Goss appointed to commission

By Barbara Brundage

Sanibel founding father and former mayor Porter Goss accepted an appointment to the Lee County Commission District 1 seat on Monday morning.

Goss was playing golf at Cypress Lake Country Club when he received word to contact Gov. Bob Graham. He phoned the governor from a public telephone and officially accepted the appointment to replace suspended Commissioner Mike Roeder, who voluntarily stepped down from the county board last Wednesday in the wake of charges that he lied to the Lee County Grand Jury.

From Tallahassee Graham said Goss "has an outstanding public record and has served the community very well."

"He is a person widely respected for his integrity and commitment to the interests of the people of Lee County," the governor added.

Goss confirmed to The Islander that he accepted the appointment shortly before 11 a.m. Monday.

State Sen. Frank Mann said he was notified on Sunday night that Graham intended to officially suspend Roeder from the commission and name Goss to the post.

Graham thought Goss was a wise choice for the commission seat because of his "high level of competence and integrity," Mann said.

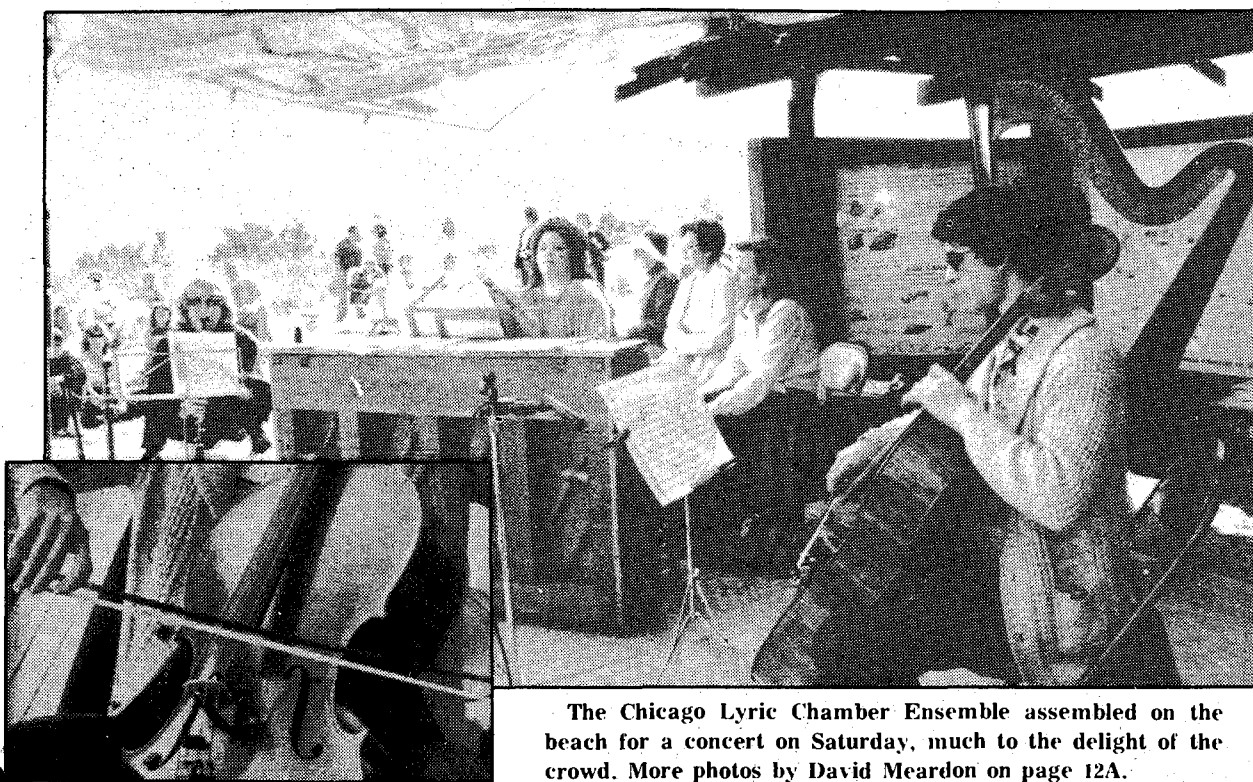

"Someone from the right city or right party was way down the list," of candidates to fill Roeder's chair, Mann said Monday. He added the governor was looking for a man "who could hit the ground running."

CONA hears Goss on Summerlin Road

By Cindy Chalmers

A lot of "pushing and shoving" in Lee County government circles has resulted in a serious crisis for Islanders who will depend on Summerlin Road for evacuation during a hurricane, former Sanibel mayor and new Lee County Commissioner Porter Goss said last week.

"It's tragic what has happened in our county," Goss told more than 75 members of the Committee of Neighborhood Associations who gathered for the organization's annual meeting on Thursday. "The problem is staggering," he added.

Goss recently was named to the Lee County Zoning Board and urged groups such as CONA to pressure that board and the County Commission to downzone and therefore reduce development along the new Summerlin Road corridor.

However, he will have to relinquish his Zoning Board post since his appointment Monday by Gov. Bob Graham to the County Commission. Goss replaces Mike Roeder,

Top contender offered Sanibel city attorney position

By Barbara Brundage

A decision on the City Council's first choice of David La Croix to replace Sanibel City Attorney Neal Bowen will be made today at the regular council meeting.

La Croix, a partner in the Gainesville law firm of Sieg, Comfort, Hawk, La Croix and Reid, was offered the $40,000 a year position last Friday after he passed a reference check with flying colors.

Mayor Mike Klein said La Croix was receptive to the offer but asked for "other considerations involved with making a move to Sanibel that will require official council approval."

Klein late Friday declined to elaborate on La Croix's requests until after the council has been informed at today's meeting.

La Croix, a 1972 graduate of the University of Florida College of Law, had

Winter means raffles for Sanibel and Captiva

It's raffle time again! The eighth annual Captiva needlepoint rug and director's chair and a brand new 1983 T-6000 Pontiac are three offerings by local organizations that are already selling chances for the prizes.

Designed and executed by Captiva residents, the needlepoint rug and director's chair have become a tradition and are coveted by the lucky winners. This year the rug design features a branch of sea grape leaves against a green background, while the director's chair features a butterfly on the chair's backing.

The rug and chair are on display at the Bank of the Islands weekdays and weekends at Chadwick's restaurant at South Seas Plantation on Captiva. Tickets are available at several outlets, including both branches of the Bank of the Islands, and cost $2 for one, $5 for three and $15 for 10.

The drawing for the rug and chair is set for March 22. Proceeds will benefit the Captiva Community Center, the Captiva Memorial Library and the Captiva scholarship fund.

The Sanibel Captiva Lions Club is raffling a 1983 T-6000 four-door Pontiac to benefit the Lions camp for the blind. Tickets are $2 each or 12 for $20. The drawing is scheduled for May 30. Tickets can be obtained at the Bailey's parking lot, where the car is on display.

The Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club is raffling three unique prizes at this year's Shell Fair in March. $1 tickets afford holders a chance for a lucite shell table, a Vitrene enclosed display cabinet and a 20-piece service of Fitz and Floyd china in the "Coquille" design.

The shell table is displayed from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. at Bailey's every Monday and Thursday. Raffle proceeds will benefit the Sanibel Community Association and the Shell Club, co-hosts of the Shell Fair.

ADJOURNMENT

If a person decides to appeal any decision of the body with respect to any matter considered at such meeting or hearing, he will need a record of the proceedings, and for such purpose he may need to ensure that a verbatim record of the proceedings is made, which record includes the testimony and evidence upon which the appeal is to be based.

means he will have to step down from the Lee County Zoning Board seat to which he was named just two weeks ago.

If Roeder is convicted of the perjury charges, Goss will serve on the County Commission through the two years remaining in Roeder's four-year term. If Roeder is exonerated, he will be reinstated to the commission seat and Goss will return to the Zoning Board post.

Roeder has asked for a speedy trial, and his innocence or guilt should be determined within two months.

Former Sanibel City Councilman Duane White was also mentioned as a possible candidate for Roeder's seat, as was Captivan Peg Hofschneider, who was appointed by the governor last May to serve on the Captiva Erosion Prevention District.

Goss, who did not seek re-election to his Sanibel City Council seat last November, was recently named by Graham to serve on state committees for the Coastal Zone Management Program and the Environmental Land Management Study. He was also recently named chairman of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

who resigned from the commission last week.

County officials face difficult decisions that will no doubt anger a lot of developers if they choose to reduce zoning along the new highway, he said. "But they need to know that when they make those decisions a lot of other people will be watching," he added.

Virtually "everybody in responsible positions in Lee County government" knows there is a problem with zoning along the road that was promised to Islanders as a limited access highway, Goss continued. "It was sold to us as our main evacuation route," he added. "But it has suddenly turned into a developers' highway."

Plans for Summerlin Road started with 10-12 access points along the corridor from just off Sanibel to Colonial Boulevard in Fort Myers. More than 30 access have already been constructed, however, and that number increases all the time, Goss said. "It's happening as we are meeting here today."

Goss expressed concern that what started as "good, candid cooperation" between county and Sanibel officials regarding Summerlin Road has deteriorated. "I don't know why," he added. "But I intend to find out."

Sanibel should be consulted on all issues effecting Summerlin Road because those issues will in turn effect Sanibel, he maintained. "There should be public hearings on these things."

If development continues at its current pace along Summerlin Road, "Then we'd better have our hurricane within the next three years," Goss said. "Otherwise there will be no way for everyone on the Islands to get off in time."

If the remainder of the corridor does not open on schedule this summer, he added, "Then I take back what I said about our being in good shape for evacuation at all."

The section of the corridor between San Carlos Boulevard and Gladiolus Drive is scheduled to open later this year.

served as a deputy city attorney for the city of Gainesville from 1978-81.

He emerged as the council's number one choice after an evaluation of the top three applicants last Wednesday.

Islander Jerrold Stern, an assistant Lee County attorney, ranked second. William Drake, an assistant city attorney for the city of St. Petersburg, was third. In the final vote the top three were separated by only one point.

The city received 52 applications for the position. After personal interviews in late December the council pared the number down to five.

Also considered in the final go-round were Islander Bob Dormer, an attorney with Florida Rural Legal Services in Fort Myers, Miami attorney Robert Cuff and Broward County Deputy General Counsel Alexander Cocalis.

Bowen, who held the Sanibel post for six years, resigned effective Jan. 14. He has not yet publicly revealed his plans but has agreed to continue on a week to week basis until his replacement can take over.

At the council's request former mayor Duane White checked the references of all three top contenders.

Sanibel City Manager Bernie Murphy, who served the city of Gainesville in the same capacity before coming here, was listed by La Croix as a reference.

Klein said after getting the all clear signal from White on Friday afternoon he telephoned La Croix. In addition to the $40,000 a year salary, La Croix will receive the same weekly car allowance as Bowen. He was asked to be available within a month.

AN EYE FOR THE ISLANDS

By Maggie Greenberg

The month of January is frequently a nasty reminder that willing minds must plead nolo contendere to weak flesh. By mid-month many Islanders find their noble New Year's resolutions have gone the way of all flesh -- i.e., to pot.

Smokers are still addicted to carcinogenic fumes, swizzle sticks still cause ice cubes to clink (a delightful concerto), and many who vowed to jog for miles at dawn are still snoring under their electric blankets at 9 a.m.

When January's relentless exposure of human frailty becomes unbearable, many Islanders seek comfort in the form of doing something they really do not want to do at all: they decide to see both the doctor and the dentist. Indeed, the mere act of calling for an appointment with the healers makes one feel ridiculously righteous!

Now, consulting one's physician is not necessarily a painful process. Sanibel is blessed with a number of fine doctors who are most ably assisted by welcoming receptionists and attractive nurses. Moreover, the dulcet tones of WCVU often reassure patients that all is well with the world and, by extension, with their bodies.

Although I am quite aware of all this when I call to make my January appointment, my fingers still tremble as I dial. I can never forget the formidable Miss Hoisington.

Miss Hoisington was lying in wait for me at the cradle, and although she beat me to the grave, I am quite convinced she will be lurking in the vicinity when my time comes.

You see, Miss Hortense Hoisington was the receptionist-nurse in the office of our family doctor. As such, she was Cerberus in disguise.

In her capacity as Cerberus, Miss Hoisington was unquestionably top dog in the family doctor's office for nearly 50 years.

Although Hortense Hoisington boasted but one head, the face on the one that she had more than compensated for the two that she lacked.

Moreover, this redoubtable woman was inordinately well endowed. Indeed, both her fierce countenance and the flying buttresses of her astounding bosom defied any patient to consult "Doctor" (lest administering extreme unction appears to be imminent).

In short, Miss Hoisington's self-appointed role in life was to prevent patients from breaching her Maginot Line and assaulting Doctor.

Fortunately for Doctor's practice, "Hoisey's" Maginot Line had its Ardennes: men. Hortense Hoisington rather liked men -- even though none could, of course, hold a candle to Doctor. My charming father, and other select members of homo sapiens, invariably managed to circumvent Cerberus by means of a few well-placed compliments.

Women, alas, soon found that even the most outrageous compliments elicited but one response: "It's time to weigh in. We musn't keep Doctor waiting!"

Although Hortense Hoisington probably knew very little about women, she highly disapproved of what little she knew. In her Cerberean mind, women were invariably divided into two enemy camps: those who were after celibate Doctor, and those who frittered away Doctor's precious time. Her approach to either category of sirens was identical: heartless humiliation.

"Hoisey's" weighing-in ceremony was designed to make women wish they had never stepped across the threshold of Doctor's office. Instinctively, Miss Hoisington knew how much women hate scales -- especially accurate scales.

Thus, the hapless women were not allowed to remove their coats in winter or their shoes at any time of the year. Moreover, they were certainly not allowed to take the lowest of three readings -- as they all did in the privacy of their homes.

"Hoisey" noted the results on a slip of paper (never trusting the women to confess to Doctor any concessions to the Battle of the Bulge) and triumphantly announced, "My, we've put on quite a bit of weight, haven't we!"

For many years I managed to get by Cerberus on the basis of extraordinarily low blood pressure. Whenever "Hoisey" managed to get a reading it certainly appeared that I was in a coma, which rendered me fit to consult Doctor. Alas, Doctor invariably determined that I was not at all comatose -- whereupon Miss Hoisington would chastise me for wasting (once again) Doctor's precious time.

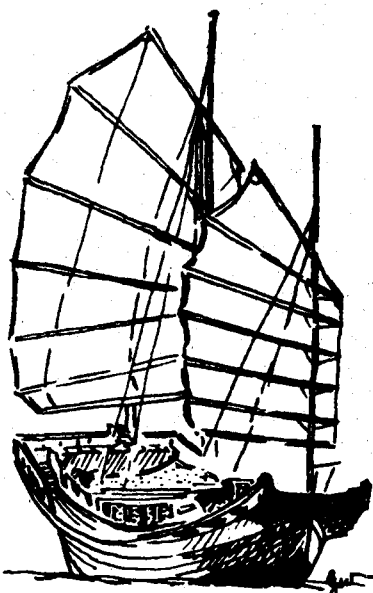

Since I never became a man, I never put away childish things. Thus, although Miss Hoisington's Cerberean descendants have not yet discovered Sanibel, I still tremble at the very thought of consulting my Sanibel physician in January.

Next comes the dentist. Unlike Cerberus of the past, the dentist welcomes my January visit. Indeed, he actually solicits it in the form of a reminder card, adorned with mouthful of flawless teeth -- and far too much lipstick.

The card informs me that my six-month reprieve is up

COMMENTARY

Bridge teacher spurs Islander's poetry in appreciation

A copy of the following poem in appreciation of Bob Osmond for his Sanibel bridge class was given to The Islander for publication.

Alert!

Partner, dear partner, I want you to know
That I bid with the best of intentions,
Though there may be times I abysmally blow
One or more of your favorite conventions.

I know you are expert in Texas and Flint,
In Flannery, Drury and Landy.
But I find it an almost impossible stint
To keep all the right answers handy.

I find that my brain waves are quickly perturbed
And will feebly give up and stay static,
If all these conventions have rudely disturbed
The bats in my cerebral attic.

I've decided I'm all done with doubles, indeed
They've become just too snide and insidious.
This negative, take-out optional breed
Is nothing but fake and perfidious.

Of the poor lowly club
I don't know when to speak,
It's no longer an easy decision
To know if it's Roman or Schenken or Weak,
Artificial, Blue Team or Precision.

Take this very first hand
where I bid a grand slam,
There was not cause for you to turn gray.
I redoubled the double to show you I am
Almost practically sure it will play.

You say you are sure you are going to be sick?
Hang in there 'til you see it scored!
I think you will find that we take every trick
And will certainly get a top board.

You should have more faith in the system I play,
For I might as well make this admission.
The reason I steal these unmakeable bids
Is I bid them on pure intuition.

Poor acoustics at MacKenzie Hall frustrate concerned citizens at council

To the Editor
The Islander

We Sanibel residents have much to be happy and grateful for. Our magnificent natural resources, our efficient and responsive local government and our enlightened and involved citizenry are all the more reason for alleviating the frustration experienced by many of us when attending the meetings of the Sanibel City Council and the Planning Commission.

The presentations and discussions by elected officials and city staff members as well as the statements of witnesses or parties to the question at hand are for the most part inaudible.

How discouraging to attend these sessions straining to hear and never being certain whether one has caught the meaning of the discussion. The public address system at MacKenzie Hall appears to be designed more for the recording of the proceedings than for the ears and benefit of the attending public.

Even sitting in the front rows, much of the discussion is unintelligible. When there is public input and the interested parties appear, their backs are to the audience and very little of what is said can be heard.

Granted many of us have less than perfect hearing. This makes it even more essential that the acoustics be adequate to permit public understanding and participation in the proceedings. Many of us residents feel that it is our duty to be informed and our right to share in the democratic process which we all cherish so dearly.

We hope that our city fathers will find a suitable remedy for this situation at MacKenzie Hall. We hope they will pay special attention to the acoustics in the design and operation of our new City Hall.

Library Arts and Crafts Fair inspires Islander's poetry

A copy of the following poem by Islander Robert Dugger was given to The Islander for publication.

THE LIBRARY SHOW

Each year in the crescent shaped city
Of Sanibel out in the Gulf
The artists and craftsmen maneuver
To show off their very best stuff.

For this yearly extravaganza
They trot out the cream of the crop.
They give it that little bit extra
And skim from right off of the top.

Those artists of extra perception
With talented creative flairs
Donate of their time and their talents
To proffer their pieces and wares.

Now these precious prices and pieces
Of art are destined to go
To reflect the intents and emotions
Of those who display in the show.

An object of art is a treasure
When it can produce and portray
Some beauty of purpose and pleasure
En route on life's happy highway.

The cause that inspires all this effort
Is healthy and kind and benign.
A gesture that implements culture
Is truly of epic design.

So let's all go to the Library Show
With will and desire and some clout.
Let's purchase a treasure for pleasure.
Let's buy and let's try to help out.

Commission balks at request for Brass Elephant entertainment

Sanibel Island Hilton's request for a license for live music and entertainment at its newly opened Brass Elephant restaurant received the short shrift from the Planning Commission last week.

The commissioners, irked at what they consider a violation of a limited advertising restriction imposed when the development permit for the 75-seat restaurant was approved last fall, turned down General Manager Robert Davis' bid to provide dinner music in the posh restaurant. The entertainment, Davis maintained, would be an appropriate accompaniment for a relatively expensive meal.

The commission feared that allowing live dinner music would be only the first step toward a "honky tonk nightclub operation."

The commissioners were upset by an advertisement in the Fort Myers News-Press inviting the public to a New Year's Eve party at the gulf front restaurant, which under city regulations must close at 9 p.m.

Under terms of the restaurant's development permit the facility would not be advertised except in connection with the whole resort operation.

"Our problem is we feel there has already been extensive abuse of the restaurant and advertising permit," Chairman Ann Winterbotham said.

The commissioners said in light of this they could not trust the new Hilton not to exceed the limits of a city-issued live music permit.

Hilton's attorney William Haverfield said it wasn't fair for the city not to issue a permit just because it might be violated.

Though some of the commissioners did not object to live dinner music, most opposed dancing at the restaurant.

Commissioner Emily Barefield's motion to deny the license passed by a 5-2 vote with Commissioners Lennart Lorenson and Jerry Muench dissenting.

In the city's out-of-court settlement with David Holtzman, the former owner of Shell Harbor Inn, the restaurant was permitted as an accessory use of the resort and was to be operated primarily for the convenience of its guests.

The Shell Harbor Group, current owners of the inn, is suing the city to increase the restaurant's capacity from 75 to 200 seats and seeking removal of other conditions placed on the development permit.

The inn was franchised as a Hilton hotel on Jan. 7. It was formerly operated as a Great Western Motel. The Brass Elephant restaurant opened Dec. 21. Piped music is currently played during dinner at the establishment.

But the Hilton did score one small victory last week. The commissioners approved the resort's request to rent 12 to 24 bicycles and four sailboats and four wind-surfers for the use of guests.

But all of the equipment must be stored under one of the elevated buildings, the commissioners ruled.

Short form permit okayed for seawall repairs

The Planning Commission last week gave the Planning Department the green light to issue a short form development permit for the repair of a deteriorating seawall on property in Del Sega subdivision fronting on Blind Pass Sound.

Planner Jean Nichols had asked the commission for clarification in processing owner Robert Kessler's request to shore up the 12-year-old seawall using riprap to slow down the erosion of sand at its base.

The problem, Nichols explained, was that according to official city maps a small section of the seawall is located seaward of the Coastal Construction Setback Line.

The Comprehensive Land Use Plan prohibits any structure forward of the CCSL, and a specific amendment would be required for riprap to be installed.

But Nichols said the state Department of Natural Resources aerial photographs show that all the seawall is behind the CCSL. It appears that the city maps are in error, she added.

The commissioners, recognizing that the seawall might collapse during the three months required to process a specific amendment, voted unanimously to permit repair work to begin immediately.

Meanwhile Nichols said she would check out the correct location of the CCSL in that area with the DNR. If the city maps are in error the City Council will be asked to authorize the change to agree with the state.

The commission took note of naturalist George Campbell's suggestion that the city begin developing standards for the installation of riprap to deter erosion at the base of seawalls.

Request granted for ground floor space use

Tortuga Beach Club, a gulf-front interval ownership resort, can enclose space under its front office for use as a guest courtesy area, recreation space, an office for the property manager and storage, the Planning Commission decided last week.

Marand Ltd.'s request for a specific amendment to CLUP's flood proofing element to utilize the space was approved by a unanimous vote of the commission.

But the commissioners balked at permitting installation of bathroom facilities on the ground level.

Ray Pavelka, director of development for Mariner Properties, had argued that the Tortuga Beach Club's proposed use of the space is an accessory use and should be exempt from the flood proofing regulations.

The commission, swayed by Planning

Director Bruce Roger's assessment that the facility is "an integral part of the main function of the resort," agreed that a specific amendment to the plan would be required.

The commissioners recommended council approval of Tortuga Beach's request but deleted the toilet facilities.

City, Gaestan to cooperate for vegetation buffer

A vegetation buffer to screen the Priscilla Murphy Real Estate Rental and Sales office from Causeway Road will be planted by the city of Sanibel in a joint venture with Gaestan Properties, Inc.

Stan Johnson, principal in Gaestan with his wife, Gay, has agreed to contribute $500 toward the project.

The Planning Commission last week recommended council approval of Johnson's request for a specific amendment exempting Johnson from providing a vegetation buffer on the north and west boundary lines.

But the commissioners insisted that a buffer be provided at the front of the real estate office that is being expanded.

The city agreed to take the lead in the project during negotiations to purchase a 23,939-square-foot parcel at the rear of the real estate facility from Gaestan for $25,000. The land connects two parcels on Causeway Road already owned by the city.

Johnson contended at the time there was not room for the required 15-foot buffer in the area where he planned to provide additional parking.

Commissioner Jerry Muench was the only dissenter on Vice Chairman Larry Simon's motion to require buffering only at the front of the property.

"If it were not the city involved, we would require the other buffers, too," Muench complained.

Denial recommended for setback variance request

Barry Young failed to convince the Planning Commission last week that the only way to fit an esthetically pleasing home on his San Carlos Bay Drive property is to site the home 35 feet from the center line of the road.

The commission voted 6-1 to recommend council denial of Young's request for a specific amendment to encroach 15 feet on the setback from the street.

Young was granted a variance in 1979 to build 15 feet closer to the bay than city law required. But he discovered later the house he planned would not fit in the buildable area.

If the house were moved 15 feet closer to the road he could take advantage of the 30 percent coverage allowed in the altered land zone, Young said. He added he would be able to build a more traditional one-story home more in conformity with others in Sanibel Isles subdivision.

Young argued that the house next door encroached 15 feet into the required 50-foot setback from the center line of San Carlos Bay Drive.

Two other residences are built 35 feet from the center line of the road, he said.

Harry Goodman, who lives in Sanibel Isles, urged the commission to "adhere to the street setback."

The commissioners' negative decision was influenced by Young's admission that he had sold the property and did not intend to live in the home himself. "But I still retain an interest," he said.

Conditions attached to condo approval

A development permit to construct a nine-unit condominium on a 1.84-acre parcel on West Gulf Drive between the White Sands and Island Beach Club condominiums was approved unanimously by the Planning Commission last week.

Developer Ed Cassavell agreed to 19 conditions recommended by the planning staff including a revision of the drainage plan that will leave most of the heavily vegetated site undisturbed.

Confusion prompts request to change street name

The Planning Commission last week gave its nod of approval for Capital City Way-South in Sanibel Highlands subdivision to become Wendy Shell Lane at the request of several residents of the street.

Noel and Bert McCarry, also representing the Richard Pernas, the Shelley Webbs and the Robert Tuttles, explained that the name change will eliminate confusion that now exists in locating the street variously listed on maps, in directories and by governmental offices as Capital City, Capital City Way, Capital City Drive and Capital City Road.

"There are at least 12 variations in the spelling," McCarry told the commission last week.

The new street designation combines the names of the street's two youngest residents, Wendy Tuttle and Shelley Webb, McCarry said. That, he said, adds "a special sort of warmth" to the new name.

The name change would not affect Capital City Way-North, which runs off Atlanta Plaza on the opposite side of Casa Ybel Road.

The four families, currently the only residents of the short sandy lane, first petitioned the city for the name change in May 1982.

The planning staff did not recommend renaming the street because the only rationale for the change was the "personal wishes of the petitioners."

The original developer of Sanibel Highlands had named the streets for those in his hometown of Atlanta, Ga.

Commission says no to house at an angle

A request to construct a home in the Kearns subdivision only 25 feet from the center line of Hurricane Lane was denied last week by the Planning Commission last.

The Raymond Dorry's wanted to build their home at an angle on the lot to take advantage of cross breezes, to block out the east-west sun and to provide them more privacy from future development in the adjacent Tarpon Bay subdivision, building contractor Mark Comer explained to the commission.

But the commissioners objected to "tilting the site" because it would not conform to the uniform perpendicular siting of the existing homes.

Harry Bell and Derry Adams, who live nearby the Dorry's property, said their argument was not with the angle of the house but with its encroachment on the setback from Hurricane Lane.

Although their own homes, built before adoption of the land use plan, do not comply with the required 50-foot setback, Bell and Adams urged the commissioners not to approve any further variances.

Commissioner Lennart Lorenson's motion to recommend council approval of the specific amendment was supported only by Lorenson and Commissioner Emily Barefield.

Commissioner Harold Schuyler's motion to deny the request passed by a 5-2 vote with Lorenson and Barefield dissenting.

Comer had told the commission that the 45x80-foot buildable area of the lot would accommodate the proposed 47x63-foot structure including four-foot overhangs if it were sited at an angle.

Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham suggested the Dorry's problem could be solved by making the home smaller.

Ferry Landing single-family homes approved

Architect Ray Fenton can retain 11 ROGO allocations collected during the past year and a half for use at Ferry Landing project now designed for 12 single-family homes and three duplexes, the Planning Commission agreed last week.

Ferry Landing single-family homes approved from page 7A

Fenton originally planned to develop the bay front acreage at the Lighthouse end of the Island as a nine-duplex complex with recreational facilities.

But after finding the market soft for that type of development, Fenton last fall received commission approval to try out the single-family home concept.

He used one of the 12 ROGO allocations he had received previously to build a model home to test the market.

Last week Fenton presented a revised site plan combining the two housing types, exchanging six of the original duplexes for 12 single-family homes.

The commissioners called the new concept superior to the original and voted 7-0 to permit Fenton to retain the 11 remaining allocations, all charged to ROGO's multi-family reserve.

Interval representatives speak on ordinance

The Planning Commission last week declined to discuss in depth a proposed time share ordinance designed to control growth of interval ownership on Sanibel by restricting to 12 the number of owners permitted for any single unit.

Currently as many as 52 owners can have title to a unit.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers advised the commissioners that since the ordinance is not a land use regulation they have the prerogative but had no obligation to review it or make a recommendation to the City Council.

But they did permit comments limited to two minutes from representatives of interval ownership developments and other interested persons who had come to the commission meeting for that purpose.

Bob Taylor, chairman of the Mariner Group, questioned why the ordinance was not a land use issue. Rogers explained that the ordinance, based on one passed by the city of Naples in December, deals with ownership, not the use of the land.

Ray Pavelka, Mariner's director of development, argued that Sanibel already has adequate laws regulating time sharing and that the new law "will cause more problems than it solves."

Fred Metcalfe, chairman of the Committee of the Islands (COTI), spoke in support of the ordinance, maintaining it would give the city a good handle on reducing the intensity of use.

"The real problem is not the number of dwelling units on the Island but the number of human bodies," Metcalfe said.

Pavelka urged that the city schedule a public workshop to discuss the issues. The commissioners agreed that a workshop with the City Council would be advantageous but said they needed time to study the documents and the staff reports on the proposed law and its implications.

Winterbotham starts seventh term as chairman

Ann Winterbotham began her seventh term as chairman of the Planning Commission last week.

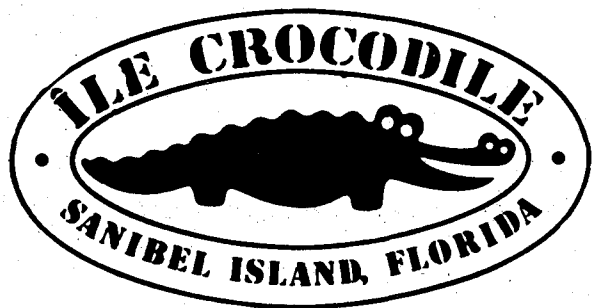

Winterbotham, the only nominee for the top post, was elected unanimously by her fellow commissioners. Commissioner Larry Simon, appointed to the commission in 1980, was named vice chairman.

A member of the commission since its inception in 1974, Winterbotham has served as chairman since Duane White resigned the post to run for the City Council in 1976.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

This is the time of the year when large sheepshead move into our coastal waters and give you a chance to try your hand at catching some for dinner.

Those of you who are new to fishing will have no trouble identifying the sheepshead. They are zebra striped with alternating black and white lines an inch or so wide from nose to tail.

When you catch a sheepshead, look inside its mouth as you remove the hook. These fish have a set of the prettiest teeth you are ever going to see in other fish or even in humans, for that matter.

They have a perfect set of teeth backed by an equally efficient, hard mouth covering inside the choppers. Some folks say the fish was named because its teeth look like those of sheep. I've looked down the throats of a lot of sheepshead and a few real sheep, too, and it seems to be a valid comparison.

Either way, the fish is a master at bait stealing, and that is primarily because of the way those teeth and hard mouth are used as they go about their feeding around our bay and gulf waters.

If you are just getting started in fishing around here you most likely will catch your first couple of sheepshead by accident around some pilings or docks.

Let's get back to the sheepshead mouth. These fish eat hard shelled tid bits like tiny crabs and even the meat out of shells like the barnacle. The narrow, strong jaw and tough teeth allow them to crack crab bodies without much problem.

But, as you can guess, hook and line anglers have a time setting the barb into the mouth. That's why the sheepshead is probably the best trained bait snatcher in our waters.

Those who think they are "old timers" around the fishing pier are often overheard telling a novice that to catch a sheepshead, you have to set the hook just before they bite!

Almost any fishing tackle can be used, but go light if possible. Actually, some people can catch more with a cane pole and tiny cork than with an expensive fishing outfit. Use small hooks, with a 1-0 being just about the largest you want to work. Remember that tiny, hard mouth.

I like to use a third of a piece of live shrimp, but some have great with fiddler crabs that are caught at low tide on the Pine Island Sound side of Sanibel.

Look for structures for your fishing. Some of the best catches of sheepshead I've ever seen came from the concrete groins that lace much of the beach side of Captiva Island. The groins were placed there years ago to prevent erosion, but they also serve as perfect barnacle growth areas. And you know who likes to eat barnacles!

Make a three-foot leader of 30-pound mono, attach your hook and a small castable cork and cast right to the side of the groins. When the waves are calm and waters clear, you can usually see the fish milling around the structures.

Probably as many sheepshead are caught down at the free public fishing pier at the Lighthouse end of Sanibel as in any single spot on the Islands. The tides at the pier can really run fast and make for difficult times in detecting the gentle nibble of the sheepshead. Work around the slack times of the tides for best results.

This fish is one of the more difficult to clean because it has a large, strong rib cage. Once that is cut out, there is a nearly clear filet of meat, but not as much as you would expect for these fish. They can reach over six pounds, but the average is one to three pounds.

Good luck with these fish. It takes time to get the hang of it, but sheepshead mean fun for all, especially if you have some kids along.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

I always have some trouble with the thought that king's crown shells are really conchs. But no matter what you call them they make fine additions to your collection and they are relatively easy to find, too.

Some people simply call them "crowns," because as the shell matures, it grows a little set of protrusions that circle the top of the shell. Yes, if you squint, it does indeed look like a king's crown. (I don't name them folks, I just tell you about them!)

I've seen some monster-sized king's crowns, but a really big one would only be four inches tall. They don't rival the size of the horse conchs or whelks, but as with many of our local found shells, the smaller ones in the species are usually the best for collecting.

The shell is colored with alternating strips of black and white that go around in a spiral-like design with the lines running horizontally.

The average crown is about one to two inches tall. What I look for is very defined color separations. I mention this because there are many smaller crowns that get washed upon the beaches during the year.

The combination of tumbling in the surf and the salt and sun tends to fade this shell's natural color. Sometimes you will swear that you've found an albino crown, but in reality the shell has simply lost its intense color -- if it ever really had any in the first place. I believe some of my charter groups have actually found a true albino or two, but that is rare. Most likely you got a faded shell.

Crowns are frequent shallow water, mangrove line feeders. I've seen colonies ranging from half an inch to two inches that were so crowded there was no way I could count them all.

They are aggressive feeders, not only looking over the sandy bottom for live shells like tiny augers, but also feeding upon dead fish, crabs or any other thing that has appeal.

One time several years ago I watched crowns "trail" a dying horseshoe crab and gather there by the dozens to clean the remains of the huge old crab.

Some years ago a lady who reads this column said that I only mentioned one crown conch. But she added there are in reality two or three kinds of crowns.

That's true. Our local melongena corona is the most commonly found of all the crowns. But others are found south of Sanibel and Captiva, and it is possible that currents could bring some of them to our beaches.

The other crowns are the "high-spined," the "spineless" and the "dwarf." What I find most common between these three crowns is the lack of crowns or spikes on the top of the shell. If you find one of these special crowns you have a very good display piece.

Incidentally, aside from the intense color of the king's crown there is one other thing I look for that makes them a "keeper" in my shell book -- that is the prominent set of second crowns.

Only a few of the king's crowns will have this second set of crowns, and you will examine many before you find a perfect one.

Good shelling this week. Observe the two-live shells, per person, per species rule and keep an eye out for the king's crown.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 172-3159 for information.

Bill Hennessey

Age:

Height: "6'2" or thereabouts — I stopped counting when I reached 6'."

Roots: "A small suburban town near Boston named Norwood."

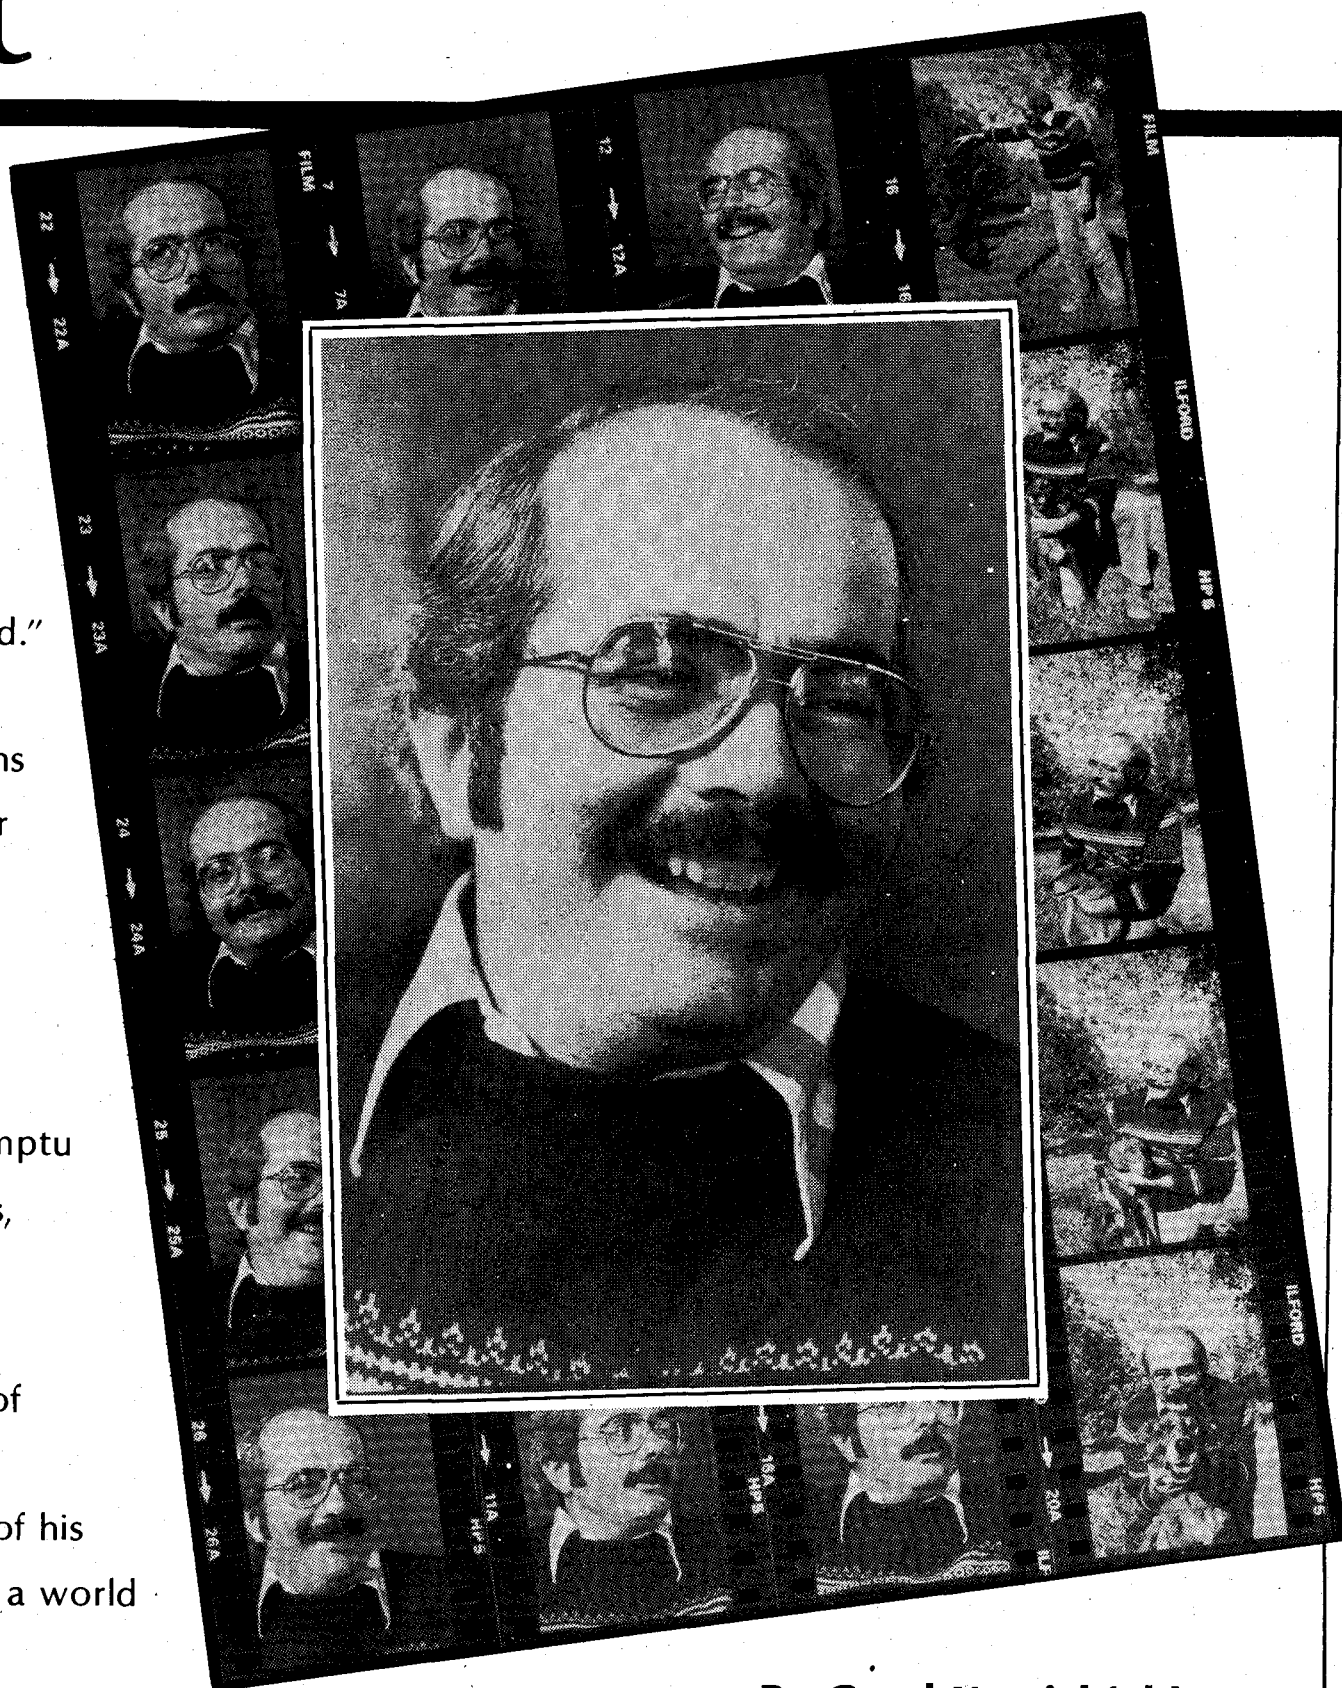

Last Book Read: Still Life With Woodpecker by Tom Robbins and Building Construction for the Fire Service by Francis Brannigan.

Pleasures: "Carolyn and William (my wife and newborn son), creating things, doing impromptu comedy skits with my friends, imported beer and walking on the beach."

Mentor: "There are a whole lot of people you can learn from."

Words of Wisdom: "Life is a God-given pleasure, and only by your own mistakes do you make it a burden."

By Carol Kranichfeld

The smile on Bill Hennessey's face these days bespeaks its owner's contentment with the life he started anew on Sanibel seven years ago.

Hennessey left the seasons of New England in 1975 for a new life on sunny Sanibel. Now, at the peak of the upturn, the new life that has given Hennessey a wife and a career brings forth a new home and a new son — enough to bring a smile to any face.

"The best day of my life was when I married Carol," Hennessey says of his wife of two years. "Things have been falling into place ever since."

When he married Carol Nix, Hennessey was a first year firefighter with the Sanibel Fire Control District. Nix was a member of the Sanibel Police Department.

Like a lot of young couples on Sanibel they played the renting game. Now, in his third year of public service, the Hennessey's are finally able to plant roots in the area he serves. Their new home affords a good start for young William, the source of much of the couple's joy.

"William doesn't fill a void, he creates a space," says his proud poppa.

But planting roots has not come especially easy. Hennessey arrived on the Island straight from the cab of a tractor-trailer truck hauling fuel from Providence to Boston.

"I was thrilled," he says of his decision to leave Walpole, Mass., and the Cleveland Oil Company for Island shores. "I was dealing with snow in all kinds of ways," he says. "Then one day I just got fed up."

A visit with former Boston roommate Russ Mattson brought Hennessey to the Islands for the first time. Once he got his feet wet, he never went back to the snow. "Within a week I had a job scraping boat bottoms at Tarpon Bay Marina," he remembers.

Six months later he became acquainted with the Sanibel Fire Control District and formed an attachment that first led to volunteer service and culminated in a career.

"The job I have now with the Fire Department is the best I've ever had because it is an opportunity to serve the community," he says.

Along with Carol and young William, these thoughts of his career and of the future can't help but promulgate Bill's smiling face.

The three-year firefighter-emergency medical technician recently entered into partnership in a new Island contracting business. "John Boardman and I plan to build everything from the finest half-million dollar home to the finest BMR home," he says of this second career.

A wife, a child, planting roots and developing new goals are nice things to smile about, but it is just as important to Hennessey that these things are happening on Sanibel.

"I feel now that I can live here and have the advantages, too," he says. Quality, not quantity, is what Hennessey wants from life. That philosophy is reflected most in his view of family.

"I want to be a good father and husband and be a positive influence on my son, starting with his soul," he says.

"I take one thing at a time and the rest will follow," are words Hennessey lives by — words from a man with a smile on his face for the good things begun and the good things yet to come.

POLICE BEAT

All information in the following reports was taken directly from the Sanibel Police Department records.

A Fort Myers man was advised of a complaint lodged by several Sanibel Elementary School students about the man's erratic driving by the students' bus stop on Friday morning, Jan. 7.

The man was stopped near the Limpet Drive and Periwinkle Way bus stop. He told police he has stopped and shouted at the children because they had yelled at him as he drove by. The children said the man's van swerved over the center line toward them as they waited for the bus.

A Lighthouse Point condominiums resident reported the contents of a fire extinguisher had been released into the swimming pool at the condominium development on Friday morning, Jan. 7. The empty fire extinguisher was found in a dumpster nearby.

Two Island youths were advised not to ride their motorcycle in the area of Cardium Street and Donax Street after a Cardium Street resident complained of the racing noise on Friday evening, Jan. 7.

A Fort Lauderdale man agreed to pay a $46 bill at Pepper's restaurant after police advised him that he should file a consumer complaint rather than refuse to pay the bill on Friday night, Jan. 7.

Police investigated an attempted break-in at 631 Nerita St. on Saturday evening, Jan. 8. The Libertyville, Ill., owners arrived at their home to find a guest bedroom window pried open and screen pulled out. Nothing was missing, however, and entry was not gained to the house.

Police investigated a report of a loud crashing noise outside a Sandcastle Road home shortly after 1 a.m. on Sunday, Jan. 9. They discovered an animal had raided the garbage cans outside the home.

A Chicago Heights, Ill., woman was treated for minor lacerations to the back of her head after she fell from the moped she was riding along Sanibel-Captiva Road on Sunday afternoon, Jan. 9.

A young white male told police he sprayed the contents of a fire extinguisher in the street near the 7-11 store on Periwinkle Way late Sunday night, Jan. 9, after police questioned the boy when they saw him in the midst of the white smoky substance.

The boy said two other boys whose names he did not know had given him the fire extinguisher on the beach in front of the Ramada Inn.

Police turned the boy over to his uncle in the Periwinkle Trailer Park and advised him that theft of a fire extinguisher is a felony and said they would question him further if the extinguisher is reported missing.

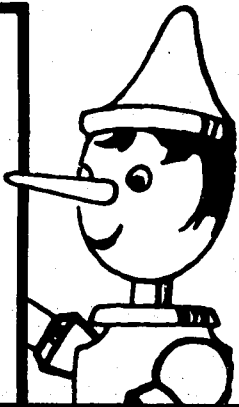

Two construction workers stopped work on a swimming pool at the Sea Spray subdivision on Monday evening, Jan. 10, after they were advised of Sanibel's noise ordinance. A Jamaica Drive resident had complained to police about the noise the men and their equipment were making. The men told police they thought the Post Office eatery adds nostalgic touch to Olde Sanibel complex

By Catherine Battista

The Olde Post Office Eatery recently opened in the Olde Sanibel shopping complex on Tarpon Bay Road at the end of Periwinkle Way.

Formerly known as the Post Office Deli, the eatery is as romantic and nostalgic as Sanibel's history, which is strongly linked to the Post Office.

The delivery of mail, after all, was the only communication the homesteaders had with the mainland. Everything that could not be grown or made on Sanibel was ordered through the mail.

The original Post Office Deli building was constructed in 1967 to serve Sanibel as a Post Office and remained so until 1979, when the present Post Office farther up Tarpon Bay Road was built.

A heavy natural wood door with an oval light framed in stained glass welcomes customers to the new eatery. A sign is artistically etched on the glass, blending the Victorian and art nouveau periods. The door merely hints at some of the surprises that are inside.

The ceiling has been diligently covered with 5,000 antique postcards collected from flea markets, garage sales, pawn and antique shops.

"It was a herculean task," say the new owners Lynda and Mark McGee. Fortunately members of the McGee family who still live in Detroit helped scout for postcards along with other Post Office memorabilia.

The eatery includes many interesting posters, stamps and old post office boxes as well as the countless post cards. It will take more than one trip to the eatery to digest the unique decor.

Paul Karinga, formerly with the Lighthouse Restaurant on Sanibel, is the McGee's right arm in both planning and remodeling. Shades of red, white and blue surround the warm, natural wood booths nestled between lattice dividers that give the room an open, airy effect much like a gazebo. Each table has a high gloss polyurethane covering which protects still more memorabilia underneath.

But the furnishings and the decor are not the only things that are new at the eatery. The menu is equally exciting. A fresh "bulk rate" salad bar with spinach and mushroom as the house specialty tops the list along with all kinds of interesting sandwiches including "parcel post" pitas and "first class" burgers.

Laetitia's love story is an Island legend, for she followed her husband from one Civil War battlefield to another. After Laetitia, there were three officially appointed postmasters on Sanibel, William Reed, Scotia Bryant and our current Paul Adams, who has filled the post for the past 10 years.

Island businesswomen name Woman of the Year

Sanibel resident Catherine Battista was one of 14 Lee County women honored recently at the Woman of the Year Luncheon sponsored by the Inter Chapter Council of the American Business Women's Association.

Battista, who is president of Barrier Island Business Communicators, was chosen by a committee to be the Sanibel-Captiva Woman of the Year for 1982-83 according to guidelines established by the national organization. The guidelines include education, experience and community involvement.

According to local ABWA President Kate

Aune, Battista has made a significant impact on the Island organization as chairman of public relations."

A former resident of Connecticut, Battista is a graduate of the Hospital of St. Raphael, School of Nursing. She received her bachelor's degree from Southern Connecticut State College and attended the University of Connecticut School of Law.

As assistant executive director for the Connecticut Nurses Association, she served as a registered lobbyist in the Connecticut Legislature. She was also the executive director for the Alcohol Council of Greater New Haven and later served as public affairs director for the Health Systems Agency of South Central Connecticut.

Linda McAlister, Dean of Women for the University of South Florida, was the guest speaker for the Woman of the Year luncheon. She praised ABWA members for their involvement with a national scholarship program and for believing in the improvement of business women through education.

"It has been hardly more than 100 years that women have been involved in business, education, earning money and owning property," McAlister reminded her audience. "It has only been since 1880 that women could own property in their own right and not until the 19th century that opportunities for earning money began to open up for women," she added.

"The education of women in colleges and universities has allowed women to advance in society," she said. "Organizations such as the ABWA have played an important role in helping women," she noted.

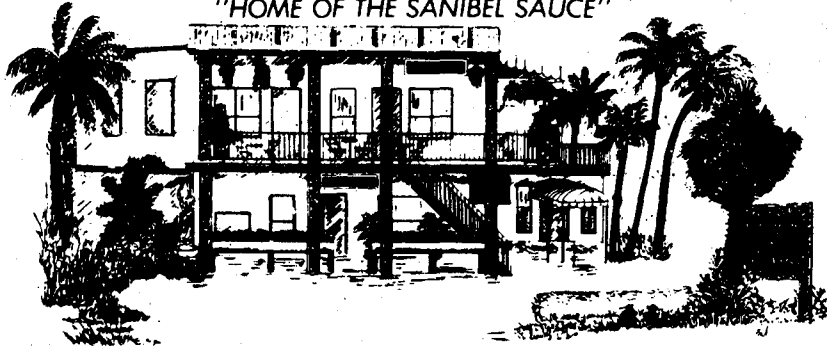

Besides her involvement with the ABWA, Battista is a member of the board of directors for the Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife, Inc.

and, if I wish to ensure future health and happiness, it behooves me to make an appointment sooner rather than later.

Actually, it has been five months, not six. However, dentists know full well that their patients procrastinate -- especially those who may not have put away childish things. After all, many of us remember the pre-Novocain days. (If we do, then we are also pre-fluoride, and thus always ripe for molar resurrection.)

It has been reported that the suicide rate among dentists is extremely high. This is doubtless due to the fact that many dentists must cope with pre-fluoride, pre-Novocain people like me.

Indeed, I once had a tooth filled in Greece by a dentist who activated an antique drill with his foot! No wonder I recline (one no longer sits) in the dental lounge as though I were strapped to an electric chair.

Actually, my splendid Sanibel dentist and I have reached a comfortable modus vivendi. He is allowed to find something slightly "suspicious" once a year -- and I get off scot free (and solvent) for the balance of the year.

Unfortunately, since my dentist did not find any areas of concern in June, he is bound to look harder in January. Should he succeed where I have failed, then one of his comely hygienists (with flawless teeth) will have carte blanche to launch upon her flossing lecture (Flossing IV, for patients of advancing years with remaining teeth in an advanced state of deterioration).

I will leave the dentist's office, clutching my tiny freebie toothbrush and feeling very much like a naughty child who has been chastised for failing to floss properly -- for my own good.

In short, the month of January certainly leaves a great deal to be desired. I'm still smoking, still drinking, and my self-righteous visits to the healers will not make me feel one bit better about myself.

The hex of Hortense Hoisington has made it impossible for me to be happy about being healthy.

Council wants more facts before deciding on construction standards for hurricane protection

By Barbara Brundage

The City Council wrestled last Thursday with the question whether homes on Sanibel should be designed to withstand a 130-mph wind to protect them from damage in a hurricane.

Sanibel contractors, including Bill Frey, who builds single-family homes on the Island, say no.

Frey maintains the cost of construction will be increased at least 10 percent if the city adopts the standard, which is recommended in a proposed new Hurricane Resistant Building Code.

Sanibel Building Officer George Blain, author of the 31-page ordinance that outlines stricter construction standards relating to design wind conditions, wave surge, scour, stability and battering stresses, recognizes that building codes should be cost effective.

"But they should also provide as much protection as possible for citizens of this barrier island," Blain told the council last week.

Herbert Saffir, a structural engineer who designed the refuge of last resort section of the new City Hall and a recognized expert on hurricane resistant construction, told the council he is "more comfortable with the 130-mile-per-hour storm standard."

Because single-family homes built of wood are more wind sensitive, it would cost more to make them more wind resistant, he acknowledged.

Saffir, who assisted Blain in drafting the ordinance, was invited by the city to attend last week's public hearing and participate in the discussion of the sixth draft of the ordinance.

Councilman Fred Valtin said that to make an intelligent decision he needed to know the cost differential for construction of a home under 110-, 120- and 130-mph wind speed standards.

"We really ought to know how much would be added on to the price of a home by building it under the new standards," Mayor Mike Klein agreed.

"Cost is very important," Councilman Francis Bailey pointed out. "But we can't overlook the safety, health and welfare of our citizens."

"If I had my druthers," Bailey added, "I'd prefer a 150-mph standard. But could we live with it economically?"

Councilman Louise Johnson said she was "inclined to go with the 130-mph standard."

"In the consideration of relative costs, some people might be more comfortable living in homes designed to withstand a Category Three hurricane," she said.

John Meeks, a Fort Lauderdale structural engineer who had encountered Causeway traffic on the way to Sanibel that morning, said if he lived here during a hurricane he would choose a safe preserve on the Island rather than take a chance on getting off the Island in time.

Valtin pointed out that mandatory evacuation when a hurricane threatens is currently the city's policy.

Before the next hearing set for March 9 the council asked Blain, Saffir and the city's staff to come up with incremental costs of construction for a single-family home on Sanibel built under 110-, 120- and 130-mph wind speed standards.

In addition the council asked for an estimate of differential of damage likely to be incurred at those three levels.

"I don't want to see any dramatic increase in the cost of building on Sanibel," Bailey said. "But to make a political decision I need cold, hard facts reduced to laymen's language."

The Cattle Egret —

New insights concerning an old friend

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

The Cattle Egret, whose official name is Bulbucus ibis, is, of course, not a real ibis but a heron. Sometimes taxonomists, supposed experts in their fields, make glitches. One wonders what was going on in the mind of the ornithologist who applied the term ibis to a heron!

Bulbucus ibis is a member of the family Ardeidae in the order Ciconiiformes. Ardeidae is the family that contains all of our familiar egrets and herons. Ibis species belong to the family Threskiornithidae, which also includes our beautiful Roseate Spoonbill. The word Bulbucus is from the Latin and means "of or pertaining to cattle."

Elsewhere in this series I have expressed my admiration for the venturesome Cattle Egret, who, like an avian Columbus or Magellan, has been exploring the world for the last century while many other species have been retrenching, losing population and range, and even disappearing entirely.

The Cattle Egret was common in Speke's and Livingston's Africa. But in those days in the 19th Century, it was not known elsewhere.

Then, early in this century, a lust for wandering the world became evident. Was it a gene demanding range expansion that appeared? Or was it an accident — a strong wind that blew the seed colony from Africa to South America?

Or was it perhaps a sturdy drifting hulk that provided the means to transport a viable group across the Atlantic? (Not only would a large piece of floating debris serve as a vehicle in such a case, it would also attract fish, which would serve as food for the birds.)

In any case, the species appeared in northern South America, probably in what was then British Guiana. (Now Guyana — perhaps near Jonestown?) Authorities differ as to the exact date. Probably it was 1911, but one reported sighting was alleged in 1887.

From northern South America the species spread rapidly throughout the Caribbean Basin and to Florida, where it was first seen in 1941 near Lake Okeechobee. The first United States nesting was observed in 1953.

Subsequently it rapidly colonized the Atlantic seaboard all the way to Canada. Nesting has been observed in New England, Minnesota, Wisconsin and Michigan. It is known in the West, too, having been seen in Idaho and Manitoba, and is very numerous in California, especially in the Imperial Valley.

Eleuthera, the Garden Isle of the Bahamas, was home to me for years in the 1940's. The Cattle Egret was not present in those days.

When visiting Hatchet Bay, Eleuthera, in the 1960's I saw large flocks of more than 100 Cattle Egrets; they were attracted by the herds of Holsteins that stirred up the birds' arthropod prey — mostly "Soppas," as my local friends call grasshoppers.

On a recent trip to East Africa we observed Cattle Egrets tracking Giraffe, Buffalo, Oryx, Zebra and Wildebeest, but not in the great mobs one can see at Eleuthera or elsewhere in the species' newly-extended range. Population surges often take place in a newly transported species, whether the range extension is by self-introduction, as in the present case, or by man's agency, as in the case of the Brazilian pepper.

Newly introduced species often leave behind their natural control agents whether predators, parasites or diseases. A population explosion is often the result.

So it is with the Cattle Egret. The species is really much more prominent in Florida or Eleuthera, for example, than it is today in its "native" East Africa.

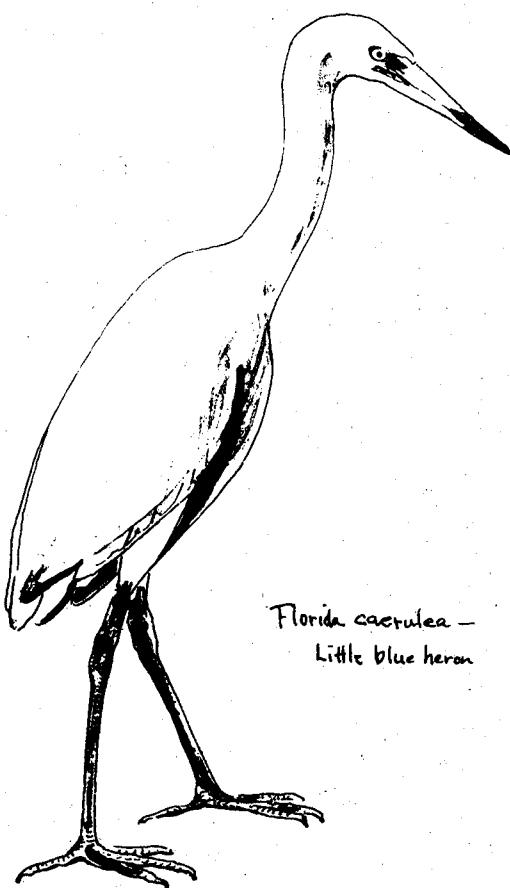

In Florida its feeding niche is generally not competitive with other herons. It seldom feeds in the shallows in competition with its relatives, the Great Egret, Snowy Egret or Reddish Egret. Nor does it compete with the Great Blue Heron (which I call the Great Grey) or the Least Heron (as I call the really-not-very-green Green Heron).

Most of these species stalk their prey in shallow wetlands or mangrove forests seeking fish, crustacea, worms or other specific individual prey.

The Cattle Egret is seldom found in the wetlands, but does its hunting in uplands where it seeks insects, spiders,

In Sanibel habitats there are about ten white wading birds, give or take one or two, and three of them are easily confused. All three are from 20 to 27 inches tall and are mostly white. The notes and pictures below will enable you to identify the Cattle Egret, the Snowy Egret, and the immature Little Blue Heron.

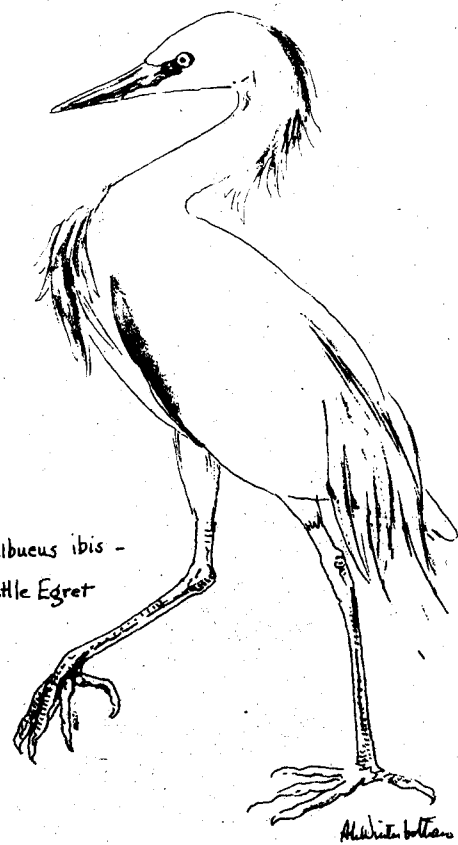

Florida sacrolea —
Little blue heron

The immature Little Blue Heron is white with a black-tipped bluish bill. Beebe used to say the bill looked as though the tip had been dipped in an inkwell. The legs are a dull olive. This bird is about 25 inches tall.

Egretta thula —
Snowy Egret

The Snowy Egret is white all over. In nuptial plumage it has lovely plumes that were extensively used early in the century by the millinery trade. The bill is black, as are the legs. The feet are yellow. The bird is a bit taller than the other two species. It has been called the bird with the yellow boots.

Bulbucus ibis —
Cattle Egret

The Cattle Egret is about 20 inches tall and mostly white all over. In nuptial plumage, a buff or golden color appears on the head, breast, back and wings, and the bill is pinkish. Young birds have a yellow bill, as do adults not in breeding plumage. The legs are yellowish or greenish in young birds and coral-colored pink in adult breeders.

Wildlife refuge adds two employees

By Carol Kranichfeld

More staff changes are in the wind at Sanibel's J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, making this winter a season of unusually high turnover but great potential for the Island's treasured sanctuary.

Coming on board permanently is Fort Myers resident Richard Blackburn, who will be responsible for all facets of refuge maintenance.

Blackburn has been instrumental in manatee capture and transport this past year and will be an integral part of the manatee necropsy operations set to begin this spring at the refuge.

A Viet Nam veteran, Blackburn was hired by the Fish and Wildlife Service last May as a member of the government-sponsored Veteran's Readjustment Program. The Missouri native brings with him 14 years experience as an electrician in Fort Myers.

Newcomer Bonnie Bell will be another highly visible staff member, thanks to the federal Cooperative Graduate Education Program. Although her technical job description lists her as park technician, Bell will be assisting Outdoor Recreation Planner Chris Olsen with tours, slide shows, lectures and other visitor programs.

A University of Louisiana master's degree candidate, Bell has participated in other cooperative programs as part of her study, including a captive breeding project for the endangered Puerto Rico Parrot (indigenous only to Puerto Rico) and a radio telemetry program with Bob White Quail in Greensboro, N.C.

Exotic species this week's Tuesday at the Center feature

Exotic Species and the Problems They Present will be the topic of today's Tuesday at the Center lecture at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

Sgt. Kat Kelley-Phillips of the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission will begin her presentation at 2 p.m. at the foundation center on San-Cap Road.

Next week's lecture will be delivered by foundation Manager Steve Phillips, who will discuss Reptiles and Amphibians.

Both programs will begin at 2 p.m. Admission for each lecture is free to SCCF members. Non-members will be charged $1 for adults and $.50 for children.

lizards, snakes, mice, toads, worms and grubs such as succulent beetle larvae. It does, however, compete for food with one other heron on Sanibel -- the Great Egret. (I call it the Elegant Egret.)

This large heron, when pickings are slim in the wetlands due to water level problems, will hunt the uplands for the same kinds of prey the Cattle Egret normally seeks. Low water may mean no fish; high water can mean wide dispersal of many fish over larger areas, making sufficiently large quantities hard to come by.

The Elegant Egret solves this problem and can often be seen along rights-of-way beside Sanibel roads. In such cases the two species are in competition for the same food supply.

In Florida, mixed heronries include the Cattle Egret, which in this one respect, the siting of nests, does compete with other heron species. Around these parts nesting takes place in mangroves -- usually insular sites patrolled and protected by Alligators. The birds nest in Swamp Willows around Okechobee and in Live Oaks in the Carolinas. Pines and cedars are other nest trees further north.

Eggs are laid in nests prepared by the female in April and May in this region. Hatching takes place after an incubation period of about three weeks. One factor that gives this species a competitive edge over other herons of North America is that it is the only form that matures to breeding age in one year.

While busily colonizing North America during this century, Cattle Egrets have not been standing still elsewhere. They can be seen throughout most of South America and as far west as the Galapagos Islands which lie 600 miles out in the Pacific.

During the same 10 or so decades (a very short time -- miniscule really -- in the history of a species) Cattle Egrets have travelled east from Africa to India, Malaya, Indonesia, Australia and other areas of the Western Pacific.

At Kasiranga where the Great Indian Unicorn-Rhino is making a slow comeback under Mrs. Gandhi's good conservation ministrations, the Cattle Egret should feel right at home following, or riding on, these great beasts. Thus they will seek prey much as their ancestors did (and cousins still do in Africa, where the Black Rhino can still be found).

Then, too, during this century the Cattle Egret journeyed northward to Europe and breeds today in France, Spain and Portugal and commonly strays to Britain and Scandinavia.

Hérons have the need to disgorge pellets. Those that consume lizards, mice, grasshoppers and other prey with insoluble residues such as hair and chiton have no problem forming pellets to disgorge.

Other herons that consume, say, a diet of small fishes that are completely dissolved by digestion lack material to form pellets. In such cases herons will augment their diets by swallowing feathers, twigs, leaves, roots and grass, thus compensating for the deficiency and forming pellets to disgorge.

If I seem enthusiastic about the Cattle Egret it is because of its remarkable adaptability. It manages to thrive in a tough, deteriorating world where many of its allies are suffering hardship and declining populations. The story of the Cattle Egret is a real success story!

Audubon society winter series continues with nature slides by winter resident Al Milliken

The Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society's winter entertainment series continues this week with a slide presentation by Sanibel nature photographer Al Milliken.

The exciting show staged by a nesting colony of black skimmers on the Sanibel Causeway last summer highlights Milliken's presentation.

Milliken has concentrated on nature photography as a hobby since his retirement two years ago from a career in communications. He and his wife, Patsy, winter residents of the Islands, have developed many slide lectures for the Audubon Society in Ohio.

For the program beginning at 8 p.m. this Thursday, Jan. 20, at the Sanibel Community Association hall, Milliken will present a "Potpourri of Nature" in two 18-minute segments. The first depicts insects, birds and wildflowers from all over North America. The second concentrates on birds of Sanibel.

Milliken's program is the third in the winter series sponsored by the local Audubon Society. The first two programs attracted capacity crowds. Admission is free.

The season's lecture and slide show programs are held at 8 p.m. each Thursday evening through March 31 at the Sanibel Community Association. The final presentation will be a "slide surprise" show combining carefully selected nature photographs taken on Sanibel and Captiva by members and friends of the society.

The schedule of programs follows:

Jan. 20 -- Al Milliken -- "Potpourri of Nature" -- Including wildflowers, insects, birds and seasonal scenes from various parts of the country and a selection of birds from Sanibel.

Jan. 27 -- Les Canfield -- "Nature Trail Number 6" -- Birds, animals, scenes and wildflowers from coast to coast.

Feb. 10 -- Drs. Lorus and Margery Milne -- "Butterflies and Other Fascinating Insects of Florida."

Feb. 17 -- Aileen Lotz -- "Trip to Antarctica" -- Penguins, albatross and other birds found only in the land at the bottom of the world, Falkland Islands and Antarctica.

Feb. 21 -- Alvah Sanborn -- "Sea Bird Islands" -- Slides and motion picture on Bonaventure and Machias Seal in quest of the great Gannet colony and the Puffins.

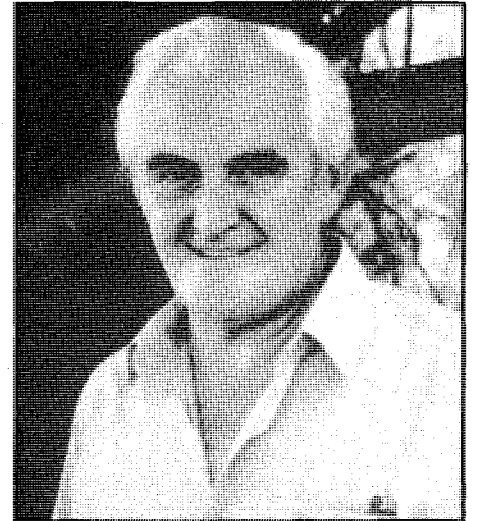

March 10 -- Victor Emanuel -- "Birds of Peru" -- The world's most diverse avifauna with slides and tape recordings of bird songs.

March 17 -- Dr. Herbert Kale -- "Avian Research and Conservation in Florida" -- By the director of ornithological research of the Florida Audubon Society.

March 24 -- Steve Phillips -- "Reptiles and Amphibians on Sanibel" -- By the manager of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

March 31 -- "Audubon Slide Surprise" -- Watch local papers. Brief business meeting.

with George Campbell

Due to unforeseen circumstances, several openings are available on the April 15-27 Galapagos Islands expedition.

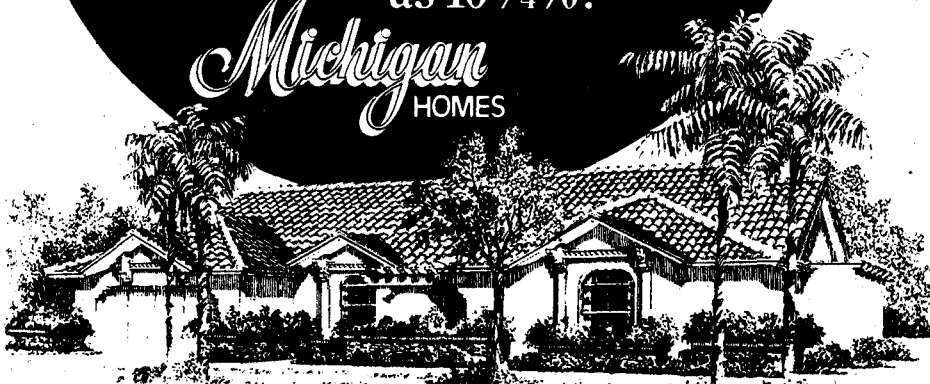

This is without doubt the very best Natural History Field Trip to the Galapagos Islands because:

1. We visit a maximum number of sites, four more than on my first trip 5 years ago.
2. We now have the capability of searching out wild populations of Galapagos Giant Tortoises.
3. A very small group of only 15 people is accommodated.
4. The 104 foot yacht Isabela is very comfortable and the cuisine excellent.
5. The time is best from the point of view of cool equatorial temperatures, currents and calm seas.
6. Cost is modest compared to more pretigious names or undesirable large vessels; often overcrowded with 50 to 70 passengers, making conditions for animal viewing much less desirable while costing much more.
7. Experience counts. This will be George Campbell's sixth annual expedition.

Island potters create copper red porcelainware

The discovery of copper red pottery glazes, legend has it, was purely an accident. According to a story handed down through the ages from potter to potter, the personal ceramist to a Chinese emperor threw one too many sticks into his kiln thousands of years ago and created the first brilliant copper red glaze.

The emperor happened to visit the potter's quarters that day and fell in love with the glaze after a glimpse of the artist's inadvertent creation.

"I must have more!" exclaimed the emperor. "Make me more red pots!" But alas, the poor potter could not think what had caused the beautiful red color.

The emperor's request, the potter knew, was more of an order -- and one that would end in his untimely death if he was to fail. Given the circumstances, the poor potter set about making a new load of porcelain pieces and frantically watched over the firing. Nothing happened. His vases, plates and ginger jars turned their usual jade green, a lovely color, but not what the emperor had requested.

In desperation, the potter shrugged his shoulders -- and threw himself into the fire.

When the emperor and his men came to the potter's quarters the next day, the kiln was cool. But the potter was nowhere to be found.

Opening the kiln, the emperor found a sight to behold -- a smile spread over his face at the hundreds of red tea pots, cups and orchid vases on the kiln shelves.

Though the emperor never saw the potter again, and occasionally wondered why, he gained much notoriety and respect for the wondrous porcelain works that filled his palace.

And though to this day the whys and wherefores of copper red glazes are not completely understood, it is no mistake that copper red pottery can be found here on Sanibel, thanks to A Touch of Sanibel Pottery owners Barbara and Dave Hoggatt.

The creation of porcelainware is no small task, say the Hoggatts, who must thoroughly clean their potter's wheel, kiln and every tool to be used in preparation for a firing.

"Impurities from the stoneware will contaminate porcelain," Dave Hoggatt explains.

Working with porcelain requires an altogether different touch than stoneware, which until now has been the Hoggatt's preferred medium.

Porcelain is smooth and highly impressionable, unlike the stiff stoneware clay, Dave says. "It's like trying to throw cream cheese sometimes," he jokes.

The pure clay body, which turns white when kiln fired, must be handled kindly as it is very tell-tale. "The imprint of a thumb will be visible in the end product if the porcelain is touched ever so lightly," he explains.

In addition, the porcelain particles are pulled away from each other when worked on the wheel. Porcelain potters like the Hoggatts are just discovering that trimming the bottom of the pots in reverse is necessary to push the particles back together and prevent cracking when fired.

"We would lose 40 or 50 percent of our load if we didn't trim the bottoms this way," say the gallery owners.

Just as touchy is the red copper glaze itself, which comes in shades like "Crushed Strawberries" and "Peach Flambe."

Since the Chinese emperor's potter threw himself into the fire, potters have learned that oxidation and reduction are the keys to proper red glazing. Oxygen in the kiln must be reduced during firing, say the Hoggatts, and is usually accomplished by adding more fuel halfway through the process.

Drafts will oxidize any portion of the pot they touch, turning the glaze a green color. Pieces set too close together will also absorb some of the glaze from neighboring pots. "The glaze blushes over to nearby pots because it is so volatile," Barbara explains.

The Hoggatts plan to experiment with other glazes, including their own G.O.K. (God Only Knows) glaze, a mystery mixture of glazes left over from previous firings that turns an exquisite shade of jade green. Translucent Celadon glazes, which contain iron, are one of the couple's favorites.

"The glaze lays in the hollows of any design pressed into the porcelain," according to Dave, who says Celadons compliment the translucent nature of porcelain.

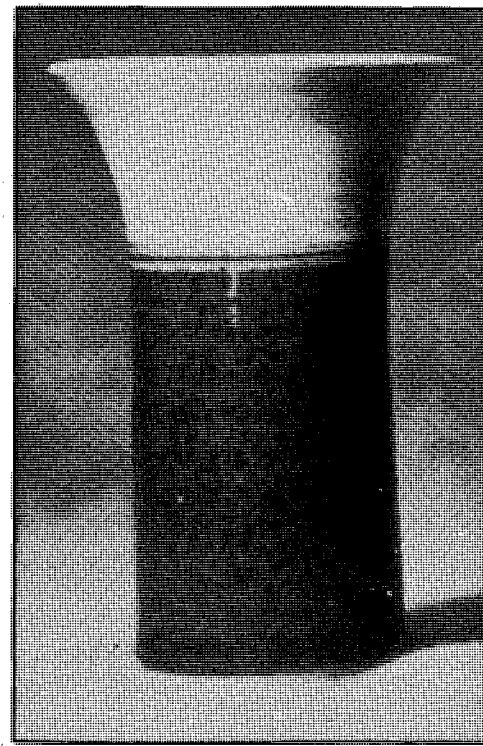

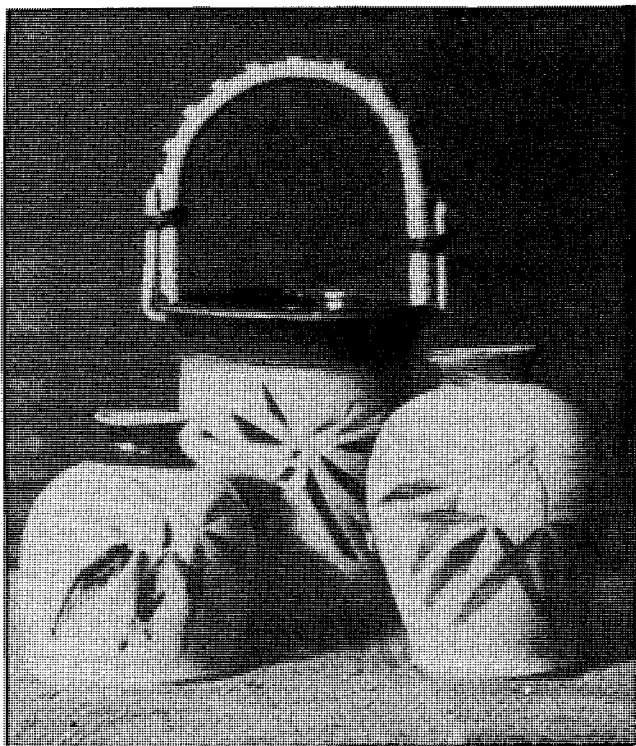

"It's a challenge to get the edges thin enough to see through them," say the Hoggatts, who are familiar with porcelain clay bodies so pure that cracks will result if the kiln is not allowed to cool for three or four days before removing fired works.

Their own porcelain, a grolleg body imported from England, is highly malleable and, when pressed thin looks almost like glass.

The first batch of perfume bottles, vases and bowls was unloaded from the Hoggatt's kiln last Friday and is definitely worth seeing. Barbara's creative hand has lent the pieces a unique decorative quality, with hand-pressed impressions of shells and shell fragments forming true Island pottery.

Like all good potters, the Hoggatts are constantly seeking ways to expand their horizons. And to think, it all started thousands of years ago in China with a demanding emperor -- and a mistake.

Three public performances remain for Lyric Chamber Ensemble

Three public performances remain on the Sanibel agenda for the Lyric Chamber Ensemble of Chicago.

The award-winning musical troupe will bring another free outdoor classical music concert to the Island at 2 p.m. this Wednesday, Jan. 15, at Periwinkle Place.

The ensemble will also perform at 8 p.m. on Saturday, Jan. 22, at the Sanibel Community Center. Admission will be $5.

The group will perform for a BIG Arts benefit at Tween Waters Inn on Monday, Jan. 24. Admission for the evening will be $25 and will include cocktails at 6:30 p.m., dinner at 7 p.m. and the concert following.

Five outstanding musicians comprise the ensemble, including harpist Elizabeth Cifani, pianist Allan Dameron, violist Rami Solomonow, cellist David Shamban and violinist Elaine Skorodin. Together and individually the ensemble's repertoire and performances have received critical acclaim worldwide from Tokyo to the capitol of Europe.

Tickets to the above events can be purchased at a variety of Island locations, including Bank of the Islands, Schoolhouse Gallery, Treehouse Gallery, Sanibel Gallery, MacIntosh Book Shop, B-Hive, The Islander and the Island Reporter offices.

For more information call Herman Seid, 472-5257.

The next meeting of the Sanibel-Captiva Art League will feature stained glass artists Clarence and Rickey Hartley, who are proprietors of the Stained Glass Connection Shop in Fort Myers.

The Hartleys are known for their original, individually handcrafted pieces, which hang in South Seas Plantation's King's Crown restaurant as well as in several private homes on Sanibel and Captiva.

A slide presentation will accompany their lecture, showing stained glass works designed for custom, residential, commercial and interior design use. All of the Hartleys' work is signed.

The meeting will be held at the Sanibel Community Center at 1:30 p.m. on Thursday, Jan. 20. For more information contact Ruth North, 472-5274.

Impressionism will be the topic of discussion at the second New Art Series lecture at the Cape Coral Arts Studio at 7 p.m. on Monday, Jan. 21.

Former Diplomatic Corps and United Information Service employee Tesmar Mitchell will show slides of the art collection she acquired from all over the world including France, Italy, Formosa and South America.

A non-profit facility of the Cape Coral Parks and Recreation Department, the Cape Coral Arts Studio is at 4533 Coronado Parkway. An admission donation of $1 will be requested for Mitchell's lecture.

The Gulf Coast Opera will perform for the public on from 5 to 8 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 23, at the Lee County Alliance of the Arts on McGregor Boulevard. For more information about the concert call 939-2787.

Edison Community College cordially invites all Island residents and visitors to view the fine works of renowned artist Roy Lichtenstein through Feb. 18.

The artist's most recent pieces, which are Picasso-like in flavor, will be on display in Gallery E. The exhibit was made possible by a grant from Press Printing Company.

Landscapes will be the subject of a watercolor display at the Lee County Arts Center through Jan. 26 thanks to the endeavors of artist Nellie Dorsett.

Well known for her award-winning watercolor landscapes, the Fort Myers artist will feature her most recent works at the upcoming exhibit, which will be a premier of her landscapes of England and Ireland.

The display will be open for viewing from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. For further information contact Becky Ann Uhle, 939-2787.

Needlework news

Save this charted shell design for varied uses

By Barbara Boulton

Avid needleworkers will reach for their scissors to remove this charted shell design from this paper and add it to their files.

Almost like coupon saving, charts have become a blessing for our budgets. If a design is charted or graphed, its uses to the crafter are endless.

The most popular application for this shell is counted cross stitch. Fabrics that are evenly woven accept a cross stitch to correspond to each color coded square of the graph.

This particular shell design is small enough to be stitched onto fabric that will fit into a key chain, a refrigerator magnet, a lid of a mason jar full of shells, a greeting card or a coaster.

If the counted cross stitch (sounds like a rare bird, doesn't it?) uses waste canvas, which will be explained in a future article, he or she can apply the shell design to knit tops and other clothing, napkins, placemats, towels and hankies.

Needlepoint is done on an even weave canvas that lends itself well to charted work. Blank plastic canvas squares with this shell stitched in many different colors make excellent coasters.

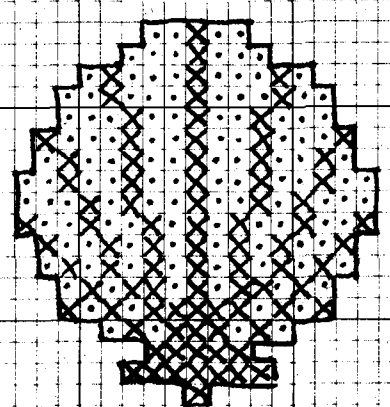

Latch hook canvas is very large. By knotting each yarn to correspond to a symbol on the chart, you could create a small pillow.

There are many knitted and crocheted afghans that make use of graph work. If the design is crocheted into your handwork it is called filet work. When the afghan is plainly worked, decorative cross stitches or duplicate stitches (knitting) can be applied to correspond to the graph.

What about weaving or ceramic tile work? Need I go on? Don't throw the chart away. It can be used over and over again. If you have any questions, stop in at Idle Hours in Periwinkle Place.

P.S. I am looking for a knitted pattern of a "Condominium Sweater" to be used in a future article. It is rumored to use only two skeins of yarn and take just one day to make. Bring the directions into the shop for a free skein of yarn.

Effective lighting provides instant change

By Lori Armstrong

You can easily change the mood of a room by more effective use of lighting.

Lighting should be well thought out before the electrician comes. Keep in mind, however, that it is almost impossible to plan on paper the exact range and scope that will be cast by the many varied types of lighting available today. Here are some suggestions to guide you in selecting lighting:

1. Be aware that new lighting systems are constantly being introduced to the market place. If you are selecting on your own, you are best to deal with a reputable and progressive firm specializing in a wide range of lighting.

2. Utilize mood lighting created by the use of innovative lighting systems such as uplighting, down lighting, wall washers, track lighting, recessed lighting and dimmers.

3. Put dimmers on as many of your lighting systems as possible to create flexibility.

4. Have a variety of lighting sources using lower wattages.

5. Light the objects in a room rather than the room itself, i.e., picture lights over paintings, candles on the table, wall washers to create a spacious wall, up lighting at the base of a plant.

6. Install floor outlets to eliminate unsightly cording on floor lamps.

7. The most flattering lighting is indirect ceiling track lighting typically mounted two feet in from the wall. Bulbs should not show on mirrored wall.

8. Ask for choices other than white in choosing lamp shades. There are a wide range of colors available today.

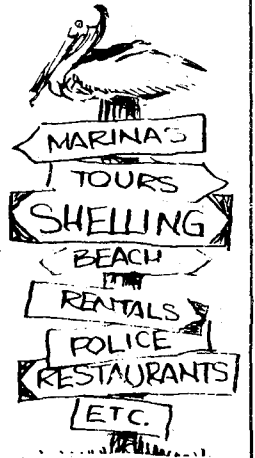

There are basically three forms of lighting: background lighting, local or task lighting, and accent or decorative lighting. Most rooms should include at least two of these types, and general living rooms should have all three.

Today we have truly beautified electricity. Take advantage of the many diverse forms in creating a home of interest and personality.

If you have a special decorating problem, direct your inquiry to P.O. Box 872, Sanibel, FL 33957.

Scholarship recipient discusses bay scallop life history at Shell Club meeting

The first recipient of the Annual Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club Scholarship Award spoke on the life history of the bay scallop at the club's Jan. 17 meeting.

Bruce Barber is a dedicated young ocean biologist working toward his doctorate at the University of South Florida. He is conducting research on the bay scallop, Argopecten irradians concentricus, in the Department of Marine Science under the direction of Dr. Norman Blake.

Barber said his research deals with the mechanisms responsible for determining the geographic range of the bay scallop, which is an important commercial and recreational resource in Florida whose range is gradually being reduced by the activities of man.

The effective management of this or any other molluscan resource will occur only as a result of an understanding of its life processes obtained through research programs such as the one he is involved with, Barber explained.

A graduate of Ohio State University with a bachelor's degree in the biological sciences, Barber has published one paper with Blake about the bay scallop. Another paper is now in review.

Barber's research has been used by the Florida Saltwater Fisheries Advisory Council and the Florida Legislature to propose regulations on scallop harvests.

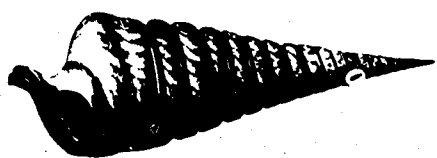

His wife and Blake accompanied him to Sanibel. Greeters from the Shell Club meeting were Carolyn and Bill Hicks and Carol and Walter Hendon.

that made the day Sanibel's coldest so far this year.

Two years ago, LeMoine said, he and his wife walked the same beach and came upon a perfect Queen's Helmet. "It was just beautiful," Alvina remembered. "But this find is really something."

The Bunces, who stay every year at Periwinkle Trailer Park, said there is a story in trailer park circles about a man who wants his wife to find a junonia so badly he buys the Island's best specimen at a nearby shell shop. With plans to secretly drop the treasured shell near his wife's feet as they comb the beach, the gentleman unknowingly lets the junonia fall directly in the path of another man looking for junonias.

Needless to say, the second beachcomber picks up the junonia with great excitement. The wife, so the story goes, is still looking.

But LeMoine Bunce promises his junonias are real finds and not purchased specimens. Even the name of the Wisconsin town the Bunces call home testifies to the couple's good luck when shelling -- Eau Claire, they say, is Indian for "clear water."

Sanibel-Captiva Cookbook third edition available now

Too many cooks may spoil the stew, but not if you have the new Sanibel-Captiva Cookbook close at hand.

In its third printing, the Island-spawned cookbook contains favorite recipes of a variety of Island cooks as well as a special section filled with popular recipes from some of the Islands' finest eateries.

Also included in the publication are meat and measuring charts, helpful household hints, freezing and baking tips and more.

The Sanibel-Captiva Cookbook may be the best $7 investment you'll ever make. And best of all, the proceeds from all purchases will go to the Children's Center of the Islands.

The cookbook is available at Bailey's, the Shell Net, Sanibel Beauty Shop, Reel Eel, Spices 'n' Spoons, Unpressured Cooker, Tiffany Parlor, Ile Crocodile and First Federal Savings and Loan.

Health Tip

From Len Kessler

TOXIC SHOCK SYNDROME

Harvard Physicians state that "Toxic shock syndrome" is due to the modern tampons super-absorbing ability. They keep absorbing all day, swelling, and eventually blocking the vagina completely, with fluids backing up into the uterus. If left inserted for a full day, staphylococci germs multiply in the warm moisture and produce vast amounts of poisonous toxin. To avoid this, Public Health Service urges women to change tampons several times a day, regardless of brand.

In what country did the sport of curling originate?

If you think you know the answer call The Islander, 472-5185. If you're right we'll print your name in next week's paper.

Lions Ladies Auxiliary elect new officers, plan Jan. 19 meeting

1983 officers of the Sanibel-Captiva Lions Ladies Auxiliary were elected last week and include Jane Myers, president; Ev Potts, first vice president; Jeanette Baker, second vice president; Glenna Crossman, secretary; Sally Cooperrider, corresponding secretary; Tracey Kimpel, treasurer; Trudy Kohlbrenner, ways and means; Betty Clark, historian; and Hazel Amon, telephone chairman.

The next meeting of the auxiliary will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, Jan. 19, at the Dunes Country Club.

FISH of Sanibel plans first annual meeting

The first annual meeting of Friends in Service Here will take place this Friday, Jan. 21, at 1 p.m. at the Gulf Pines subdivision clubhouse.

Election of new members of the board of directors will take place, and a summary of cases since Nov. 10 will be discussed. An informal social hour will follow the business meeting.

All FISH volunteers are urged to attend.

Coalition for peace plans nuclear forum

The Lee County Coalition for Peace will hold a Nuclear Forum: Your Future or Oblivion, on Saturday, Jan. 29, from 1 to 5 p.m. at Bishop Verot High School in Fort Myers.

The moderator for the forum will be Edison Community College President Dr. David Robinson. Principle speakers will be Dr. Jay Kerzner of the Miami Physicians for Social Responsibility; Dr. Carl Jacobson of the University of Miami; Col. James Donovan, director of the Center for Defense Information, Washington, D.C.; and the Rev. Roger Greenslade, minister, Fort Presbyterian Church, Tarpon Springs, Fla.

Refreshments will be served. For more information call Mary Lee, 472-1812.

Shell count planned for Jan. 29

Everyone on the Islands is invited to participate in the Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club shell count on Saturday, Jan. 29.

Visitors as well as club members are encouraged to take part in the count, the purpose of which is mainly for fun but which also has a serious side.

The count is also for studying the mollusk population trends and learning the number of species available both the Islands' gulf and bay sides.

Take careful note of where each shell is found. Each person will collect one shell of each species. Collect as many as possible. Pieces of shells will count.

Bring the collection to the Sanibel Community Association hall between 9 and 11 a.m. on Saturday, Jan. 29, for identification and counting. A Field Guide to Shells of the Atlantic and Gulf Coast and the West Indies by Percy Morris is an authoritative guide that will help counters.

Shells can be kept by the participant or donated for use in the Shell Fair held in March. The tally of shells will take place in the North Room of the old building at the community center. Tally sheets containing both Latin names and common names of shells will be available.

Every participant will receive a wallet size certificate and an identification list of his collection.

Our shell adventure is patterned to duplicate the 1962 Shell Count sponsored by the club so comparisons can be made for both common and rare shells.

In 1962, the year before the Causeway was built, a total of 128 varieties were tallied. In the 1964 Third Annual Shell count, 165 varieties were found. The fifth count in 1966 added three new shells to the list.

Coffee and doughnuts will be served while the tallying takes place.

Sanibel anglers plan open house

Sanibel members of the South West Anglers Club will host their annual open house for anglers and boaters at the Sanibel Community Building on Wednesday evening, Jan. 26.

Capt. Duke Sells, well-known professional fishing guide out of Tween Waters Marina, will be the guest speaker.

Many items of new and used fishing, boating and household articles have been donated for auction or raffle during the program that will benefit the club's Special Projects Fund, which provides charter fishing trips for handicapped citizens of Lee County and contributions to organizations working to preserve the state's fishery resources.

Doors will open at 7 p.m. For more information call 472-2685.

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could hope for.

At the Lighthouse (Eastern) end of the island, Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops are right across the street from one another, providing a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get either of these shopping centers.

Most businesses open at 10 a.m. and close at 5:30 p.m. This holds true for many island stores, although some are open evenings during the winter season.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way and the shopper travels west along this main thoroughfare. This stretch of road is truly a shopper's paradise!! It's all here--the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots can all be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road. Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, a sandwich shop, ice cream parlors, pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay-Periwinkle Way intersection, the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes the visitor past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road, you may choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The spectacular ride to Captiva, with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf, is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while others feature some nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier Islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter. And of course, for all, shells--shell jewelry, shell lamps, just plain shells--the most beautiful shells in the world from the most beautiful shelling beaches in the world.

SHELLING

The city's resolution limiting the taking of live shells to two live shells per species per person is one to be scrupulously obeyed. As a matter of fact, in order to preserve Sanibel's beautiful shelling beaches, most collectors refuse to take any live shells whatsoever.

DOGGY DO'S AND DON'TS

If you are visiting Sanibel with the family Fido in tow, all the better. All family members can enjoy Southwest Florida sun and surf.

The Chamber of Commerce can tell you what accommodations are available for families with pets.

Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints" applies to dogs, too.

There's no leash law on Sanibel, but of course an excitable or unruly animal is better off when controlled with a leash.

WARNING! SAFEGUARD YOUR VALUABLES

In order to protect your valuable possessions from theft, it is recommended that you take them to a bank or hotel vault for safekeeping. Do NOT leave them in your room or car.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires.

An exemption to the beach fire ordinance is a fire in an approved cooking container (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation. This type of container will be allowed on the beach without a permit.

After you have had your beach party, please assume the responsibility for cleaning up any debris or litter in your area.

FISHING

While no license is required for saltwater fishing, fishing in freshwater ponds or the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.

Licenses are available at Bailey's General Store on Periwinkle Way. The fee is $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non-residents.

Minimum Legal Lengths
Blue Fish 10 inches

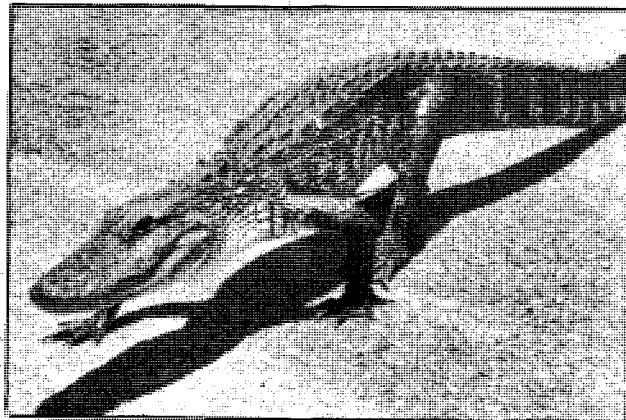

Flounder	11 inches
Grouper	12 inches
Mackerel	12 inches
Mullet	12 inches
Pompano	10 inches
Red Fish	12 inches
Snook	18 inches
Trout	12 inches

Snook fishing is outlawed from June 30-Aug. 1.

SPEED LIMITS

There is very good reason for the varying speed limits (20-30 mph) along the Causeway. The slower speeds preserve the bridge supports from strain and stress.

This speed limit is strictly enforced with radar on a 24-hour basis by both the Sanibel Police Department and the Lee County Sheriff's Department.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel city limits is not only illegal, but can be extremely dangerous.

Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator, he is close enough to bite you. An alligator fed for fun loses his natural fear of humans and becomes a potential threat to children and pets.

Dogs should never be permitted to run free on Sanibel.

Fence them, walk them on a leash or, if you must free your dog for a walk, keep him under voice control. Never tie your dog in an unfenced back yard.

For help with a nuisance alligator, call the following representatives of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to legally handle gators: George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128.
