of 1981 ad valorem real property taxes.

Meador said the cause has raised $12,000 of the $35,000 it will need to carry their fight through the courts. "We have enough funds to get us about a third of the way on our legal expenses," he said. "So we are seeking more pledges to help us out."

He expressed confidence that the court will rule in favor of the BTA's allegations against Wilkinson and Miller. He added that he does not know how long the legal process will take.

"If the property appraiser loses I expect he will appeal," he said. "If we lose, I know we'll appeal."

Nobody's going to do anything else until this thing has gone all the way through the courts -- you can bet on that."

BTA President Charles Meador

Tourist tax

will be spent for advertising and promotion, Eastern Airlines' Phil McCorkle, vice chairman of the Lee County Tourist Development Council, told Sanibel city officials last Tuesday.

Klie said the chamber's concern is that the advertising would be county oriented and would not publicize Sanibel, Captiva or Fort Myers Beach as beautiful vacation spots.

"And these areas are where most of the tax funds would be generated," he explained.

McCorkle accompanied Lee County Commission Chairman Ernie Averill to last week's Sanibel City Council meeting to outline the terms of the proposed county ordinance under which the Lee County Tourist Development plan will be implemented.

Averill said the promotion of tourism during the "famine" months of summer and fall would help stabilize the economy.

But some Sanibel councilmen feared further promotion would only increase winter season tourism.

"Someone could see advertising about Lee County in July and decide to come here in February," Councilman Duane White said. "This Island does not have the support system to accommodate more tourists in the winter season," he added.

Fringe benefits of the plan would be an increase in gas and sales taxes that would help businesses other than the tourist oriented and would underwrite new roads and sewer systems.

Averill told the council he would support the tax if the section were deleted that pledges portions of the tax revenues could be used after two years to build sports arenas, convention centers and auditoriums.

Councilman Fred Valtin also took exception to that provision of the ordinance and called it a contradiction of the primary pledge to use "all funds for tourism promotion."

Valtin also expressed concern that funds might be parceled out to area chambers of commerce and "used for purposes contrary to the policies of the municipalities they serve."

But Klie said the only benefit chambers might have would be reimbursement for the cost of mailing brochures extolling the virtues of the tourist area.

On the other hand, chambers subsidized by the cities they serve would lose this support, Klie added.

Lee County voters defeated two to one a similar proposal to tax tourist lodgings that was put to a referendum four years ago.

Candidates forums

said, "If the commission keeps approving high-rise condos along our escape route we'll never get out of here (in a hurricane)."

Therefore, he explained, Island residents should pay close attention to the platforms of the 14 hopefuls.

"We have to be interested in all the commissioners, not just our own," Shelton said. "They all vote on all the issues."

The committee has drafted a question that will be given beforehand to all the candidates who attend the forum, CCCN member Lennart Lorensen explained. The candidates will prepare a five-minute response to the question, which focuses on land use planning in Lee County.

All 14 candidates have been invited to the forum, but CCCN members are not yet sure who will participate.

The candidates for the District 2 seat, which represents parts of Cape Coral and Fort Myers, are:

- Democrat
- Sam Comparetto
- Frank Antos Jr.
- Don McDaniel

Lorensen, Shelton and CCCN member Joe Feeney urged residents of Sanibel and Captiva to attend the first forum night to meet and hear the commission candidates.

"There are a number of new people on the Islands who don't know the candidates or the issues," Feeney said. The forum, Lorensen added, will help voters make a more knowledgeable choice at the polls. "Voting blindly on Election Day is not right," he said.

Subsequent candidates nights will be held on Thursday, Oct. 21, for state candidates and on Thursday, Oct. 28, for Sanibel City Council candidates. All of the forums will be non-partisan and will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Association. Admission will be free.

CCCN is made up of several Island organizations, including Committee of the Islands, the American Legion, Barrier Island Group for the Arts, the Chamber of Commerce, the Sanibel Community Association, the Sanibel-Captiva Rotary and Kiwanis clubs, Sanibel Republicans and Sanibel-Captiva Democrats.

presented to the board and both Hemke and Bowen urged board members to approve the document as a consent decree and final judgment.

Though all six board members present conceded the substance of the settlement was a "reasonable and equitable compromise," Ray Fenton and Gordon Kiddoo objected to the procedure for approval.

Fenton argued that under its mandate the Code Enforcement Board must hear testimony from both sides and make a finding of Caribe's innocence or guilt of the violations.

Kiddoo maintained that board approval was not necessary.

"The city attorney is empowered to act for the city, and Hemke represents Creekwood," Kiddoo said. "Why can't Neal Bowen just sign off on the agreement and that will be the end of it?"

Richard Roosa, the board's attorney, said Caribe's agreeing to cease and desist was in effect the same as a "nolo contendere" plea in court and added there was no need for an adjudication of guilt.

Roosa added that approval by the board was required to validate enforcement of the terms of the agreement.

The city manager and City Council have no authority to enforce laws, Roosa explained.

Bowen and Hemke both agreed with Roosa that a finding of guilt by the board was not necessary.

Fenton said he was still not convinced.

The motion to accept the settlement agreement and adopt the consent decree passed by a 4-2 vote with Fenton and Kiddoo dissenting.

and allocated $750,000 for funding assistance.

Stevens said last week the cost of the project has increased since it was first introduced in 1978. The state's share of the cost under current estimates would be $1.6 million, he added.

He said a substantial amount of money could be saved if the CEPD could persuade the state Department of Natural Resources to grant easements and waive fees for the project.

The commissioners approved a resolution requesting the DNR grant easements of sovereignty lands for the hydraulic dredging of up to 1.7 million cubic yards of sand from one of three offshore borrow sites and to waive the $200 processing fee.

In addition they asked the state agency to waive the dredging fees, which are computed at base rate of $1.50 for each cubic yard of sand.

Stevens said he would present outlines for two MSTUs to the commissioners at the CEPD regular meeting on Sept. 13.

One will affect only gulf front property owners, and the second will include all property owners on Captiva with the exception of those in the upper third in the South Seas area.

Butze said it is the "legal position of this board to pursue programs to protect the life and property of Captiva residents."

"We anticipate a positive program," he added.

The Devastating Hurricane of 1938

A Real Life (And Death) Horror Story

By George Campbell
Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

On Sept. 21, 1938, the most destructive natural disaster ever to strike the United States took place. In terms of death and injury, destruction of forests, shores and beaches and property damage to ships, boats, cars, railroads, buildings and highways, it far surpassed the Chicago Fire, the San Francisco Earthquake or the Galveston Hurricane of 1900.

I refer to the Great 1938 Hurricane that roared northward from Cape Hatteras, struck the coast at New Jersey and wreaked havoc all the way to Massachusetts and beyond. Winds reached speeds so high they were unmeasurable by the instruments of the day, but they certainly were not far short of 200 mph.

Gigantic surge tides were generated. Where wind did not destroy, the piled-up water did. Many urban fires also resulted, such as the fire storm that almost destroyed the town of New London, Conn.

The hurricane raced over 600 land miles in half a day. Communications were knocked out, leaving cities and towns directly in the path of the storm without any advance warning of impending disaster.

Artist Ann Winterbotham, whose fine drawings accompany this series, was there on Sept. 21, 1938. She lived in a suburb of Boston and experienced this monstrous natural disaster. From memories of that day she has conjured up the accompanying pictorial representation of the aftermath of that never-to-be-forgotten experience.

It seems appropriate to illustrate and comment on that great disaster for this issue of The Islander because with this issue is published the special Hurricane Extra. Accordingly, Winterbotham agreed to the following question-and-answer interview and also drew from memory some of the scenes recalled from that fateful day.

Campbell: Did you have any idea that a hurricane was coming?

Winterbotham: No, not at all. We knew that something was happening — some extraordinary meteorological phenomenon — but we thought hurricanes were for Florida and the Gulf Coast, and we had no thought of a hurricane in New England. In those days, of course, there was no weather service such as we have today.

C: Can you describe what you experienced early on?

W: There was a peculiar — awful, really — whining sound produced by the ever-increasing wind. The sky was yellow-grey; no clouds, just solid and leaden.

Not knowing there was much danger in the early stages, we joined neighbors to discuss the weather. (Sometimes New Englanders will discuss little else, you know.) My neighbor watched the crowns of his huge double elm tree twist and writhe in circles. He said that if he lost any trees to this storm, he hoped it would be this double elm. Moments later his wish was granted when the great tree split down the middle with a resounding crack and both trunks crashed at our feet — without harm to us, fortunately.

C: I believe that you always kept animals. How did they react?

W: My mare was very nervous, so I thought I'd calm her with brisk exercise. It helped some, but she was really agitated. The dogs, too, were nervous — unsettled and whining. The animals seemed better at forecasting disaster than we were.

C: What did you do?

W: We stayed inside most of the morning — some instinct told us not to take chances with this storm.

C: When did the main force of the wind strike?

W: About noon. Trees were crashing all about — some of them fell on the house. One tulip tree limb six feet long flew through the air from a mile away and buried itself four feet deep in our front yard. It was embedded so firmly that, later, it had to be dug — not pulled — out.

C: Were you afraid?

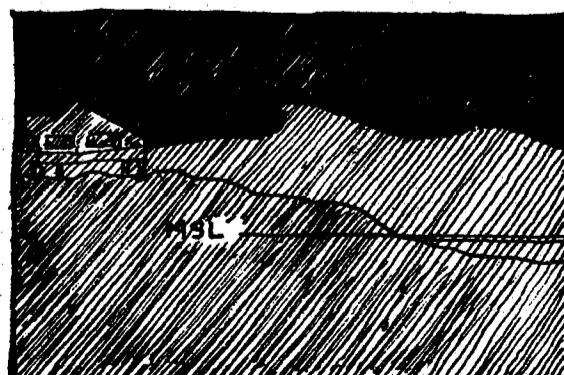

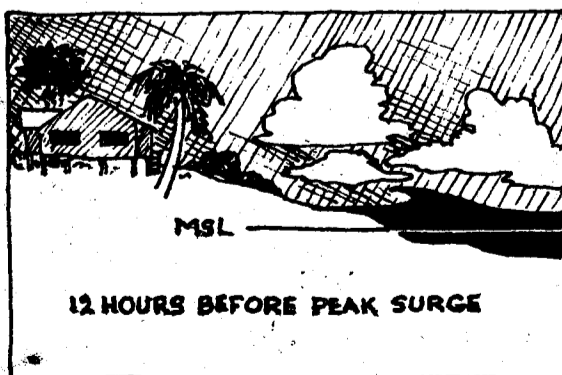

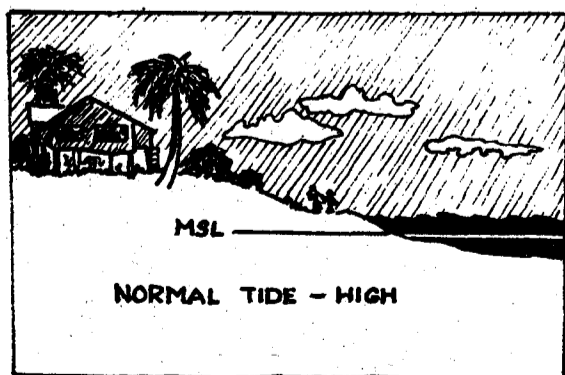

W: No, not really. I was fascinated. I love storms. New England is famous for storms, you know, and I had experienced a great many in my lifetime. Extremes of nature are of intense interest to me. I hope to experience a volcanic eruption before I die.

C: I can sympathize with that attitude. I once enjoyed a hurricane, too. Well, after the storm was over, did you visit any coastal areas?

W: Yes, and the destruction there was even greater and more costly. That's where I first drew the pictures that accompany this interview. Over the years many sketches have been lost, but I've been able to locate or recall a number of them.

C: Do you have any advice for your fellow citizens as a

Caring for wildlife

CROW settles in new home, 'patients' line up for tender loving care

By Holly Davies, director
Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife

In February CROW started our move from our "temporary" (for the past five years) quarters in Adelaide Cherbonnier's Captiva guest cottage to our new facility on Sanibel. Our volunteer ranks were slim, but with the dedicated few and close to three months of hard work we were able to open officially in April.

Already in the first six months of this year we are approaching the total number (479) of wildlife patients CROW treated in 1981. More than 440 injured, ill and orphaned animals of more than 67 species have been cared for. This adds up to more than 100 more patients than we had at this time last year.

About 90 percent of our wildlife patients are birds. We normally care for many Brown Pelicans, other seabirds, hawks, osprey and other birds of prey.

To celebrate The Year of the Eagle, our sole Southern Bald Eagle patient so far this year was successfully released near where it was found struggling in a fisherman's net in a Marco Island canal. Exhausted and bruised, the eagle was not injured extensively, and a potentially sad situation turned out well.

CROW has raised many wild orphaned animals so far this year. We try to make sure that the foundlings are really orphans before we step in to raise them ourselves. CROW has raised river otters, opossum, common gallinule, yellow crowned night herons, bed bellied woodpeckers and screech owls, to name a few.

Orphaned animals can be found at almost any time of year in southwest Florida, where the weather is mild year 'round. Spring and summer do represent the busiest baby animal season, though.

CROW would like to remind all finders of apparently orphaned wildlife to be sure the baby you find is indeed an orphan before you adopt it. If the baby seems healthy and is in no immediate danger from predators, it is usually best to let it be. Its parents may be watching helplessly from a hidden vantage point as you scoop up their young.

There are some exceptions, of course, but I think it is usually best to leave the youngster alone for at least a day before "rescuing" it.

In many instances baby birds can be successfully returned to their nests. Or if the nest has been destroyed, they can be relocated to a reasonable facsimile of the nest.

Lisa Konie and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Higgins of Iona, proved this in April A palm tree in their yard fell over in a rain storm and shattered, exposing a family of screech owls.

Lisa and the Higgins originally called CROW for advice about feeding and raising the five nestling owls. We explained that it was possible to raise them, but that the parent birds would do a much better job by far raising their young and preparing them to live in the wild.

At this point Lisa and her parents put their heads together and with ingenuity and a little guidance from CROW built a small box and attached it to another tree in their yard with the opening facing the same way the original nest faced.

They placed some pieces from the original nest in the box with the five little owls, and by late afternoon the parent owls had taken over and were continuing to raise their babies as if nothing untoward had happened.

CROW has helped many finders of baby birds replace them in the nest. More often than not we have done so successfully, which belies the old wives tale that parent birds will abandon or kill their young if they are touched by human hands. This is just not so!

CROW has been lucky in that our volunteer ranks are growing. Newcomers to the Island, Sarah Meardon and Sharon Levy, have put in many hours doing the tedious and unglamorous job of cleaning cages every morning. Islander Doris Anderson comes to CROW one afternoon each week to help with a multitude of CROW jobs.

Dr. K.C. Emerson has been waging war (just about single-handedly) on the undesirable Brazilian pepper tree that at this point still covers a great deal of the CROW property. Emerson has also been responsible for planting native trees and in general beautifying CROW.

Too many to mention here responded to our plea for small bait fish or shiners, which we feed to our smaller fish-eating patients like the green heron and terns. We are always in need of these small fish. Any extra that anyone nets can be brought to CROW, where we will freeze them for future use.

Many university students have expressed interest in working at CROW in conjunction with their chosen fields of study. We would be happy to have them study and work with us for a semester at a time as interns if we could provide housing for them on the Islands. If you would be willing to house a student intern for a semester of work at CROW we would like to hear from you.

We consider it a vital part of our function, to provide students of all ages with the opportunity to learn about, study and appreciate wildlife. You can help by sending your tax-deductible donation to CROW, Inc., P.O. Box 150, Sanibel, FL 33957.

If you find a wild animal in distress call us at 472-3644.

result of your hurricane experience, or anything on the subject that you may have learned during your tenure as chairman of the Sanibel Planning Commission?

W: Let me say, first, that the 1938 Hurricane was not my only experience. We had at least two more hurricanes of lesser dimension in Massachusetts before I moved away.

The most important suggestion I can make to anyone is: Move out! Go inland! Find a refuge away from the reach of surge tides. The surge tides (see drawings) are much more dangerous than the high winds.

Sanibel is so low that surge tides will someday inundate the Island - almost completely. When that day comes, I hope we'll all be far inland.

Even if you have to make a lot of unnecessary trips because of imperfect forecasting, even if you get tired of false alarms - it's better to be safe than missing!

Special care can save flooded lawns

It is difficult to gauge the amount of damage done to lawns and plants that have been submerged in the flood waters accompanying a heavy storm. When the flood waters recede, immediate and proper care of valuable plants and grasses will greatly enhance their chances of survival.

The extent of plant damage will depend on such factors as the type of plant, its age, the length of submergence, and the amount of salt, soils and debris deposited by the waters.

Temperamental plants such as roses will suffer heavily but rugged ornamentals such as Ligustrum, Oleander and Pyracantha will have a better chance of surviving. When the waters subside, foliage and branch areas should be washed with a strong stream of water to remove all salt, mud and debris. Excess amounts of soil or silt that have accumulated around or over root areas should be removed, since heavy soil cover could seriously damage an already weakened plant.

Survival of flooded plants will also depend on later environmental conditions. Intense sunlight, for example, can severely scald previously flooded plants and cause great injury. Therefore, plants should be temporarily shaded by a temporary structure covered with burlap, tar paper, plywood, screening, cloth, or similar materials. The structure should also be constructed so as not to touch foliage, or block good air circulation.

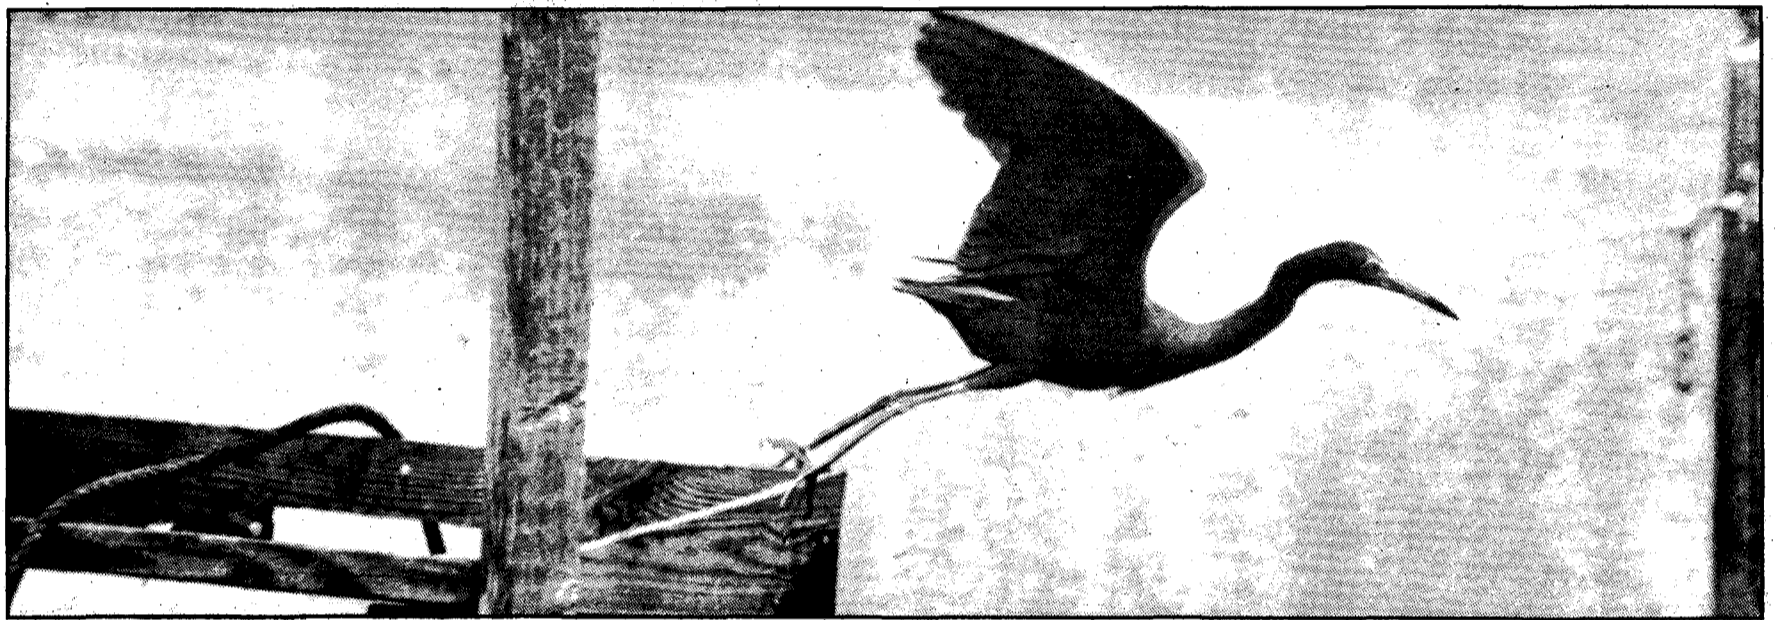

If your flooding occurred near a salty body of water, such as the Caloosahatchee River, you will need to leach the salt. Leaching, i.e., the flushing of soil with fresh water helps remove excessive salt from the soil. On well drained soils, leaching is highly effective because the water moves fairly easily through the soil.

On level, moderately or poorly drained soils, leaching can be done by building a small dike approximately three to four inches high around the plant or bed and then filling the inner area with fresh water. Allow the water to stand for no more than two hours during the cooler part of the day, and repeat the process several times.

After initial leaching, the soil should be kept moist but not so wet as to cause root damage from lack of air. Water the plants about every third day for a week or two. Soils with very poor drainage and high concentrations of salt may need to be replaced.

Lawn grasses will be heavily damaged by flooding. St. Augustine grass will tolerate some salt and flooded conditions and is less likely to be damaged than other grasses. All lawn grasses, however, should be cleared of fallen leaves, silt, mud and debris which can smother the grass. Begin irrigating your lawn as soon as the flood waters drain off and apply more water more frequently, than under normal conditions, for a week or two.

Sanibel's Seven return with medals from International Police Olympics

Seven Sanibel policemen returned to Florida on Sunday evening after a week of competition in the International Police Olympics in Austin, Texas. With them they brought 11 medals.

Off. Dick Noon brought home eight medals for his swimming expertise, among them a gold in the 50-yard freestyle; silvers in the 50-yard butterfly and breaststroke, the 100-yard butterfly and medley and individual medley relays; and bronzes in the 100-yard freestyle and individual medley.

Off. Don Case brought home a bronze in the individual medley relay swimming competition.

Off. Jack Primm left Texas with a silver medal in singles horseshoe pitching. He and Capt. Bill Trefny earned a fourth place in team horseshoe pitching competition.

Lt. Ray Rhodes, Off. Tom Applegate and Off. Dick Church rounded out the Island's contingent to the games.

Rules, gentlemen, are not made to be broken. Tested, yes – but then there's the matter of getting caught. And if you get caught, well, it is often a sad price you pay.

Let's examine a case in point.

It is Thursday night, July 29, and undefeated Naumann squares off against Island Pizza for the first of the regularly scheduled Sanibel Men's Division softball games.

It is the bottom of the fifth inning. Naumann is ahead by a score of 6-1 when suddenly, and most unexpectedly, the man in blue walks over to the Naumann dugout and ends the game with a word.

The word is beer. Beer in the dugout. A no-no.

Undefeated Naumann has suddenly lost its first game of the season. Not by being out played. No, Naumann has lost by testing the rules. And, yes gentlemen, it is a rule. No alcoholic beverages in the dugout during a game.

But let's be fair. Naumann is not the first team to test the men in blue and their authority to enforce this controversial rule. They are simply, and most unfortunately, the first to get caught.

I, for one, am sorry it was Naumann – or for that matter any team so high in the standings – that got caught with their hands in the cookie jar. It may well be a loss they will be hard pressed to overcome. But then for sheer shock value, it may do more to keep beer out of the dugouts than anything else possibly could.

I'm not going to make a value judgment about the do's and don'ts of official league rulings – that's not my job – and especially one concerning something that has nothing whatsoever to do with the mechanics of the game and how it's played.

I will, however, share with you an article submitted to me by a reader that does make a value judgment.

The article was published in Balls & Strikes, the official publication of the Amateur Softball Association,

TALKIN' SPORTS

By Allen Rainwater

and written by the association's executive director, Don Porter. It reads:

"It's getting so you cannot pick up a newspaper anymore or watch TV news without reading or hearing about someone getting shot, stabbed or assaulted at a sports event.

"Softball has been getting its share of publicity on this subject since it is the type of news the media always likes to play up. With or without the media playing it up, it is a serious problem at all levels of sports.

"Frustration on the part of the participants and spectators certainly enters into the problem, along with the drinking permissiveness that prevails in today's society at all levels of sporting events.

"It used to be in softball that the drinking was done after the game and away from the ballpark. Not so today; some teams include several cases of beer as part of their official equipment. Fans bring it into the ball parks and stadiums in even greater numbers and make sure they don't have any left over to take home.

"The problem I have with the drinking syndrome at the ball park and during game(s) is that it helps along the pent-up frustrations that can develop into open hostility and subsequent violence.

"Perhaps, even without the drinking, acts of violence would still prevail as shown by an increase in player suspensions for fighting and assaulting officials during the past two years. And it's on the rise again this year. In many cases drinking was not involved.

"Aside from the fact that drinking does play a part in the increasing violence in sports, you also have the situation – at least in softball as a family sport – of the exposure of this menace to the families attending the games.

"The youngsters of this country learn a lot of bad habits from their elders, and this is certainly no exception. Many communities have banned alcohol in public facilities, but in many instances it's like many other rules and laws – they are to a great extent ignored by the public and not enforced by authorities.

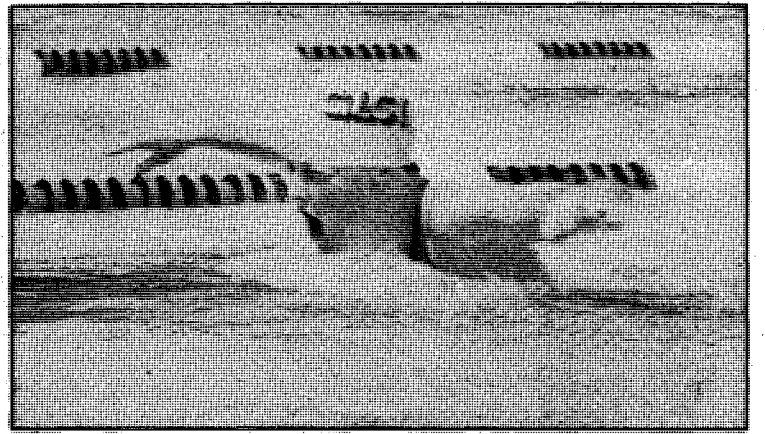

"The ASA will continue to set tough penalties for those found in violation of assaulting umpires and officials and other acts of violence, but the drinking is a society problem not easily solved."

Beer at the ballparks?

On Sanibel, yes, for the present. But as one unfortunate league leading team found out – not in the dugouts!

If there are more readers out there who wish to share an opinion on this controversial matter, please contact us. We'd love to hear from you.

In the meantime, I'm gonna sit down, pop-a-top and think this thing through a little more.

Islander Sports Quiz

Only Rosemarie Best, Matt Asen, and William Carlisle guessed right that Carlisle College was the government Indian college in Pennsylvania for which Jim Thrope played football on teams coached by Glenn "Pop" Warner for last week's Sports Quiz.

Since Sanibel has such a fine contingent of young swimmers on the Sanibel Water Attack Team, maybe some of them know the answer to this week's three-part teaser:

Where is the Swimming Hall of Fame, when was it founded, and who was its first elected member?

Call The Islander, 472-5185, if you think you have the answer. If you are right, we'll publish your name in next week's edition.

Good luck!

Beachview men

The Beachview Golf Association Men's Tournament play gathered 17 players for 18 holes on Saturday, Aug. 7.

Players enjoyed free lunch and beer after the match.

No nukes group forms coalition for peace

Concerned about the escalation of the arms race and the threat of nuclear war, a group of Lee County citizens has formed the Lee County Coalition for Peace with the immediate aim of promoting the national campaign for a bilateral nuclear weapons freeze.

The first action at the coalition's organizational meeting this spring was to unanimously support the nuclear freeze petitions and resolutions that are currently circulating throughout the nation. The petitions read:

"To improve national and international security, the United States and the Soviet Union should stop the nuclear arms race. Specifically, they should adopt a mutual freeze on the testing, production and deployment of nuclear weapons and of missiles and nuclear aircraft designed primarily to deliver nuclear weapons. This is an essential, verifiable first step toward lessening the risk of nuclear war and reducing the nuclear arsenals."

The local coalition will encourage area individuals, groups and churches to sign the petitions and send them to President Ronald Reagan and to the Congress.

The group also plans to support present local programs of peace education already in effect and to initiate new activities in cooperation with other civic groups.

Sanibel residents who are founding members of the group include: Brigid Böck, Helene Edmonds, Mary Emerson, Minnie Fleischl, Fran Levy, Vera Moretti, Helen Moe and Hilda Rush.

Petitions for a bilateral, verifiable nuclear freeze are available for signing on Sanibel at Lads and Lassies children's store, MacIntosh Book Store and the Unpressured Cooker.

The coalition invites all persons who are concerned about nuclear war to join future meetings. For more information call 549-1039.

William Kreuser named manager of Eagles' Nest sales for Mariner Interval

Mariner Interval, Inc. has appointed William Kreuser as sales manager of the Eagle's Nest, a vacation ownership resort on Marco Island. Kreuser's selection was recently announced by John U. Hill, president of Mariner Interval, Inc.

Kreuser was a former sales associate with John Naumann of Sanibel and was president of his own brokerage firm involved in the development of condominiums in Southwest Florida.

Originally from Wisconsin, he attended Marquette University and has resided in Florida for the past eight years.

Kreuser will supervise the sales staff at the recently completed Mediterranean-styled beachfront resort on Marco Island.

Eshbaugh children earn academic honors

Sanibel residents Bill and Barbara Eshbaugh have good reason to be proud of their three children this summer.

Daughter Missie, 20, ranked first in her computer engineering class of 91 students in the final examination at Houston Baptist University in Houston, Tex., Missie is a third year student at the university with a double major in computer engineering and marketing.

Her brother, 16-year-old Calvin, was one of three students who maintained a perfect 4.0 scholastic average at Florida Air Academy in Melbourne, Fla., this year. Calvin is one of 300 students in her class.

As well as studying advance academics, Calvin, a high school junior, was enrolled in flight instruction and flew cross country as part of the regular school curriculum. He was promoted to the second highest ranking air cadet at the east coast academy.

Another brother, Bill, was selected from Emory University in Atlanta to be the college intern in the U.S. Senate in Washington, D.C.

Bill, 18, is a sophomore and a chemistry major at Emory, where he has been named to the Dean's list for every academic term. During his Washington internship Bill is living at George Washington University and working at the Senate's Dirksen building. He is assigned to the staff of the Senate Finance Committee.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteless boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the Island, Runta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 and close at 5:30 p.m. This is true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise!! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.

Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.

If you plan to spend some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights, make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.

Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

Drive safely!

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to bite you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

Dogs should never be permitted to run free on Sanibel.

Fence them, walk them on a leash or, if you must free your dog for a walk, keep him under voice control. Never tie your dog in an unfenced back yard.

For help with a nuisance alligator, call the following representatives of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, please assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.

Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents.

Minimum Legal Lengths
 Blue Fish 10 inches

Flounder	11 inches
Grouper	12 inches
Mackerel	12 inches
Mullet	12 in
Pompano	10 in
Red Fish	12 inches
Snook	18 inches
Trout	12 inches

Snook fishing is outlawed from June 30-Aug. 1.

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.
