New mail box should ease traffic woes

By Carol Kranichfeld

Thanks to Sanibel Postmaster Paul Adams, trips to the Sanibel Post Office for the purpose of mailing letters can now be easily avoided.

Adams has recently authorized installation of a new mail collection site on the corner of Palm Ridge Road and Wooster Lane, directly across from the Sanibel Fire Department, so that traffic at the Post Office can be reduced. And to facilitate location of the new site, Adams has attached a Sanibel bicycle flag to the mailbox, which, no doubt, will make it hard to miss.

The new postal drop should reduce the inevitable bottlenecks Post Office visitors have experienced these past few weeks amidst the Tarpon Bay Road bike path construction, Adams hopes.

"About 50 percent of all Post Office visits are made by people who just want to mail letters," he says. "There's enough room for two or three cars to line up at the new drop site, just in case several people happen to pull over at the same time," he adds.

Collection times at the new drop are noon and 4:40 p.m. Monday through Friday and noon and 3 p.m. on Saturday. Same-day delivery of Island mail will still be available at the Post Office inside drop (before 8:30 a.m.).

Adams urges Islanders to make full use of the Island's other maildrops in order to further reduce Post Office traffic. Public mailing sites can also be found at Tahitian Garden, Periwinkle Place, Huxter's, Periwinkle Trailer Park and across the street from Sanibel Arms West on Gulf Drive. Additionally, mail will be picked up by postal carriers from rural boxes if the Federal judge hear to de la bankru

By Barbara Brundage

Captran Resorts International, the nation's largest interval ownership resort developer, may be free within two weeks from bankruptcy it entered voluntarily last July.

At a hearing of Captran's motion to dismiss the bankruptcy proceedings in federal court in Fort Myers last Thursday, bankruptcy court Judge Alexander Paskay said he will make his decision after receiving a Creditors Committee's final plan to repay Captran's creditors "100 cents on the dollar."

"I couldn't approve anything blind. I haven't seen any papers and I never say in advance what I'm going to do," Paskay said in response to Captran attorney Diane Jensen's request that he "indicate whether he favored dismissal."

"We aren't asking and don't expect you to make a decision today," Jensen said, adding, "Basically the purpose of this hearing is to hear objections to the dismissal."

After the hour-long hearing Captran's founder and president, Keith Trowbridge of Sanibel, said he was optimistic that the dismissal request would be granted.

"I don't see anyone objecting, and I'm most anxious to get out of this thing as soon as possible," he said.

Dismissal will allow the interval ownership developer to operate under the plan devised by its major creditors.

Attorney Dominic Massari said his client, Tropical Properties and the Club Baha in Freeport, Bahamas, Captran's largest secured creditor that holds a $1.685 million court judgment against the time share resort, favors the dismissal and is cooperating in finalizing the creditors' repayment plan.

Election will seat two new members on Sanibel City Council

By Barbara Brundage

Islanders go to the polls today to elect two city council members to succeed veterans Porter Goss and Duane White, who retired after eight years of service to the city.

Island real estate broker Don Bissell and Planning Commisssioners Emily Barefield and Louise Johnson are vying for Goss' Seat

Planning Commissioner Bill Hagerup and Periwinkle Trailer Park owner Jerry Muench are contenders for Seat 4, vacated by White.

Voters during the low key campaign have found few differences in the philosophical stands of the five candidates.

Endorsements designed to help voters make up their minds were made by the two Island newpapers and Committee of the Islands.

The Island Reporter and COTI both recommended Hagerup for Seat 4, while The would be more equitable.

Barefield said the current system is "working quite well, and I don't believe in a lottery except in case of a tie when you can pull straws."

Johnson and Hagerup agreed the system is working quite well, but Johnson said, "Some adjustment might be made by changing the total score or the criteria."

Hagerup said the point system is more legally defensible since a lottery has never been tried in court. But he added that different criteria used for scoring single-family applications might be an improvement.

All five candidates came out strongly against interval ownership and said they would support legislation to to curtail or stop further development.

All but Muench said they would favor legislation to control the types of future business development and encourage only new businesses geared to residents' rather Islander's choice was Jerry Muench. COTI endorsed both Barefield and Johnson for Seat 5. Barefield was the Island Reporter's choice, and The Islander picked Bissell for the slot.

No new issues were raised during the candidates's face-to-face confrontation with the electorate at the Community Committee for Candidates Night forum last Thursday at the Sanibel Community Association center.

Five topics selected at random from a list of 14 submitted to the candidates in advance covered the same ground as questions in surveys conducted by both Island newspapers and raised at neighborhood coffees.

The five candidates seem to agree that their top priority is to keep Sanibel a great place to live. Their differences appear to be only in degree.

One variation in positions surfaced Thursday night with Bissell and Muench backing a change in the system for Planning Commission allocation of building permits in the Rate of Growth process.

The system is currently based on scoring points on 10 criteria. Both Bissel and Muench said they would like to see allocations awarded on a random lottery basis. because the "by chance" method than tourists' needs.

"The city is not here to protect my business," Muench said. "Private enterprise will control the problem."

All five candidates said they were against moratoriums and agreed that intensity of use is a more important factor in the control of growth than the number of dwelling units at build out.

In answer to a question from the floor directed to the candidates for Seat 5, Barefield and Johnson agreed that members of the Planning Commission should be appointed while Bissell favored their election by the people.

Moderator Betty Robinson urged the more than 300 Islanders who packed the hall to get out and vote Tuesday. "Let's show Sanibel's uniqueness by having a higher voter turnout than anyone else," she said.

Polls will be open today until 7 p.m. in the community association building on Perwinkle Way.

If no candidate in either race receives a majority (50 percent plus one) of the votes cast, a run-off election will be held on Nov. 16 between the two top vote getters.

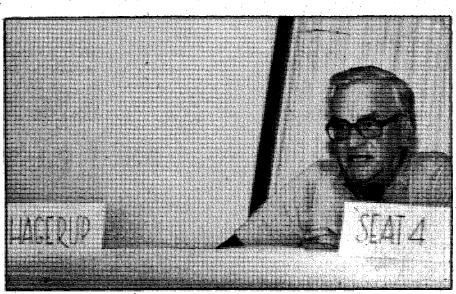

In any event Islanders will be asked to vote that day to approve or disapprove 18 changes in the city charter.

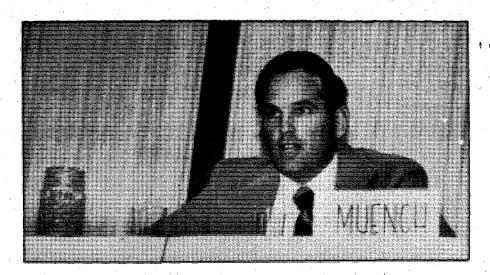

Obituary

Poet, environmentalist Mario Hutton dies

Islanders mourned the loss of their long-time friend, poet Mario Hutton, who died last Wednesday, Oct. 27, 1982. He was 80 years old.

Pneumonia was cited as the cause of the author's death, which ended nearly 20 years of service to the Island's environment since he became a resident of Sanibel in 1964.

A founding member of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, Hutton also served as the foundation's director and as president of the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society for nine years (1967-1975). He also served on the Sanibel-Captiva Planning Board, Inc., and was active in the city's fight for incorporation.

But Hutton will perhaps be best remembered as an environmentalist whose artistic talents were gladly shared with the Island community. During most of his life, he practiced photography as a serious pursuit. He took up wildlife photography after his retirment in 1964, which brought him from New York to Sanibel.

His photo-verse programs were widely acclaimed and enjoyed by the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society audiences who attended his yuletide "Year-End Special" shows at the Sanibel Community Center that underscored the joyousness of the holiday season.

Hutton's sense of humor pervaded each photo-verse program and always included such shorts as "Racoon Platoon" and "Alligator Crunch." Similar presentations were offered by Hutton to any number of audiences, including the Smithsonian Institution and the National Audubon Society and 37 Florida cities.

Hutton broke serious ground in photography by including slides on infra-red film well before it became commonly used

He published two collections of his poetry during his 18year stay on Sanibel. Wings from the Deep, his first book, was published in 1977 and was followed by Sparks from the Invisible in 1979.

Born in Rome, Italy on Sept. 22, 1902, Hutton was the son of a noted painter whose pictures hang in many European and American galleries. Graduating from law school in Rome in 1924, Hutton owned and operated an art theatre company in his early, post-law school days and fulfilled his acting dreams by serving as assistant dramatic critic of "Il Mondao." He married the company's leading lady, Olga de Dieterichs, a Russian-born actress who died in 1933.

After her death, Hutton established a translation agency in Milan, Paris and London, where he personally translated more than 30 novels, plays, mysteries and non-fiction books by American authors for Italian publication.

After World War II he married Gisella Rade, who had held an executive post with the Italian Institute of Foreign Trade and had taught Slavic Languages on RAI, the Italian Radio Network. Prior to her marriage to Hutton, Rade worked as a member of the allied undercover movement against Nazi and Fascist forces.

Arriving in the United States in 1939, Hutton joined the staff of Radio Station WOV in New York, where together he and Gisella conducted a daily Mr. and Mrs. Program in Italian. Mario Hutton was made station manager in 1940.

Hutton enlisted in 1942, acquired American citizenship and served overseas for three years in the Criminal Investigation Division of the U.S. Army in Great Britain, France, Belgium and Italy.

From 1946 to 1965 Hutton held the post of executive secretary of the Italy-America Chamber of Commerce in New York. For his efforts in promoting trade between the two countries, Mario Hutton was awarded the Star of Solidarity. In 1966 he was appointed Knight Commander of the Order of Merit by the President of the Republic of Italy.

Mario Hutton was preceded in death by his second wife, Gisella Rade Hutton, who died in 1977. A will made out by Hutton that same year designated the City of Sanibel as beneficiary to the bulk of his estate, with one stipulation—that the estate would be used for funding projects "which protect, enhance and preserve the Island's unique environment." His library, which includes several valuable multi-volume collections, was willed to the Sanibel Library.

No public memorial services have been scheduled at this time. Memorial contributions may be made, however, to the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society or the City of Sanibel.

Hagerup recommended for council

To the Editor

The Islander

When the residents of Sanibel decided to become a city to protect our land from abuse and overdevelopment, the hard working task forces, committees and dedicated individuals involved united in a group called Sanibel Tomorrow.

This election is perhaps the most critical that we have faced since our conception in the year 1974 to again ensure the preservation of our land and our human values. We must be careful and guard our Comprehensive Land Use Plan, maintain vegetation to retain the sand and house our animal life, preserve our rate of growth to ensure manageable development, hold our height restrictions, low denstities and zoning.

Everything we worked so hard to establish can easily slip away and we can become a Highway 41, McGregor Boulevard or Fort Myers Beach almost overnight.

We need to elect people who will place the good of the community above all else. People with local planning experience who have proved their conservative approach to the use of our land. People who have ample time to devote to the momentous task of studying every important matter in depth and detail.

When we think of our past City Council members like Zee Butler, Vern McKenzie, Charles LeBuff, Duane White and Porter Goss, we are reminded of the endless hours they devoted to their responsibilities.

All our candidates are good citizens, family-loving, honest and capable in various areas of endeavor. There is quite a difference, however, in their experience in Sanibel city affairs, the amount of time they can devote to these important assignments and even in their attitudes toward Sanibel.

I heartily recommend a vote for Bill Hagerup, who has a three-year record of able leadership on the Planning Commission. Bill is a former executive in industry and has given extensively of his time to assist our city ever since he moved here in

Be careful of your vote because Sanibel is precious to us all. Being a councilman is a full time job and takes the experience of a Bill Hagerup. Remember the values that were set for us in 1974. Remember, Sanibel

FISH, Planning Commission experience earn Barefield support

To The Editor

The Islander

Since moving to the Island last spring I have become acquainted with some of the problems that face Sanibel in the near future. Also, through the FISH organization and through the church to which I belong, I have become acquainted with Emily Barefield and have been greatly impressed by her creative and responsible vision for the future of Sanibel.

She is at once an articulate voice for the people who want the best for Sanibel and, through her experience as a member of the Planning Commission, a knowledgeable steward of the resources that are unique to the Island. I have come to know her personally as well and have found integrity to be the keynote to her personality.

With Emily Barefield as a member of the City Council, Sanibel could look to the future with a brighter hope.

Residents hope to avoid run-off

To the Editor

The Islander

Having been traveling for several weeks, we may have missed reference in these columns to the possiblity of a run-off election in the event none of the three candidates vying for the same City Council seat achieves a 51 percent vote majority.

This occurred a couple of elections ago and resulted in additional costs to the city, further debate between surviving candidates and a delay in the electorate

We suggest this immediate solution to the cliff-hanger, lingering side effects of more campaigning, electioneering and another run-off:

Give Louise Johnson a whopping majority vote Election Day and at the same time exhort the other two candidates to continue in their current commendable commitments to the community

The Lions Plant Sale

The Lions promote And then launch afloat A project each year for the club. A noble intent This yearly event Makes money by selling the shrub.

The Lions Plant Sale's Done on a big scale For causes with purpose and air. The donor's blood tank And the Lions eye bank Both benefit from the same.

This epic promotion Bestirs great commotion. Club members pitch in and work hard. Then they hawk their ware With noisy fanfare Proclaim it with highest regard.

They sell their lines The bushes and vines The prospering trees of our clime.

The trees that encircle The purple crepe myrtle And Sanibel's famous key lime. Squat cacti with hoods, The flame of the woods, Dwarf trees with a fish leaf tail, Begonias in urns, Lush emerald ferns Are some items for sale.

Botanical floods Of blossoming buds All add a dimension of green Such beautiful plants Enrich and enhance The whole of this tropical scene.

Gay gloriosa And cocos plumosa Make purchasing here a good deal. And cape honeysuckles With chlorphyll buckles And class and finesse and appeal.

The Lions make friends And charity wins Its faith and goodwill on the move. For heaven's sake Goes the money we make. No doubt the good Lord will approve

Howe commends elections official for sample ballots, explains amendments

To The Editor The Islander

Lee County Supervisor of Elections Enid Earle deserves an award for "Services Beyond the Call of Duty." She mailed to each of us voters a Sample Ballot that lists the candidates for public office and the two Florida Constitution amendments for our consideration on Nov. 2.

The two amendments, because of their esoteric nature, are meagerly worded by Tallahassee and, therefore, are most unintelligible to non-lawyers lacking time to unscramble them without tedious research.

As an aid to my fellow Islanders in voting on the issues, the following is the result of my research:

Amendment No. 2 - Deals with "Searches and Seizures." It is designed to amend, not eliminate, the so-called "Exclusionary Rule" that is frozen in the state Constitution. The rule created by the Federal Courts basically provides that when a police officer commits a legal error in a search and seizure case, any evidence gained through his efforts is not admissable in court.

Current interpretations of the rule: impose a more strict requirement of performance upon Florida police than that required by the federal courts and other states; do not allow a search and seizure in Florida that would be permissable under U.S. Supreme Court decisions; and impose more strict evidentiary standards in Florida than those of the U.S. Supreme Court and thus obligates the State criminal justice system to be more lenient toward law breakers than our federal Constitution

Amendment No. 3 -- Deals with "Pretrial Release and Detention" of criminal defendents. Under Florida's Constitution all such defendents, other than those accused of capital or life offenses, have the right to bail. There is no provision, however, for the detention of dangerous ones.

They only alternative available for a judge to detain such defendents is to set what he considers high bail. That system bases his release decision upon the defendent's financial resources rather than a guarantee of the defendent's appearance in court. Frequent news reports indicate that such a system mainly overcrowds our jails with minor offenders who lack bail money.

The amendment would make the right to pretrail release subject instead to prescribed "reasonable conditions." That would not outlaw monetary bail but would permit and encourage judges to consider non-monetary conditions of release before requiring the current mandatory money bail to be posted.

In light of those research findings, a vote to approve those two Constitutional amendments would seem to offer the more feasible way -- to assure conformity with the innocent defendent's Constitutional right to protection from unreasonable searches and seizures; and to keep dangerous defendents off our already crime-ridden streets.

Commission recommends density increase for Periwinkle parcel

The Planning Commission has recom- development and called the increase in mended council approval of a specific amendment to increase the density from 2.2 units to four units per acre on a 49.6-acre tract of undeveloped land on Periwinkle Way just east of the Burger Emporium.

The property, commercially zoned when H.L.U., Inc., purchased the land in 1970, was rezoned residential last February when Sanibel adopted new commercial regulations. Currently 12 dwelling units are permitted on the tract of which only four to five acres is readily buildable.

suitable for "quality" commercial density to allow the construction of a 24-unit multi-family-duplex complex on the site an equitable alternative to commercial development.

Stephanie Schlesser of Gee & Jenson engineers showed the commission a site plan with one access to the site from Periwinkle and a loop road through the project to serve small clusters of duplexes.

The structures will be built at 12-foot elevation with parking for two cars under each. Amenities will include a tennis court The planning staff said the parcel is not and swimming pool and a wooden board walk at the rear overlooking low wetlands that will be maintained as open space.

The complex will be screened from Periwinkle Way by a vegetation buffer, Schlessser said.

Planning Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham said that as an "alternative it is a very good use of the land."

Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane said the staff was "highly supportive and considered increased residential density on the site an equitable trade-off for removal of the parcel from commercial development."

The commissioners, with the exception of Commissioner Louise Johnson, agreed that the plan for the property was an "excellent compromise."

Johnson objected that doubling the density was "excessive." She said she could support an increase to 20 units only.

Commissioner Larry Simon's motion to recommend approval of the density hike with the condition H.L.U. Inc. dedicate to the city a 26-foot strip of right-of-way along Periwinkle Way and maintain the lowland wetlands area of the property as open space passed by a 6-1 vote. Johnson was the only

Beach house must move for condominiums

Despite disappointment that an "historic" beach house will be removed to another site, the Planning Commission last week approved Thomas and Virginia Johnson's request for a development permit to construct a seven-unit, three-story condominium on their gulf front property.

The Johnsons originally planned to leave the spacious two-story family home on the site as one of the condominum units. But when they found that a paddle tennis court would have to be eliminated to comply with the impermeable coverage they opted to retain the recreational amenity and move the house to another location.

A second cottage on the property will also be removed, architect George Bail told the commissioners.

The revised plan is in conformance with the performance standards of the land use, the staff reported.

But Attorney Steve Dalton said residents of the neighboring Junonia condominium object to the placement of Johnson's building only six feet back from the Coastal Construction Setback Line because, "It will ruin corner unit occupants' view of the Realtor Thomas Brown pointed out that if the succeeding building to the east were placed far enough behind the coastal setback line not to obscure the view of neighbors eventually the condominiums would end up only a few feet from West Gulf Drive.

But Johnson discovered he had other problems and faced a "Catch 22" situation.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said Johnson has the choice of using the two dwelling unit credits attached to the existing structures for two of the units in the new condominium and requesting only five allocations under the Rate of Growth or using them for the houses at their new locations.

Rogers pointed out that dwelling unit allocations for the two houses are required before they can be moved and building permits are needed for new foundations.

Commissioner Bill Hagerup said that "is a ROGO problem" and made a moved to approve the development permit for the condominium with the 18 conditions recommended by staff.

His motion passed unanimously.

Fire district needs special amendment before property can be subdivided portion of her shell shop property on Periwinkle Way to the Sanibel Library Association, and the 33,555-square-foot parcel subsequently was deeded to the Sanibel Fire Control District.

The narrow lot, zoned for commercial use, abuts the library property on the north and borders the fire station, a vacant commercial lot and the site of the new Eckerd's drug store on the east.

Last week Malone learned that Plannning property will be delayed until the Fire District obtains a specific amendment to change the commercial zoning on the newly acquired land to Institutional Use District.

Elsie Malone recently sold the northern Periwinkle Way or Palm Ridge Road.

He said it is important that this "landlocked parcel" be combined with adjoining parcels in such a manner that road access is assured and the configuration and zoning of the combined parcels do not constrain its

"To mitigate future problems the zoning for this landlocked parcel should be the same as the parcel that provides road access," Pfalzer explained.

Fire Chief Fred Renz told the commission Commission approval of a development he had not consulted with fire compermit required to legally subdivide the missioners and could not be certain if they are willing to institute a zoning change at this time.

"We acquired the property in the event we need to expand the fire station facilities," Planner Ken Pfalzer said the vacant tract Renz said. "I would prefer to postpone the currently has no legal road access to either rezoning until that time comes. I doubt if we would ever have need of the whole tract." he added.

Pfalzer said that until the Fire Department applies for institutional zoning for at least half the land it owns, a development permit for the southern half, which is still owned by Malone, will not be approved by the Planning Commission.

Pfalzer said when these conditions are met the Planning Department has recommended approval of Malone's "after the fact" request to subdivide her property subject to the dedication of an additional 24 feet of right-of-way on Periwinkle Way.

Thomas Clifford, representing Malone, asked the commission for a continuance of the hearing until their legal counsel can be present.

The commissioners unanimously approved the request.

Gibson produces deed showing ownership

Using 35 feet of right-of-way along Ferry the site is "high and dry with a good perk Road, the gross acreage of Robert Gibson's and drainage" and also because the central property at the intersection of Periwinkle Way total 1.7 acres - enough land to accommodate two duplexes, a swimming pool anmd tennis court on the site.

The Planning Commission on Oct. 11 continued action on Gibson's request for a development permit for the duplex project until Gibson produced a deed showing ownership of the right-of-way.

Last week the planning staff said City Attorney Neal Bowen had reviewed a 1977 deed for the original tract of land running from the gulf to the bay including Gibson's parcel.

In his opinion, Bowen said, the 200-footwide property described in that deed includes the 35-foot right-of-way Gibson maintained had been dedicated forever for the use of owners of abutting property.

Using the right-of-way the property with a 2.2-unit-per-acre density can accommodate four dwelling units, the staff acknowledged.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

We are just starting our migratory fish season as the chilly northern winds push down bluefish, Spanish mackerel, bonito, jacks, ladyfish and a host of baitfish, too.

Not long ago I mentioned some ways to troll for these fish, but there is another method you might like to try that will save fuel, allow more anglers with you to fish and be just as productive, too.

There is one built-in problem with trolling for these migratory fish and that is the tendency to drive down the schools with engine and boat noise.

This is especially true if several boaters are trying to work the same school in a relatively small area. Crisscrossing troll patterns, necessitated by many other boats, make it difficult for the skipper to stay near the feeding fish, anyway

There's an alternative, but it requires live and dead bait,

These fish coming south for the annual fall migration are following and feeding upon several small silvery baits. You will see these baitfish, most notably glass minnows, close to shore, and your first stop in this fishing is to net as many baitfish as possible.

Sometimes it takes longer to get the right bait than it does to catch the larger fish. One good place to look is along either side of the Sanibel Causeway islands. If the waters are relatively flat, finding working school isn't all that hard. They mill around on the top of the water.

If you see birds working over a school of fish, you can sometimes throw a cast net over fleeing bait. A fast sink throw net is needed.

The bait needs to be well cared for with a tank or air system that will keep the live ones frisky all the time. Some are going to die from being roughed up in the net, but they can be used, too:

Given the choice, I would station my boat near a sand bar outside of either Boca Grande Pass, Captiva Pass, Redfish Pass or on the bars east of the Sanibel Lighthouse.

Migratory fish often work bait fish right up against these shallow bars. Deep water on either side of the bars makes it easy for you to anchor and start your chum line.

It would be helpful to spot some feeding activity going on with sea birds diving on bait as larger fish from underneath work up.

If you have a lot of bait, cut what you have dead into hirds.

On your fishing lines, put some of the live bait out if you have pilchards and some of the larger glass minnows. Freelining, or not using any weight, seems to be the best way. If tides are getting troublesome, put on what sinker weight is needed to keep the live bait about halfway between bottom and top of the water.

Now take some of those valuable live baits and let them go behind the boat so they will swim around near where your baited hooks are being fished. Cutting or popping the eyes of these baitfish will result in an eratic swimming pattern. Many will swim in circles and act wounded, which usually draws in the fish you want to catch.

There are several variations on this method of using live and dead bait to pull in a school of passing fish. Many times I've seen a couple of anglers tossing yellow or white jigs, skipping the live baited hooks and catching as many fish.

You can also throw silvery spoons in this situation, but keep that live and dead bait flowing to keep the fish within casting distance from the boat.

Good luck this week, and watch for the birds!

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

The warm waters surrounding barrier islands like Sanibel and Captiva hold a host of interesting creatures. Some are large; others are hardly noticable, but you can add all to your collections from the beaches.

Perhaps you have walked along the water, right where the waves lap on the beach, and noticed a herd of little things scooting in and out with each wave? Sometimes they vanish, only to appear with the next wave.

These little egg-shaped, sand-colored things are mole crabs. Don't worry, they are some of the few crabs that won't pinch, bite or sting.

At first, unless someone points out a nest of these crabs, you'll probably have trouble finding where they feed. These colonies of crabs wash in and out with the surf, digging in with a frantic movement of tiny feet to let debris collect on their long antennae.

The females are the largest, averaging up to an inch or so long, and the males reach about half that length. Their small size makes it difficult for the first-time crab observer.

Some fishermen might know of these crabs. On both coasts of Florida the mole crab, or sand flea as it is sometimes called, is prime bait for whiting, pompano and some other fish.

A couple of years ago I had the pleasure of weighing in a 19-pound snook that a fellow from Western New York State caught on a sand flea, or mole crab if you will.

For shell collectors, the mole crab can be found dead in the shell line and makes an interesting addition to beach related items you collect.

As you might know, there are several varieties of sea urchins around the Islands, but one has always been a valued discovery for the specimen shell seeker.

Sea urchins are given a bad reputation by the dangerous long-spined black urchin. These are found in waters primarily from the Florida Keys into the Bahamas and on down the islands to South America.

On a recent diving trip to the Bahamas we had to be very careful entering the water so we wouldn't accidently step on these urchins. Their spines can break off in the bottom of the foot and cause discomfort for days.

We have more of what is called the purple sea urchin. These are roundish urchins with short, blunt spines. At first, many of my shellers are a bit leary of picking one up, but there is no danger here.

Still, there is a third urchin that we find infrequently on the beaches and that many shellers misidentify as a sea

The shell is actually a heart urchin. It is about an inch long, has a raised middle and looks something like E.T.'s head in a light sand color. They are biscuit shaped with five deep groves in the top of the shell.

I've never found a live heart urchin. It's said they are covered with tiny hairs in the live state, but all I've found are bleached and cleaned specimens.

Over the next few weeks we'll talk about some of these unusual sea animals you might see while walking the beaches. Each one has it's own story of life along the sea of FISH's most active members, Frances Stein regular a time before the inception of Sanibel's helping hand group when local response to such an organization was, "That's been tried before, it won't work."

But Friends in Service Here did become a reality shortly after Frances' arrival on our barrier island just over a year ago. Now, she says, her phone rings off the hook with pleas for FISH assistance. And it's no small wonder with someone as energetic and determined as Frances on the staff.

The wife of Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ minister Dick Stein, Frances is in her element doing good deeds for others and is Dick's right arm in all his church activities.

But unbeknownst to many, Frances once devoted that same dynamic energy to her involvement in the business world, where she traveled the country representing one business or another.

"Dick was ill for a year or so and couldn't work, so I had to 'a man's job in a man's world," she says matter-ofthe cly. "But my Daddy didn't raise any shrinking violet, so I just pounded the pavement until I located work."

It may not be what one would expect from an only child of a family from Petersburg, Va., where the train tracks run right down Main Street and one blink of the eye will take you past the heart of the town.

But the circumstances that surrounded Frances as she grew up were unusual. Although she had no brothers or sisters, her cousins lived nearby and grew as close to her as siblings could have. "We were a very closely knit family, and at Christmas the house was filled with 40 or 50 relatives," she remembers. "There was always somebody to relate to."

Even more unusual was her family's attitude toward racism. "I was not allowed to drink from fountains that had signs, 'For Whites Only,' on them, and I wasn't allowed to use public rest rooms for whites only, either," she says.

But not all of her drive could have been derived from her surroundings — there is just too much of it for some not to have been innate.

Frances began selling Christmas cards when she was 12 years old, for example, and saved enough of her profits in high school to pay for her first year at college. A whopping $500 covered room, board and tuition for the Longwood College frosh.

It seemed she couldn't help but excel in any endeavor she undertook. A schoolteacher with a certified teaching license, Frances moved to Blacksburg, Va., in June 1965 to be near her parents and looked heartily for a job in her field.

Because it was June, no teaching jobs were available. So Frances took employment selling yard goods at a local department store. "Within three years I was made shop manager and was doing the business' advertising and all the displays as well," she says.

By September 1968, a Columbus, Ohio, girlfriend, then a parishoner of her husband-to-be, had been hounding Frances to pay a visit, admitting openly she wanted to introduce her to an extraordinary young man she knew, a young minister.

Frances avoided the visit ("You know what blind dates can be like," she says with a laugh), but finally agreed when her friend promised not to press the issue.

Of course, her Columbus friend didn't keep her word and invited Dick Stein to dinner. (Meanwhile, the friend had been pressing Dick to meet her friend, and he had avoided the introduction just as energetically).

"So she set us up entirely," laughs Frances. "When I met Dick I thought he was the most handsome man I had ever met, and you know, we hit it off right away."

Long distance romances being what they are, Frances and Dick were married in April of the following year, just eight short months after they met. "We had to get married," she laughs. "We couldn't afford to pay the phone bills. Had we bought stock in Columbus Bell or Eastern Airlines we would have been rich."

And though Frances and Dick discovered they had their differences ("Dick comes from a doctor's family who washes their hands every 10 minutes, while my family didn't think twice about sharing the same glass of orange juice"), the couple, says Frances, was "really intended for one another, we were so compatible."

Life in Columbus was entirely different from what Frances was accustomed to. Her teaching license had expired, but her determination shone through in spite of it.

She found work at Ann Arbor Publishers, a special education firm based in Columbus. She traveled the country attending teachers' meetings, salesmen's conferences and educators' workshops representing the firm.

Her next job was as administrative assistant for the nursing facility owned by the United Church of Christ Congregational Church. There she was brought into contact with one of her best remembered mentors, nursing director Kelly Ames.

"She used to tell me, 'Stein, this ain't a fair world,' and was able to look at things and bring them into their proper perspective. Through her I learned that big organizations do everything by the rules and that I had to learn to deal with it."

In 1978 when Dick fell ill, Frances set her jaw and landed an interview with the administration of the well known publication, Highlights for Children. "Talk about an intimidating interview," she recalls. "The company's vicepresident, president and vice-president of marketing and vice-president of telephone marketing all were there — and all of them were men."

She must have impressed them, however, as she landed a starting position as administrative sales recruiter. Within one year she was made manager of the entire department. "It was marvelous," she says. "They gave me free reign to try whatever I wanted to try. They believed in my ideas and listened to my suggestions."

Her ideas and suggestions were novel, indeed, and comments like, "You know, we wouldn't have tried that if we hadn't hired a woman," were commonplace thereafter, she says.

Dick began to seek full-time work in the ministry three years after Frances signed on with Highlights, and, though Frances says she "hated to leave the job behind," she was all for Dick finding work doing what he enjoyed most.

The couple visited Sanibel for a possible position with the Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ, and the rest is history.

Frances has come a long way since her childhood in the little Virginia town where train tracks ran through Main Street -- but it takes just a quick look to know she's now just where she's meant to be.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

Last week's column described a highly unusual retirement community in Pennsylvania. Subsequent exploration of terra ingenita across the Causeway led me to an equally unusual community: a boarding school in Florida.

The residents of t brave new worlds certainly have very little in common — except for the fact that many of them would probably prefer not to be where they are. Thus, be they 75 or 15, they must all strive to cultivate what Jane Austen called "the patient acceptance of the unacceptable."

When my young, teenage relative stalked off the jet plane in Fort Myers, her countenance bore no trace of any "patient acceptance of the unacceptable." Fortunately, we were spared efforts at communication on the long drive to Sanibel, for Missy immediately opted for the ear-shattering cacophany of pop music — and we were both promptly reduced to a catatonic state.

Alas, I could not postpone the Day of Infamy. Once Missy had unpacked, she immediately asked me when she was scheduled to leave. At that point, I had to inform her that this particular visit would be of indefinite duration.

Now, have you ever experienced the frustration and full fury of a tennager who suddenly realizes that she has a one-way ticket to a boarding school that is more than 1,000 miles away from a plethora of unworthy boyfriends? After all, any modern teenager knows full well that absence makes the fickle adolescent heart forget, not grow fonder.

Although dictionaries have always been of great help to me, I found it impossible to translate Missy's outraged outpourings without the aid of A Fishmonger's Guide To The Gutteral Gutter. (Alas, I could not locate any edition of this edifying work in my shelves).

My mother is fond of saying, "This, too, shall pass." On the other hand, Marshal Petain said, "They shall not pass!" In dealing with Missy, I decided to opt for Pétain's intransigeance over my mother's patient acceptance of the unacceptable. After all, it was wartime.

"Missy, we're going to explore boarding schools in Florida!" And so, Missy and I set out to "explore" boarding schools, most particularly those that might accept late entrants whose academic records and behavior left something to be desired.

A safari into the unknown world of Florida boarding schools, institutions that may be hidden behind citrus groves, grazing cattle or golf courses, involves careful planning. For my part, such planning included the following:

1. Obtaining a map of those relatively uncharted realms beyond our Causeway;

2. Raiding my BOTI bank account in order to finance an expedition that was, alas, not sponsored by the National Geographic Society;

3. Estimating the amount of cash in reserve required to accommodate Missy's addiction to junk food and her untimely Big Mac Attacks;

4. Preparing a mental list of cogent, highly articulate appeals to adolescent "reason" - should Missy elect to foul up my logistics, balk at entering the car and throw herself upon the mercy of a higher court.

Missy's planning operation was supremely Napoleonic in its simplicity and eunning:

1. She induced me to spend five dollars and two cents on batteries, so that her tape recorder might become truly ubiquitous and incessantly obnoxious;

2. She made me promise that she would have plenty of time in which to arrange her hair before being required to get out of the car;

When D-Day arrived, I started the car, Missy punched a button on her tape recorder and we set off to "explore" the world of Florida boarding schools. En route, Olivia Newton-John entertained us with blaring bleatings about her severe Heart Attack! (over some man, Missy explained), while Godzilla filled in the void whenever Missy tired (momentarily) of agonizing over the plight of the hapless Newton-John Theoretically, I was well equipped to command Operation Boarding School. I had attended such an institution and had taught for many years in private college preparatory schools.

To this day, I vividly recall visiting a private school with my mother when I was exactly Missy's age. The school boasted an outstanding record of college acceptances, an enviable number of Phi Beta Kappas — and a surfeit of highly uncomfortable Louis Quinze chairs.

The school's academic excellence, and its resident Vestal Virgins, were most zealously guarded by two headmistresses (one rather motherly, the other totally neurotic). While Motherly engaged my mother in innocuous amenities, Neurotic attacked me with an utterly incomprehensible question:

"Are you verbal or structural?"

(Not knowing what Neurotic meant or, more to the point, what subject was her pride and joy, I equivoc "Well, I guess I'm a bit of both!"

Naturally, I realize that times have changed, and I did not expect that Missy would be asked about her verbal or structural propensities while perched precariously on a Louis Quinze chair. Indeed, I took into account the fact that a totally ("toe-dully") new generation is spawned every five years (I had read that, somewhere).

As it turned out, the school that accepted Missy is far wiser than I. They recognize that a new generation of American teenagers is spawned every five minutes! Since so many of their charges clearly crave chaos, the school provides an atmosphere of constructive, creative chaos.

Missy and I arrived at the appointed time, which was a rather remarkable achievement. We wandered through chaotic corridors until I finally spied a sign indicating that someone in authority might be lurking behind one of the next three doors. I struck paydirt upon opening Door 2.

"Aha, you made it! Oh, you'll have to excuse the wa look - I've been struck by lightning!" (The Dean of Admissions pointed happily to the ceiling, which did indeed display a vast void).

Clearly, the ambiance was highly informal, including a three-hour interview that was constantly interrupted by students (i.e., "kids") seeking permission to flee the premises or bum cigarettes from the unflappable Dean.

It goes without saying that the grounds of the groves of academe were studded with cigarette butts, not imposing oak trees. Surely my former headmistresses would have performed Olympic flips in their respective graves!

HOWE NOW!

By Paul Howe

Sanibel's voters traditionally express through the ballot box their trust in a candidate to ethically perform the duties of the public office he seeks.

We do this with the assurance of Florida's Constitution and Statutes that our trust shall not be abused and the mandated Code of Ethics closely observed.

The Constitution and its implementing statutes provide two basic mechanisms for removing and suspending violators of the public trust. They are impeachment and reall of the transgressor.

Florida Supreme Court Justice Frederick Karl in 1977 discussed and made recommendations on the impeachment process to the Constitutional Revision Commission. He did not discuss the recall mechanism at that time, nor in a subsequent scholarly article on "Impeachment in Florida" in the prestigious Florida State University Law Review.

Justice Karl's astute recommendations were never passed on to the state's voters or Legislature. The referendum on the commission's proposals, in any event, was rejected by the voters as a confusing hodgepodge. Regretfully, his most significant recommendation for more uniformity and clarity to the 57 existing provisions for suspension and removal from public office went largely unheeded.

Strangely 'enough, the Florida Constitution's impeachment article does not spell out the offenses constituting impeachable conduct. They are lumped into the single charge of "misdemeanors in office."

A similar vagueness in the Federal Constitution evoked a succinct opinion from ex-President Ford when, as a congressman, he proposed the impeachment of Justice Douglas. Similar to the reply of Humpty Dumpty to Alice, the Congressman said: "The only honest answer is that an impeachable offense is whatever a majority of the House of Representatives considers it to be at a given moment in history; conviction results from whatever offense or offenses two-thirds of the other body considers to be sufficiently serious to require removal of the accused from office."

The State Constitution, however, does elaborate some on the offenses for which the governor may suspend state and county officers not subject to impeachment. Those offenses are the familiar ones of "malfeasance; misfeasance; neglect of duty; drunkenness; incompetence; permanent inability to perform his official duties; or commission of a felony."

It does seem incongruous that the all-powerful Florida voter is not also afforded the opportunity to vote misfit public officials out of office as well as into office. That opportunity is limited to removal of members of the governing bodies of municipalities and chartered counties by a mislabeled recall provision containing the offenses aforementioned

Those offenses smack of criminality and lack compassion. They are not a proper basis for an honorable and humane way to ease out of office a person regarded merely as a "square peg in a round hole" type of misfit. There are occasions when such misfits are an expensive threat to the body politic that needs immediate removal.

Some states have recognized this incongruity and have established a true recall procedure. Typically, a reasonable number of voters can petition for a referendum to unseat a widely-recognized misfit before his elected term has expired. Florida's closest approach to this procedure is through a 1976 Constitutional Amendment that provides a "merit retention system solely for justices and appellate judges.

Unlike the state-mandated Uniform Municipal Recall law and the Sanibel Charter's Recall provision (being voted on Nov. 16), the judiciary's merit retention system requires no written or oral adversary briefs to guide the voters in their reconsideration of the fitness of incumbents to serve further. Its deficiency, however, is that it does not permit voter reappraisal during an incumbent's tenure.

It is indeed regrettable that our 1981 Southwest Florida Legislative Delegation to Tallahassee did not act upon my proposal to substitute the Sanibel recall concept for the above-mentioned state-mandated Uniform Municipal Recall Act.

With the delegation's membership altered by today's elections, however, it would be propitious for the Island's community and other organizations to join in an organized drive to revive the modernized Sanibel recall concept. The Florida League of Cities should also back the effort at the Tallahassee level. You may also register your disapproval of the uniform Municipal Recall Law's concept by voting "against" item No. 14 on the Nov. 16 ballot.

And yet, this Florida boarding school must be doing something very right for teenagers. Nearly half of the students come from abroad, often knowing very little English when they arrive. Many of the American entrants rival Missy's record in terms of behavior and academic achievement.

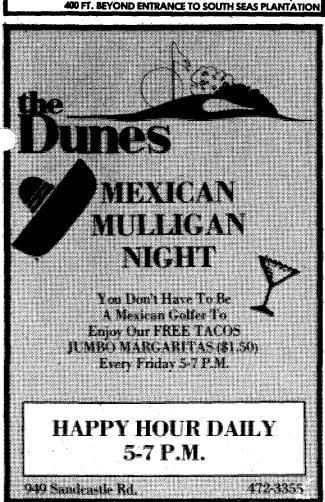

Somehow, the school is able to motivate these youngsters and, last year, have 100 percent of the senior class accepted in various colleges, including the Sorbonne!

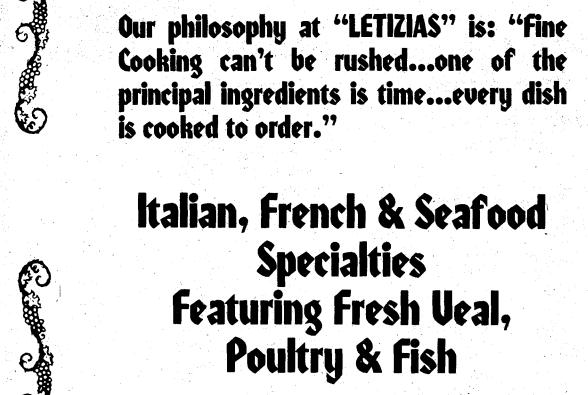

Many Americans consider Florida (with the exception of Sanibel and Captiva, of course) to be a cultural desert. Thus, it is extremely gratifying to learn that our State boasts at least one educational institution (if not more than one) that is successful in dealing with an extraordinarily difficult generation.

(P.S. Yes, Missy, I know you do not agree with me. And no, you do not have permission to smoke!).

agreement, Captran would sell those unit weeks.

Also being considered is the possible bulk sale of interval weeks by the creditors group.

Included in the settlement is repayment of $1.3 million to the Club Baha resort in Freeport, whose successful lawsuit against Captran triggered Trowbridge to file for voluntary bankruptcy under Chapter 11.

At the time Trowbridge said the action was necessary to keep the Bahamaian developer from selling off all Captran assets in an unfavorable real estate market that would be "disastrous not only for Captranbut the entire interval ownership industry."

"Cash flow problems and lack of liquidity made it impossible for Captran to satsify the court judgment by the July 19 deadline," Trowbridge explained after petitioning for voluntary bankruptey.

Under the reorganizaton plan Club Baha reduced its claim from $1.685 million to $1.385 million in exchange for Captran's dropping its appeal of the Circuit Court judgment.

The New Leaf garden shop opens

By Catherine Battista

The New Leaf is an appropriate name for a garden and gift shop that opened its doors this week on Periwinkle Way across from the Community Association.

The freshly landscaped garden beds garnished with flaming red geraniums provide merely a hint of what is inside. Delicate African Violets in all their lavender splendor greet customers, and a shade house behind the building brims with all kinds of hanging baskets and blooming plants.

The New Leaf is not exactly a new venture for its enterprising co-owners Judy Eichler and Charlotte Fischer, who have operated Palm Ridge Florist since they pur chased it from Kandy's two years ago.

Both Eichler and Fischer came to Sanibel from Connecticut, where they were school teachers. "But like so many before us," Eichler says, "We experienced professional burnout and decided to try our hand at something new. In effect we were trying to turn over ... a

-They both majored in Botany in College. Fischer took courses in horticulture and landscape design, so floristry seemed a natural direction to take.

Fischer says they both did graduate work in environmental education and later became associate professors in environmental education at Pace University.

"Despite the fact that we work about 12 to 14 hours a day, we love what we do - and we are good at it," she says.

Palm Ridge Florist will continue to operate as it has over the past two years custom designing wedding, party and banquet floral arrangements and will continue to offer a complete national wire service.

For people wanting something out of the ordinary, the shop will have all the facilities to make up balloon bouquets. Eichler predicts that someday a bride will request a helium bouquet of white balloons!

Velma Conrad, a professional designer who managed her own shop in Colorado, will coordinate the floral arrangements from the Palm Ridge Shop. In addition to Eichler and Fischer, the shops will be run by a team of four employees.

"I suppose it is difficult not to have some overlapping," Eichler says. "But primarily the two shops will not be in competition with each other.

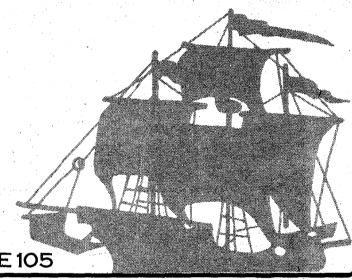

"Our customers will continue to get the same type of quality they have been used to over the past two years, and that will be from both shops." she adds.

This is "Wulfert Slim," the first positively-identified American Crocodile photographed on Sanibel. This rare photograph by famed wildlife photographer C. Frederick Mullison was taken on November 19, 1979.

Mullison And The Crocodile

By George Campbell Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

Recently Sanibelians were privileged to welcome a distinguished visitor - famed wildlife photograpper C. Frederick Mullison of Kennett Square, Penn.

It was back in 1979 on Nov. 19 that Mullison found the first of Sanibel's two American Crocodiles, Crocodylus acutus, an officially listed Endangered Species, there being only a few dozen breeders left in Florida.

Later, a second Crocodile appeared at Tahiti Shores and was reported to me by Vice Mayor Mike Klein. It, too, was photographed, this time by one of Klein's neighbors, Charles Krausse.

For convenience I named Mullison's Crocodile "Wulfert Slim." It is, I believe, a young adult female, while the other one, named "Tahiti Fats," is thought to be a male.

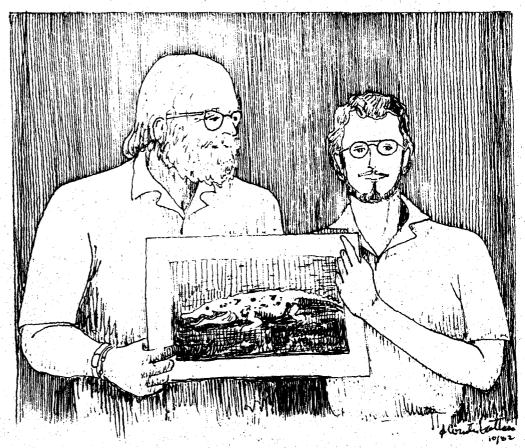

In the hope of promoting breeding, Charles LeBuff and I thought of capturing one and moving it near the other, for they are separated by several miles. But we never got our act together (it involves state and federal permits, for this species is rigidly protected) before both animals had faded into the environment and are only infrequently seen these Wulfert Slim can travel miles of mangrove fringe. Tahiti Fats is known to have crossed Rabbit Road and is more obscurely enjoying a furtive existence in the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation tract to the east of that road.

Finally to be able to greet Mullison here in the flesh was a rare treat. He has untold photographic kudos to his credit. His African wildlife pictures are among the best. His recent one-man African exhibit at the Delaware Museum of Natural History won prizes, as did a similar showing at the Academy of Natural Sciences in Philadelphia. Many other credits are too numerous to list. This widely-traveled linguist-naturalist-photographer is likely to become wellknown here for his past work as well as for that which he contemplates and has in the planning stage for the future.

One good, but injured, tern receives tender loving care from CROW

By Carol Kranichfeld

This adult tern was discovered injured on the Sanibel Causeway and brought to CROW for safekeeping and some Tender Loving Care after it was hit by a passing vehicle near the Black Skimmers' summer hesting

Fortunately, the tern sustained only cuts and bruises and was expected to be released after a day or two of rest and relaxation at the CROW center.

But the little bird is an exception to the rule, says CROW staffer Holly Davies, who has seen far too many terns, egrets and skimmers that don't make it after an encounter with an automobile.

Davies and the rest of the folks at CROW urge drivers to take care year 'round when driving past a flock of birds, but especially at this time of year when the winds are brisk and known to change direction suddenly. One puff of wind can put a feathered friend least expect it, particularly when the bird is skimmers. a low-flyer or spends a lot of time at the side

Stamp contest underway for wildlife artists

The fourth annual Florida Waterfowl Stamp design contest will get underway this fall, the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission has announced. Interested artists should send for entry blanks soon.

The colorful stamp is required of all waterfowl hunters in Florida over 14 and under 65 years of age. They are also considered collectors' items.

The commission, which sponsors the stamp contest, uses the proceeds of the $3.25 stamp to better manage Florida's waterfowl population.

Artists are limited to no more than two entries. The multicolored designs must be original and be 7" x 10", horizontal, on an 11" x 14" mat. Each entry must be accompanied by an official entry blank.

Entries will be accepted from Nov. 2 until 5 p.m. Dec. 15. The winning design will be selected at the first commission meeting following the deadline.

Entry blanks can be obtained by writing: Waterfowl Stamp Contest Coordinator Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission 620 S. Meridian St. Tallahassee, FL 32301

Photographers' Gallery has new home, needs site for cottage donated by Mariner

By David Meardon

The Photographers' Gallery is one step closer to life since the Mariner Group has donated a Florida-style home to the gallery for its use as a permanent home.

Closed since July for its regular summer vacation, the gallery was forced last month to vacate the building it had occupied on Periwinkle Way since 1978 because of a sizeable increase on top of an already high

With a home to house the gallery, president Emil Fray and other board members are now searching for a suitable site for the building, preferably on Periwinkle Way, to make it a permanent center for photography.

The board is calling on landowners to donate land for the nearly 900-square-foot building. In return, donors will be able to take advantage of tax benefits allowed for donated or leased inexpensively.

The all-volunteer gallery has been supported through tax-deductible donations and contributions from its 170 members. In addition, the leadership of BIG Arts has pledged to support the gallery's efforts to establish a new home.

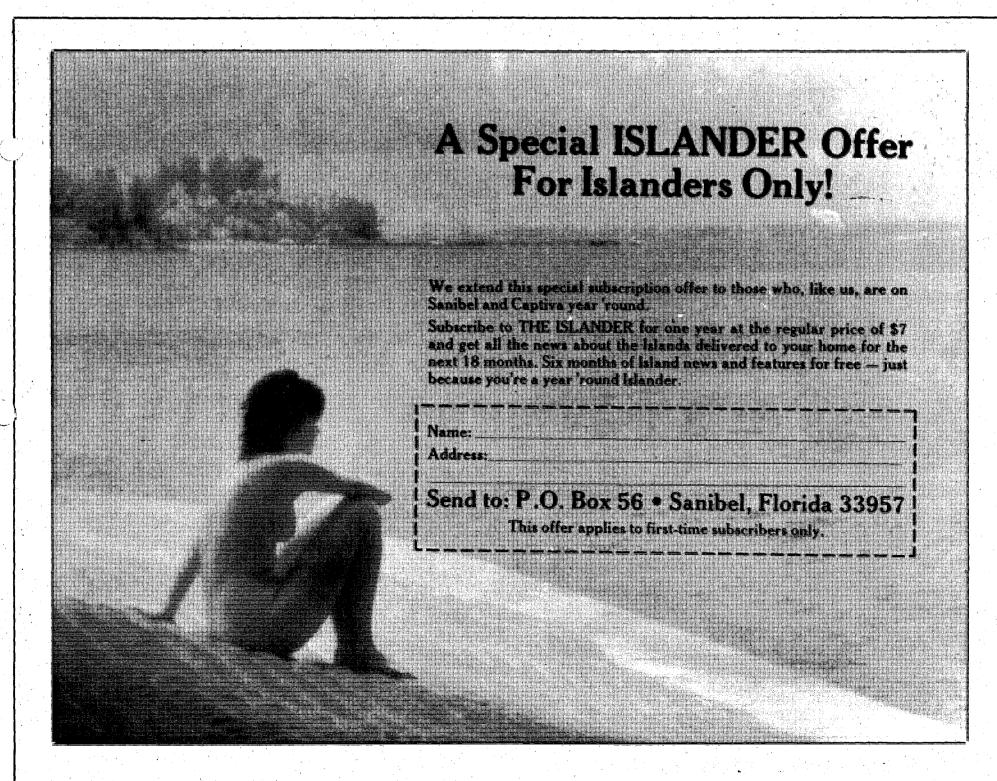

An educational, non-profit organization, it is listed as the only photographic gallery in Florida, according to the newly published Art in America museum directory, Since 1978 the gallery has exhibited top quality photographic works by local, state and national photographers. It has held regular photographic classes and workshops for both adults and children and has featured special lectures and field classes on such topics as wildlife and infrared photography.

Any Islanders who have ideas or suggestions for the establishment of the new gallery building should contact Fray, 472-1113, or Managing Director Renee Twombly, non-profit organizations when land is 472-6697. Written comments can be sent to P.O. Box 361, Sanibel.

With the acquisition of this duplex from the Mariner Group, the Photographers' Gallery is one step closer to having a permanent home.

Island golf

Beachview Men

The team of Stan Condit, Jim Briscoe and Arnold Good man took top honors with a 287 net when 30 members of the Beachview Men's Association went to Golden Gate Country Club on Oct. 26 for 18 holes of golf.

Second place went to Tom Judson, Bob Waterhouse, Bob Dormer and George Fletcher with a 292 net. Tied for low net at 67 were Ira Hartman and George Fletcher.

At the Beachview Golf Club on Oct. 30 the team of John Forster, Joe Steinert, Rudy Benardi and Stan Bailey were tops at plus-eight. Six strokes back with plus-two was the quartet of Roy Hull, Clem Donnell, Elmer Dailey and Bill Alquist. Arnold Goodman was the high individual with a plus-four.

Jeff Dean is putting on his third lobster scramble this Sunday, Nov. 7. Forty players have already signed up, and following golf there will be cocktails and fresh Maine lobster

Beachview Women

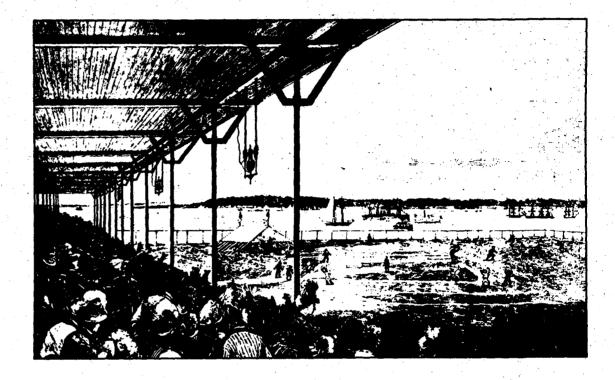

The Beachview Women's Golf Association Wednesday weekly tournament play on Nov. 3 will be for high team and high individual points. Sign up sheets are available. Practice is every Monday at 8:30 a.m.

BIG Arts adds Island house tour to schedule of winter events

Have you ever wondered what kind of home lies just behind that clump of sengrapes? 1963 will be the year to find out — through Barrier Island Group for the Arts

BIG Arts has expanded its schedule of winter events to include a Sanibel-Captiva House Tour The owners of half a dozen unusual Island homes have volunteered to open their abodes to BIG Arts members for one day in March and will ofter personalized tours through both the homes' interiors and their outdoor gardens.

Long considered an enjoyable and enlightening pastime in the more tucked away corners of New England

Long considered an enjoyable and enlightening pastime in the more tucked-away curners of New England and Natches, house tours have become a way of both satisfying visitors curiosity and of affording new ideas on home decorating and exterior land scaping

The San-Cap House Tour will be slightly different from other national tours, however, in that it will be open to BIG Arts members only

Also inleuded in the 1962-83 RIG Arts Program is the faland debut of Cleveland Shakespeare Company Director Vincent Dowling, who is stated to deliver dramatic readings of Robert Service's poetry in February.

A series of hit movies, free to members, will also be shown under the auspices of BIG Arts My Little Chickudee, Some Like It Hot and Dr. Strangelove will comprise the threepart film festival scheduled at Sundial Beach and Tennis Resurt during December.

BIG Arts members can also hok forward to enjoying some of their favorite yearly activities, including the annual Arts and Crafts Fair later this month, the Super Supper Show and return performances by the Island's Gramatic reading group The Sanibel Company, soprano Helen Neidung and the Lyric Chamber Ensemble

Since its origin in 1979, ItiG Arts has grown from a dozen Islanders with a dream to an organization with more than 300 members. Having passed from infancy to young adulthood, it is now the aim of BIG Arts to substantially increase its membership and suport.

To date, BIG Arts has aponsored appearances by the Sylvan Winn Quintet, mime Peter Driscoil, writers' seminars with authors James Dickey and Howard Nemerov, concert piablists and a bost of other enlightening and enjoyable events BIG Arts has also founded or assisted in founding the Island Youth Theatre and The Sanibel Company through its non-profit endeavors.

Workshops, drama, auction highlight arts calendar

Struggling to make a go of your artistic endeavors? The Florida Department of the State Division of Cultural Affairs has some suggestions on how to improve your situation by applying for state and private grants.

Representatives from the division will offer their advice at a day-long Grants Workshop on Monday, Nov. 8. Cosponsored by the Lee County Alliance of the Arts and Edison Community College, the workshop will be divided into two sessions covering major changes in the 1983-84 Guide to Programs, eligibility requirements for organizational grants, how to apply, arts support system and a question period (9 a.m. to noon) and "Artists Survival and Corporate Support for the Arts" (1:30 to 5 p.m.).

Scheduled to lead discussions are a variety of state and federal art representatives and financial directors, including State Director of the Division of Cultural Affairs Philip Werndli, Executive Director of Atlanta's Southern Arts Federation, Affiliate Artists Inc., Atlanta Regional Office Director Sharon Donohue and Miami Director of the Southeast Banking Corporation Foundation Robin Reiter-Faragalli.

Registration for the workshop, which will be held at ECC, will be from 8:30 to 9 a.m. For further information call Anne Schroeder at 489-9300.

Art prints have long been a source of joy and pleasure to the beholder — and to the creator. Ruth Franklin, a wellknown printer from New York, is now offering an opportunity for prospective printers to learn the art of printmaking through her new course, Printmaking for the Season, sponsored by the Cape Coral Arts Studio.

Each participant will have a chance to create a unique design under Ruth's guidance at a workshop scheduled on Thursday, Nov. 18, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the arts studio on Coronado Parkway.

Ruth has recently moved to Florida from New York, where she still maintains a loft studio. Her most recent works include etchings, monoprints and linoleum block print and is on display in many area galleries.

Pre-registration of each student is urged as class space will be limited. A registration fee of $10 including materials will be required.

The Cape Coral Arts Studio is a non-profit facility of the Parks and Recreation Department. For further details call Husband-and-wife team Moe and Selma Weiss have teamed up again to bring their collection of Clay Works to Fort Myers and the Lee County Arts Center on McGregor Boulevard.

The Cape Coral couple, who have previously exhibited by special invitation at the Secretary of State Capitol Art Exhibit in Tallahassee, have studied widely throughout the United States. "We are constantly experimenting and researching with stoneware, glazes and various methods of smoke firing," say the Weisses.

An opening reception for the pottery exhibit will be held from 2 to 4 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 7, and the display will remain open for public viewing through Nov. 30. Gallery hours are 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday.

Ingrid Bergman won her first Oscar for her performance in it. Her co-stars in the 1945 MGM release were Charles Boyer and Joseph Cotton. The 1941 theatrical version cast Judith Evelyn, Vincent Price and Leo Carroll. An incredible hit, it enjoyed a record-breaking run of 1,295 performances, making it one of the 10 longest-playing non-musical events in Broadway's history.

The name of the hit performance when it was first produced in London in 1938 was Gaslight. It was brought to Broadway as Angel Street.

The suspense drama will enjoy a single performance by ASOLO, the state theatre company of Florida on Saturday, Nov. 6, at 7:30 p.m. at the Cape Coral High School through the sponsorship of the Cultural Events Committee of Temple Beth-El. Tickets for this solo performance may be purchased by calling 574-5115 or by stopping by the temple.

Cezanne, Chagall, Dali, Matisse, Picasso, Rockwell, Manet, Lautrec, Goya and other artist followers are invited to attend the Fine Arts Auction on Saturday, Nov. 6, at Xavier Hall, 2048 Heitman St. in downtown Fort Myers.

Sponsored by the Junior Welfare League and Park West Galleries, the auction will feature signed and numbered master quality graphics, all 200 of which are framed and ready to hang. A $2.50 donation will cover admission fees. For further information call Mrs. Gordon Harrison at 549-

Bollman and Waselkov: Weaving and Sculpture will open at the Cape Coral Arts Studio with a reception from 1-3 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 7. The show will remain open through Nov. 30.

Refreshments will be served at the free exhibit, which will be open to the public.

For further details call the studio, 542-7714.

Six months later, Friends in Service Here proves need for and willingness to provide neighborly services on Sanibel

By Frances Stein

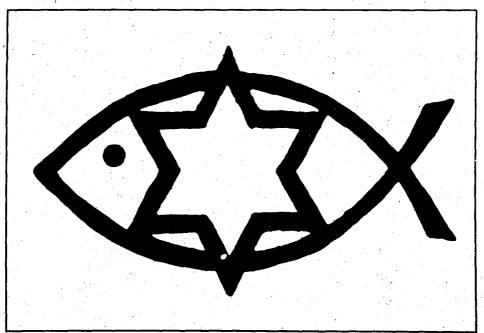

The Island spirit of neighborliness was personified in 1982 through the accomplishments of the all-volunteer group. Friends In Service Here.

In its first six months FISH of Sanibel has demonstrated what friendliness and willingness can achieve. A partial listing shows, by type of service and number of instances, the following services performed: transportation on Sanibel, 15; transportation from Sanibel to off-Island destinations, 35; meal preparation, 10; reassurance visits or telephone calls, 60; transportation of off-Island patients, 20; emergency services, physical assistance to the disabled, etc., 13. Volunteers' transporation services have totalled nearly 3,000 miles.

No compensation is ever asked or accepted. Volunteers contribute their own transportation costs as well as time and expertise.

FISH of Sanibel has been recognized by the Internal Revenue Service as a taxexempt organization. Contributions to FISH are tax deductible.

FISH has no paid employees. All participants are volunteers. However, there were start-up expenses for printing, and What in the world... can you do on an island?

I HARDUK I

First, you relax - enjoying the peace and seclusion that only an out-island can give you.

Then when you want to be active, deciding what to do may be the hardest part. Swim in the warm Gulf waters, fish for snook, look for shells . . . just do as you please. Nobody minds, you're on an island!

A priceless tropical setting one that is still untrampled by tourists and almost untouched by the outside world awaits you now at Safety Harbor Club.

This private community on the out-island of Upper Captiva offers exclusive waterfront homesites and a family of home designs that capture the luxurious essence of carefree island living.

Safety Harbor Club residents also enjoy a wharf, clubhouse, swimming pool, tennis courts and other modern conveniences found on the mainland but all in privacy unheard of elsewhere.

So be lively or be lazy, do it all or very little — the decision is your at Safety Harbor Club.

Shores of solitude just beyond the mainstream.

Sweater weather brings 'extra easy jacket' instructions for knitters

By Barbara Boulton

Sweater weather is here! If you have been drooling over the gorgeous hand knit cover ups and wishing you had the time and talent to make something, this is your chance.

I have a pattern of an extra easy jacket that is knitted in one piece and can be completed in one week.

If you have some leftover yarns from previous projects, there is a good chance that you can use them and get the proper guage. If it is too thin, double the yarn or blend it with another yarn.

Since every row is knitted, which is called the garter stitch, most yarns mold themselves to the needle size, giving body to the jacket. Use size nine needles, cast on 21 stitches, knit 38 rows and bind off.

Your swatch should measure 6 x 6 inches, which indicates a guage of 3½ stitches to one inch and 6½ rows for every inch. If it is too small, blend your yarn with another yarn. I like to use all purpose cotton as a filler.

This project requires about 14 ounces of yarn. In these instructions the first number is for size 10-12, the second for sizes 14-16. Cast on 39-41 stitches and knit every row until the piece measures 15." Cast on an additional 25-27 stitches for the sleeve. Continue working until piece measures 161/2."

Begin shaping neckline by knitting two together at the beginning of the row, then knitting three rows even, then knitting two together at the beginning of the next row, then knitting one row even.

Continue decreasing until there are 51-55 stitches. Work even until piece measures 2234." Place work on a stitch holder. Work the other front to match, reversing all shapings

When it is 223/4", knit from sleeve, across shoulder, cast on 18 stitches at neck edge, place stitches from holder onto left needle and knit from neck edge to sleeve edge (120-128 total). Knit until sleeve is 15%'

Bind off 25-27 stitches at the beginning of the next two rows. Knit on the remaining 70-74 stitches for 15" from the sleeve end. Bind off loosely. Sew side and sleeve seams.

This special finishing technique gives this jacket a professional look. With number five needles, pick up and knit approximately 58 stiches along the straight edge of the right front, 38 stitches along the slope of the neck, 22 stitches from the back neck, 38 stitches down the slope of the neck and 58 stitches down the straight edge of the left front.

Work three rows of reverse stockinette stitch (purl on right side, knit on wrong side). Bind off loosely. If desired, fold the sleeves over twice to form a cuff.

Skinny Dip Clip means don't get caught in the buff

By David Meardon

For those who wish to swim in the buff but don't want to risk baring it from beach to water (you never know who might show up in plainclothes or brandishing a shotgun), there is the Skinny Dip Clip. It's a styrofoam ball attached to a plastic clip that hangs on to your suit, keeping it visible and afloat have their boat drift away. The swim to while you enjoy a dip au naturel.

Promoted as "the unsuitable way to have fun," the Skinny Dip Clip costs $3.95 and can be found at the T-Shirt Place in Periwinkle Place. Sales have not exactly been brisk, says co-manager Lisa Rose. But one woman eagerly purchased the clip, recounting a sorry tale of how she and a friend went swimming off of a boat sans suits, only to shore for help was not nearly so enjoyable.

Lions Club plans three-day plant sale for blind charities

Sanibel-Captiva Lions Club members hope palms. to raise funds for the blind charities they support with the proceeds of a three-day plant sale that starts tomorrow.

Hundreds of outdoor plants - some of them exotics, and all chosen for their tolerance of salt -- will be on sale in Bailey's parking lot.

There will be 36 varieties of plants and shrubs for gardeners to choose from, including aloe, gardenia, jasmine, ficus,

All the plants were grown by the Lee County Association for Retarded Citizens (LARC) at their Hanson Street nursery in Lion Ray Fenton is organizing the sale and says he is pleased to be able to tie the Lions Club and LARC together and at the same time raise money for the blind.

Last year's plant sale realized about $500, and Fenton hopes it will again be well eucalyptus, oleander, accacia, ferns and supported this year.
