Voters choose today between Bissell, Johnson

By Barbara Brundage

Newly-elected City Councilman William Hagerup will be sworn into office this morning while Sanibel voters return to the polls to choose the successor to retiring Councilman Porter Goss.

Hagerup was elected two weeks ago to fill the council seat being vacated by veteran Councilman Duane White. He will be administered the oath by City Manager Bernie Murphy. His wife, Margery, will hold the Bible for Hagerup's swearing in.

As the first order of business at today's regular meeting the City Council will formally accept Hagerup's resignation from the Planning Commission, on which he served for almost two years.

After the swearing in ceremony White will step down and Hagerup will officially begin his four-year council term.

Final results of today's run-off race for Goss' seat between Planning Commissioner Louise Johnson and Island real estate broker Don Bissell may be tabulated as early as 8:30 tonight, a spokesman in the Lee County Elections Office predicted last week.

Bissell said he will await the returns at his Anchor Drive home with family and friends while Johnson with her husband, Arthur has planned a quiet gathering at their West Gulf Drive home.

Johnson polled 871 votes and Bissell came in second with 682 votes Nov. 2 in the three-way race for Goss' seat. Planning Commissioner Emily Barefield finished third with 406 votes.

Periwinkle Trailer Park owner Jerry Muench, defeated by Hagerup, threw his support to Bissell. Barefield, who in the aftermath of her vigorous campaign was hospitalized with pneumonia, chose to stay neutral.

The Island Reporter newspaper endorsed Barefield in the first go round and in the run-off came out in support of Johnson on the basis of her Planning Commission experience.

Johnson also received the endorsement of the Committee of the Islands.

The Islander continues to stand by Bissell for his community involvement during the 12 years he has lived on the Islands and raised his family of six children.

The winner of today's election will be sworn into office at the Dec. 7 council meeting, when Goss will officially retire after almost eight years service to the city.

The new council, composed of the two newcomers and holdover councilmen Francis Bailey, Mike Klein and Fred Valtin, will then elect a mayor and vice mayor to serve for one year.

Councilmen serve for four years without compensation but can, if they wish, be reimbursed for expenses connected with performance of their duties.

Also on the ballot today are 18 proposed amendments to Sanibel's city charter.

Party will honor outgoing officials

By Cindy Chalmers

A large contingent of Sanibel residents spurred by a suggestion from City Councilman Mike Klein has planned an evening of food and fun to honor outgoing councilmen Porter Goss and Duane White, City Attorney Neal Bowen and former Councilman Charles LeBuff.

The casual, ranch style appreciation party will take place Monday night, Dec. 6, at the Sanibel Community Association. Organizers expect to sell out the 300 available tickets quickly and without much effort.

Islander and veteran party planner Urban Palmer is in charge of the arrangements for the evening that will show Goss, White, Bowen and LeBuff the "respect and high esteem we hold for them for giving us more than 25 years of combined public service."

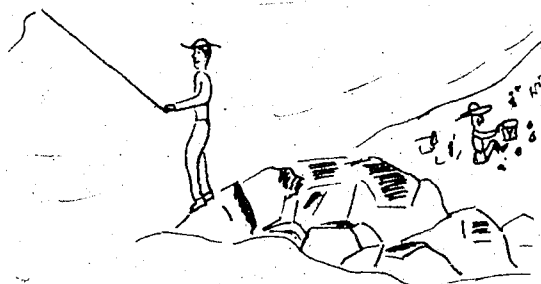

"I didn't need any coaxing," Palmer said

Island water

Committee collects, measures, tests, distills

A crew of Island residents donned galoshes and tennis shoes earlier this month and tromped through some of the most unlikely spots on Sanibel, dipping small vials six inches below the surface of pools of water along the way.

The next day the team looked not unlike mad-cap scientists as they measured and tested, distilled and separated their liquid-filled test tubes.

The men were not giving in to flights of fancy a la Vincent Price, but instead they were fulfilling their part of the bargain as part of an ongoing cooperative program between the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation and the city of Sanibel to monitor Sanibel's freshwater system.

Known as the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Research Committee, the participants in the water-testing program are saving Sanibel taxpayers thousands of dollars each year with their efforts, all of which are volunteer.

Contract bids for similar programs on the island had cost the city between $6,000 and $8,000 for two samples.

Headed by Dr. Herbert Rhinesmith, former Professor Emeritus of Pennsylvania's Allegheny College, the research committee began taking water samples in April of this year and has continued to document its findings every three months.

With sophisticated equipment funded equally by SCCF and the city, the researchers are able to measure pH levels and concentration of salt, chloride, phosphate and nitrate in a built-to-order laboratory at the SCCF center.

"The two main sources of pollution of surface water on Sanibel are the privately-owned septic tanks used by about two-thirds of the inhabitants and the local sewer system used by the remaining third," Rhinesmith says. It is important, he adds, not to confuse the surface water system (which is the system tested by the research committee) with the Island's completely separate drinking water system. Drinking water is pumped from aquifers 600 to 900 feet below the surface.

"In contrast to this system, the surface water system is the main support of our unique aquatic life, which originated through a rather subtle combination of fresh and saline water," he says. "It is also needed to protect the environmental relationships of a delicately balanced ecosystem that we are committed to maintain."

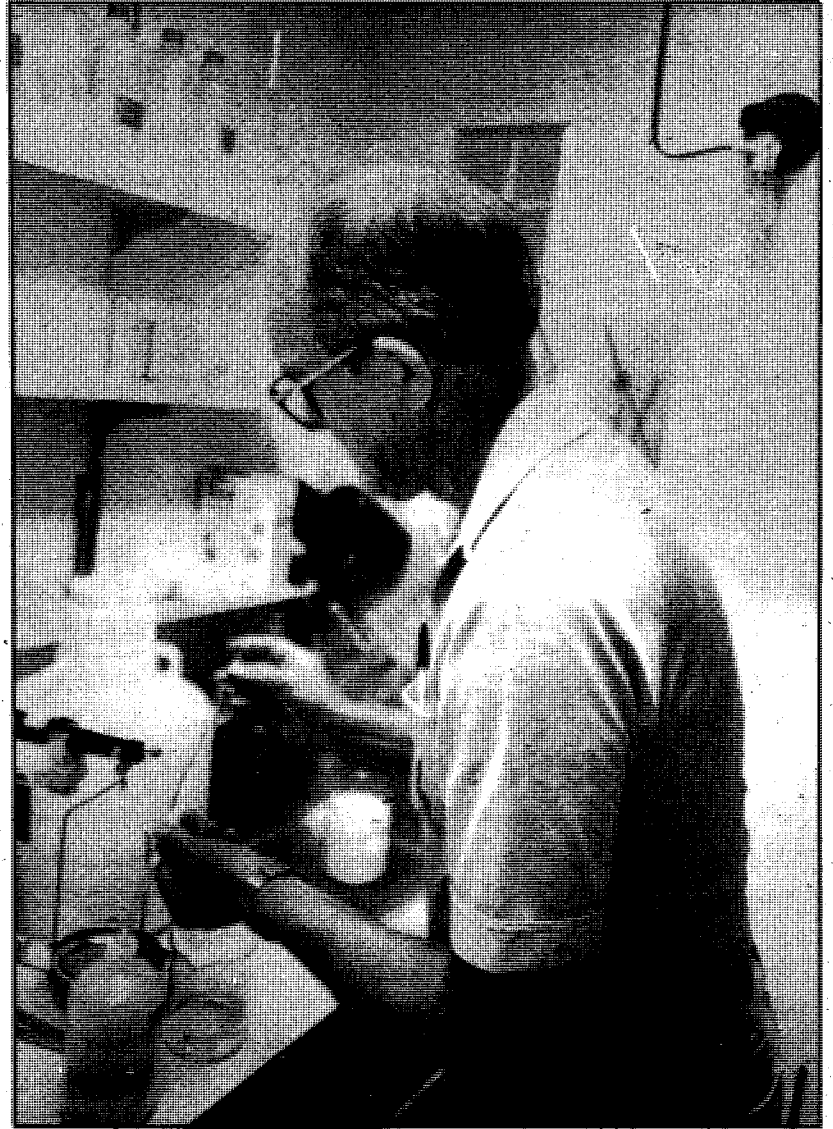

A variety of factors determine the purity of the Island's freshwater system, Rhinesmith explains, and the SCCF Research Committee is equipped to handle five of the most indicative factors.

Chloride tests determine the degree of saltwater intrusion into a body of water and salt concentration due to the evaporation of a contained pool.

Some 40 inches of rainfall each year is crucial to the maintenance of a healthy freshwater system, Rhinesmith says. Phosphates in the surface water are a good indication of community waste, especially from hand and laundry soaps and from garden fertilizers.

Nitrates are essential to both plant and animal life, and although a high level of nitrogen is indicative of pollution, all forms of nitrogen are removed, in part, by surrounding vegetation.

pH tests determine the acidity or alkalinity of a body of water, which is particularly important to natural life. Alkalinity decreases as carbon dioxide is taken up by plants and is removed by aquatic life, which uses up oxygen to digest organic matter and complete a cycle of CO₂ production and consumption. (Sanibel's freshwater supply is slightly alkaline.)

Dr. Ken Preston, above, checks salt concentration. Below, sophisticated equipment was purchased with funds from the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation and the city.

Dissolved salts are also measured by the committee and serve as an indicator of usability of the freshwater system for drinking or irrigation purposes.

Rhinesmith says trends in Sanibel's freshwater system will not be determinable until a full year of hard data has been acquired to provide an adequate control from which to base the committee's future findings.

"The results of these tests over a period of time will give us a range of qualities that can be used comprehensively in the management of our surface water system," he says.

Rhinesmith is the first to note that Sanibel is "so far ahead" of other island communities in its methods of acquiring drinking water and in monitoring freshwater supplies.

A Home Box Office box valued at $250 was reported missing from a Mariner Point condominium unit on Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 9. The unit is owned by an Akron, Ohio, resident. The missing box was reported by Executive Services, Inc. Police found no signs of forced entry to the unit.

A Sandpiper Circle resident complained of large dump trucks speeding in the construction area in the Dunes on Wednesday morning, Nov. 10. Police responded to the area and advised the drivers of seven trucks to maintain a safe speed and stay on the right side of the road. Police also notified the drivers' supervisor of the complaint.

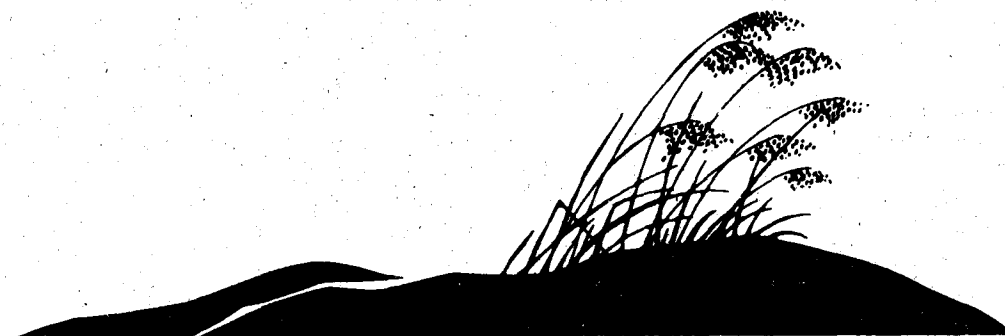

A Tampa man was charged with grand theft after his girlfriend reported him to the police on Wednesday evening, Nov. 10. Billy Blackwell of Tampa allegedly stole $100 from his girlfriend's purse after the two had a fight.

A Sanibel resident reported a woman was soliciting for Captran on the beach near Sanibel Siesta and Shell Harbor Inn on Thursday afternoon, Nov. 11. Police checked the area but found no one soliciting for the time share corporation.

Campaign 'machine tactics' upset Island voter

To the Editor
The Islander

It was both saddening and maddening to note the eleventh-hour political machine tactics to discredit an opposing candidate displayed in our local press by letters to the editor.

I can readily empathize with candidate Don Bissell on the victorious character assaults that attempted to link him with unproven anti-Island personalities.

He is obviously the victim of the same type of hatchetmen that assailed me last September. The weapon used on that occasion was a distorted Fort Myers News-Press report of my views on Sanibel's Below Market Rate Housing proposal.

It is with unflagging confidence in the good sportsmanship of most Sanibel voters, however, that I predict a large sharing at the polls of my revulsion for the gutter tactics being employed against Don.

Tomorrow, Don shall stand tall against the mud-slingers!

Sincerely,
Paul Howe

Citizens voice support for candidate Louise Johnson

To the Editor
The Islander

The undersigned citizens and voters of Sanibel believe that Louise Johnson is the right person to carry forward the ideals, policies and goals of Porter Goss as a member of the City Council, and we intend to vote for her Nov. 16.

Her performance on the Planning Commission has proved that she well merits this vote of confidence. She believes in the integrity of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan and she will work to maintain it.

She knows from experience that growth and development must be controlled properly if Sanibel is to remain a residential community such as we all want. She has demonstrated that she will work to protect and preserve our natural environment.

We urge you to go to the polls Nov. 16 and vote for Louise.

Residents register opposition to Ferry Road fill

A copy of the following letter to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Sir:

We oppose granting a permit to fill and construct rubble revetment at the end of Ferry Road on Sanibel. Please consider the following reasons:

1. Adding rock and sand will interrupt the natural course of the San Carlos Bay's shoreline and could adversely affect another area. Oldtimers on the Island have seen bayfront come and go and come back again. It should be allowed to take its natural course.

2. Keep the mudflat, grassy and shallow area there undisturbed to nourish and protect small saltwater animals and plants and to allow shells to breed in their native environment.

3. Why permit filling in the bay beach just to benefit a private owner and developer? If any bayfront property is to be replaced, it should be the eroding east-most point on Sanibel, where the bay is washing in dangerously close to the historic Sanibel Lighthouse at Point Ybel.

Unfortunately, we live in the short term. The landowners and developers who are applying for Ferry Road area revetment are only seeking an immediate beachfront for their private property. The U.S. Army Corps of Engineers is needed to look out for the long term. Please deny the request.

Sincerely,
Edward and Hazel Schuller

COMMENTARY

Howe suggests volunteer committee to deal with Island waste disposal

At this mid-point in Sanibel's eighth year of existence it seems appropriate for the City Council to direct our planning officials to review the efficacy of the Island's solid waste disposal function, particularly the bothersome sector known as "biomass."

"Biomass," as it is known to the trade, is defined as: "the lump sum of wood and waste material of biological origin, everything from sewage to manure."

It must be admitted that our Islands have an abundance of that kind of stuff. Getting rid of it by the traditional methods, however, is a costly and sometimes frustrating experience. Much has to be hauled over to the opposite end of the county, which involves a 100-mile round trip. A significant amount of it is illicitly dumped on vacant private and public properties.

Modern technology has developed and tested several more lawful and economical ways of converting this biomass into energy sources. Those ways have been well publicized in the general press and technical journals over the past several years.

The Federal Energy and Development

Administration some five years ago published a 103-page National Energy Program that discussed the then-current state of the art. Advances have been made since.

A valuable by-product of those discoveries could very well be a system whereby instead of it costing the city and its property owners to get rid of such biomass as melaleuca, Brazilian pepper and casuarina trees, they could be harvested and sold for producing fuels for the generation of energy.

Other economic and public health benefits are also within the realm of possibilities, such as processing sewage sludge into marketable fertilizers such as has netted Minneapolis a handsome source of municipal income; and converting garbage into ethanol, the form of alcohol that is mixed with gasoline to produce a profitable gasohol.

Florida's Agriculture Commissioner Doyle Conner has publicly expressed his enthusiasm for such "renewable resource fuel production." He pointed out that in addition to helping solve the state's energy problems it would give Florida new industries, jobs for the unemployed and additional money-making crops for its farmers.

Regretfully, Conner failed to emphasize that it would also largely solve the expensive and vexing community health problem of waste disposal. That is an important aspect for such isolated communities as our resort-oriented barrier islands!

With the wealth of research data readily available on the ways of handling solid waste disposal and the number of energy conversion methods to consider, it seems a worthwhile project for the city to call for volunteers with the technical knowledge to develop a plan for the productive use of the Island's biomass. Such a volunteer committee working shoulder to shoulder with our planning officials is an asset available to Sanibel.

Tenney urges votes for Johnson

To the Editor
The Islander

City Council run-off candidate Don Bissell was campaign chairman for defeated council candidate Buntrock in the 1980 city election. Both are brother realtors. According to a letter he wrote to all Sanibel voters at that time in behalf of his realtor friend, candidate Bissell supported all of defeated candidate Buntrock's charges, claims, policies and concerns.

The letter is too long for reproduction, and the appropriate paragraphs would only serve as reminders of changes the majority of the voters turned down at that time. However, one paragraph is pertinent:

"We all need a New Voice on Council. That's why I have worked for Robert Buntrock. And that is why I ask you to support Robert Buntrock for City Council ..."

If Buntrock's "New Voice" was a sour note for Sanibel then, is candidate Bissell's any less sour now?

For my part I believe Sanibel's interests would be better served by Louise Johnson, and I urge the people of the community to vote for her. Her service on the Planning Commission has demonstrated that she will work to preserve and protect our fragile environment, that she understands the integrity of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan, that she believes in control of growth and development and that she wants to keep Sanibel an ideal residential community.

Webbs express confidence in Johnson for council

To the Editor
The Islander

Today we must get out and vote; -- one more time. One vital seat on our five-person Sanibel City Council is at stake.

We have carefully reviewed the qualifications and experience of both candidates and firmly believe Louise Johnson is our best choice. For two years she has worked as a Planning Commissioner, and she knows the principles and the pitfalls of our Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

She has no commitments to vested interests. She will represent all segments of our community with an even hand. She has the time; she has the will; and she has the knowledge.

A vote for Louise Johnson on Nov. 16 is a vote to maintain Sanibel the unique treasure that it is.

Experience, resolve earn Johnson support

To the Editor
The Islander

Recent political advertisements and letters from friends of Don Bissell have questioned the judgment of Louise Johnson. I have known Louise for years, worked with her on city committees, observed her activity on the Planning Commission and have full confidence in her judgment and ability. She has been using her good judgment on the commission and making good decisions for the past two years. Her record is clear for all who wish to examine it. Those who do so would see that she has steadfastly voted to uphold our Comprehensive Land Use Plan, yet she has shown compassion in individual cases where variances could be allowed without compromising the integrity of the CLUP.

Does her opponent have the same longstanding, demonstrated record of judgment about and concern for the Comprehensive Land Use Plan?

My judgment tells me that Sanibel needs Louise with her experience and her resolve to withstand pressures that would erode our plan.

Sincerely,
H.B. Fuller

City suits promise to keep Bowen busy to the end

City Attorney Neal Bowen's last months as Sanibel's chief legal counsel will be busy ones.

Hearings on motions to dismiss two of the lawsuits pending against the city are scheduled within the next three weeks.

Lee County Circuit Court Judge William Nelson will hear on Nov. 22 a motion by the city to dismiss a litigation filed by Carbro, Inc., a Kentucky corporation.

On Dec. 13 Circuit Judge Robert Shafer will hear the city's motion to dismiss a suit filed by William and Marjorie Gelderd of Largo that asks the court to declare "incorrect" the city's ruling that only one house can be built on two full size lots the Gelderds own in Sanibel Estates.

Carbro's suit claims the city's refusal to rezone to commercial property Carbro owns on Periwinkle Way "unreasonable, arbitrary and discriminatory."

The suit also seeks full compensation for the alleged "taking" without due process of law the only beneficial use for which the property is suited (commercial).

Currently the property is the site of the F & B Oyster Co., a seafood restaurant. The property was zoned for business-commercial by Lee County when the Kirkpatrick family acquired it in 1965.

Since 1972 the property has been used as a restaurant. When Sanibel adopted its Comprehensive Land Use Plan in 1976 the zoning was changed to residential and the restaurant was declared a lawfully existing commercial use.

Last February new commercial regulations adopted by the city changed the rules for lawfully existing properties, and expansion or change of use is now prohibited.

In addition after Jan. 1, 1990, if the property is vacant for more than 12 months or if it is more than 50 percent destroyed, it must revert to its original residential use.

In the motion to dismiss the case Bowen argued that, "The problems of not being able to rebuild are eight years away, and it is entirely possible they may never occur."

Since Carbro has not indicated any plans to expand the property or made applications for permits or other city approval, the suit is "merely a request for an advisory opinion of the court on a hypothetical question," Bowen said.

Commenting on the suit's allegation that changing the zoning constitutes a "taking," Bowen pointed out that that action took place more than six years ago.

Enactment of land use regulations and adoption of an ordinance are "planning level discretionary functions of the city," Bowen added.

Florida law does not recognize "inverse condemnation" (a jury award of compensation) as a remedy for alleged "takings."

In the Gelderd case, Bowen said, the plaintiffs "have not utilized procedures for relief under the Comprehensive Land Use Plan and have failed to exhaust administrative remedies."

Last June the city denied the Gelderds' request for a development permit to build a home on one of their Sanibel Estate lots because the deed described the property as one lot not two. At that time Planner Jean Nichols suggested the Gelderds seek a specific amendment, but they took no further action.

Bowen said there is "no justiciable controversy," and the Gelderds are "merely speculating their request for relief will be denied by the city."

Bowen said Federal District Judge Ben Krentzman in Tampa has granted a continuance of the Goldsmith versus City of Sanibel lawsuit that was originally scheduled for trial between Jan. 10 and Feb. 10.

Bowen, whose resignation becomes effective Jan. 14, recommended postponement of the trial to give his successor time to become familiar with the case that he considers "most significant."

In the suit DeValle Goldsmith, who lives on Sanibel three months during the winter, challenges the constitutionality of the city's parking ordinance.

A non-resident taxpayer, Goldsmith claims he was discriminated against when he was denied a residential permit that would allow him to park at 14 different beach and bay access areas because he is not a full time Sanibel resident.

Rate of Growth process leaves applicants pleased

All 54 applicants for single-family homes came were happy after last week's November Rate of Growth allocations.

The Planning Commission allocated "off the top" 63 dwelling units of the 86 available in the final period in the 1982 Rate of Growth year. One allocation went to each applicant who qualified for the "without beneficial use" priority.

Eleven of the 23 allocations remaining after that procedure were divided among three multi-family projects eligible for the phased development priority.

The final 12 allocations were shared by the four projects rated highest in the Planning Commission's scoring on 10 criteria.

Mariner Properties' Tortuga Beach Club and Sanibel Cottages, tied with 117 points in the scoring, each got four units. Shorewood Condominium with 114 points and Captran's Shell Island Beach Club III with 100 points received two allocations each.

The commission was unanimous in awarding the two units to Shorewood that will complete the 13-unit condominium.

As a reward for merit for scoring tops in the competition, Tortuga Beach and Sanibel Cottages were entitled to receive the bulk of the units left, the commissioners reasoned.

Two units for Captran would permit the start of construction of a new building at that interval ownership resort, Acting Planning Commission Chairman Larry Simon pointed out.

The low scorer, Beach House condominium with 93 points, earlier had won under the phase development priority four allocations for the seven-unit project that was competing under ROGO for the first time.

Sanibel Cottages also received an additional four units under that priority, giving the project the eight units requested.

Fifty-four of the initial 63 "without beneficial use" allocations went to applicants for single-family homes.

Eight units allocated for four duplex projects in the Dunes were also charged to the single-family reserve under terms of that subdivision's stipulated settlement with the city. One unit of Robert Gibson's two-duplex project on Ferry Road came from the multi-family reserve.

Gibson, with three units garnered under the phased development priority, received all the allocations he needs to begin construction of his two-duplex project.

The 60 dwelling units remaining in the reserves to be allocated Nov. 8 included 20 in the Below Market Rate Housing category which had not been applied for.

The City Council voted on Nov. 2 not to carry these 20 units forward into the new ROGO year that began Nov. 1.

The Planning Commission voted unanimously to follow the council's lead and agreed to use the BMRH reserve for either single- or multi-family housing in the November allocation.

Also reflected in the total of 86 allocations available were 26 single-family units that were allocated in July but were terminated when building permits were not obtained by the Oct. 29 deadline, Planning Director Bruce Rogers explained.

Fourteen of these applicants reapplied. Five others, whose development permits had expired after "waiting in line" for more than a year, started all over and were included in the 40 new single-family applications, Rogers said.

Altogether a total of 135 dwelling units were requested, including applications for 73 multi-family units carried forward from the July ROGO period.

Neither Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham nor Vice Chairman Bill Hagerup were present at last week's Planning Commission meeting, and Commissioner Larry Simon was named acting chairman.

Winterbotham is vacationing in Africa. Hagerup, elected Nov. 2 to fill the City Council seat vacated by Councilman Duane White, on the advice of City Attorney Neal Bowen the next day submitted his resignation from the Planning Commission.

"Under state statutes a public official can't hold two offices at the same time," Bowen said.

The council will accept Hagerup's resignation at today's meeting, after which Hagerup will be sworn into office and take over Seat 4 from White.

The council will also appoint a new Planning Commissioner to serve out Hagerup's term, which expires in December 1983.

With Commissioner Emily Barefield hospitalized with pneumonia, only four commissioners were on hand to participate in last week's ROGO allocations.

Barefield has since been discharged from Cape Coral Hospital and is recuperating at home.

Judge rules in bank's favor over Captran charges

By Barbara Brundage

Tampa Bankruptcy Court Judge Alexander Paskay ruled last week that Sanibel's Bank of the Islands did not act in contempt of court when it took $38,000 from a Captran Resorts International account to pay off five automobile loans.

The bank made the move just hours before the interval ownership resort filed for voluntary bankruptcy last July 16.

Captran's founder and President Keith Trowbridge claimed the bank violated a bankruptcy code provision of an "automatic stay" that prohibits the demand for immediate payment or calling of loans against the bankrupt property after a bankruptcy petition is filed.

Paskay found after studying a deposition from BOTI Vice President Jim Lowman and other bank documents that, "Clearly the bank had engaged in substantial activity prior to the actual filing to exercise its right to call in the loans."

BOTI attorney Michael Appleton called Paskay's ruling an "exoneration of BOTI and a clear confirmation that the bank acted lawfully and properly in the set-off to protect its customers and depositors."

Captran filed a suit against BOTI in Bankruptcy Court charging that the bank acted "wrongfully" by seizing funds from one account to pay off loans that were paid up to date.

In the suit the court was asked to cite the bank for contempt and to award real and punitive damages to Captran.

Trowbridge said Friday he had decided not to appeal the judge's ruling on the contempt charge, but he added, "We are moving ahead with the five other counts in the suit still pending.

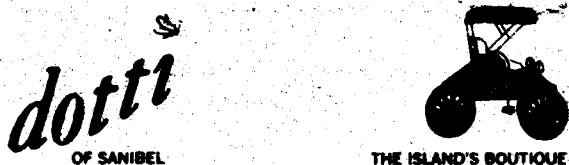

"We feel it is grossly unfair that the bank refuses to give us the trucks and automobiles which were paid off by the offset," Trowbridge said.

In addition, Trowbridge said the bank charged Captran $1,500 for attorneys fees involved in the set-off.

In a memorandum arguing against the contempt motion Appleton said the action to call in the loans was decided on because the bank "had been greatly concerned about Captran's financial condition for several months."

After being notified the day before Captran filed for Chapter 11 status that another bank had withdrawn the company's Master Card and Visa privileges, BOTI decided on the set-off.

Appleton said the steps taken by the bank to exercise its set-off rights were completed before the bankruptcy petition actually was filed in Tampa about 4:30 p.m. on July 16.

Paskay agreed that there "apparently was no violation of the automatic stay and that the motion of contempt is not well taken."

Captran's attorney Diane Jensen said the contempt motion is "a limited issue," and added she intends to proceed with the five other counts in the suit.

Documents required for Captran's plan for reorganization under which its creditors will be paid off 100 cents to the dollar are expected to be finalized by Tuesday and will be submitted to Paskay, Trowbridge said. The plan, worked out by a Creditors Committee composed of Captran's major creditors, calls for placing unsold interval ownership weeks in a trust paying off debts as the weeks are sold.

Paskay will sit in federal court in Fort Myers Dec. 3, but Trowbridge indicated to get things settled earlier Captran would go to Tampa for a final hearing.

If Paskay frees Captran from bankruptcy court jurisdiction the company will operate under the reorganization plan until all debts are satisfied.

Although Palmer himself made virtually all the arrangements for everything from food to drink to entertainment, he enlisted the cooperation of numerous civic organizations on the Island to sell the $7.50 tickets.

He reported last week he has garnered the assistance of the Chamber of Commerce, the American Legion, the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs, the Committee of the Islands, the Committee of Neighborhood Associations, the Police Recreation Club, the Sanibel-Captiva Power Squadron, Bailey's, City Hall and the West Wind Inn. Islanders can purchase tickets from any members of the above organizations or by calling Palmer, 472-1316.

The Police Recreation Club will handle the cash bar all evening, and Sal Vibratones will provide dancing music after the buffet dinner, which will start at 6:30 p.m.

"We've kept it very reasonable," Palmer said, "because we want to have everyone there." He warned, however, that only 300 tickets will be sold on a first come, first served basis.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

A short time ago I had the opportunity to fish an unusual place where the chances of catching a freshwater fish were as good as the chances of catching fish that call the brine their home.

The spot was the Port Of The Islands, a resort in the northern reaches of the Everglades. The port is about half an hour drive south of Naples on U.S. 41.

This sprawling resort has a history of good and bad times, and in between those it often sat abandoned, alone in this watery wilderness.

But now it is on the rise again, and many anglers are rediscovering the unusual fishing possibilities the port offers. During my visit I fished with a national distributor of fishing tackle and a fellow outdoor writer from Jacksonville along with about 30 others as guests of Florida Sportsman magazine staffers.

All were well respected writers, but that was secondary. We came to fish for the weekend, not write.

For you who are new to Florida, we have bodies of fresh and saltwater that are joined here by rivers, streams and so on. In other places engineers have built dams or spillways to keep one type of water from joining the other.

There is a very real problem if saltwater gets too far back into areas where freshwater is normally found. So spillways (or low dams) are often found around the Everglades areas.

It's an interesting place to fish. On the high, freshwater side of the dam is nearly every sweet water creature you can imagine.

Just over the three-foot wide dam is saltwater, complete with tidal ranges and fish from tarpon to fingerling mullet.

My fishing partners were well experienced in freshwater angling, but they toted both kinds of fishing gear. We pulled the boat to the salt side of the dam and shortly caught a redfish and a large mouth bass. Yes, even though the water is salty, bass come over the dam and feed right in there with the others. The waters were literally alive with all sizes of mudfish.

Mudfish are catfish-looking characters that rise to the surface. They reminded me of mullet and are called mudfish because they taste just like mud when cooked. We didn't catch any, so that didn't bother us.

During a lunch break I took a tiny freshwater spoon down to the seawall on Port of the Islands property just a cast from the spillway.

In 10 minutes I hooked and landed three snook. And on a freshwater lure, too. All were released because, even though they were indeed snook, they were under the 18-inch legal limit. Some of the anglers did lock into keeper size snook and had great stories to tell during dinner that night.

Fishing the Port of the Islands is a mix of fresh and saltwater angling. You have the choice. When the wind blew 20 mph in the afternoon, several in our party put away the boat and walked the banks above the spillway casting for bass.

The tackle distributor with me was an accomplished worm angler -- with artificial worms. There is a technique where you bait the plastic worm just so, toss it to a piling, then give it ever so slight twitches. But when these guys set the hook, the 12-inch bass nearly come shooting out of the water with the force of the strike. An interesting way of fishing, but our sea trout would leave his false teeth on your hook if you tried that around here.

Everglades fishing is quite a change for me. Many anglers fish right from the banks of the road. You don't need a license if you fish on the saltwater side, but you will if you strictly work the fresh.

AVOID SCALDING

Nearly all scalds in children occur in bathtubs or showers. With water temp. at 150°F. (66°C) only two seconds immersion will produce a full-thickness burn, completely destroying the skin and requiring skin grafting. Water heater thermostats should be reset between 120°-125°F (49°-52°C). At this safer temperature it takes about 2 minutes to produce a full-thickness burn - time enough to rescue a screaming infant or elderly bather.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

We are into that time of the year when the Gulf of Mexico is going to be more rouged up by northeastern storms. It's a good time to start looking for shells building around the shoreline.

One of the places we have been noticing a steady increase of shore shells is right at Turner's Beach on the lower end of Captiva. With all the shelling pressure from visitors, I would think there couldn't be a shell left on that beach, but curiously enough there is a mound of shells there.

It's a favorite spot for those who like to watch very good sunsets. And, of course, while waiting for the sun to drop, most people search for shells.

This is the same section of the Islands I wrote about back in the summer. For several years prior to the mid-June "No Name Storm," the water didn't flow under Blind Pass Bridge. It was dry sand, the result of changes in the gulf floor sending sand in to close the pass.

The reopening of the pass in June started what I had hoped would be some well-deserved renewed shelling around the new opening. It seems the shelling is getting better.

On the other side of the pass, on Sanibel, the force of the current washing in and out has started to deposit shells on the beach and has also attracted some attention from collectors.

One thing that had worried several residents along Wulfert Channel, which leads to Pine Island Sound, was that the inside waters would eventually go dead. This has been known to happen when a pass is cut off. The back bay waters don't get the flush of new salt water, and many of the fish and shells move out or die.

One thing that happened several years ago when the pass closed was that with no swift currents of water, shellers could walk way back into the sound and take as many live angel wings, whelks and king's crowns as they wanted. It only took a year or so of that and, predictably, the mud flats on the inside of Blind Pass were ruined.

The influx of sea water has started again, making those flats inaccessible for the most part. We hope the live shells will move back on the flats within a few years.

But the beaches are the easiest for the majority of us to reach, and that's where casual collectors look for shells.

In the pile that was building at Blind Pass the other day, not all the shells were great finds, that's for sure. Many were arks mixed in with clams and some small whelks.

It takes looking, and sometimes you have to sit right down to work over a section of shells to find something worth keeping. In other words, you have to be selective.

Some shellers we watched didn't care much whether someone like myself would say their finds were special or not. They collected bags of shells for their own use. There's probably a lot of grandchildren up north who will find some shells in their stockings this Christmas!

These mounds of shells do occur from time to time on every beach on the Islands. If the waves and currents hit a part of the beach just right, many different types of shells will wash up. That's one advantage of shelling in the cooler months.

Good shelling this week, and remember Sanibel's limit of two live shells per species per person.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-3459 for information.

SCCF efforts help replenish Islands

Thanks to the will of nature and the dedicated efforts of the Sanibel Captiva Conservation Foundation Research Committee, the barn owl has enjoyed a resurgence on Sanibel over the past few years.

Since last fall, seven young barn owls have hatched in two of the 49 boxes committee volunteers have erected all over the Islands.

Last Thursday volunteers banded two young barn owls at the home of Dr. Bill and Helen Webb. Ten weeks old and ready to fledge, the owls hissed and clacked their beaks as SCCF Manager Steve Phillips climbed up a ladder on the side of the Webb's home, reached into the box, put the owls head first into a megaphone-shaped roll of paper and passed them to Webb, who in turn passed them to Dr. Steve Pieri, who was waiting on the ground.

The young, downy birds with classic heart-shaped faces were then fitted with small silver bands that read: "Notify U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, U.S.A." Each band also carried an identification number.

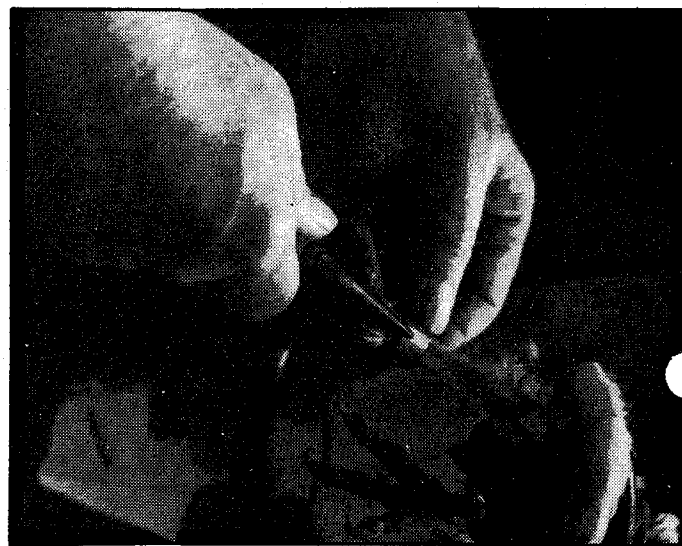

Their tail feathers not fully developed, the young were about a week away from flying the coop, Webb said.

The two owls bring to four the number that have hatched and taken up residence at the Webb's box this year.

"The last pair of young would come back and sit on top of the box and be fed by the adult owls two to three weeks after fledging," Webb said. "It will be two to three months before they are really able to hunt for themselves, and two years before they reach maturity."

Phillips salvaged the decomposed remains of a third barn owl, estimated to be five weeks old. Webb speculated it may have been the victim of disease, overcrowding (the parents may not have been able to provide enough food to support three young) or perhaps even poisoned food.

"With the increase in barn owls here we ought to be more and more careful about putting out rat poison," Webb said. He called the owls "self-setting rat traps."

The remains of the owl will be boiled and its skeleton added to the SCCF reference collection.

At the conservation foundation, where two barn owls hatched and fledged late last year, one of four eggs recently hatched (another rucked; two disappeared), and the young owl will soon be ready to leave the nest.

Barn owls hunt rats and field mice for food and usually choose open attics or barns for nesting. Since the hurricane of 1926, which destroyed agriculture here, however, the amount of open land has shrunk. And more important, most newer buildings do not facilitate nesting.

At Webb's initiative, 49 barn owl boxes have been built by Al Lloyd and a host of volunteers since the summer of 1980 in an effort to solve the housing crisis. Built from scrap plywood salvaged from area construction sites, the boxes have been erected on and near homes on Sanibel and Captiva.

With four young veterans of the Webbs' barn owl box, Webb attributes the success to location. "The place is quiet; there is lots of solitude."

The Webbs say they have a "completely parental feeling toward the young owls." Parenthood, Webb said, "has been rewarding to us."

Five years ago Albert Evans set his sights on optometry. The University of Florida graduate with honors in chemistry entered the University of Houston College of Optometry and graduated Dr. Albert Evans four years later.

Last month Evans opened his practice on Sanibel with a clear view of what he hopes the future brings. "I want to earn my reputation as an optometrist on Sanibel," he says in his office on Periwinkle Way.

After he graduated from optometry school, Evans and his new wife moved to Johannesburg, South Africa, where Evans started a contact lens department in the office of that country's foremost children's optometrist.

He had traveled all his life with his airline pilot father. After a year of traveling around South Africa, however, Evans knew he wanted to come back to Sanibel, where his family had settled in 1963.

"After seeing the rest of the world," he says, "I knew I didn't want to wait until I was 60 years old to come back to Sanibel.

"I would be dedicated to optometry no matter where I was," he adds. "But practicing it on Sanibel makes me that much happier with my job."

If he had stayed in Houston, Evans says, he would have spent an hour driving both to and from his office each day. On Sanibel, however, he is five minutes from home or office at any given time and gladly spends the two hours that otherwise would be "on the road" in his office. "I don't mind 10-hour days in my office because I enjoy what I'm doing so much," he says.

Optometry was the most attractive option Evans put forth for himself when he realized several years ago it was time to "decide what I would do for the rest of my life."

"I wanted to combine math and science and people," he says. "I had it narrowed down to law, architecture or optometry. Optometry won out because of all the physics involved. I love physics."

Evans tackled optometry school with all the vigor he would need to ensure a successful graduate school career. He graduated Summa Cum Laude.

He spent only two months setting up his Sanibel office, after leaving South Africa and indulging in a delayed honeymoon in Paris. "I knew what I would need, so I ordered the equipment and then just had to wait," he says.

But he didn't "just wait." While the equipment was en route from all over the country, Evans built the signs and display cases, laid the carpeting and even potted the plants in his new office before opening Oct. 18.

Couldn't he have stepped into a ready-made office in a big city and by-passed all the work of establishing a business?

"Sure," he says. "I could have gone to Miami and made a better living. But I wanted to come to Sanibel. I grew up here for the most part, went to elementary school here and knew what this Island was all about.

"People here chose Sanibel because they have a common bond, common interests. That's what I wanted to be a part of, too."

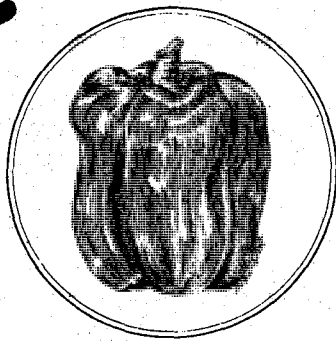

Have the changes in the Island over the years bothered Evans? No. "There have been very little changes," he says. "There's more traffic, but even that has come gradually.

"I don't think Sanibel has anything to fear," he adds thoughtfully. "It's almost guaranteed that the Island will grow old gracefully."

Sanibel Recreation Director Dick Noon, left, smiles as he receives a check for $1,000 from Bill Frey, center, and Walter Klie, right, of the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce. "Your donation couldn't have come at a better time," Noon told the chamber president and executive director. The money will be put toward construction of and equipping the municipal gymnasium. A crowd of spectators gathered on the fishing pier last Wednesday while a 21-foot pleasure craft burned approximately 1,000 feet off the Causeway.

One man suffered second degree burns on his legs and two other men escaped injury when the boat became engulfed in flames. Coast Guard officials said Monday they were uncertain how the fire started, but the boat was destroyed. The three men on the boat jumped into the water and were picked up by other boaters in the area. In the photo at right, a Coast Guard cutter makes its way toward the burning boat. Photos by David Meardon.

Pepper's opens in Tahitian Gardens

By Carol Kranichfeld

With menu headings reminiscent of old Beatles songs like "The Long and Winding Pasta," "Just A Little Help From Your Friends" (appetizers), "Abbey Road" (beef and veal), "Chicken In The Sky With Diamonds" and "Yellow Submarines's Delight" (seafood), Pepper's Restaurant opened last week in Tahitian Gardens.

Owners Bud and Mary Locicero plan to keep Pepper's open for lunch, "attitude adjustment hour" and dinner until 11 p.m.

Pepper's menu also includes vegetarian delights under the heading of the "Octopus Garden" for those not inclined toward beef, chicken, veal or seafood. Eggplant Parmigiana, Tomato Florentine, and Melody Saute are but three vegetarian selections from which to choose.

Beverages have not been neglected by the owners, who seem particularly dedicated to detail. The "Four Vestal Virgins" offers non-alcoholic drinkers four ideas on refreshing drinks such as "Mother Nature's Sun" (strawberry pina colada), "Run For Your Life" (fresh squeezed oranges, limes, lemons topped with whipped cream), "Quarrymen Revived" (fresh lime, lemon or lemon-lime freeze) and "Daytripper" (an Island-style pina colada).

For the folks who are looking for something stronger, Pepper's suggests one of the following: Tropical Storm (rainbow blend of strawberry and apricot liqueurs, orange juice and rum), Gulf of Mexico (take a dive into this one, you will either sink or swim, says the menu) or Comba Colada (dark rum, banana and strawberry).

And for those ready to settle in for a long winter's night, Pepper's will conjure up your favorite drinks by the pitcher.

Eating for two or more is also made easy by Pepper's chefs, who offer four unique selections by the plateful.

The atmosphere at Pepper's is likely to delight anyone who enters, with its special glass-enclosed dining room, one-way mirrors dividing various portions of the restaurant, plants galore, and even a tiny private dining room for the most romantic of dinners.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

Last week's column noted certain telltale signs that alert Islanders to the fact that The Season is nearly upon us. Having submitted that article to The Islander, it suddenly occurred to me that, this year, I would be most intimately involved with the return of our winter residents.

As a member of the Island house-sitting brigade, I had lived in the very lap of luxury in a lovely bay-side home for some six months.

Both the house, and I, had survived the threat of Alberto, the nasty propensity of weeds to divide and multiply outrageously, the "No-Name Storm," erratic bombing runs by Mosquito Control, horrendous rains, the devious attacks of a malicious Strangler Fig tree and the utterly unsolicited fondness of an awesome alligator for wallowing on my side of the canal.

However, all good things must come to an end. I decided to call my "houseparents" and find out when they expected to return. It appeared that three adults, one large dog and one small bird in a big cage would arrive the following week.

Splendid! That would give me ample time in which to indulge in a veritable orgy of Harriet Homemaker activity (normally reserved for rainy days) to ensure that everything was quite in order.

Some people love to organize and plan, and I am most certainly one of them. I even go so far as to consider contingencies, even very improbable and highly unlikely contingencies. Unfortunately, my contingency planning failed to cover three successive situations that suddenly reduced my sensible schemes to a shambles.

Readers of The Islander may remember Missy (Nov. 2), the impetuous teenage relative whom I had deposited (for safekeeping) in a Florida boarding school. Alas, a call from the school informed me that -- after only one week in residence -- Missy had elected to waltz down the fire escape of girls' dorm, and up the fire-escape of the boys' dorm, at a most unsuitable hour. (She never listened to me when I told her that those clonking clogs would get her into trouble!)

And so, I now had messy Missy in tow during her period of temporary suspension which, naturally, coincided with my period of cleaning and moving. General Eisenhower's concerns about rotten weather on the eye of the Normandy invasion really seemed quite paltry by comparison.

Well, I reasoned, surely my good-natured house-sitting roommate would rise to this unfortunate occasion. She would be more than willing to add a few more items to her list of cleaning chores.

Having altered everyone's cleaning schedule to my satisfaction, I was soon felled by the full import of the phrase, "The spirit is willing, but the flesh is weak."

Shortly after the return of the prodigal Missy, my roommate "threw out" her back. Now I do not know precisely how one manages to accomplish this feat, but the effect of the exertion is readily apparent: the victim is in great agony -- and utterly supine for the duration.

Somehow, of course, we all managed to move out and I contrived to clean. On the day my houseparents were due to arrive, I returned to their home for a final inspection.

I was rather pleased with our efforts, and I decided that a brief trip to the bathroom would not seriously violate the pristine premises. I admired the lovely blue water in the toilet bowl and hoped my houseparents were equally partial to royal blue. I flushed.

The plumbing mechanism sounded rather odd. Royal blue water soon reached the level of the bowl, overflowed, inundated the floor, poured out into the hall and oozed through the wall into the master bedroom - staining the fringes of a white bedspread!

I tore out of the bathroom, yanked endangered Oriental rugs out of the way, grabbed the mop and desperately endeavored to cope with the inexorable flow of the beautiful blue Danube. I believe tears began to stream down my face as I wrung out the mop in the bathtub (my immaculate bathtub!).

Fortunately, toilet bowls do not regurgitate indefinitely. At the first sign of a lull, I made a frantic call to my roommate at her store: "This is not a social call. This is an emergency. Please come immediately!"

And, bless her heart (and aching back), she did. As I recall, she found me mopping up blue water and muttering some ancient Druid incantation that, I am quite sure, does not bear repeating. I scribbled a three-page billet doux to the houseparents which, in essence, warned them, Caveat

Toilet!

Alas, our weary houseparents were in no position to Caveat Toilet when they arrived within an hour of our hasty retreat. We had locked them out of their own home!

Once all the Sturm und Drang had subsided, my friends from the North were extremely gracious in their assurances that the house looked just fine. "Was anything amiss?" I inquired. Well, there was one little thing that puzzled them: "Everything was so nice and clean that we just can't figure out how you missed those pieces of spaghetti."

"Oh, you mean those little pieces of uncooked spaghetti lying on the kitchen counter? Well, we have two kinds of Palmetto bugs in Florida. One is native, while the other..."

The accident put a hole in the door and broke a window of Daus' 1976 Chevrolet. Police estimated damage to Daus' car at $500 and damage to Bergman's 1978 Oldsmobile at $50.

A Sanibel bicyclist escaped injury when he ran into a car on Periwinkle Way on Wednesday morning, Nov. 3. Robert Noah of 1409 Albatross Road struck a car that turned into the bike path to enter the Periwinkle Place shopping center parking lot. The car was driven by Ralph Cannati of 966 Kings Crown Drive. No charges were filed.

A Kingston, Ontario, man was charged with improper backing after he hit a parked car in the Surftrider condominium parking lot on Sunday night, Nov. 7. The Ontario car struck a car owned by a Delafield, Wis., man. Police estimated there was $150 damage to the Ontario car and $100 to the parked car.

A Nashville, Tenn., man reported his car was struck while it was parked at F & B Oyster House on Wednesday evening, Nov. 10. Police estimated there was $90 damage to the car.

Editor's note: Two weeks ago Police Beat carried a report of the theft of a stereo from a van that was parked at the Timbers restaurant. Timbers manager Matt Asen reported last week the owners of the van notified him the stereo had been missing before they went to the restaurant.

Guide teaches children lessons in Island history, ecology

Children are an often overlooked part of the Islands' tourist population, but two Islanders have recently done their part to ensure our young visitors an educational and fun introduction to Sanibel and Captiva.

Writer Maggie Greenberg and artist Nancy Olds have compiled A Child's Guide to Sanibel and Captiva: Things to Color and Discover. The book follows last year's publication of Greenberg and Olds' shelling guide for the Islands.

The child's guide represents the author and artist's efforts to produce a true guide to the Islands for children of all ages. A series of 60 poems is meant to be educational and informative; the black and white drawings can be colored by budding artists.

In the introduction to the guide, Greenberg says, "Children are blessed with boundless curiosity, an eagerness to know all about the things they see. Therefore, this guide is for children of all ages who would like to learn (painlessly, of course) something about the sights, animals, plants, trees, flowers, birds and shells found on the Islands.

"The protection of wildlife and the importance of conservation are constant themes throughout the guide. Moreover, on the assumption that a little knowledge is not necessarily a dangerous thing, some history is included -- rather surreptitiously."

The guide was printed at The Print Shop of the Islands by owners Bob and Mary Dellorto. "We feel they showed fine taste and judgment throughout," Greenberg says about the Dellorto's efforts to ensure their clients did not suffer frustrating delays in getting the guide on the market.

A Child's Guide to Sanibel and Captiva is available at The Island Book Nook for $3.50 per copy. Issues can be ordered by mail from The Book Nook, P.O. Box 918, Sanibel, FL 33957. When ordering by mail please add 80 cents for each copy to cover postage and handling. Florida residents add 5 percent sales tax.

THERE IS A STORY PEOPLE TELL OF SILLY SALLY SLATER, WHO THOUGHT IT WOULD BE LOTS OF FUN TO FEED AN ALLIGATOR. WHEN ONCE SHE HAD NO FOOD TO GIVE HER FAVORITE ISLAND GATOR, SHE WAS SAD, BUT IT WAS MAD - AND VERY NEARLY ATE HER!

A NOTICE TO OUR SANIBEL AND CAPTIVA FRIENDS:

Conservation through utilization:

Use them or lose them

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

NAIROBI, NOV. 14 - Last week we discussed the idea, which is now gaining acceptance in these parts, of the domestication of the great herbivores of Africa in order to save them from probable extinction or, at best, impaction to the point of virtual disappearance.

"Use them or lose them" is the key phrase often heard among those who espouse this concept. The "use them" part, insofar as the herbivores are concerned, means eat them: feed them to a burgeoning protein-starved population.

This week we discuss the "use them" factor in another concept. I first became acquainted with the conservation value of using animal species in order to save them in Haiti.

The northern tidal flats partly encircling the great Bay of Gonaive that lies between the two "finger" peninsulas of Hispaniola are home to the hordes of Flamingoes that are carefully tended during their breeding season at Inagua by the Bahamas National Trust.

Much of the rest of the year the Flamingoes strain the shallow tidal waters of Haiti for their food, tiny crustacea.

For years my Haitian friend Jacques "harvested" about 100 Flamingoes annually and exported them to the United States and European zoo trade. He encouraged the natives residing in the feeding area to protect the animals from those who would kill them.

Jacques paid $10 per healthy trapped bird to these same natives who realized their value. That total comes to only $1,000 a year. But ancillary fund injections - food, care, equipment, gas sales related to care and transport of the captive birds - added at least another $1,000. Two thousand dollars in that poverty-stricken area is a lot of money. If you think Bangladesh is poor, take a look at Haiti.

The locals cared for the flocks and prevented marauding by others of their protein-starved kind who would wish to eat the Flamingoes. As a result, the joint Bahamian-Haitian Flamingo flock prospered, scarcely altered by the harvest of a mere 100 from the flock of many thousands.

Enter the Audubon Society. They were outraged at the harvest. Some older members, of whom there are many, recalled the time the Flamingo was naturally found in Florida. (I saw my last wild one 45 years ago with famed ornithologist and friend Oscar Owre. The few seen today in Florida are escapees).

Audubon authorities blamed the Flamingo's problem on Jacques and his harvest and went to "Papa Doc" (this was before the time of the current president-for-life, "Baby Doc"). The old president, always seeking approbation to offset his bad world press, decreed a stop to the "harvest."

Flamingoes breed in the Bahamas at Inagua. The same flock spends part of the year in Haiti where their existence today is in jeopardy due to "conservation backlash."

This action did not save the Flamingoes. It had, in fact, the exact opposite effect. The locals who had heretofore protected the flocks because the birds had monetary value to them, abandoned their care and took to killing the Flamingoes. Today, their numbers reduced, Flamingo carcasses can be bought in village markets for a few cents.

Moral: Use Them or Lose Them.

I don't apologize for writing about a Haitian wildlife situation while worrying about wildlife here in Kenya. For there are about two million Flamingoes protected in this country today. Thus the Haitian example is very applicable here and also, in lots of ways, Haiti is more African than Africa.

Moreover the principles of Conservation Through Utilization are applicable everywhere, as we shall see when we discuss Lions and Leopards in Part III of "Use Them or Lose Them."

Editor's note: The opinions expressed in this article are those of the writer and do not necessarily reflect the views of The Islander.

Westall, osprey open Tuesday at the Center

By Carol Kranichfeld

A live osprey will accompany Island naturalist Mark "Bird" Westall to the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Center this Tuesday to open this season's popular Tuesday at the Center lecture series.

Westall will also present a 35-minute film containing unique footage on a pair of ospreys that returned to Scotland, a country that lost its entire osprey population 50 years ago.

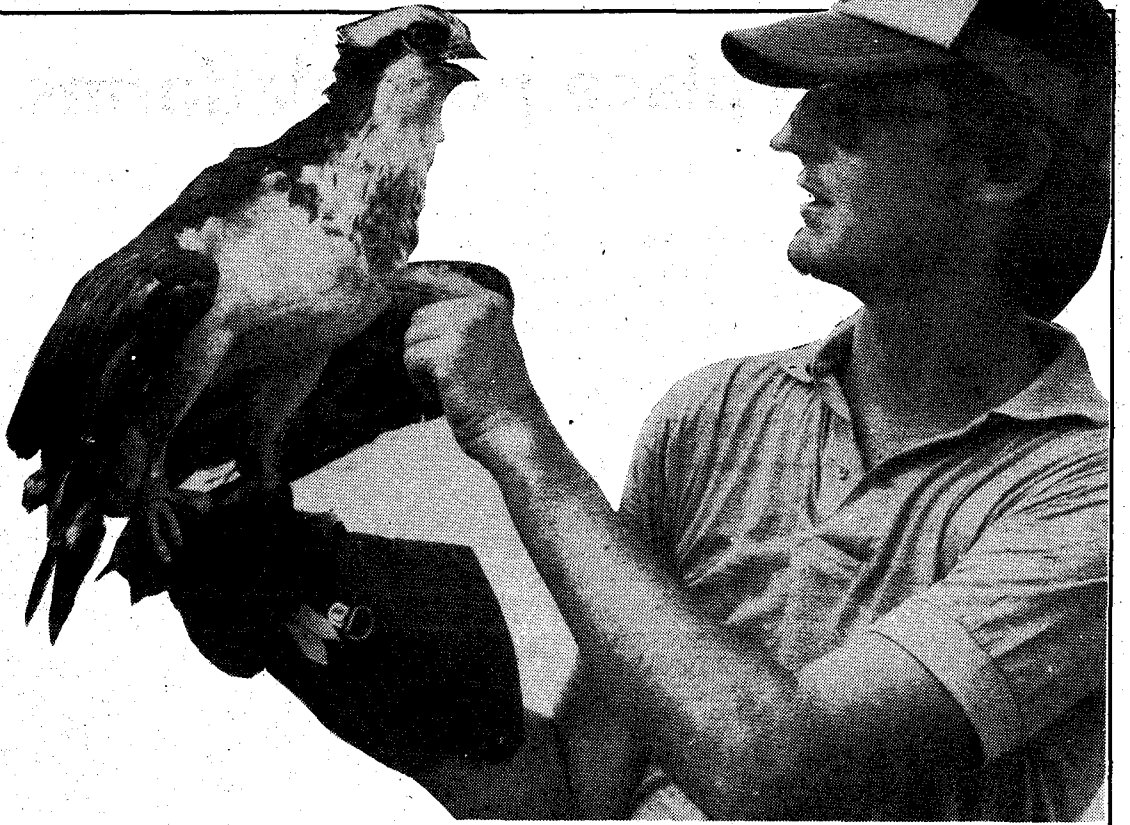

Additionally, as president of The International Osprey Foundation that is based on Sanibel, Westall will give an update on the status of the Island's osprey population, which is unique in that it does not migrate.

The Tuesday at the Center lectures, which will be offered at 2 p.m. each Tuesday through March 30, will be delivered by experts on a variety of ecology-related topics.

The 1982-83 lecture series will include several new speakers who are planning seminars on Florida deer, mangrove ecology and the Florida panther.

A "Guide for Planting and Maintenance of Mangroves" will be delivered next Tuesday, Nov. 23, Fort Myers Marine Advisory Program representative Anne Marshall. Admission to each program for non-members will be $1 for adults and $.50 for children.

Tripods replace pole platforms for osprey nesting

By Carol Kranichfeld

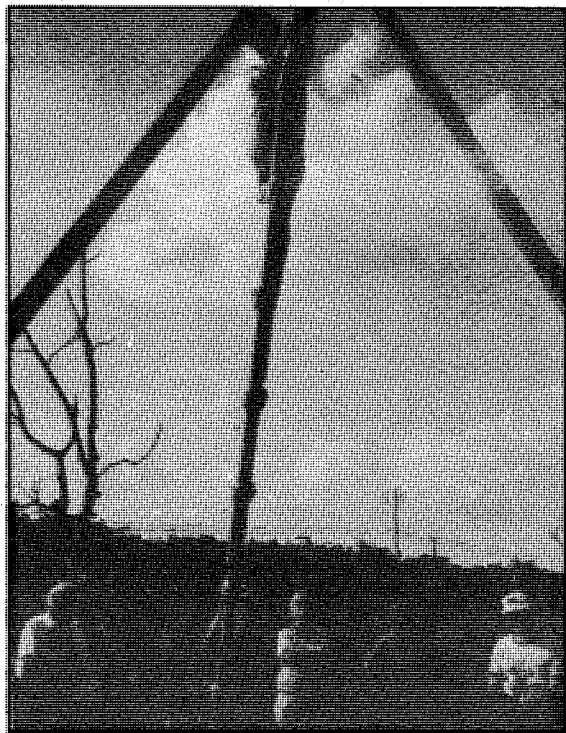

Sanibel's ospreys now have a choice of housing, thanks to a handful of concerned citizens and some old-fashioned ingenuity.

The familiar pole platforms that have served as artificial nesting sites for the Islands' birds of prey may soon be a thing of the past, replaced by a new, tripod-style platform that not only weathers tropical winds and rain a bit better but is also easier to climb for bird banding.

The design is similar to tripods erected in Michigan by osprey authority Sergei Postupalsky and in the western United States by local power companies to encourage raptor nesting.

Highly efficient in water-logged areas, the tripod nesting platforms are perfect for areas like Water Shadows off Dixie Beach Boulevard, where the first tripod was erected last week by Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation volunteers under the stewardship of Island naturalist Mark "Bird" Westall. Two additional tripods might be installed later on SCCF property.

Dino N. Phillips 11/82

Another Phillips adds talent to crafts fair

The tent orders are in, booths are under construction, and island craftsmen are busy preparing for the 1982 BIG Arts Crafts Fair which will be held this Saturday, Nov. 20.

Fair goers this year will recognize familiar faces from last year's fair, including Sara and Marc Aune (this year's fair chairmen), Deb Gleason from Caloosa Canvas and Dave and Barbara Hoggett from A Touch of Sanibel Pottery. Also featured will be paintings, sculpture, glass, graphics, creative writings, textiles and wood carvings.

But visitors will also enjoy some new booths, such as the one sporting works by brothers Dino and Lew Phillips and Lew's wife, Katherine Kelley-Phillips.

Most Islanders already are familiar with the creations of Lew and Kat, but Dino's works will be on display at the fair for the first time. Shown otherwise exclusively at the Sanibel Gallery, Dino's pen and ink sketches are characterized by touches of humor and splashes of brilliant color.

His subjects are Island-oriented - pelicans, egrets, sand dunes and sunglasses presented in sketches and in miniature Sanibel-Captiva posters that represent different aspects of Island life.

Dino will show only originals, no prints, he says, at the crafts fair this year.

An art education major at the University of Kentucky in Lexington and at Eastern Kentucky University in Richmond, Dino has experimented with most every technique imaginable in his art work and while teaching slow learners at Boyle County Elementary in Danville, Ky.

"I learned that my methods worked very well with the slow learners, but they would also work with any child," he says.

He also helped illustrate books for the Christian Appalachian Program in Lancaster and a cookbook published by the program filled with illustrations of old houses and other landmarks of the Danville area.

Dino's artistic talents have taken many roads, beginning with pastels and progressing to pen and ink, which he considers "unorthodox" but highly enjoyable.

Everything he produces, he says, is done with "pure emotion," which helps him create works he would buy himself. "I enjoy my work so much," he says. "Everything I do has to have at least a little meaning to it."

The BIG Arts Crafts Fair will open at 10 a.m. and last until 6 p.m. Bluegrass music, food, beer, wine and soft drinks will be available under the tents at the Sanibel Community Center. Admission is only $1, so bring your family and friends for a day of certain enjoyment.

Opening reception, juried art show top arts agenda

The Schoolhouse Gallery starts its winter season this weekend with an exhibition of works by popular Island artist Ikki Matsumoto. The exhibit includes recent acrylic on canvas works of the artist's impressions of Maine, where he spent part of his summer.

The gallery also offers limited edition prints, previously sold out, of some of the artist's earlier pieces.

A reception will be held at the gallery from 5-8 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 21, with Matsumoto present to sign all 1983 By The Beautiful Sea calendars that are sold. Refreshments will be served.

The Matsumoto exhibit will be on display through December.

Island artists this week are preparing to drop off their entries for this year's Sanibel-Captiva Art League Juried Show, which is expected to be the best show in the history of the league.

The show opens from 1-4 p.m. on Sunday, Nov. 21, with awards presented 3 p.m. at the Captiva Community Center. Each winning artist will be honored personally by art show judge Roberta Snyder of Cape Canaveral, an accomplished watercolorist whose works can be found in the personal collection of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale and at the Kennedy Space Center.

Up to three entries can be made by any member in good standing of any art league in the Art Council of Southwest Florida. Entries will be received from 9 a.m. until noon today, Tuesday, Nov. 16, at a marked blue over white van near the Goodwill depository at Gulf Points Plaza at the intersection of San Carlos and McGregor Boulevards and at the Captiva Community Center from 1-4 p.m. this afternoon.

The first week's visitors to the show will have an opportunity to select the recipient of the "Popular Prize and Ribbon," a first-time award offered by the Art League this year.

Free gift wrapping will be offered, and packing and shipping will be available throughout the exhibit, which will run through Sunday, Dec. 5. Viewing hours are set for 1-4 p.m. daily.

For further details call Ruth North, 472-5274.

Learn to extract colors from everyday plants and dye wool, cotton and silk fibers as well as basketry reeds. Or learn to create an Appalachian style basket using natural materials. Or build your own loom and weave a beautiful cotton or wool shawl.

Local fiber artists Polly Matsumoto and Anita Amodeo will be teaching all the craftsmanship necessary to master dyeing, weaving and basketry at one-day workshops on Sanibel this winter.

Vegetable dyeing classes are scheduled for this Thursday, Nov. 18. The basket weaving workshop will be held on Saturday, Nov. 20, with triangular shawl lessons to follow on Thursday, Dec. 2. All workshops will last from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. For more information, call Amodeo, 481-1964.

The BIG Arts Annual Dinner Meeting will be held this Saturday, Nov. 20, at the Sanibel Community Center. All members, guests and Islanders are welcome to attend the function at which officers for next year will be elected.

An individual charge of $3 will cover the cost of entree, and each person should bring either a salad or dessert to serve six. BYOB. Set-ups will be provided. The bar will open at 6 p.m., and dinner will be served at 7 p.m. For reservations call 472-5519 or 472-3526.

Jazz fans are in for an evening treat when clarinetist Buddy DeFranco joins the Edison Community College Jazz Ensemble for a program of inspiration, technique and improvisation on Monday, Nov. 22.

Considered one of the most imaginative clarinetists performing today, DeFranco gained acclaim as the principal clarinetist for the famous Count Basie Septet in 1950, and thereafter when he was the leader of the Glenn Miller Orchestra (1966-74).

DeFranco, who began playing the clarinet when he was 9 and by 14 had won the national Tommy Dorsey Swing

Contest, today maintains a full schedule of concert tours, TV and radio guest performances and recording commitments.

Tickets are now available from members of the ECC Jazz Ensemble at $3 each and will also be sold at the door. The concert will begin at 8 p.m. at Seven Lakes Auditorium.

An evening of comic opera is coming to Fort Myers when the Miami Opera's Touring Company brings Mozart's The Impresario to the Cape Coral High School on Saturday, Nov. 20.

Additional works from well-known operas by Donizetti, Verdi, Moore, Sullivan, Gounod and Puccini will also be performed.

Tickets will be on sale for $6, $8 and $10, with all seats reserved. The 8 p.m. performance will be sponsored by the Lee County Alliance of the Arts and the School Board of Lee County's Adult and Community Education Department. For tickets and information call 939-2787.

The Lee County Youth Symphony presents an hour-long free concert at 3 p.m. this Sunday, Nov. 21, in the Fort Myers Tourist Center gazebo on Edwards Drive. Following the concert, students can apply for membership in the Lee County Youth Symphony.

An organ concert with Carlo Curlee, organist of international fame, will be presented Monday, Nov. 22, at the First United Methodist Church of Fort Myers. At outdoor concert will include Curlee's favorite master works and will begin at 8 p.m.

The Fort Myers Beach Art Association is sponsoring a round-up of works by local artists Lantz Caldwell, Darryl Pottorf and Tim Dragon through Nov. 26.

Caldwell's subtle themes are created primarily to provoke emotional responses from the viewer and are frequently a combination of many artistic mediums and techniques. An experienced curator and accomplished artist with more than 30 shows to his credit, Caldwell has been director of the Edison Community College's Gallery of Fine Arts Program since 1980.

Well known by local theatre patrons for his set designs, Pottorf assists internationally renowned artist Robert Rauschenberg.

After receiving his degree from Florida State University, Pottorf lived in Florence, Italy, where he studied Etruscan, Renaissance, Baroque and Mannerist art. During this time he became a site artist on an Etruscan archeological dig. He returned to the U.S. in 1978, when he began work as a designer for a small theatre.

Until three years ago, Dragon's media was primarily oil on canvas. An opportunity to work with ceramics arose and he began working at Edison Community College, where he began to explore organic shapes.

Viewing hours will be 2-4 p.m. daily through Nov. 26. For further information, contact gallery manager Nancy Thompson, 463-3909.

Free workshops in scene design and construction and voice will be open to the public at Edison Community College on Friday, Nov. 19.

Students in the scene design workshop will be part of a survey of the process by which a set designer's concept moves from the drawing board to the stage (2-3 p.m.). Voice workshop students (3-4 p.m.) will present one aria for critique with their own accompanists.

Both workshops will be held in the Humanities Building and will be conducted by the Greater Miami Opera Company.

For further details call ECC, 489-9298.

Holiday shopping will be made easy at the Art Council of Southwest Florida Juried Art Show, in which members of 11 local arts groups will participate.

For the last 12 years the council has sponsored an invitational show in March and a juried show in November. Only artists who have been accepted into the juried show are eligible for the invitational.

The exhibit is open through Saturday, Nov. 20, at the Coralwood Mall on Del Prado Boulevard in Cape Coral.

Islander sports quiz

Six people called in with the correct answer to last week's Islander Sports Quiz. Walt Ciesiowski, Toby Cudahy, Rosemarie Best, E.P. Bethune, Lloyd Kylo and Big Peppers all knew that Tony Dorsett is first of the NCAA all-time rushing list.

This week we want to know if you know who hit the only fair ball out of Yankee Stadium. Here's a hint -- it was in 1934.

If you think you know the answer, call us at The Islander, 472-5185. If you're right, we'll print your name in next week's paper.

Beachview Fall Classic

Bob McFarlane emerged as champion flight winner of the Beachview Fall Classic last week at the Beachview Golf Club, outshooting runner up Clem Donnell.

Jeff Dean took top honors in the "A" flight, with Ed Reed finishing second.

In the "B" flight, Harry Gustafson was tops, besting runner up Trump Bradley. Jim Briscoe was the winner of the consolation flight, and Bob Waterhouse finished second.

In regular tournament play on Saturday, Nov. 13, taking top honors and setting a new record with a round of plus-20 was the foursome of Lee Gibson, Stan Bailey, Ray McKernan and Dave Dean.

Finishing second, 10 strokes off the pace, was the team of Jeff Dean, Dick Light, Phil Millsom and Curt Washburn. Ray McKernan was the high individual at plus-eight.

The team of Bob Neth, Jim Esson, Dick Hawthorne and Ray Howland was tops at plus-six in play on Tuesday, Nov. 9. The team of Bob McFarlane, Hank Groh, Ed Reed and Ray Howland finished one stroke back. Ray Howland and Tom Judson tied for high individual honors at plus-four.

Peppers lose fourth outing

The Sanibel Peppers lost their fourth soccer game in as many outings last Saturday, but coach Mike Gaylord says he is encouraged by his team's performance.

"Every week the team has improved tremendously. The kids are starting to score as a team and stay in their position," Gaylord said after his team's heartbreaking 3-2 loss to Pete's Electric at Terry Park.

The team was defeated in its previous three competitions by scores of 2-0, 2-0 and 3-1. Several of the team's goals have been called back because of offside penalties, but Gaylord said the players are learning quickly under his and assistant coach Frank Powell's direction. The team's 18 players are 12 and under, but most are under 10, Gaylord said.

"Most of them have never played soccer before," said Gaylord, who praised the Fort Myers-Lee County Youth Association. "The league is well-organized and the games are well-officiated."

This Saturday, Nov. 20, the Peppers square off against Peking Express of Fort Myers at 9:45 a.m. at Shady Oaks.

Dunes men

Frank York and Henry McKee grabbed first place honors with a score of 60 in the Dunes Men Golf Association full-handicap golf tournament last week.

The duo of Scott Vanderbeck and Buhl

Burgoyne finished second at 61, tied with Frank Cassavell and Andy Van Haste. Third place honors also resulted in a tie with Bob Arthur and Tom Bulcock and Bill Ford and Paul Cornelius deadlocked at 62.

Psychologist offers advice, answers questions

This week The Islander introduces What's On Your Mind by licensed psychologist Francesca Wakin, Ph.D.

Wakin is a Sanibel resident who has a practice in Fort Myers and on the Island. In a monthly column, she will address questions from our readers or she will write about general situations she encounters in her practice. Write her in care of The Islander, P.O. Box 56, Sanibel, FL 33957.

Question: Sometimes I'm really "up" and other times I'm definitely "down." I'm a very moody person. Could I be a split personality?

Answer: Whoa! Slow down. Let's take a look at what you're saying. First, all of us are subject to moods, those shades of emotion in response to real or remembered situations. We all have times we feel we could take on the whole world and other times we feel alone, almost child-like in our sense of our own vulnerability.

We need to understand that there is nothing "wrong" with subtleties of mood, even those we feel are negative.

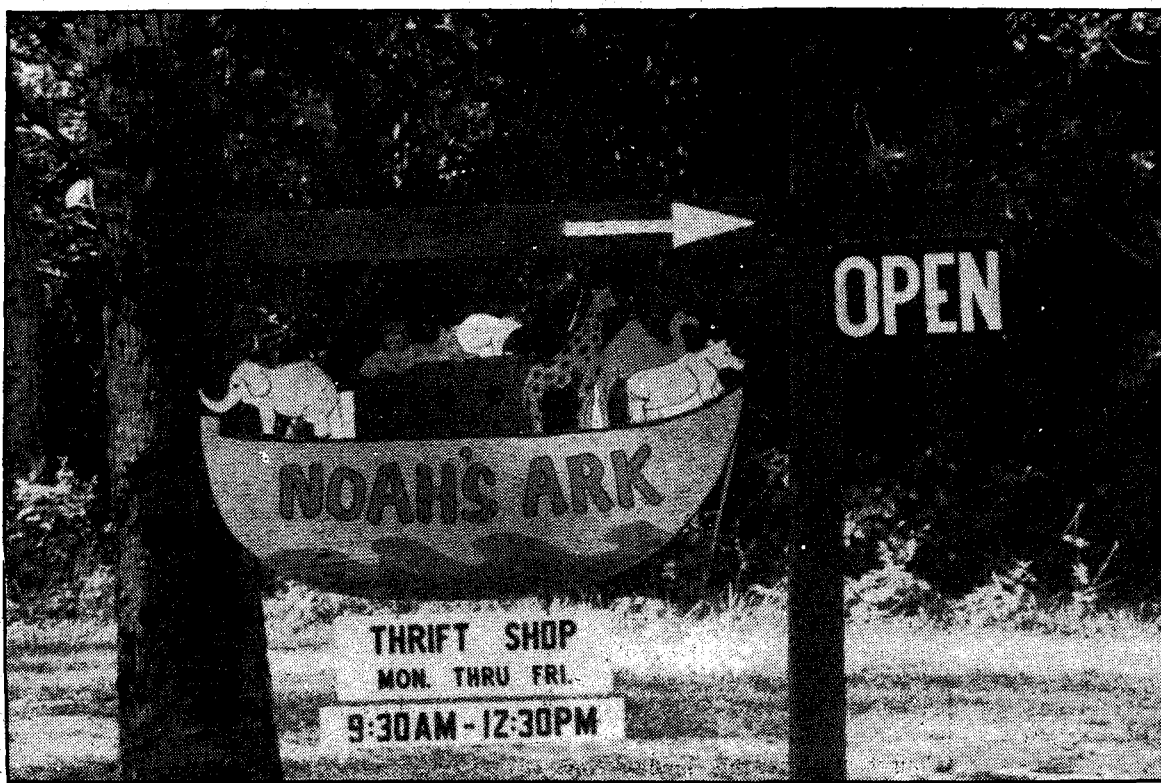

If, however, what you call moods are lengthy periods of time, say weeks of feeling depressed or fearful with any specific thing to be sad about or weeks of such elation that you are overspending, overtalking, overdrinking, almost frantic in your activity -- then you probably have a problem requiring professional help. But it is unlikely that the problem is "split personality."

Although "split personality" is often popularly misused for the more technical term, "multiple personality," the two are quite different. In the condition multiple personality, there is a splitting of the basic personality into two or more distinct, relatively complete, separate personalities.

The more familiar examples of these are the cases of "Eve" and "Sybil," made popular in books and film.

The term "split personality" refers to a splitting off of individual aspects of one's own basic personality. It is a severe form of unconsciously repressing a trait or characteristic or emotion that the person cannot accept within the self. For example, a sense of inferiority or of guilt might be repressed and the person might deny any sense of vulnerability and instead act as if he or she were, say, an agent of God, invincible. Obviously the term "split personality" is used generally to refer to an aspect of a far more severe disturbance than a simple change of mood.

COTI announces plans for annual meeting

The annual meeting of the Committee of the Islands has been scheduled for Tuesday, Dec. 7, at the Sanibel Community Association. The public is invited to the 10 a.m. meeting.

The membership will elect directors for two-year terms on the board of directors, hear reports on critical issues by committee chairmen, conduct other official business and hear from a speaker about a matter of general Island interest.

Several Islanders have been nominated for board membership, including Melena Eskew, former COTI board member and key figure in ROGO creation; Anina Glaize, one of Sanibel incorporation committee members and former chairman of the Shell Fair; Duane White, former mayor and City Council member, former president of the Sanibel Community Association, chairman of the first Planning Commission, Community Church board member and Lions Club member; Arthur Wycoff, former Planning Commissioner, president and officer of the Island Water Association.

Nominated for re-election to the board are George Houck, Mary Lou Husler, and Fred Metcalfe.

Those continuing on the board are Conrad Lickel, Carl Wagner, Mary Wegmuller and Hay Foster.

Retiring from the board are David Davenport, Danbridge Malong, Allen Miller, Henry Shelton and Olaf Vea.

In his letter calling the meeting, COTI Chairman Bo Vea summarized the accomplishments of the organization and asked all who feel COTI could be a force of good on the Islands to indicate so by sending in membership dues of $10 per person.

Issues that will be of concern to the group in the coming year include the final Comprehensive Land Use Plan revision, a thoughtful sewage disposal plan, possible Causeway purchase and bringing to issue a specific population limit and getting a strong ordinance that prohibits any more time share developments on the Island, Vea said.

Florene adds monogrammed sportswear to alterations business

By Catherine Battista

For thousands of years a great measure of Western Man's desire to ornament and embellish has been expended upon the initial letter.

All writing in early history was a sacred and mysterious form of expression. It was not by chance, therefore, that the letter was the symbol of saints, gods and the divine word.

Alterations, etc. by Florene in Scotty's Village has just started a service unique to Sanibel. Florene now carries an exciting line of separates and coordinaates for sports, leisure and play, all of which can be personalized with a monogram of your choice.

Perhaps Florene was not aware of the historic significance of the monogram, but she feels that everyone loves a logo or something that gives them their own identity.

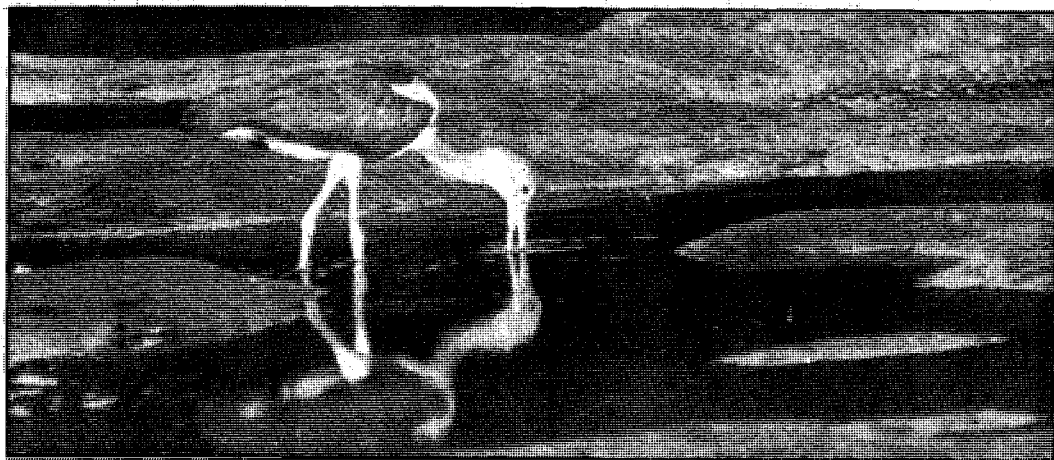

"It is all part of a status symbol," she says. "Everywhere we look we see the Gucci stripes, the La Coste Alligator, and the now familiar insignia which we know to be Diane Von Furstenburg, Christian Dior and Bill Bass."

The line of separates for leisure, sports and play includes tennis skirts, back wrap skirts and button front skirts. For the children, Florene carries pinafores, jump suits and coveralls. T-shirts complete the line. All items come in choice of color and fabric.

Almost five years ago, Florene Huggans moved to Sanibel from Chicago with her family. She has an 18-year-old daughter who is studying architecture at Edison Community College. Florene grew up in a bridal business started by her mother in 1937, so the fashion game is not new to her.

Besides the monogrammed separates, Florene will monogram almost anything, including totes, linens, hats, jackets and uniforms

Mangroves' vital role gains recognition

Mangroves aren't fussy. You find them in the swamps and marsh creeks and in the shallow bays, canals and estuaries that smell heavily of salt air and decaying vegetation.

In fact, those trees with their masses of tangled roots thrive in the salt-laden environment where fish come to feed, spawn and seek protection. Hundreds of species of fish and shellfish depend upon this seemingly inhospitable region for their gift of life and for their survival.

And it is the mangroves that play a most important role by supporting a far more infinite and complex food web than any ecosystem except a living coral reef.

Inhabitants of the estuarine areas are dependent upon vegetation to provide stability, food and protection. The leaves that fall from the mangroves break down into decayed materials that provide nutrients over and over again for the microscopic critters that are eaten by tiny mollusks, which are eaten by larger crustaceans, which are eaten by larger fish and so on up the food chain.

The trees also provide nesting and roosting sites for birds, and the densely tangled roots afford excellent habitat and spawning grounds for marine life.

The root system makes the mangroves important and beach stabilizers and natural land builders, too. Once established these roots trap debris and sediments washed up by tides or by the rush of fresh water to the sea, steadily building up the shoreline and even creating islands where none existed before. And in the process they filter suspended material and assimilate dissolved nutrients helping maintain water quality and productivity of coastal waters.

The mangroves survive in this environment because of their unique ability to obtain fresh water from salt water either by secreting excess salt through specialized glands or by filtering out salt through their roots. The thick spongy leaves are coated with a waxy layer to help prevent loss of acquired fresh water.

The mangroves have had to develop other modifications as well in order to survive.

The low levels of oxygen found in swamp muds have forced the roots to extend above the water. The prop roots of the red mangroves rise far above the high tide level -- a fact that resulted in the Indians calling them the "trees with twisted feet."

Black mangroves also have finger-like projections extending out of the mud from their submerged root system, while the white mangroves grow on higher and drier land.

The constant influx of new residents to the state and the consequent extensive shoreline development in recent years has had the effect of reducing mangrove populations and disturbing dependent ecosystems.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern end of the island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise!! It's all here -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island water-colors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells -- shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells -- the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet!
 "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, please assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.

Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents.

Minimum Legal Lengths
 Blue Fish 10 inches

Flounder	11 inches
Grouper	12 inches
Mackerel	12 inches
Mullet	12 inches
Pompano	10 inches
Red Fish	12 inches
Snook	18 inches
Trout	12 inches

Snook fishing is outlawed from June 30-Aug. 1.

SPEEDLIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County
 Sheriff's Department.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to bite you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

Dogs should never be permitted to run free on Sanibel.

Fence them, walk them on a leash or, if you must free your dog for a walk, keep him under voice control. Never tie your dog in an unfenced backyard.

For help with a nuisance alligator, call the following representatives of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association.
 They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329;
 Mark Westall, 472-5128.
