F & B plans to relocate on Palm Ridge Road

By Barbara Brundage

The F & B Oyster Co. probably will move from its present location on Periwinkle Way to a new site on Palm Ridge Road when a proposed addition to the Palm Ridge Place shopping center is completed next March, Dolph Reinhardt, co-owner of the seafood restaurant, said last week.

Reinhardt disclosed his plans last week during a Planning Commission hearing of his request for a development permit for the new facility. Dr. Edward Cooke, owner of Palm Ridge Place, appeared with Reinhardt before the commission.

The new building, designed to house a 150-seat restaurant, will be located on three lots on Palm Ridge Road between the existing shopping center and Wooster Lane. Additional parking for 84 cars will be provided on the site.

Because the additional spaces will more than double the on-site parking at the center, the Planning Department has recommended the applicants provide an engineer's analysis and evaluation of the impact of the proposed development on the surrounding road system.

The commission continued the hearing until this study is completed.

The Comprehensive Land Use Plan requires a developer to pay the full cost of any off-site transportation improvements or public facilities necessitated by such proposed development.

A major portion of the expected impact on traffic would be mitigated, the planning staff suggests, by eliminating the existing direct access from Palm Ridge Road and providing an access driveway on Wooster Lane.

Both Reinhardt and Cooke objected to this proposal. "I don't think the present tenants would appreciate this," Cooke said.

The existing septic tank at Palm Ridge Place is not adequate to service a 150-seat restaurant, the staff pointed out.

But Reinhardt said he has been assured by the Sanibel Sewer System that the shopping center could hook up to the new sewer main that will be installed along Periwinkle Way between Periwinkle Place shopping center and Tarpon Bay Road.

Bill Lee of Sanibel Sewer earlier informed the commission that businesses north of Periwinkle Way, at their request, would be connected to the new six-inch main.

He said the Florida Public Service Commission will be asked to extend Sanibel Sewer's service territory to include the area north of Periwinkle Way.

The commission has approved Sanibel Sewer System's development permit for construction of a lift station at Periwinkle Place and for installation of a force main along the south side of Periwinkle Way

Tickets running out for Island's appreciation dinner

By Cindy Chalmers

Less than 20 tickets remain for the Island's appreciation party that will honor retiring and retired city officials, party organizer Urban Palmer reported late last week.

The Texas ranch-style party is planned for Monday evening, Dec. 6, at the Sanibel Community Association. The honored guests will be Porter Goss, Duane White, City Attorney Neal Bowen and former City Councilman Charles LeBuff.

Goss and White stepped down from the City Council this election year. Bowen announced last month his resignation as the city's counsel effective Jan. 1. LeBuff served on Sanibel's original City Council.

Palmer has orchestrated a buffet dinner, dancing and cash bar for the evening. The dinner and dancing will be covered by a $7.50 admission ticket. The cash bar will be operated by the Sanibel Police Recreation club.

Tickets, if there are any left, are available from Palmer or from any representative of the following organizations or businesses: Bank of the Islands, the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce; the American Legion; the Rotary, Kiwanis and Lions clubs; the Committee of Neighborhood Associations; the Committee of the Islands; the Police Recreation Club; the Sanibel-Captiva Power Squadron; Bailey's; West Wind; or City Hall. For more information call Palmer, 472-1316.

Crabbing the refuge

They're the crabs best adapted to swimming, the ones that are cherished by man for their especially succulent meat and, as of Jan. 1, 1983, the ones that enjoy singular legislative protection from over-harvesting within the boundaries of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

They're edible blue crabs, Callinectes sapides, harvested by the millions throughout their range from the Chesapeake Bay to the Texas gulf each year and especially enjoyed by individual crabbers who visit Sanibel's refuge by day.

As of the first of the year, however, the refuge will enforce a new law handed down by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The law permits crabbing with a net only and outlaws use of monofilament line entirely. Officials hope the regulations will slow down harvesting of the crabs.

"I've seen people driving away with garbage cans filled with the crabs," refuge Manager Del Pierce says. "Some fill every available container, including the car trunk."

Although it is not as yet illegal to harvest such a number of crabs, refuge personnel feel uncontrolled harvesting is at the very least unethical and that refuge visitors should take home no more blue crabs than they can use the same day.

The refuge's new protective legislation will also help minimize the tragedies that inevitably occur when monofilament line, broken off and left behind or simply forgotten, wraps itself around the innocent bystanders — green herons, fledgling pelicans, even alligators — which eventually starve to death because of their inability to disentangle themselves from the nylon filament.

The new law will also eliminate the use of hooks and bait, which often wind up embedded in the throats of the animals that share the waters of the blue crabs.

"I've never understood the need to use a line or hook or bait, anyway," refuge staffer Gina Swails, a South Carolina native who has been a successful crab hunter using just a net since her childhood, says. "They don't even have mouths, so using a hook seems foolish."

Although crabbing under the new law might require crabbers to get their feet wet and spend a bit more time to catch enough for dinner, refuge management backs the new legislation wholeheartedly.

"We were beginning to have a real emergency situation on our hands," Pierce says. "So the regional office pushed the law through quickly."

The blue crab population has boomed, Pierce says, since the installation of water control structures on either side of the Wildlife Drive in 1980. "Crabs are carrion eaters and are known to sit and wait for a piece of dead fish or insect to float by. They prefer moving water, where the current carries carrion past them and they can snatch at it. That's probably why they prefer the waters near the control structures," he explains.

But the crab population near the first three water control structures has been hit hard and is "nearly played out," according to Pierce.

In response to the situation, the refuge advisory committee has begun to consider suggested guidelines that will eventually be posted near the crabbing areas.

Recommendations the committee is expected to make include limitation of a day's catch to 25 crabs or less (no females) with no hooks allowed.

Refuge personnel will patrol the areas for crabbers who disregard the suggested guidelines and the new net law. Litterbugs will be taken to task, as well.

Besides being an eyesore, litter left by thoughtless crabbers often winds up in the stomachs of resident alligators, says Pierce. The gators then become semi-tame and dependent on that litter as a source of food. "It's an entirely unacceptable situation," he says.

But those crabbers who follow the guidelines and laws set up by the refuge will be welcomed by the staff.

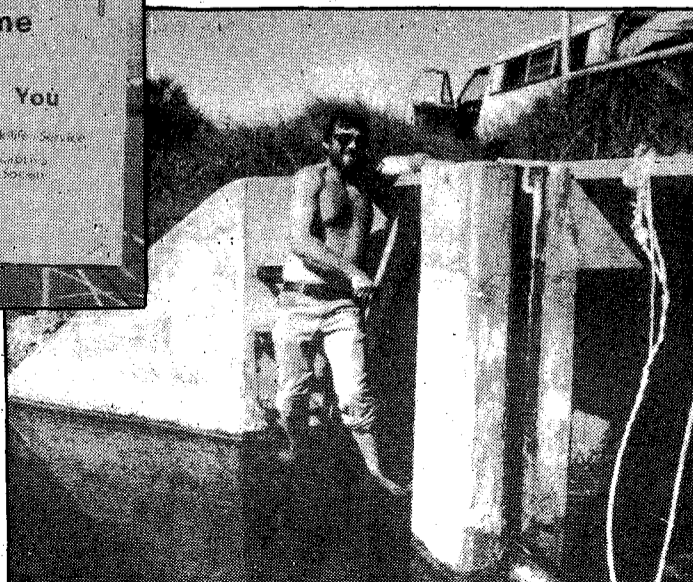

"We are happy to have people who enjoy catching and eating the blue crabs," says Pierce, who is quick to promise that special restrictive regulations will only be recommended as a last resort.

REPORT FROM THE SANIBEL RECREATION COMPLEX .....

We are pleased to advise you that construction on the new gymnasium is now nearing completion. We are planning to hold an open house in January (date to be announced) so that everyone can view this fine addition to our city recreation complex.

With the help of guarantors, we borrowed funds to build the gym at an economical time, while also minimizing disruption to the elementary school schedule.

We NOW need $75,000 to pay off the loan for construction, so our entire recreation facility can be totally free and clear of debt.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

There are so many Special Days from early September until the end of December that I have reached the conclusion that variety is not necessarily the spice of life that it is cracked up to be. Indeed, it often proves to be the most disruptive bane of one's orderly existence!

In theory, one should be able to lead a relatively free, unfettered and totally Sybaritic existence on Sanibel and Captiva.

While I certainly aspire to such heady heights of hedonism, some nagging remnant of a New England background obliges me to go about things in an organized manner. Therefore, my day, like ancient Gaul, is divided into three parts.

Mornings are devoted to jogging and tennis, vigorous activities that are supposed to ensure that mens sana resides in corpore sano.

Having disposed of physical requirements, afternoons are generally dedicated to writing. If the flesh be willing, but the mind woefully weak, I can at least assume the pensive pose of Rodin's marble man - and contemplate the callouses on my feet.

Evenings provide a respite from the day's battles with brains and brawn. Generous preprandial libations, good provender, the company of old friends, books to read in bed - all end the day very nicely indeed.

Alas, my systematic pursuit of pleasure in our earthly Eden frequently fails to follow the course that I have set, for a plethora of Special Days drives me off course - or out of my mind.

Fortunately, my mother (who is still concerned with my salvation) sends me the League of Women Voters' calendar every year. Although this calendar is a very drab, practical affair, it has the singular virtue of alerting me (well in advance) to certain Mighty Nuisance Days - generally inherited from the church, quaint custom or some dumb presidential decree.

The year really begins with Labor Day, one of the few Special Days that is not a mighty nuisance for Island mothers. The kids are going back to school - at last!

Ideally, of course, all children should be in school throughout the year, with an occasional respite from repression during major holidays (during which time they may be suspended from the ceiling until they reach the age of reason). Of course, J.J. Rousseau would never have agreed to such a regimen - although, in fact, he was utterly beastly to his own progeny.

In any event, Labor Day signals the return of Island mothers to the healthful environment of our lovely golf courses and tennis courts.

Within a few weeks, however, newly-emancipated mothers are stabbed in the back by something called Teacher Duty Day. Mothers then drive across the Causeway en masse to find out how their youngsters are "adjusting" to some euphemism known as the "learning experience" - and are suitably awed by an arcane assortment of "stanine" scores.

Fortunately, the League of Women Voters' calendar is not programmed to be flippant. It does not fool around with days to honor mothers-in-law, great grandparents, groundhogs and guns. It's up to the card people to remind us to send a thought that counts on a card (see price on back) that proves we cared enough to send the very best.

Moreover, the League calendar does not make an unseemly fuss over a host of Mini-Nuisance Days that disrupt the lives of organized Islanders. It merely notes certain days to which banks and post offices throughout the land have become utterly addicted - but which no one else in his right mind elects to observe. The result of this "indecent obsession," however, is a most untimely halt in the flow of correspondence and cash.

By late October the League calendar really starts to zero in on days that are bound to be totally disruptive. Halloween lies lurking at the end of the month. Island mothers worry about the poisonous thoughts of those who never overcame an addiction to Arsenic and Old Lace, while all homeowners wonder whether their pristine pools will be purple or puce before little "Trickertreat" disappears under a cover of darkness.

Islanders may heave a sigh of relief when they survive October and turn the calendar to November. We can all look forward to Thanksgiving! No cards or gifts to mail from our inaccessible post office, we haven't had turkey for at least a year, and we are certainly most grateful to the Indians for introducing us to the polyunsaturated goodness of maize.

Alas, Island mailboxes threaten to collapse under the weight of Christmas catalogues long before we have digested the giblet gravy. Christmas has become heaven for Hallmark and manna for merchants.

The shopping-days countdown rivals any similar contrivance from Cape Kennedy. With all the excessive and

Property owner praises portrait

To the Editor
The Islander

I wish to compliment The Islander for its recent "Portrait" of Bud Locicero. I am not a close personal friend of Buddy, but for the past three years he has extended himself to serve my culinary needs when the occasion demands.

Perhaps this letter should have been written by a competitor, for Bud has been an enthusiastic supporter of some new businesses that have opened on Sanibel although they compete with him. He is remarkable, in that he is as interested in the success of others as well as of himself.

Sincerely,
Sidney Sinow

Ohio student pens Sanibel essay

A copy of the following essay by Avon Lake, Ohio, student Lyn Angotti was given to The Islander for publication.

Sanibel Island

Sanibel Island holds a special place in my heart because of its location, beautiful beach and all the sights to behold. It is a place where the sun always shines and the year-round summer weather keeps up the spirits of all who are lucky enough to experience its beauty.

It is a place where soft summer showers are streaked with rays of sunlight and followed by bold rainbows that color the sky with their prism colors.

Sanibel Island is a paradise 13 miles southwest of Fort Myers, Fla., across a three-mile span of causeway. It is approximately 14 1/2 miles long and is noted as the third best shelling spot in the world.

The Island is dotted with many small, quaint shopping malls that will satiate any shopper's desires. Its beautiful beach is lined with cozy condominiums that overlook the gulf and are surrounded by scores of lazy palm trees.

To stroll the beach with its infinite shoreline and expanse of serene, blue-green waters is like floating in a dreamland. The virgin-white sand warms the soles of your feet as the caressing gulf breeze soothes the sting of the scorching heat.

Richly tanned bodies lie offering themselves to the sun and seashell hunters' crouched forms line the water's edge. Many people can be seen carrying crackers or bread as they stroll the beach to feed the stingy birds that swarm around them like bees.

Anyone venturing into the Hobocat-speckled gulf can observe graceful porpoise unconsciously demonstrating their beautiful water ballet. Closer to shore, bashful crabs dart to avoid the careless feet of passersby.

Squawking seagulls wait impatiently for helpless coquinas to wash upon the shore. The birds then use their beaks to break open the shells and devour the minute but tasty clams.

The island possesses skies that are filled with vulture-like pelicans that circle over the water stalking their prey before they attack. The clouds, like puffed-up marshmallows, float aimlessly through the brilliant blue sky and the blinding noon sunlight soon turns to a fire-struck dusk sky, creating a breath-taking sunset.

Its evening sky creates glistening moonlit waters that reflect the shadows of lovers who walk the beach one last time.

The island's beauty paints an everlasting picture in the minds of the many people that visit there. Its location makes it remote, very romantic and appealing. The endless beach and fascinating sealife stimulate the taste buds of intrigue and entice the adventurous to return. All in all, Sanibel Island is a place that creates lasting memories.

Respectfully submitted
Lyn Angotti

Police chief commends officer for arrest actions

A copy of the following letter to Officer Tom Applegate from Sanibel Police Chief John Butler was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Officer Applegate,

This letter is our departmental way of recognizing effective police action by you. As you know, at 3:19 a.m. on Nov. 15, 1982, you observed a male subject, later identified as Gary Minter, acting in a suspicious manner in the vicinity of Blind Pass Bridge. When the subject was unable to give a reasonable account of his behavior, you arrested him for loitering and prowling.

A later search of his person revealed small plastic packages containing cocaine.

Once again, you temporarily removed a misguided individual from our society.

Keep up the good work.

Sincerely,
John Butler
Chief of Police

extended brouhaha, how can any of us pause to ponder the significance of a star rising in the East?

Surely I will forget to send thrice-removed cousin Myrtle a card, and I will probably charge a multitude of gifts to VISA with gay abandon -- and dread the day of reckoning. Moreover, I blanch at the thought of numerous airport runs to pick up unannounced refugees from chilly climes.

Islanders who survive Christmas must immediately gird up their loins (and intestinal tracts) in order to usher in the New Year. Unfortunately, very few of my friends and acquaintances would be satisfied with a civilized, sedate salute to the New Year i.e., clinking our small glasses of imported sherry and murmuring "Ave atque vale!" in subdued tones. No, we must all resolve -- and immediately dissolve in drink.

Perhaps a humdrum, relatively uneventful existence is not without redeeming values. After all, the "spicy" variety of Special Days often leaves one with a horrible headache and a horrendous hangover. Moreover, too many Special Days in rapid succession could easily transform one into a Scrooge, a misanthrope or a hermit.

Sanibel Highlands home request denied

The Planning Commission last week denied without prejudice Joseph Bohart's request for a specific amendment to permit construction of a single-family home on two lots in Sanibel Highlands subdivision that do not meet the minimum size requirement for the Uplands Wetlands Ecozone.

And for the second time the commissioners urged the City Council to "do something" about the drainage and sewage problems that have plagued the subdivision for years.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers strongly recommends that the density in the area not be increased by the amendment procedure until the septic and storm water problems are solved.

In a study for the city Dinesh Sharma points out that, "There are no viable options available to install on-site septic systems in the wetlands conditions.

"Protection of the public health and water quality must be overriding concerns in evaluating the use of individual septic systems in the interior wetland areas," Sharma's report adds.

Realtor Joe Laenen, who represented the Boharts at the hearing, said the Boharts have owned the property since 1970. Before the city was incorporated they would have been able to build on the lots on Capital City Road, Laenen said.

Rogers acknowledged this area of Sanibel Highlands is less prone to flooding than other parts of the subdivision.

The Boharts' case, Rogers said, is almost identical with that of Matthew and Virginia Stewart.

The commission several weeks ago recommended council denial of the Stewarts' request to build on an undersized lot on Piedmont Road. A second hearing of their petition is scheduled before the City Council Dec. 7.

There are at least 50 other unbuildable lots in Sanibel Highlands where the properties cannot meet the minimum lot size required for a single-family home, Rogers said.

The Boharts' lots contain slightly more than 10,000 square feet. The minimum area required by CLUP is 15,000.

The Boharts have been unsuccessful in their attempts to acquire additional land, Laenen told the commission.

By denying the request without prejudice the commission leaves the door open for the Boharts to apply again for a specific amendment without paying an additional fee.

Buttonwood expansion approved

A development permit to allow a 324-square-foot expansion of the Buttonwood Bar-B-Q restaurant at Blind Pass was approved last week by the Planning Commission.

Attorney John Wilcox, representing owners Juanita and Harry Yoder and Diane and Greg Steger, said the seating capacity of the restaurant in the Santiva Plaza will not be expanded. A bar with six stools will be relocated in the area that was formerly occupied by a gift shop.

The request was approved by a 4-0 vote. Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham, who was vacationing in Africa, and Commissioner Emily Barefield, still recuperating from a bout with pneumonia, were not present.

The commission vacancy created by the Louise Johnson's election to the City Council had not yet been filled.

Commission votes to vacate Woodmere Preserve driveway

Is the designation of a meandering driveway through the Woodmere Preserve as a public road another city mapping error?

Three attorneys representing seven property owners in the 40 acres that stretch from the cul-de-sac at the dead end of West Gulf Drive to the Gulf Pines subdivision maintain it is.

To remove a "cloud on the deeds" the attorneys asked the Planning Commission last week to recommend that the city vacate the 60-66 foot wide right-of-way that is improperly identified in the Comprehensive Land Use Plan as "public."

Island Attorney Reed Toomey told the commission that Dorothy Kuder, Mary Wegmuller, Martha Gessendorf, Richard Lane, Elizabeth May and Richard Brashler have signed an agreement to maintain a 12-foot wide driveway providing access to their properties. The drive winds through a heavily vegetated area that is frequently the scene of botanical tours.

The property owners maintain the 525-foot long easement has always been privately owned and say they have paid taxes on the land for years.

Sanibel attorney John Wilcox explained that the confusion over the ownership stems from the time years ago when the late Willis Combs offered to dedicate the right-of-way to Lee County.

Wilcox, who researched county commission meeting minutes, said the offer was never accepted.

At one time a county bulldozer that was starting to clear the property to extend the road was stopped by Combs brandishing a shot gun, Wilcox said.

The misconception of ownership was compounded when the right-of-way through the Combs' land was designated on city maps as the possible route of a future bicycle path.

The planning staff, on the assumption that the right-of-way is public property, objected to the 12-foot driveway and maintained it does not conform to the city's 18-foot width standard for a rural road or to the 20-foot wide access required for emergency vehicles.

The staff recommended denial of the vacation.

"Although no general public need of this right-of-way is foreseen at this time vacation of any claim to the right-of-way would effectively impair the city's ability to provide improved public access in the future," the planning report explains.

Acting Commission Chairman Larry Simon said with the potential for severe traffic problems on the Island, "We owe it to the people of Sanibel not to abandon a future escape hatch."

Simon was the only dissenter in the 3-1 vote on Commissioner Jerry Muench's motion recommending the vacation.

Casa Ybel granted request for cabana rental

An occupational license for the Casa Ybel Resort and Club to rent cabanas to guests for use on the beach was approved last week by the Planning Commission.

Larry Congress, who is in charge of the rental operation for the resort, said the lounges that will accommodate two people will remain permanently on the beach behind the Coastal Construction Setback Line.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said the cabana rental is permitted as an accessory use if it is under the same ownership as the resort and if the rental procedure takes place within the resort itself.

Congress said the operation complied with these conditions. Casa Ybel has been cited in the past by Code Enforcement Officer Dick Baker for violating the Comprehensive Land Use Plan because the cabana lounges were left on the beach forward of the CCSL.

New owners granted occupational license for Castaways units

The Castaways at Blind Pass has always represented itself as a 20-unit motel. But in fact there are 20 units with 31 bedrooms on the site today, Lloyd Wright of Rochester Resorts, the new owner of the resort, told the Planning Commission last week.

"So I was shocked to find that the former owners had only obtained occupational licenses for 18 units," Wright said during a commission hearing of a specific amendment to permit the construction of a resident manager's quarters within the existing structure.

The commission agreed to increase the number of units on the occupational license to 20 but denied Wright permission to add the manager's quarters, which would increase the density by one dwelling unit.

Wright agreed that a single-family home on property between the resort pool and Santiva Plaza, although not in good condition, could be renovated for use by the manager without intensifying the density of property. The home is lawfully existing forward of the Coastal Construction Setback Line.

The commission also gave after-the-fact approval for the installation of rope fences that delineate a public beach access path and for replacement of a cement wall along San-Cap Road and a wire fence seaward of the Castaways' gulf front units.

The staff acknowledged that this construction was very minor in nature and represented little additional impact on the gulf beach environment.

Specific amendment okayed for swimming pool

A specific amendment to permit Maureen and Holger Smitt to install a swimming pool at their home in The Rocks received Planning Commission approval last week. The pool will exceed the 30 percent impermeable surface allowed in Altered Land ecological zones.

Use of wooden decking will reduce the coverage to 33.8 percent if the garden area of visqueen covered with rock is excluded, the planning staff reported.

The four commissioners present said they had "no problem with visqueen," which after a few years is punctured and deteriorates and is no longer really impermeable.

They voted 4-0 to approve the request.

Tale of woe fails to convince commission to approve house

Despite Arthur Bauman's sad tale of the frustrations of trying to build a house on Sanibel while serving with the U.S. State Department in Singapore, the Planning Commission last week turned down Bauman's bid to build a single-family home on each of two contiguous lots he owns in Belle Meade subdivision.

Bauman purchased the lots in 1975 and had started plans to build a home on one of the lots and sell the other when he was transferred to the Far East, he told the commission.

He designated a building contractor to obtain the building permits and proceed with construction. But the process was delayed by the water moratorium in 1977, and then the contractor went out of business, Bauman said.

Before returning to Sanibel three years ago, Bauman by telephone purchased the home where he now resides and intends to stay.

His lots in Belle Meade have been on the market but have not been sold because the square footage of the two lots combined is less than half that required for a minimum single-family lot in the area that currently has a density of one unit per acre.

Planner Ken Pfalzer said Bauman does not qualify for relief under the contiguous lot ordinance adopted in 1981 because Belle Meade was not 50 percent developed by April 21 of that year.

Only 12 of a possible 45 homes have been built in Belle Meade at this time.

Even with the adoption of an amendment to increase the density to two dwelling units per acre, which is contingent on developer Paul Stahlin's devising a suitable plan to upgrade the roads and drainage in Belle Meade, Bauman's property would still only support one dwelling unit, Pfalzer pointed out.

Although the commissioners were sympathetic to Bauman's plight, they were reluctant to grant a variance to the density and voted 4-0 to recommend council denial of the specific amendment request.

Commission says no to Island Pizza seat request

Fearful they would be mobbed by other restaurant owners demanding equal treatment, the Planning Commission last week turned down Roger Osborn's request to add 16 seats to his Island Pizza restaurant for use after 5 p.m. on weekdays and all day on weekends.

The amount of on-site parking available governs the number of seats permitted in Sanibel restaurants, and on this basis Osborn is legally entitled to 20 seats.

Two months after Island Pizza opened in late 1978, Osborn and his then-partner Pat Cupo added 16 seats. The city erroneously issued an occupational license the next year permitting 36 seats.

The mistake was discovered when the license came up for renewal in September 1981. At that time the City Council approved a specific amendment allowing the restaurant to use the additional 16 seats after 5 p.m. on weekdays and all day on weekends until June 1, 1982.

In the meantime, Cupo and Osborn indicated they would seek a new location for the restaurant. Cupo has since left the operation to open his own Italian restaurant in the McGregor Point shop-

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

"What do these shells eat, anyway?" I hear that question quite often, and it's interesting to see the menu items that everything from sand dollars to huge horse conchs likes to dine upon.

The live shells we find around Sanibel and Captiva can be divided into two types according to feeding habits.

Shells such as the clams, oysters, angel wings and coquinas are sifter type eaters that get nourishment from minute particles in the water and on the sandy bottom by sifting through a primitive set of body organs.

Incidentally, it's the sifters that most people like to eat themselves. They are also the very ones that are the most likely to make you sick if red tide organisms are in the water. We have infrequent bouts of red tide, usually in the cooler months of the year, and it's not unusual for the state agencies involved with testing water for purification to ban the taking of shells like clams and oysters until the red tide dangers pass.

On the other side of the feeding cycle coin are the aggressive univalves or mollusks, which have a solid single shell. These include the various whelks, many conchs and other shells such as the tulips, which tend to feed off the smaller, bivalved sifter feeders.

There are exceptions to these categories, of course, with the starfish and the sea urchins leading the list.

Life on the gulf floor is a series of survival skirmishes between the big and the little. The same food chain that exists on land extends to the oceans, too - the largest feed on the smaller and on down the line to shells hardly large enough to see.

I came upon an usual sight the other day while walking a shallow sandbar off Captiva. A common brown Florida starfish had found a live sand dollar and was apparently trying to eat it. As a matter of fact, two other starfish of similar size came along too, and all three were feeding upon the live sand dollar.

Sea urchins like to gather many dead shells on their sticky spines and then travel ever so slowly over the sandy bottom, looking for tiny items to eat. The urchins and dollars are classified as echinoderms and are not thought of as shells like hard exterior mollusks would be by collectors.

The largest of our locally found shells are the whelks and horse conchs. These can be found in lengths exceeding 12 inches. At that size they have very few natural enemies. Therefore, they eat just about anything they want.

These large univalves prefer to feed on the large clams that dig into mud bars around the Islands. The average larger whelk or horse conch needs one or two of the big clams per month to live.

The big shells extend a muscle and surround a clam then use water pressure and the edge of their shell to open the smaller clams. It's a slow process.

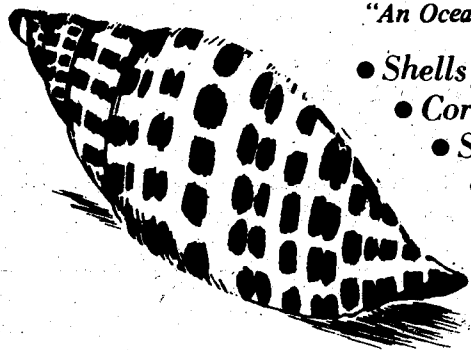

Each shell looks for certain things when hungry, and in most instances, if there is a balance, many different kinds of shells can survive in the smaller, ideal habitats on the bottom without starving each other out.

Good shelling this week.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. For more information call 472-3459.

Conversion table: The above tides are for the lighthouse point of Sanibel only. To convert for Redfish Pass (North tip of Captiva), add 55 minutes to the time shown for every high tide. Subtract two minutes for every low tide.

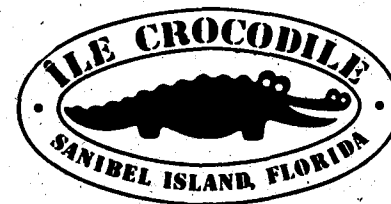

For Captiva Island Gulf side, subtract 30 minutes for each high tide, and subtract hour and 16 minutes for each low tide.

For Captiva Island, Pine Island Sound (Bay) side, add 1 hour and four minutes for each high tide and add 52 minutes for each low tide.

In between these points, gulf or bay, guesstimate and have good fishing or shelling.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

We are right in the middle of our annual fall migration of Spanish mackerel, bluefish and a very special gamester that has the strength to tear up tackle and your nerves, too!

We often call this fish the bonito. Some more experienced anglers drop the "o" at the end of the name and call them "bonita" instead. Some others around the gulf and Atlantic states refer to the same fish as a "little tunny," and they are probably the more correct.

These bullet-shaped fish are marked and colored very similar to several of the much larger tuna family found around the world. The bonito travels extensively on its own, and we have had reports of schools of these fish from less than a mile off Sanibel and Captiva Islands to way out in the middle of the gulf.

It's a rare treat to hook and land one of these marvelous fighters, as any light tackle fisherman who has had the pleasure will confirm. They are not usually taken for eating, however. The meat is very dark and bloody.

I recently talked with a man who said he had tried smoked bonito and thought they were rather tasty. But I suggest that you release any you catch. Sometimes guides keep one or two, but then they usually give them to a local stone crab trapper for bait. The crabs seem to love just what we don't like in the fish, and one bonito makes a great amount of bait, too.

Bonito average from six to 15 pounds. Some are larger, and I've hardly ever seen under five or six pounds. They have that ability to attack schools of silvery bait fish and tear into the center of these pods with energy that thrills the first-time angler.

They hunt the bait in packs, and I could only guess as to how many might be in any given school. It's not unusual to find a place outside one of the passes where three or four individual schools of bonito are working over the bait. They crash to the surface and then sound. When they won't stay on top for a few casts, the fishing gets very frustrating.

You can troll silver spoons or get close to a feeding school of bonito and cast the same spoon into them. They seem to be particularly leary of boat engine noises, and some anglers cut the engine and drift toward the feeding school, hoping they get into casting range before the school sounds.

Outboard engines seem to spook the fish more easily than inboards, so if you are circling a school and not getting any hits, you might shut down the outboard and cast instead.

One way I often get these shy fish to strike is to drift and use half-ounce yellow feathers or jigs on the bottom. Again, you have to be in the immediate area of the school.

I would not recommend using less than 20-pound fishing outfits. And don't go the other way with 50-pound either. A steel leader is a must because the bonito often travel with mackerel and blues. All can snap a light leader in seconds. Number 5 wire is good to use.

These are strange fish. At times, they are easy to hook, but other days you can see them crashing surface all around and can't get a strike no matter how you fish them or what you use. It takes patience, lots of fuel and stout backs when you finally connect.

You most likely will find bonito by accident while fishing for mackerel or blues. They are really strong fighters and worth the effort to land. Good luck.

Arts and c the BIG Ar

Festival draws browsers, arti

The streets of Sanibel were jammed with traffic for the better part of Saturday, but for once no one seemed to mind -- most of the drivers were on their way to the 1982 BIG Arts Craft Fair.

Fair goers paid the admission fee gladly, most remembering the unique world of creations last year's entrance fee bought them. They weren't disappointed this year, as many of the artists from last year reserved space again this fall and even improved their exhibits with more visible display cases filled with their best-selling items.

The craftsmen were kept busy all day explaining their handiwork to the curious and haggling over prices with the bargain hunters.

But some items needed no explanation of any kind and were purchased with great swiftness. Sanibel Gallery owner Jane Valtin's 1982 Christmas ornaments were such an item. "They're selling like hotcakes," Valtin said.

Lahja Tischler's booth of hand-painted silks was also heavily visited, and by 2 p.m. little stock remained on her table. "They've been swarming over her since she set up," one colleague noted.

But there were some notable, singular items as well that awaited the arrival of that Very Special Customer, such as the ceramic creche (five pieces, $500) at A Touch of Sanibel Pottery's booth and the hand-scraped, paper-thin pottery thrown by the King Studio staffers of Westerville, Ohio.

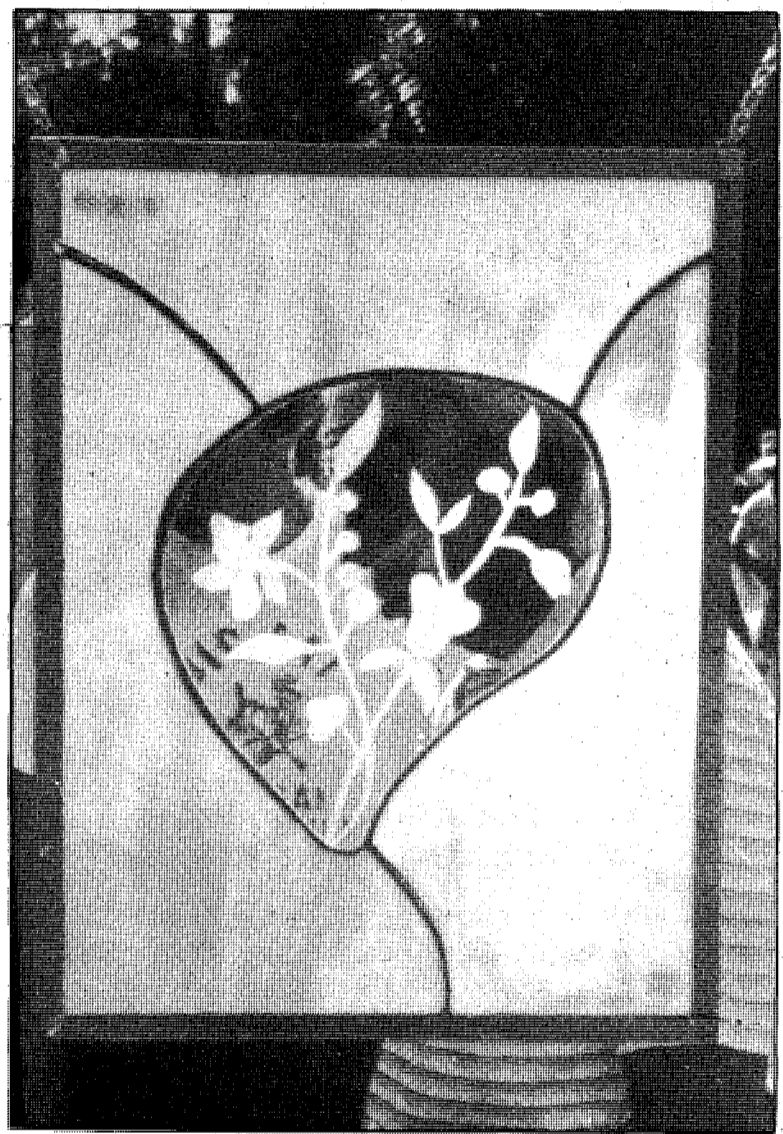

Blue grass music set the day's pace, and the hungry were fed breakfast by the Rotary Club and lunch by the Bank of the Islands crew with bargains like zucchini-cheese quiche for $1.

The weather proved perfect for a crafts fair day, and more than likely those who weren't taking advantage of unusual crafts could only have been at one other place -- the beach.

Editor's note: Artist Charlotte Heimann reports that someone left an expensive pair of ladies' prescription sunglasses on her table under the tent at Saturday's fair. Call her at 472-4260 if you think the glasses might be yours.

Harriet Howe

Age: 71

Height: 5'6½" — "I'll never forget when they put 6 feet 5½ inches on my driver's license. They must have wondered what sort of Amazon I was!"

Roots: Northport, Long Island

Last Book Read: "Disputed Crown" by Valerie Anand

Pleasures: "Any kind of handiwork, reading, gardening up north."

Mentor: "My husband."

Wish: "To keep on as we are — though things could be better, universally, I mean."

Words Of Wisdom: "Live by the Golden Rule."

Most librarians have an insatiable curiosity about some specific subject, and Harriet Howe, former librarian at the Sanibel Public Library, is no exception.

Known far and wide for her persistence in chronicling the histories of Sanibel and Captiva, Harriet still spends at least one day each week keeping up the files she began during her tenure as Sanibel's librarian. The women who volunteer their time at the library greet her regularly, she says, with quips like, "So you're here cutting up your paper dolls again."

Since her retirement one year ago, however, Harriet has found time to delve into another kind of history — her own.

The newly found free time that inevitably comes with retirement has been invested, in Harriet's cast, in delving into her past — "digging at my roots," she calls it — and unearthing some extraordinary facts about her family.

"It's the kind of thing your family told you, but you weren't interested as a kid," says Harriet, who has managed to trace her family tree back five generations, past her great grandfather, who was a clipper ship captain in the China trade and who served as a master's mate on a flagship blockade fleet during the Civil War.

"It's a real chore, and very hit and miss," Harriet says about the research. "But it's very worthwhile," she adds. "I'm the 'old aunt' now, and if I don't do it, it will all be lost."

Although the temptation has been strong to hire someone else to do the legwork, the cost of such a transfer of power would be tremendous. Professional geneologists really charge for their time, Harriet has discovered. Besides, she says, there are a lot of gaps in chronicling family histories, largely because of the lack of proper documentation before the turn of the century.

One thing Harriet says she's learned is, "You've got to do it yourself if you want to find out."

Family is extremely important to the woman who took over at the Sanibel Library when she and her husband Paul took up residency on the Island in 1970.

Harriet's family memories are strong and clear. Her penchant for gardening sparks remembrances of her father and grandfather who, during World War I, kept the family fed with parsnips when their potato reserves ran out. "To this day I can't look a parsnip in the face," she laughs.

Her grandfather grew plenty of other vegetables for the family dinner table, says Harriet, who recalls "Grampa's" inclination to harvest his vegetables "when they were old enough to plant. My grandmother used to say they (the vegetables) were old enough to vote," she remembers with a chuckle.

Harriet doesn't garden these days, but she looks back fondly at working her flower beds in Pennsylvania, where she couldn't wait to get her hands into some good, black soil. Her favorite blossoms were the named irises and day lilies she grew in abundance.

Her first visit "home" since she and Paul moved south was last June, and she would like to repeat the trip. But she also has her eyes on a bus trip that would include the western United States.

"I've an idea that's been percolating around in my head for a while," she explains. "My sister has one son whom I've never met and another son whom I haven't seen in six or seven years, and my brother's daughter in Sacramento has a family that's grown up since I last saw them."

Such a trip would also give Harriet an opportunity to visit some of the historical societies that are so prolific in the New England area — a good source of information about her family heritage, she's sure.

"I'm torn in three different directions," she says. "I would love to return to England — my trip to London was just wonderful. But I'd also like to go north and west."

Until she makes up her mind, however, Harriet will be writing the National Archives for information on her family tree and making handcrafted items for the next Sanibel Library Arts and Crafts Fair and for Christmas gifts.

She's also promising herself to do all the things she retired to do — like pruning all the bushes in her front yard, walking the beach and getting a bicycle. "I've done none of them so far," she laughs.

Still, she isn't sure that doing all the things she promised she would do when retirement time came around is any indication of contentment. "I don't know if I'm wasting my time in retirement or not," she says. "But I am enjoying myself."

ABWA scholarship recipient earns second honor, will study voice in Rome

The Sanibel-Captiva Chapter of the American Business Women's Association is pleased to announce that Jeannie McLoughlin has won a scholarship to the 1983 Summer Institute of the Rome Festival in voice.

McLoughlin is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McLoughlin of Donax Village. She has received a partial academic scholarship from the Sanibel-Captiva ABWA for two years and is presently studying at Jacksonville University. She was recently chosen to sing in the chorus of Opera Jacksonville's production of Verdi's Otello.

As a member of the chorus, the talented young singer soon came to the attention of Jeannette Ferrell, who persuaded conductor Fritz Maraffi to audition McLoughlin for the Rome Festival.

McLoughlin's performance was so outstanding that she won the audition and received one of the few scholarships awarded throughout the country for the Summer Institute of the Rome Festival.

Details of the rules of competition will be announced after the first of the year.

FEVERISH BABIES

During any fever illness, infants should not be clothed or wrapped up too warmly. Of 5 infants less than one year old, admitted to a hospital, unconscious and convulsing with very high fever, 4 died within a few hours, one survived but with permanent blindness and mental deficiency. Not one of these infants had a serious illness, but all had been bundled with so many blankets that they overheated, causing brain damage. Small children can throw off excess garments, but infants are defenseless.

Installation ceremony planned for the Rev. Richard Stein

The Rev. Richard Stein will be officially installed at the Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ this Sunday, Dec. 5.

Honored guest at the installation ceremony will be Dr. James Lenhart, founding pastor of the United Church of Christ. Guest speaker will be the Rev. Dr. Charles Burns, conference minister of the Florida Conference of the United Church of Christ.

The ceremony will begin at 11:15 a.m. at St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church and will also recognize the anniversary of the opening of the charter of the Sanibel Congregational UCC. Guests from all churches in the Southwest Coastal Mission Council, UCC and the Florida Conference Board have been invited.

Stein became pastor of the Sanibel Congregational UCC last year. He moved to the Island from his position as minister of membership at the Broadstreet United Methodist Church in Columbus, Ohio, a post he had held for two years.

A reception will be held following the ceremony in the Fellowship Hall. Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

ping center at Miner's Corners.

When Osborn sought to renew his occupational license this fall the city would authorize only 20 seats, explaining that the specific amendment granting the additional number had expired in June.

Osborn maintains there are 37 parking spaces available at the Sanibel Plaza evenings and weekends, enough to support a 36 seat restaurant.

He said currently he uses only 31 seats. "I'm not asking for anything additional, just to maintain what we've had since day one," he told the commission.

"We are offering the Island a service with less expensive meals and good food," he argued. "And all I want is to continue to do that."

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said there are at least 10 existing restaurants with positions similar to the Island Pizza that could ask for additional seats.

Commissioner Lennart Lorenson said to approve Osborn's request would be "setting a dangerous precedent for other restaurants."

"We can't afford to set precedents," Acting Commission Chairman Larry voted "yes" on the motion for approval. Planning Director Bruce Rogers told the commissioners that permitting the restroom would violate the condition of the specific amendment that, "No structures are to be located on any of the 49 campsites except when campers are occupying the sites."

Architect Ray Fenton argued that the intent of the restriction was to prohibit permanent installation of campers as has happened in the original trailer park. Commissioner Lennart Lorenson questioned what has changed since the original plans for the expansion were submitted to make the restroom necessary now.

Fenton explained that there was no history of use for the new sites at that time and the use by self-contained motor homes was over estimated.

The existing restroom in the original part of the park is too far from the new campsites, he added.

Rogers said he was confident that if the restroom facility had been asked for originally it would have been approved. Fenton said the restroom was exclusively for use of the campers and was in no way a "commercial use" as interpreted by the planning staff.

Dick Muench explained that the coin-operated showers are a water conservation measure. "For 10 cents they get five minutes of water," he said.

The restroom will be built on one of the campsites, cutting the capacity to 48 campers and reducing the intensity of use, Fenton pointed out.

Tie vote means Jenks cannot use storage space for conference room

A request from Bert Jenks to use storage space on the second floor of the Sanibel Realty office building as a staff conference room drew a 2-2 vote from the Planning Commission last week.

Acting Commission Chairman Larry Simon and Commissioner Lennart Lorenson agreed with the planning staff report that interpreted Jenks' proposal as a "new" commercial use that would add

1.4 percent additional floor area to an already overdeveloped site.

Simon and Lorenson both voted "no" on Commissioner Harold Schuyler's motion to grant the specific amendment with the stipulation that the area would be used exclusively for "in-house staff meetings."

They also dissented on a subsequent motion by newly-seated Planning Commissioner Jerry Muench to stipulate that a deed restriction run with the land and apply to all future owners of the property. Both votes ended in a tie, which is tan-amount to denial.

An earlier motion by Lorenson to deny the request on the basis that the intensity of use would be increased died for lack of a second.

Restricting for storage use only 520 square feet of space on the second floor was a condition of the August 1980 commission approval of a development permit to modify the roof line of the Sanibel Realty office building. The office was formerly occupied by the Weeds 'N Things florist shop.

Earlier this year the Planning Commission and the City Council turned down Jenks' request that the condition be deleted. Both bodies suggested that filing for a specific amendment would be the appropriate route to follow.

Since only four commissioners were present last week, Jenks was offered the option of continuing the hearing until a full commission was on hand. But he said he would take his chances with the City Council.

The commissioners groaned at the prospect that Periwinkle Way would be torn up through most of the winter season. But Lee said there would be very little disruption of traffic.

The Lee County Commission this week requested the Island Water Association to lift its moratorium after listening to presentations from IWA officials and representatives of a coalition of seven Island businesses. This week's hearing was a continuation of an earlier hearing at which John Kontinos requested that the commission direct IWA to life the moratorium.

A design for a multi-purpose classroom and cafeteria at the Sanibel Elementary School was approved by the Lee County School Board this week.

Alarmed over the continuing rapid growth rate of Sanibel and the apparent inability of vital public support services to accommodate additional growth, the Committee of the Islands has decided to advertise statistics reflecting the Island's development. The decision was made in an effort to generate support for legislation to limit Sanibel's rate of growth.

Sea serpents... Fact or myth?

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

Throughout the Indo-Pacific region from the tip of Africa to the Persian Gulf to Oceania and beyond the Panama and Central America, true Sea Snakes can be found -- reptiles with scales, lungs, nostrils on top of the head and flattened tails used for skulling.

Not to be confused with the non-venomous eel-like fish often found in our gulf waters, the true Sea Serpents are all equipped with deadly venom and efficient hollow-fang delivery systems. But many are so inoffensive in temperament that it is difficult to induce them to bite.

Of course, there are no Giant Sea Serpents -- the huge fire-breathing kind of song and story. Those legendary creatures are truly mythological. But the True Sea Snakes of the Indo-Pacific regions are real and quite interesting enough.

The only true Sea Serpent I ever had personal experience with was in the Bombay Aquarium on Marine Drive. I was "behind the scenes" with the curator. We approached a tank containing a writhing, seething mass of Beaked Sea Snakes, Enhydrina schistosa, tangled like spaghetti at the surface. They seemed intent upon their interaction; perhaps they were in a breeding state of mind.

Anyway, I felt myself in no danger when I plucked a four-foot specimen from the water. Anxious only to return to the tank, it made no attempt to bite. Good thing, too, for the bite of the Sea Snakes can be deadly, what with their copious supply of neurotoxic venom and the proper equipment to deliver it.

From its vertically-flattened tail, perhaps two inches top to bottom, the beast narrows appreciably anteriorly to a tiny head. This microcephalic beast has a very narrow "chin" -- almost a splinter. This is an adaptation to permit a wide gape so the small-headed animal can stretch to swallow -- whole, of course -- fairly large fish.

In recent years we have heard a lot of ruckus (I guess nowadays you're supposed to call it "rhetoric") about our giving away "our" Panama Canal.

An awful lot of retired people around Southwest Florida, often colonels, have crucified Jimmy Carter for "his" giveaway. Well, he can't get all the blame or all the credit, because wise presidents of both parties before him realized the inevitability of the move if we were to remain on speaking terms with Latin America.

What does this have to do with Sea Serpents? I'll tell you. The apologists and eager planners have promised a Sea Level Canal -- more efficient, easier to handle, wide enough to take big ships that might get stuck in the Panama Canal -- a bigger and better shipping link connecting the Atlantic and the Pacific.

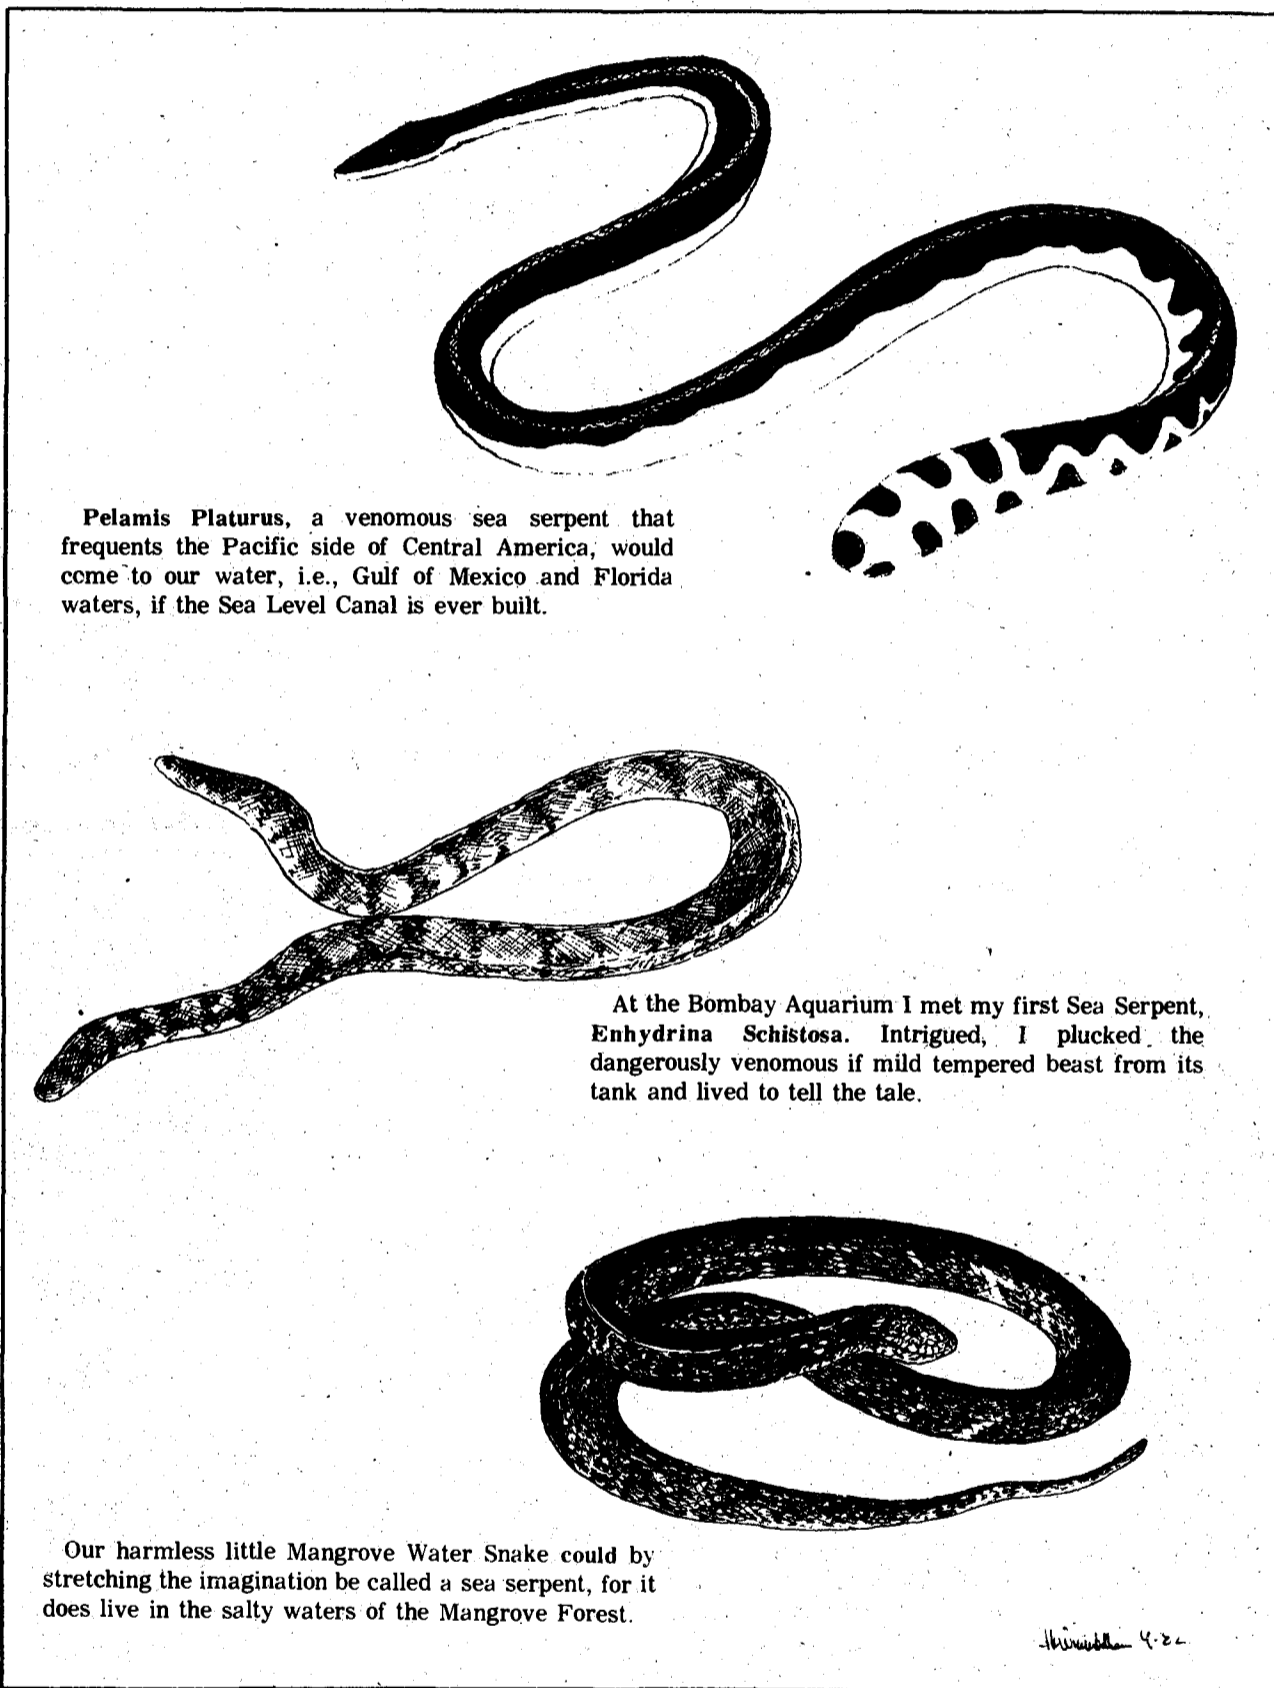

A great tome was written, "The Ecological Effects of a Sea Level Canal" -- a study we paid dearly for with our taxes.

Well, the ecological effects of a Sea Level Canal would be numerous and immense. There would be a huge interchange of flora and fauna -- Pacific to Atlantic and vice versa. Not the least interesting new inhabitant of our Atlantic-Caribbean side (and that includes the Gulf of Mexico, too) would be Pelamis platurus, the venomous Pelagic Sea Snake.

This most seagoing of the Sea Serpents is found in the Arabian Sea, African Coast, all over the rest of the Indian Ocean, China Sea, Yellow Sea, the Central Pacific including Hawaii and in seething thousands in the Bay of Panama and northward to the Mexican coast. A Sea Level Canal would give this beast ample opportunity to widen its range to the Atlantic, Caribbean and the Gulf of Mexico.

What keeps it out of those seas now? Simple. The old-fashioned design of the Panama Canal. The principal functional part of the canal is the high freshwater central rain-fed lake, Gatun Lake.

This lake provides the water that enables the locks to function in both directions. It acts as a biological barrier to Pacific marine organisms entering the Atlantic and the Pelamis Platurus, a venomous sea serpent that frequents the Pacific side of Central America, would come to our water, i.e., Gulf of Mexico and Florida waters, if the Sea Level Canal is ever built.

At the Bombay Aquarium I met my first Sea Serpent, Enhydrina Schistosa. Intrigued, I plucked the dangerously venomous if mild tempered beast from its tank and lived to tell the tale.

Our harmless little Mangrove Water Snake could by stretching the imagination be called a sea serpent, for it does live in the salty waters of the Mangrove Forest.

reverse. A biological barrier, that is, to most marine organisms.

Those that tolerate fresh as well as sea water have moved, alive, in both directions. If you want to know what they are, you have to read "The Ecological Effects of A Sea Level Canal." But the Pelagic Sea Snake is not one of them. It has not locked successfully through the Panama Canal.

There is little likelihood of our ever getting a Sea Level Canal since our influence has waned and Central America is in turmoil. The possible sites were Nicaragua and Tuantepec, both geologically feasible, but both politically mixed, at least for the foreseeable future.

So when somebody tells you he caught a Sea Serpent in the gulf while fishing, you can tell him, "No Way!" The animal of the gulf most often called Sea Serpent is a fish of the family Ophichthidae, the Snake Eels -- a common name that is almost a direct translation of the Latin name. Sometimes -- just sometimes -- a rattlesnake will drift down a Florida river on a piece of debris and be found swimming as far as five miles out in the gulf. Also, we do have our harmless little Mangrove Water Snake or Flat-tailed Water Snake, Natrix fasciata compressicauda, which lives naturally in the saltwater environment and could by a stretch of imagination be called a Sea Serpent.

Scientists make dumb mistakes too, just like politicians. Compressicauda means flat-tailed. The type specimen did have a flat tail -- flattened by a car on Route 41. That is the only one described that had a flat tail, although its brothers and sisters don't, but by all the rules of taxonomy this snake must forever bear the false name compressicauda.

So we really need not be concerned about the many venomous Sea Serpents of the Indo-Pacific world. At least not until Sea Level Canal is built. And like the Cape Coral Bridge, that project is likely to be studied and discussed from here to eternity.

Refuge initiates plan to eradicate wild yams

By Carol Kranichfeld

The J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge's battle to remove the prolific Brazilian pepper from refuge property will soon be joined by a campaign to eradicate the refuge's wild yams.

The wild yams, refuge management recently learned, are a widespread problem on Florida's east coast around Miami and are making their debut on Florida's western coast as well.

The yams, though unrelated to Georgia's kudzu vines, exhibit qualities similar to the kudzu in their extraordinarily fast growth that smothers hosts and nearby vegetation.

"They're very difficult to control," refuge technician Charles LeBuff says. "The yams grow a huge tuber in the ground and develop a potato-like propagil on the vine that drops off and begins a new plant," he explains.

The Miami area has yet to effect legislation to control the plant, but Island refuge management have decided to "nip the yam in the bud" by starting its own control program before the end of the year.

The only known patch of wild yams within refuge boundaries grows at the entrance of the Gasparilla Trail and is as yet fairly small. But it will still require a fair amount of time to remove.

The big, starchy roots will have to be dug up manually to avoid damaging their host trees, which are usually Gumbo Limbos, refuge Manager Del Pierce says.

Tuesday at the Center draws conservation crowd

By Carol Kranichfeld

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation center lecture hall filled with botanists and Island homeowners last week who came to hear Marine Advisory Program representative Anne Marshall discuss mangroves and their use in southwest Florida.

The audience listened to Marshall's slide presentation on red, black and white mangroves and learned to differentiate between the three species and their environmental requirements.

This week's Tuesday at the Center lecture will be delivered by Sgt. Kat Kelley-Phillips, a wildlife inspector with the Florida Game and Freshwater Fish Commission. Her lecture and slide presentation entitled "Endangered Species" will begin at 2 p.m. today, Tuesday, Nov. 30.

General admission for non-SCCF members is $1 for adults and $.50 for children. The public is invited to attend.

Only three of last week's four choices applied to the Islander Picks because we inadvertently included a game that wasn't even played until after our press time Monday (Dolphins vs. Bucs). Walt Ciesiensi, Ira Hartman and E.P. Bethune all had three for three in the remaining choices. We couldn't reach Ciesiensi, who is the expert for the third week in a row, for his picks. ## Movin' on Up

Singing, dancing performance traces Black history

Islanders who followed Roots with great interest will enjoy a supplementary black history performance at Barrier Island Group for the Arts' next production, Movin' On Up, on Friday, Dec. 3, at the Sanibel Community Association hall.

Movin' traces the highlights and achievements of the Black man's sojourn from Africa during the 17th Century to life in urban centers of America in the 1980's.

Group singing, choreographed movement, solo work and brief dramatic sequences by the performing artists, Afri Productions, mold a two-hour performance that enlightens and entertains.

The historical road of racial progress follows a series of individual sequences, such as the African Sequence showing some cultural developments of the Blacks' African heritage through ceremonial dance, and the Middle Passage, a symbolic crossing of the Atlantic after the confusion of captivity.

The Slavery Sequence brings out the capacity to laugh under oppressive conditions, considered by Blacks to be the basis of their survival and historic creativity.

Emancipation, a time of joy, is also included in Movin', as is Migration, making full use of jazz and blues and linking humor and old time dance routines as an intricate part of the Black experience.

A Religious Sequence follows, showing the good time Saturday nighters attending church with pomp, piety and prayer, urging each other to "be somebody," even if only once a week.

After Sunday Comes Monday concludes the performance, reminding the audience that life goes on seven days a week.

The cast appeals to Black Americans to take pride in their past and challenges White Americans to understand the Black experience as a positive factor in our national life.

A non-profit, theatrical organization, Afri Productions was established in 1968 in association with the off-Broadway hit, The Believers. Since then the touring group has performed at the Waldorf Astoria in New York City, Yale University in New Haven, Conn., the John F. Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C., and for the NAACP.

The troupe also has two television appearances to its credit, including Journey Into Blackness on the National Educational Television series American Dream Machine (1973), and a one-hour CBS special commemorating the 20th anniversary of religious telecasting (1968).

Tickets to the Island performance will be on sale for $5 before the performance at Schoolhouse Gallery, B-Hive, and the Treehouse Gallery on Captiva and at the door the night of the show at the Sanibel Community Association hall.

Exhibits, workshops fill December arts agenda

Fort Myers News-Press music critic and former art critic Gale Bennett will host a reception for his abstract landscape exhibit, Near Myerlee Pond, from 1-3 p.m. on Sunday, Dec. 5, at the Cape Coral Arts Studio.

Well known for his professional endeavors as an artist and teacher in southwest Florida, Bennett gathered impressions for his abstract landscape series near his Fort Myers home. The artist will be on hand at the reception, where refreshments will be served, to discuss his works with gallery guests.

The Cape Coral Arts Studio on Coronado Parkway is open from 9 a.m. until 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 9 a.m. until 5 p.m. Friday. For further details call 542-7712.

Island residents are invited to a lecture and demonstration entitled Weaving As An Art Form by professional weaver Katie Bollman at 1 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 30, at the Cape Coral Arts Studio.

A variety of looms will be set up to demonstrate a number of weaving techniques, and members of the audience will be encouraged to try their hand at weaving during the lecture. A drawing at the end of the program will entitle the winner to a weaving made during the workshop.

Attendance donations of $1 will also cover purchase of a raffle ticket. For further information call 542-7714.

Letter writers will find ways of both saving money and creating some unusual stationery for their correspondence at Wendy Lilienthal's Handmade Paper: Embossing and Casting Workshop from 1-5 p.m. Tuesday, Dec. 7 at the Cape Coral Arts Studio.

Lilienthal, a visiting California artist, believes in expanding papermaking skills by pushing the boundaries of the imagination. She encourages her students to add texture and volume to their works by creating three-dimensional papers with simple equipment. Slides of the work of contemporary papermakers will be shown to help spark the audience's imagination.

A registration fee of $3 will also cover material cost. For further information call 542-7714.

While the rest of the world has put away its Halloween costumes and is preparing for the winter holidays, the Edison Players have just started to pull out their make-up and monster costumes for the Dec. 3 performance of Frankenstein at the Edison Community College.

Produced in cooperation with the Samuel French Company, Frankenstein will be presented at 8 p.m. on Dec. 3 and 4 and at 2 p.m. on Dec. 5.

Adult ($3.50) and children's tickets ($2.50) will be on sale at Pure Magic (on the corners of Fowler and Carrell Streets) before the production. For further information call ECC.

A series of Stained Glass, Spinning, Dyeing, Soft Sculpture, Swedish Horseshoe Nails, Triangular Shawl, Handmade Paper and Basketry Workshops will be sponsored by the Cape Coral Arts Studio during the month of December, just in time for special Christmas gift making.

Heading off the workshops is Stained Glass instruction on from 9 a.m. until noon on Dec. 1 ($10), followed by two workshops on Handmade Paper from 9:30 a.m. until noon ($15) and an Embossing and Casting workshop from 1-5 p.m. ($35) on Dec. 7. Drop-Spindle-Spinning ($10) and Swedish Horseshoe Nails ($10) will meet from 9 a.m. until noon and from 1-4 p.m. respectively on Dec. 14, with a Triangular Shawl workshop ($30) from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Dec. 14. Instruction on Fabric and Yarn Dyeing ($6) will take place from 1-4 p.m. on Dec. 16, and a soft-sculpture doll workshop ($30) will be held from 10 a.m. until 4 p.m. on Dec. 20.

Interested students should call 542-7714 for more information and registration.

Islander sports quiz

Only John Wickham knew that Bill Tilden won a record 13 Davis Cup tennis challenge singles matches in a row for the correct answer to last week's Islander Sports Quiz.

We'll try to make it a bit easier this week so we can print lots of names in this spot next week. Try to answer this golf question:

Name this only woman besides Betsy Earle-Rawls who has won the U.S. Women's Open four times. Here's a hint - she won in 1958, 1959, 1961 and 1964.

If you think you know the answer call The Islander, 472-5185. If you're right we'll print your name in next week's edition. Good luck!

Scissors opens for hairstyling in Arnold's Seahorse Shops

By Catherine Battista

It was a time of Hogan's Heroes, McHale's Navy, the canteen and the Zippo lighter. Stars and stripes, yanks and women marines (BAMS) could be seen everywhere.

It was the 40's, when American was at war and women went to work making airplanes, submarines and the M-1 Rifle. "Moola-moola, hubba-hubba" and "I'll Be With You in Apple Blossom Time" could be heard on every street corner and on every jukebox.

Scissors of Sanibel, the Island's newest beauty shop that opened recently in Arnold's Sea Horse Shops, is decorated in the style of the 40's.

Shaunna Haley, licensed cosmetologist and owner of Scissors, has always loved the songs, the juke box and the mystique of the 40's. She likes to think of the 40's as a time when patriotism was high and people pulled together "shoulder to shoulder." It was also a time when the fashion industry was at its peak.

The Scissors slogan, "For Faces That Go Places," goes back to the old Burma Shave advertisements, and the decor starts you reminiscing to Mother's old attic trunk.

Since Haley arrived here from Cleveland five years ago, she has been scouting antique shops, garage sales and Second Hand Rose shops for interesting items.

For example, an antique shadow box is decorated with an old neck duster, a 1900 hair straightener and a pin curler iron from the 40's. She also found an old manicure set and a black cashmere pillbox that could be right out of the Philadelphia Story.

One wall is decorated with a Jean Harlow-type satin gown complete with black stockings, black beads, an antique fan and beaded purse, surrounding an old oak mirror.

Despite the fact that Haley is in love with "yesterday" she is very much in tune with the "today" look in fashion and hair design. She has designed hairstyles for models in fashion shows at Chadwick's, Maas Brothers and the Rafter's, and she is constantly updating her skills at hair shows.

Scissors offers a complete line of creative cosmetology services for both men and women, including hair design, manicures and pedicures.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.
 The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.
 There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

PUBLIC REST ROOMS

FISH Friends in Service Here

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.
 An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

 After you have had your beach party, please assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.
 Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents.
Minimum Legal Lengths
 Blue Fish 10 inches

Flounder	11 inches
Grouper	12 inches
Mackerel	12 inches
Mullet	12 inches
Pompano	10 inches
Red Fish	12 inches
Snook	18 inches
Trout	12 inches

Snook fishing is outlawed from June 30-Aug. 1.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.
 Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to bite you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.
 Dogs should never be permitted to run free on Sanibel.

Fence them, walk them on a leash or, if you must free your dog for a walk, keep him under voice control. Never tie your dog in an unfenced back yard.
 For help with a nuisance alligator, call the following representatives of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128.

BICYCLING

If you aren't used to a lot of bicycle traffic, watch out on Sanibel. The extensive network of bike paths on the Island is clearly marked along the edge of the road.
 Observe caution when driving near the bike path. A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike path. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.
 If you plan to spend some time on a bike to enjoy the Island sun and sights, make sure your vehicle is equipped with a bike flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.
 Under Florida law, bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.
Drive safely!

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.
 This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.
