Sanibel princess reigns over heart association

By David Meardon

This past Christmas was a joyful one for Coby and Russell Amadio and their 3-year-old daughter, Nikki. There was ample cause for celebration, for reflection on the uncertainty of the last three years and for anticipation of a brightening future.

"This was the first Christmas we could really enjoy and not worry about whether we'd be together next Christmas," Coby says with a loving glance toward her daughter in their home.

Since her birth on Dec. 1, 1979, Dominique Fontana Amadio -- "Nikki" -- has undergone five operations to correct a number of birth defects, the most crucial concerning her heart. Today, doctors are optimistic that young Nikki will lead a normal life.

During the month of February, which is Heart Month, Nikki reigns as Princess of the Silver Anniversary of the Lee County American Heart Association. The road to Princessdom, however, has not been smooth.

Twenty minutes after Coby gave birth to Nikki at Lee Memorial Hospital the newborn baby was rushed to Gainesville for surgery at Shand's Teaching Hospital.

Born with an imperforated rectum,

Nikki spent her first week clinging to life as surgeons worked to correct the disorder.

"It was so difficult for me not to have her for the first week and not know what was going on," says Coby, who spent three days in the hospital, weak from a difficult childbirth.

When she was three months old, doctors discovered an excess of fluid on Nikki's brain, a condition which, had it not been caught early on, would have caused brain damage. They implanted a VP shunt, or valve, under her skin that leads from the blockage at the top of her skull and drains the excess fluid into her abdomen.

At 14 months, Nikki's young life again was threatened, this time even more seriously than her previous ordeals. An artery to the heart was discovered to be too small and was unable to supply enough oxygenated blood to her body. Children with this condition are known as "Blue Babies" because their lips and the skin under their fingernails turn blue.

Again Nikki was operated on in Gainesville in eight hours of open heart surgery, during which doctors patched a

'No stranger in paradise' Chamber adopts welcome motto

By Carol Kranichfeld

The Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce has found a way to dispel the myth that tourism is unwelcome on our barrier islands.

An idea inspired by a committee of chamber members headed by ESI Management Director Jack Elias has come full circle and can now be seen in full-spirit at the Islands' Chamber of Commerce.

"There's No Such Thing As A Stranger In Paradise" was recently adopted by Island merchants as their motto in the campaign to place out the welcome mat for our visitors.

An enormous yellow and green representation of the motto now hangs at the chamber, and buttons boasting the same logo (designed by Elias) are being distributed to chamber members ($.60 each) and across the chamber counter ($.1).

The pledge to make island tourists' stay a pleasurable and memorable one by treating visitors with respect and courtesy will, says the chamber, "encourage you to respect and preserve all the natural beauty of our Islands so they will be as you remembered them when you return again and again."

Island business that would like to participate in this community-wide campaign can obtain buttons to sell in their own shops and restaurants. For information contact chamber Executive Director Walter Klie, 472-1080.

Islanders, Londoners try house swapping for the holidays

"You must be crazy to willingly leave Florida and come to London for Christmas. You like the cold?"

The cab driver who drove us into Kensington from Heathrow airport was incredulous. But my husband Paul and I considered it a stroke of luck to be able to spend the Christmas holidays in Dickensian London in a four-story townhouse on Argyll Road.

Instead of laying out $80 to $100 a day for hotel accommodations, we were living rent free in a charming Victorian house only a stone's throw from Kensington Gardens and Holland Park and within walking distance of the Victoria and Albert Museum and Harrod's, London's famous department store.

While we were making the rounds of West End theaters, attending concerts at Queen Elizabeth's Royal Festival Hall and the newly opened Barbican Center and looking for bargains at the traditional day-after-Christmas sale at Selfridge's, the owners of the house, Dr. Paddy Morrissey and his wife, Jill, with their three young children were living in our Sanibel home basking in the warm Florida sun.

Our experiment in a house exchange, a new way to vacation economically and enjoy all the comforts and conveniences of home away from home, was a mutual success.

The Morrisseys enjoyed the experience so much they want to arrange a similar exchange on Sanibel for the Christmas holidays in 1983.

For our part we can heartily recommend the Morrisseys as ideal guests and attest that their home is a comfortable and central headquarters for a London vacation.

What is more convenient than a Safeway Market around the corner on Kensington High Street where one can buy anything from fresh flowers and Beefeaters gin to freshly baked bread and English sausages? A short walk away is the friendly neighborhood pub, the Elephant and Castle, where you can enjoy a Ploughman's lunch (bread and cheese) with a glass of lager. But be sure and go before 2:30 p.m., when all London pubs by law must close until 5:30 p.m.

The Underground station and a bus stop are only a block away from the house.

An irresistible urge for American food can be satisfied by walking a block on Kensington High Street for a burger at MacDonald's or fried chicken at the Colonel's. Burger King and Wendy's are other American fast food restaurants found all over London.

Although there are at least two reputable firms that specialize in arranging international home exchanges, we made our arrangements personally. It began during the 1981 Christmas holidays while the Morrisseys were vacationing on Sanibel.

Morrissey came into The Islander office to place a classified ad to exchange his home in London for one on Sanibel during Christmas 1982.

The ad never ran, however. Before the family left the Island we had agreed to an exchange - the only variable was the exact dates of their visit, which would depend on when the children's school closed for the holidays.

By July this problem was resolved and the Morrisseys, "unless something untoward occurs," planned to arrive on Sanibel on Dec. 21 and stay until Jan. 7, 1983.

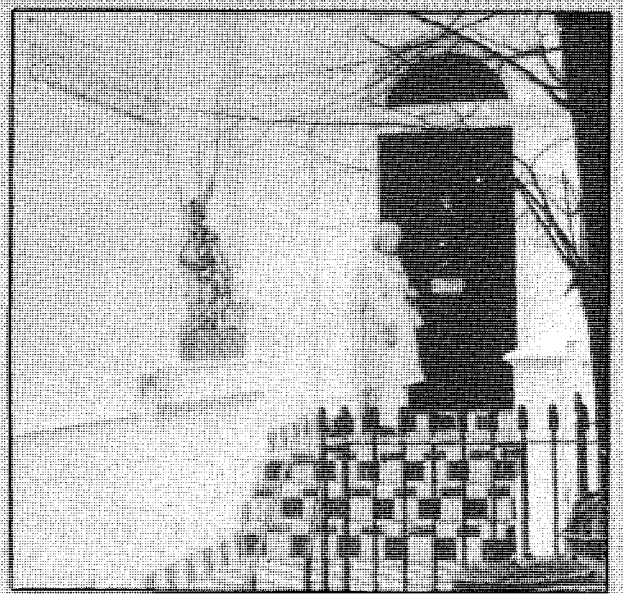

Our excitement mounted when we received snapshots of the Morrisseys' London home and their cottage at Brightwalton in Berkshire, near Oxford, that would also be at our disposal.

Morrissey "booked" for us hard-to-get tickets for several popular plays, for the Johann Strauss Orchestra's Christmas Gala and the London Symphony Orchestra New Year's Eve concert and made reservations for Christmas dinner at the Savoy Hotel Grill.

Our arrangements included an exchange of cars. When we departed from Sanibel a day before the Morrisseys arrival we parked our Toyota at the Fort Myers airport and left the car and house keys at the TWA ticket counter.

A friend had agreed to look in on the family to explain the intricacies of American household appliances and to act as troubleshooter in the event of any serious electrical or plumbing problems.

We never took Morrissey's brown Rover from the garage, but instead found it easier to get around the city using London's efficient transportation system. A three-day London Explorer pass (10 pounds) is good for unlimited rides on all buses and the Underground.

Our plan to drive to the cottage, 62 miles from Kensington High Street, was abandoned after experiencing, on a limousine guide tour to Windsor Castle, the heavy traffic on the "dual carriageway" leading out of London.

Sister Bridget Kenny, Morrissey's office nurse, popped in "to check on things" soon after we arrived, and during our stay Mrs. Lovell came in two days a week to clean "from top to bottom."

Our fears of freezing were unfounded, and with Londoners we enjoyed the warmest Christmas since World War II. The Morrissey's central heat and down comforters kept us cozy on the coldest nights.

We were rained on only once, and five days, though not in succession, were "bright and sunny." The December days were the shortest of the year with darkness setting in about 3:30 p.m.

The only 18-hole golf course homesites on Sanibel Island.

The Dunes is adding a back nine, scheduled for completion in May of 1983, making it the only 18-hole golf course country club on Sanibel or Captiva. And its homesites are now available.

So if you ever wanted a homesite on a golf course on Sanibel Island, you'd better hurry. The last ones on the island are being sold now, along with some choice lakefront homesites. And with your purchase, one year's free family golf and tennis memberships at the Dunes Club, usable anytime within the next three years.

Act now. Excellent finance plans are available. Visit the Dunes Golf and Tennis Club Information Center at 949 Sand Castle Road or call (813) 472-1939.

House swapping for the holidays continued

With Christmas and New Year's falling on two successive weekends, many industries closed down at lunchtime on Christmas Eve and did not open their doors until Jan. 4, "to save on heating and maintenance costs," according to The Standard, London's evening tabloid.

Boxing Day, the day after Christmas and traditionally a family holiday, fell on Sunday and was officially observed on Dec. 27. The next day was a bank holiday, and only the largest department stores opened for their traditional after-Christmas sales.

During this four-day period many restaurants took a holiday, but the pubs reported record business.

Many museums and art galleries also observed the long holiday, making it prudent to check whether a tourist attraction would be open before planning a visit.

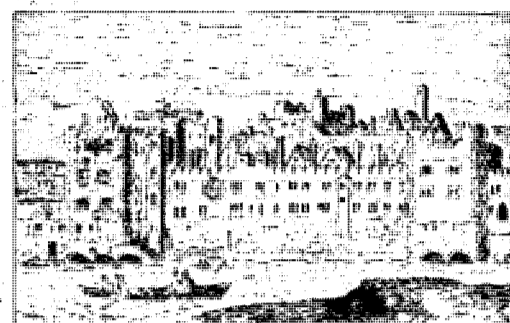

Despite these minor drawbacks, we found the Christmas season a great time to be in London. Not to be missed are the lighted Christmas tree in Trafalgar Square, a towering spruce that was a gift to England from the King of Norway; a carol service at St. Martin's-in-the-field Church, where winos slept in the pews, oblivious to the beautiful music; a visit to Parliament while the House of Commons was in recess until Jan. 17; a guided walking tour of pubs in the posh Mayfair section of London, noted for its Georgian homes and mews (stables) remodeled into expensive apartments; Christmas dinner at the Savoy Grill with diners wearing colorful paper hats reminiscent of our own New Year's Eve.

Other memories we'll long cherish are the sell-out audience at the London Symphony concert, at the conductor's invitation, clapping their hands and smacking their lips in time to the rousing strains of Strauss' Laughing Song and the Pizzicato Polka; the salesmen wearing Christmas red tail coats at Fortnum & Masons store on Piccadilly (the "Queen's Grocer" for 200 years), where "Mr. Fortnum's" basket of Christmas cheer for 700 pounds sterling and gourmet goodies from around the world can be purchased; a walk in the city past St. Paul's

But best of all is the start of a new friendship we hope will be strengthened when the Morrisseys return to Sanibel next Christmas.

Compared to Sanibel, Washington's a breeze!

The other day I chanced upon a copy of a letter a Washington journalist sojourning on Sanibel had written recently to a colleague in the nation's capital. Please don't ask me how I obtained it. After all, one must protect one's sources. And besides, I am certainly no less scrupulous than Jack Anderson.

At any rate, here is what our friend from Washington wrote:

"I came down here thinking that maybe I could ply my trade in these easier climes for a while, and if I liked it well enough I might settle on the Island permanently.

"The weather is great, there are plenty of places to jog and there presumably would be plenty of girls parading up and down the beach. Working this beat would be a piece of cake after covering foreign affairs and the Washington scene all of these years.

"Well, the weather is great, and the girls leave nothing to be desired and not all that much to be seen. But as far as being a reporter down here is concerned, forget it!

"For a small Island, Sanibel is incredibly complicated. The politicians, if you can call them that, make the Chinese seem very scrutable indeed and the volatile Arabs the very soul of predictability.

"For one thing they don't get paid, and there don't seem to be any PAC's around. If you don't have PAC's to go by, it's pretty hard to figure out where the council members and planning commissioners are coming from when they make their decisions.

"Another thing is the way the powers that be go over every application for a development permit -- or even a request to take down one of those trees they look like an inverted mop (cabbage palms, I think they call them) -- with a fine tooth comb.

"The help them in this, they have a big book they call the Comprehensive Land Use Plan -- CLUP for short. I tried to read this document, which runs more than 200 double-columned pages, but I couldn't make heads or tails of it. It seemed very esoteric to me. In fact it makes some of the tax legislation passed in Congress read like the Readers Digest condensed version of the Bible.

"I am not sure the commissioners and council persons have too firm a grip on it themselves. When a case is up decision, they devote a lot of time -- sometimes hours -- to debates over whether one section of CLUP applies or another or over the proper definition of such mystifying words and phrases as 'accessory,' 'permitted,' or 'lawfully existing use.'

"Fortunately, the city officials have their own priestly interpreters -- bright young people from the Planning Department -- to help them penetrate the mists surrounding the plan. But sometimes, I fear, these zealous advisors only add to the confusion.

"I am told the preoccupation with the CLUP is so pervasive that 'CLUPmanship' -- a game in which you pit your knowledge of the plan against that of your competitor -- has superseded charades as the favorite parlor game of Sanibel initiates.

"In Florida they have what's called the Sunshine Law, which from what I can gather means council persons can't discuss with each other issues that are to come up before the council. This certainly must put a crimp on conversation at the cocktail parties they mutually attend because from what I have observed, almost every conceivable subject comes up to the council for decision.

"They do appear to be very scrupulous in avoiding substantive communication. Even at meetings they stare fixedly out at the audience, avoiding eye contact with their colleagues on either side. However, once in a while one can be detected glancing furtively at a neighbor's notes in an effort -- usually futile -- to figure out which way his colleague is leaning on the issue at hand.

"One strange anomaly of the Sunshine Law is the requirement that a certain amount of business be conducted in the evening. This, I am told, is to enable working people to have some say in the city's transactions. Of course, since Sanibel has mostly retired people, those night sessions are sparsely attended, interfering as they do with cocktail hours and dinner parties.

"But in the daytime, it frequently is a different matter. Depending on the issue involved, and especially if some particular ox is in threat of being gored, the citizens will descend in considerable strength on MacKenzie Hall, where City Council and Planning Commission meetings are held.

"There are certain tried-and-true red flags that never fail to draw a crowd. One is noisy restaurants on the margins of residential areas. This one can be a little tricky. Some Islanders who have pledged undying opposition to certain eating spots have been known to slink, under cover of darkness, into these very same restaurants after the battle to prevent their opening has been lost.

"Another winning issue is parking. Permanent residents living away from the beaches find themselves competing with 'day trippers' for the limited number of parking areas that have survived the best efforts of the developers to restrict the entire length of the beach to condo owners and renters and to one-week standers in the interval units.

"I can see the residents' point of view, but I think they are a little hard on the poor day trippers -- a derogatory term that ranks just about at the top of a Sanibel person's list of invectives. Many of these persons, who incidentally must pay good money to cross the Causeway, considered Sanibel their beach until newcomers swarmed over the Island like a bunch of locusts in the past decade or so.

"In fact, it's hard for a Washingtonian to understand the Islanders' attitude toward day trippers. What would we do without all of our day trippers who pour into the city every morning to work and go back to the suburbs at night? Without them the whole federal government might grind to a halt. Some people might say that would be good for the country, but it would make it tough for the Washington press corps to make a living.

"I can hardly wait to get back to the simpler Washington scene. Even now, I can see myself eavesdropping on three or four congressmen rehearsing their parts for tomorrow's Rules Committee meeting as they fondle their martinis -- or whatever at the restaurant is currently in fashion. (By the way, which restaurant is 'in' these days? Don't forget, I've been away for a couple of weeks.)

"On second thought, perhaps I ought to delay my return until all the hoopla over the Redskins plays itself out. It would be pretty hard to find out who's doing what to whom when the only thing anyone will talk about is the Skins and the Superbowl."

Letter to the editor

Ruth Hunter expresses thanks

A copy of the following open letter from Ruth Hunter was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Friends, Islanders and All,

With all my heart, I thank you for your many kindnesses after Philip left us on Christmas Day. So much love has surrounded me, not only from those very near but from all over the country, and I am deeply grateful.

There's a good deal of natural talent on these Islands. Based on audience reaction these past 19 years to both acting and writing, a live and intimate theater is very much needed here.

An important something has come out of this adventure. Pirate Playhouse has meant so much to the Islands and gave great joy to so many, it must go on.

And now I am ready to sell it to be sure the curtain keeps going up for years to come.

Thank you and God bless you.

Sincerely,
Ruth Hunter

To our readers

Need more Islanders?

Extra copies of specific issues of The Islander mailed at the reader's request cost $1 each to cover postage and handling.

Islander rates change

We've gotten bigger and better, and now our rates will reflect the gains we've made as Sanibel's best community newspaper.

Single issues of The Islander now cost 25 cents. One-year subscriptions cost $10 in Lee County, $15 out of Lee County and split subscriptions and $20 out of the United States.

Moving?

At least two weeks before you move please notify The Islander, Box 56, Sanibel, FL 33957 (472-5185), of your new address.

Send us an old address label with your new address. If you don't have a label from the paper, please supply both your old and new address either by phone or by mail.

Letters to the editor policy

All letters submitted to The Islander for publication must contain the sender's name, address and phone number for verification.

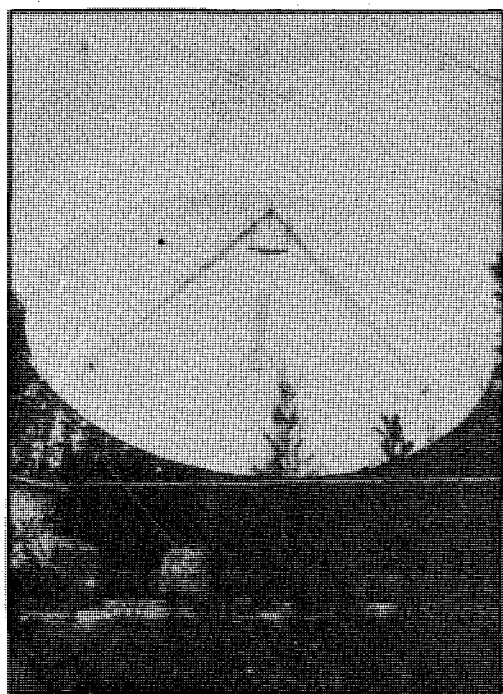

However, you may request that your name not be published.

Commission says no to satellite dishes

Satellite dish television antennas that will make 100 channels available to private homes are probably the wave of the future, the Planning Commission agreed last week. But the commissioners also agreed Sanibel is not ready for the wave.

The commission denied development permits for installation of two aluminum mesh dish antennas — one on the roof of Glenda Sharp's home in Gumbo Limbo and the other at Sundial to serve the owners of 400 condominium units at the Middle Gulf Drive resort.

The roof-mounted antennas, 12 and 16 feet in diameter and weighing 200 and 300 pounds respectively, "do not embody a character that may be viewed as a typical subordinate accessory structure normally incidental to residential use," the Planning Department reported.

For this reason the dishes are not a permitted use and the staff recommended denial.

Gary Grim, who sells the dish antennas, called the commission's action "a restraint of trade" and accused the commissioners of "taking bread from my children's mouths."

The commissioners expressed concern about the esthetics of the appearance of the aluminum dishes on every roof in Island subdivisions and of the safety factor in the event of a wind storm.

Neither of the antennas could be mounted on the ground because both Sharp's and Sundial's properties have already exhausted the CLUP's clearance and coverage requirements.

Grim said the dishes made of aluminum mesh are 90 percent air and are installed to withstand 125 mph winds.

Sharp's antenna, which Grim described as "very impressive looking," would be visible only from directly in front of the house, he said.

Mike Zakarian, president of the Sundial Condominium Association, told the commission economics is why the condo owners want to install their own TV satellite.

"The $25,000 yearly cost of CableVision has become prohibitive," he said.

Installation of the dish on the roof of a maintenance building at Sundial would cost $34,500, Grim estimated.

"But that is a one-shot expense, and the system will pay for itself in two years," Zakarian explained.

"If we allow one in a resort housing area, it will be opening the door for every other condo to apply for a dish," Commissioner Jerry Muench pointed out.

The commission agreed with Chairman Ann Winterbotham that a policy must be established and standards set for dealing with the dishes in the future.

Because satellite dish antennas are not a permitted use in either case the commission voted 6-0 to deny both requests for development permits. Commissioner Harold Schuyler was absent.

Eckerd's encroachment declared legal, surveyor blamed

A surveyor's error caused the encroachment of the new Eckerd's building on Palm Ridge Road four inches into the required 15-foot setback from the south property line, the Planning Commission learned last week.

Exercising for the first time a prerogative granted by the recently adopted "red tape" ordinance, the commission last week legalized the minor "deviation" from Comprehensive Land Use Plan performance standards.

Under terms of the ordinance the commission can unilaterally grant site specific relief from certain CLUP development regulations. The approval of the City Council is no longer required.

Rusty Clotier, Eckerd's construction superintendent, told the commission the mistake was made in the original survey.

A second survey required after the foundation pilings were driven revealed the building was 14 feet, eight inches from the property line.

A stop work order was lifted Jan. 3 after Clotier appealed to the city staff, and Eckerd's filed for a specific amendment to CLUP.

In the Planning Department's view requiring the building to be re-sited would result in unnecessary hardship and expense.

Because the deviation would not be injurious to the area or neighborhood involved, the staff recommended approval of Eckerd's request.

"Survey mistakes are a constant problem," Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham acknowledged.

Vice Chairman Larry Simon asked that the city review the history of surveyors' errors and ban those who make mistakes from working in the city.

Commissioner Jerry Muench suggested that requiring surveyors to put up a performance bond would solve the problem.

Commissioner Lennart Lorensen urged that Eckerd's case be sent to the Code Enforcement Board with the recommendation that a fine be imposed for each day the project was in violation. But the commission felt that was too severe, and Muench's motion to approve the deviation passed by a 6-0 vote. Commissioner Harold Schuyler was absent.

Sabal Street duplex denied

The policy to hold the line on density in Sanibel Estates prevailed last week when the Planning Commission denied Stan Leverette's request to build a duplex on his single-family zoned property on Sabal Street.

In recent months the commission has denied two other requests for duplexes in the area that was rezoned in 1977 for single-family residences only.

Real Estate Broker Don Bissell, representing Leverette at last week's commission hearing, argued that his client's 14,500-square-foot lot fronting on Periwinkle Way is not suitable for single-family home development.

"It's too shallow to be buffered from the street as are the homes on the other side of Periwinkle Way," Bissell said.

Three duplexes already exist on Sabal Street. Leverette's property is adjacent to Captain's Walk, a 64-unit condominium complex, and there is commercial development farther east on Periwinkle Way, Bissell pointed out.

The adjoining property on either side is vacant.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said

several property owners in the neighborhood had expressed concern about what the duplex would look like.

Bissell said he was certain Leverette would be willing to provide building plans before final approval of the specific amendment for the increased density.

Commissioners Emily Barefield and Lennart Lorensen said they would be more inclined to approve the request if the duplex were to be owner-occupied.

"I favor duplexes for family use," Barefield said. "And they can be attractive," she added.

"The question is the use of the land itself," Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham stressed. "A duplex on this property will permit a dwelling unit on a little more than 7,000 square feet of land, something we have not allowed anywhere on the island," she pointed out.

Commissioner Larry Simon's motion to recommend council denial of the specific amendment passed by a 4-2 vote with Commissioners Jerry Muench and Henry McKee dissenting. Commissioner Harold Schuyler was absent.

Lack of sewer hookup means no Paulsen duplexes

Because a hookup with the Sanibel Sewer System is not available, there is no room on the Jerry's Shopping Center site for two duplexes earmarked to house center employees, Planning Director Bruce Rogers informed the Planning Commission last week.

The duplexes were slated for the city's Below Market Rate Housing pool and are the only condition of the development permit for the 41,000-square-foot shopping center left to be decided, Rogers said. The shopping center project was approved last June.

Jerry Paulsen, developer of the center on Periwinkle Way near Casa Ybel Road, has tried without success to persuade other property owners to share the estimated $100,000 cost of the 4,500-foot line necessary to connect with the Donax Street sewer plant, Rogers said.

"His only alternative is an on-site package sewage treatment plant," Rogers said. But the hitch is that the only suitable location for the plant is also the only area where the BMRH duplexes could be built in compliance with development standards, Rogers added.

But neither the city or state has the authority to require a private company to provide sewer service, he said.

Paulsen's commitment to participate in Sanibel's moderate cost housing program was part of a negotiated out-of-court settlement of his lawsuit against the city.

"It seems there is no alternative since there is no other place for the housing," Commission Chairman Ann Winterbotham said.

Commissioner Emily Barefield said she was disappointed. "I guess we must face the inevitable, but I would prefer duplexes to a sewage treatment plant," she said.

When the commission approved Paulsen's development permit last June 14, William Haverfield, Paulsen's attorney, objected strenuously to a suggestion that in lieu of building the housing units Paulsen should make a cash contribution to the city's BMRH program. "That possibility was discussed during the negotiations and eliminated," Haverfield said last week.

The original permit approval included the provision that Paulsen would provide the housing when the shopping center is connected to the central sewer system and the package plant is removed.

Last week Commission Vice Chairman Larry Simon, noting that Paulsen is willing to work with the city to provide housing, proposed that the city not hold up the permitting process. His motion to approve issuance of the permit passed by a 6-0 vote with Commissioner Harold Schuyler absent.

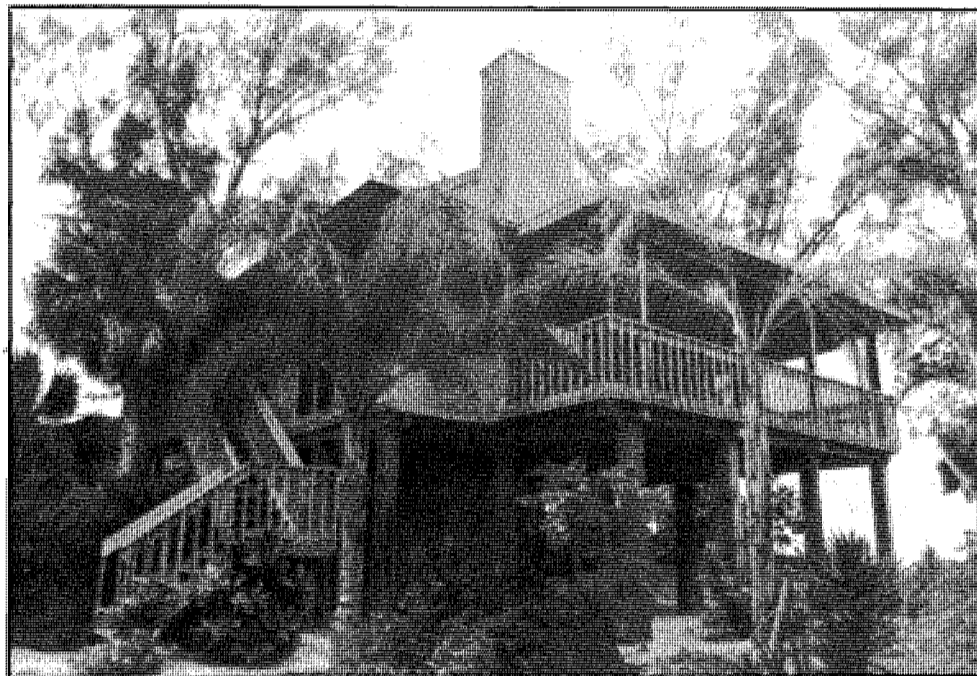

Ray Fenton, Paulsen's architect, said construction of the grocery store and restaurant and 10 other retail shops will begin within a week.

Planners, council begin review of proposed CLUP changes

By Barbara Brundage

The City Council review of proposed revisions to the Comprehensive Land Use Plan will continue in a series of special meetings on the four Wednesdays in February, beginning tomorrow.

The revisions reflect policy guidance contained in the Five Year Review Evaluation and Appraisal Report and input from the Planning Commission and the Planning Department staff, Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane explained.

Also reflected in the document is material from the Hurricane Evacuation and Hazard Mitigation Study, the Howard Needles, Tammen, Bergendorf road inventory report and the Compendium of Facts and Figures pertaining to intensity of use compiled by the Planning Department.

Omitted are alternatives recommended by staff to measure the intensity of use by means other than the number of dwelling units, lawfully existing uses and options for building back after a disaster.

These alternatives were omitted, Duane said, because of staff perception that council might not readily adopt them.

At a council discussion of the proposed changes to CLUP in December, low and moderate priorities were given to alternatives for measuring developmental intensity by converting to a system of floor area ratios and by limiting size of units and number of bedrooms, Duane said.

For more than three years the council has delayed taking positive action on staff suggestions for a more equitable solution to the buildback dilemma, he added.

"After three years discussing buildback absolutely nothing has changed," Planning Director Bruce Rogers said.

To get along with the task of adopting a new version of the plan, the staff has opted to deal only with non-controversial items such as correction of gross errors or contradictions in the document, Rogers said.

"That is all they are responsible for," he added. "Matters of policy are the council's job."

Councilman Louise Johnson said she was "disappointed that the crucial issues are being avoided." But Duane said he believed discussion of the proposed changes that are all "straightforward dealing with facts and figures" could be completed in two to four meetings.

He added he hoped the council would then adopt the revised plan and place the more sensitive issues on a future agenda when decisions can be made for further changes.

The council started a page by page review of with a discussion of changes made in Section 1.3, Economic Assumptions of the Plan.

The council had its first look at the proposed draft at a workshop meeting Jan.

12. Seven pages of the original section were deleted, Duane said, and some material was rewritten to tighten up the text editorially.

Johnson suggested restoring at least two paragraphs that emphasize Sanibel's goal to attract environmentally and conservation-oriented tourists.

A plan for a long range capital improvements program is a new addition to that section. The need for a program of tax equalization to eliminate dual taxation is recognized in a new section as well as the importance of a long range plan to improve storm drainage and flood control.

Discussion will begin with Section 1.4 at tomorrow's public hearing starting at 9 a.m. in MacKenzie Hall.

Three more three-hour sessions starting are scheduled for Feb. 9, 16 and 23.

Sanibel resident named grand jury foreman

A Sanibel resident has been named foreman of the 1983 Spring Term Lee County Grand Jury that was empaneled last week.

Circuit Court Judge Robert Shafer named Walter Paul Brundage, 477 Surf Sound Court, to head the 18-member jury that meets for the first time next Wednesday at the Lee County Court House in Fort Myers.

The jury is charged with investigating cost overruns in construction at the Lee County Regional Jetport and the East Lee County sewer project.

The spring term extends through June 21.

Doris Green of Fort Myers is vice foreman; Deanna Hallatt of North Fort Myers, secretary; and Bessie Wright of Fort Myers, treasurer.

Brundage, a resident of Sanibel for more than two years, was formerly a professor at Miami-Dade Community College in Miami.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

For a long time I wouldn't allow the use of two-piece rods on my fishing boat on the theory that they just weren't strong enough to handle the variety of fish we encounter around the Islands. But now I'm having some second thoughts about these rods.

Not more than a couple of months ago I noticed one of the discount stores on the mainland was having a sale on reasonably priced graphite rods.

I have fished with one graphite -- a snook rod -- for years but was never overly impressed with the action it had over well-made glass rods. However, the graphite had one outstanding feature that impressed me -- its price!

You can expect to pay three to five times more than the cost of a glass rod when you decide on a well-made graphite. I decided not to switch from glass to graphite until the prices came within reason.

That's starting to happen now, and I managed to locate a graphite for less than $30. It's a Zebco Model 101. The only trouble was it had two pieces -- and you know how everyone says stay with a solid, one-piece rod when it comes to saltwater.

I bought it anyway. It's been a long time since I've been so impressed with a rod. Since then I've used or borrowed a couple of other two-piece graphite rods of different makes and found some interesting things about them.

But the primary reaction of the owners is that they aren't the least bit worried about the rod breaking at the joint where the two pieces come together.

This reminds me of a couple I had out tarpon fishing two summers ago. They were retired, active, well-qualified anglers whose hobby it was to take fishing trips around the world. They are the only couple I have ever had that came on board my boat with an album of photos of their fish catches from around the world.

In short, my customers were highly experienced, but as I was getting out my 40-pound big game rods and reels for the tarpon trip, they were unpacking and putting together their two-piece Fenwick graphite spinning rods. They looked like toothpick rods next to mine. I tried to tell them it would be difficult to bring a big tarpon to the boat with such light equipment, but the fellow instructed his wife to open the album to a certain page and, sure enough, there he stood next to a large sailfish with the same rod he was holding now.

That morning we saw lots of tarpon rolling, but we never hooked one. We did, however, have one of the largest rays I've ever seen pick up bait. The wife fought the ray for 45 minutes. The husband said she better get it to the boat or he was going to take over and do it for her. She gave him the rod and he went for another 25 minutes on the ray.

What really impressed me was the light graphite rod. It was bent into an arch that made me stand way back -- I just knew that rod was going to explode at the joint, and who knows what would happen after that?

The fellow worked the ray a bit longer and said he had never hooked such a fighting fish. He vowed to get it in for a picture to add to the album. He also said he would tighten the drag and work harder on the fish. Just then the rod broke and he nearly tumbled backwards out the opposite side of the boat!

When we looked at the rod, I had to admit I was really impressed. It didn't break at the joint, but lower towards the thicker butt section.

I believe there are varying grades of graphite rods, but don't be afraid to try one and feel the feather weight of the rod. That Fenwick rod was guaranteed for life, and the angler got a new one. Most manufacturers don't do that, but many offer long breakage guarantees.

These are sensitive rods that really put fun into light (and sometimes big) tackle fishing. Good luck on the water this week!

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

It's getting near shelling's silly season again. A few days ago we found one of those brown spotted shells with a cream colored background -- the kind that is supposed to be impossible to find.

I'm talking about a junonia, of course. And once again, I have to mention that my record remains perfect. It was not I who found it, but a fellow in one of my shelling parties who, you guessed it, didn't know what he had found!

Those of you who have collected shells for years know the junonia is probably the most sought after of all our local shells. It's in the volute family of shells and averages three to five inches tall. Junonias are long and slim compared to other shells, such as the whelks, which have a bulge in the middle or top of the shell.

Junonias are a rare prize for any sheller and even more so for a beach walker who's not really a sheller. It was definitely a lucky day for Curtis Brooks of Largo, Fla.

To prove the storm theory of shelling, Curtis and a couple of his relatives were out with me walking the beaches of North Captiva Island about three days after a period of windy, wet and wild weather. We were coming up with the usual assortment of worm shells, small whelks and tulips -- all dead, of course -- when we split up, some walking north and the others headed south towards Redfish Pass.

Curtis and a close relative, Jim Davis, an experienced shell collector, took the southern route. I lost sight of them down the beach as they walked into a downed clump of trees and living mangroves that reached out into the water on the beach.

The storm in June last summer took away much sand from this part of the Island, and the trees that once sat back from the waterline now are right at the surf. That's important to remember if you should find such a situation when you are walking any beaches -- the tree roots and tangles tend to catch and hold shells.

That was just the case as Curtis and Jim approached a mound of shells washed into the roots of these mangroves.

So often the person who looks where others avoid finds the best. That was the case here, too. Jim forgot to take along his shoes and decided to work on past the mound of sharp shells. Curtis had his shoes on and went over to the mound of shells -- and there it was!

Actually, only part of the perfect junonia was exposed. Curtis picked that up, along with several other shells. He held up the shell so Jim could see and asked what it was.

Jim said something like, "Don't move!" He ran over and said, "Just let me hold it!" The junonia was in very good condition, and we all had a good long laugh back at the boat. Jim has looked for a long time, as I have, and neither of us has come close to finding a junonia.

I believe it's been some 15 months since a member of my shelling group found the last one.

Jim told Curtis there was a great future in store for his shelling. "You've already got the hardest to find shell, the rest is going to be easy," Jim said as we rode back to the docks at Tween Waters.

So good luck in your junonia looking. Yes, it was a genuine junonia. No, I don't think they brought it with them or planted it on the beach. And yes, I'm still looking, too!

Committee recommends adoption; council considers live shelling ban today

By Carol Kranichfeld

The Live Shelling Committee's endorsement of a ban on live shelling along Sanibel's shores will be considered today with the City Council. The committee's second reading of the controversial live shelling ordinance.

The ordinance, which has become the focus of much local and national attention, was drafted in an effort to conserve the barrier island's live shell population, believed by many to have declined significantly in recent years.

The council might be surprised at the staunch measures suggested by the council-appointed Live Shelling Committee, which met on Friday, Jan. 21, to determine the contents of the ordinance.

Included in the committee's suggestions are an across-the-board ban on the taking of live shells within 300 feet of Sanibel's beaches, with the exception of those taking for council-approved scientific and educational purposes. The ordinance, if passed, would also be eligible for review annually.

According to Live Shelling Committee Chairman Dr. K.C. Emerson, the tubloads of conchs formerly found near Blind Pass are a thing of the past. "Serious shellers no longer come here," he says. "There are just too many people."

An "open season" on bayside shelling was supported by a number of people present at the Live Shelling Committee's recent meeting but met opposition for enforcement reasons.

"The biggest problem there is enforcement," said Emerson. "Not many people live on the bay side to watch the goings on. That is something that would have to be tackled under the heading of aquatic preserve, in my opinion."

Still, there are many shellers who long been struck with "shell fever" will not easily give up their hobby of gluing shells to mirrors, lampshades, wastepaper baskets. Opposition to Island-wide shelling ban prompts one of the protagonists' main arguments, which regards live shells washed up on the beach as "dying" and exempt from the ban.

Emerson disagrees with this stand, however. "This is a big problem. One shell can lay there for days and eventually return to the water. It depends entirely upon the species under discussion. A categorical statement that washed up shells are lost anyway is wrong."

Although the mechanics of enforcement will be left up to the city, the Live Shelling Committee suggests a yearly review so that if for any reason the ban becomes outdated, it can be lifted. But even annual reviewing may not go without a hitch. "That's going to be a big problem in the scientific sense," says Emerson, "because it will be several years before we can obtain results."

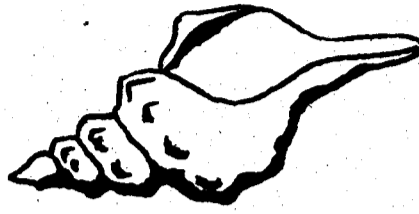

The committee voted unanimously to recommend to council a total ban.

Members present for the vote included Bob Sabatino, Betty Anholt, Ralph Woodring, Louis Dunham, Ann Winterbotham and George Campbell.

Should Sanibel pass the ban on live shelling, the city will stand right alongside other pending state efforts to protect and conserve shelling for years to come, such as the legislation limiting size and possession of queen conchs on Florida's east coast. The queen conch, which reproduces near the shoreline, has been savored for decades not only for the lovely shell but for the succulent meat inside, and has declined substantially in the last decade alone.

A statment that recently appeared in the Miami Herald nicely sums up the issue Sanibel City Council must decide later today: "Shellers blame the commercial fishermen for the ... decline; commercial fishermen blame developers; and developers blame shellers. No one knows for sure."

Marquis receives management contract for Sundial resort

The Sundial Beach and Tennis Resort on Sanibel has come under the management of Marquis Hotels and Resorts, Marquis President Michael Peceri announced last week.

"We are extremely delighted with this new association and the confidence the owners have in our management expertise," Peceri said. "It is our objective to enhance the perception of the Sundial Resort in the minds of social guests, travel agents, and meeting planners."

Marquis, a division of The Mariner Group, operates 12 resorts in Florida including South Seas Plantation on Captiva and Casa Ybel on Sanibel.

POLICE BEAT

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

An Ibis Lane resident reported two women were in a motorized golf cart on the beach near the Sandcastle Motel on Friday afternoon, Jan. 21. Police found a Sandcastle Motel employee and an elderly woman in the cart.

The motel employee said she took the older woman in the cart because the older woman was crippled. She was advised of the city's ordinance prohibiting vehicles on the beach.

A Sanibel man was arrested under a bench warrant on Friday afternoon, Jan. 21, because he failed to appear in court on charges of passing worthless checks.

Robert Wallace North of 2244 Periwinkle Way was released on his own recognizance after his arrest.

Police were on the lookout for a large, late model car that allegedly pulled into an Olivia Street driveway and knocked over the mailbox late Friday night, Jan. 21.

A Sunny Grove Landscaping truck from Estero knocked down the telephone lines along West Gulf Drive and created traffic problems on Saturday morning, Jan. 22. Police were called to the scene to direct traffic until United Telephone Systems crews arrived.

A gold necklace valued at $400 was reported missing from a Sabal Drive home on Saturday afternoon, Jan. 22. The owner of the necklace called police shortly after filing the complaint to report his housekeeper had found the necklace in a shoe.

The owner of an empty lot west of 4315 West Gulf Drive reported someone had pulled up the post holding a chain and No Trespassing sign and left beer cans on the lot on Saturday evening, Jan. 22.

A 70-year-old Berwin, Penn., woman was reunited with her sister-in-law on Saturday night, Jan. 22, after the older woman became disoriented on Bowman's Beach. Police checked area resorts and found the woman's family at the Trade Winds.

Police investigated a complaint that men were gigging fish in a canal behind Limpet Drive late Saturday night, Jan. 22. The men were gigging sheepshead, which is legal. Only gigging snook is considered illegal.

A Huxter's employee alerted police when she heard someone jiggling the rear door handle as she closed the grocery store late Saturday night, Jan. 22. Police and the SPD canine checked the surrounding area and found nothing suspicious.

Police confiscated a .22 revolver and nine rounds of ammunition from a Fort Myers woman after they stopped her for driving too fast on Periwinkle Way near Gulfside Realty shortly before 3 a.m. Sunday, Jan. 23.

Police noticed the butt of the gun when the woman's companion opened the glove compartment for the registration. The woman said a former boyfriend had given her the gun for protection. Police will hold the gun until valid ownership is produced.

A Bunting Lane resident complained that two large dogs were running loose in the Gumbo Limbo subdivision on Sunday morning, Jan. 23. The man said the dogs had dug up some plants in his yard.

Police located the owner of one of the dogs and advised her of the complaint.

Miscellaneous jewelry valued at $40,000, a cassette radio and $500 in cash were reported missing from a Shell Island Beach Club unit on Sunday night, Jan. 23. The South Hampton, Penn., man who reported the incident said he returned to his unit at 8:40 p.m. after being away since 3:30 p.m. and found the front door ajar. Police are continuing their investigation.

Police investigated a report of several gunshots in the area near the Ramada Inn on Donax Street on Monday morning, Jan. 24. A Cardium Street man reported the shots, but no one else in the area told police they heard anything suspicious.

A Dallas, Texas, woman reported $73 was missing from her wallet on Monday morning, Jan. 24, as she prepared to leave the Island. She said she noticed $60 was missing first and then later missed another $13. She had been staying at the Jolly Roger motel.

Sanibel Police Officer John Slater was incorrectly identified as Don Case in this photo that ran in last week's Islander. Slater shows off one of two 1983 Dodge Aires sedans recently purchased to fortify the fleet of SPD squad cars that already patrol the Island. Our apologies to both Officer Slater and Sgt. Case.

Police Beat continued

A police aide transported an injured pelican from the Causeway toll booth to CROW on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 26. A Matlacha man delivered the pelican to the toll booth.

A Sandpiper Circle resident reported her dog had bitten a Fort Myers woman at the Three Star gas pumps on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 26. The victim had attempted to pet the dog in its owner's jeep at the gas pumps.

The dog, which had been vaccinated, will be quarantined at the owner's home for 10 days.

A Motorcraft Exide battery valued at $64 was reported stolen from a vehicle at Blind Pass condominiums on Thursday morning, Jan. 27. The battery was taken sometime during the week before it was reported missing. It belonged to a Fort Myers man.

A Sanibel resident reported a color television, two table lamps and one coffee table were missing from a Loggerhead Cay condominium unit on Thursday afternoon, Jan. 27. The missing items were valued at $600.

No charges were filed in a parking lot accident at Tahitian Gardens shopping center on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 19. A Champaign, Ill., man struck a parked car owned by a Bellaire, Ohio, man. Police estimated there was $40 damage to the Illinois car and $50 damage to the Ohio car.

A Sanibel man driving a Cape Coral resident's car was the victim of a hit and run accident at the Burger Emporium restaurant parking lot on Wednesday afternoon, Jan. 19.

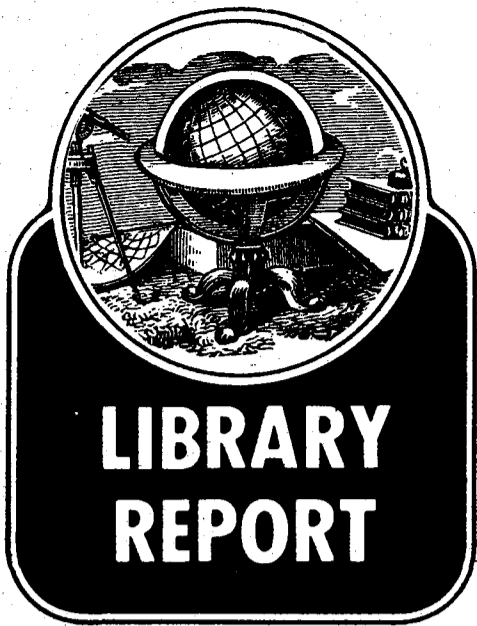

Michael Ray Farley told police he was entering the parking lot when a car that was leaving the parking lot swerved left and struck the car Farley was driving. Police estimated there was $90 damage to the 1965 Volkswagen.

A Sanibel man was charged with failure to use due care after a one-car accident on Casa Ybel Road on Sunday night, Jan. 23. Joseph Gault of 303 Palm Lake Drive was northbound on Casa Ybel Road when he lost control of his 1969 Dodge and skidded across the road before hitting some bushes. Police estimated there was $500 damage to Gault's car.

do? grin. "Of course it happened, and the man pretended he didn't even recognize me. He didn't say anything that night or anytime after that. He was a true gentleman."

Now, however, Ritter doesn't worry that anyone in his posh, gulf front condominium will scoff as he comes and goes in his brown police uniform. If they do, that's their problem, he maintains, adding that none of his neighbors have ever really looked askance.

"I think most of them kind of like having me around," he says.

He accepted the position with the Police Department on the basis that he would be available for duty virtually any time except for two months every summer. That's when he and Olive travel.

Last summer, however, their travel plans were sidetracked by health problems that landed Ritter in Massachusetts General for eight weeks. "I was supposed to die," he remembers. It was a time of trial, but Ritter recovered and was back on the Sanibel beat last fall.

And there he plans to stay as long as he can, doing his part to keep the Island community just that -- a residents' community as opposed to a commercial, tourist haven.

"Sanibel is one community that doesn't need tourists," he says. "We would survive if there wasn't one motel or condominium for rent here."

That is so, he believes, because the Island is home for so many people who give but do not take. Just like Ritter.

Baptists start Captiva Church, move Sunday services on Sanibel

The Captiva Christian Fellowship, a mission of the Sanibel church, will hold its first service this Sunday, Feb. 6, at the Captiva Community Center.

The new church will be ministered by Pastor David Hope, assistant minister at the Sanibel Baptist Church. A core group of fellowship founders have been meeting in various Captiva homes on the past several Friday evenings in preparation for the first service at the community center.

First Baptist Church Pastor Jamie Stilson says the new church is in response to the need for a full-time ministry on Captiva for that Island's residents and for resort employees and guests.

A pastoring class will be held before the regular Sunday service at the community center. Those who attend the Captiva service are invited to attend the Sunday and Wednesday evening services on Sanibel.

First Baptist Church Sunday services on Sanibel have moved to the Sanibel Community Association hall to accommodate crowds of winter churchgoers, Stilson said.

First Baptist Church Sunday school classes at the Sanibel Community Association hall will begin at 9:45 a.m. Sunday, followed by regular worship at 11 a.m. Evening services at the church on San-Cap Road begin at 7 p.m. on Sunday and Wednesday. The nursery is available during all services.

Pastoring classes at the Captiva Christian Fellowship will begin at 8 a.m. Sunday, Feb. 6, at the Captiva Community Center. Worship services will follow at 8:45 a.m.

THE WAY WE WERE

20 Years Ago This Week 1963

The Second Annual Shell Count of the Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club will be held on Feb. 9 beginning at low tide at 7:28 a.m. Mary Laeck is in charge of this year's count and hopes Islanders and visitors this year gather even more than the 128 shell species that were found last year on Sanibel beaches.

Rumor has it that telephone cable is all laid on Captiva and cut into the main office circuits in Fort Myers. The lines are now being run from the poles to residences and businesses on the Island. It will be a happy day for many Captivans when the first call goes through.

The Sanibel Planning and Zoning Authority met last week with a group of Island realtors and contractors for a four-hour round table discussion of the Island's planning and zoning ordinance.

The subjects discussed included setbacks, land fill, parking and low cost housing. Members of both sides agreed that many issues were clarified during the session.

Famous author and artist Lauren Ford from Bethlehem, Conn., has arrived at Casa Ybel resort for her annual visit.

La Hacienda, the oldest shell shop on the Island (37 years), has had a complete face lift. The old chimney that Capt. and Mrs. Cockerell built from bricks salvaged from the shark factory was blown down during the recent Hurricane Donna and has been rebuilt. Inside remains the splendid array of shells that Enid Donahue knows so well.

15 Years Ago This Week 1968

More than 20 local artists gathered at the Captiva Community Center last week for a sketch class sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Art League. The group worked outdoors at the Captiva Chapel-By-The-Sea under the direction of Sanibel artist Ann Winterbotham.

Roland Roberts, prominent Lee County Republican, this week announced his candidacy for the Lee County Commission District 3 seat that will be vacated by Herman Hastings.

The Island Ensemble played at a benefit for Meals for Millions at the Pirate Playhouse last week. The Ensemble includes basist Ed Legel, violinists Margaret Walters, Ed Konrad and Ruth Ross and organist Jean Culpepper.

a Kiwanis Club for Sanibel and Captiva. Those who are interested in forming a club should meet at the Coconut Grove for a Dutch treat lunch on Wednesday.

The Two K's studio gallery opened on Periwinkle Way last week for a crowd of more than 300 guests at Gertrud and Paul Kuhn's new establishment.

The studio gallery features the works of the Kuhns and their daughter and son-in-law.

Caretta Research of Sanibel last week received approval to operate motor vehicles on Lee County beaches in connection with Caretta's investigation of the ecology of loggerhead sea turtles along the Southwest Florida coast.

5 Years Ago This Week 1978

Despite cloudy skies and chilly winds, a large crowd gathered at the observation tower on the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge main drive last week for a long-overdue ceremony formally dedicating the refuge to the memory of the famous conservationist and cartoonist Jay Norwood "Ding" Darling.

Mass transportation on Sanibel was the prominent item on the Planning Commission agenda this week. Commissioner Joe McMurtry presented a report on the mass transit study that was recently completed by the Sanibel-Captiva League of Women Voters.

The league has recommended that Sanibel pursue some type of open air, tractor-drawn vehicle for public transportation because of the low initial cost.

The Planning Commission, however, agreed that a slow moving vehicle traveling along Periwinkle Way would only exacerbate the Island's traffic problems.

Like three out of every four Lee County residents, most Islanders voted "no" last Tuesday to the Lee County Commission's $30 million road bond proposal that would have taxed area residents for 29 years for the construction and improvement of 10 area thoroughfares.

1 Year Ago This Week 1982

Sanibel's concern over whether the city should purchase the Causeway was alleviated last week when the Lee County Commission withdrew its offer for the sale.

The commission decision came last Wednesday after the commission reviewed figures from the city's financial consultant that estimated tolls on the Causeway would have to rise to more than $7 for day trippers and $3 for commuters to finance the sale.

After 64½ hours of deliberation stretched over 5½ weeks, the City Council last week adopted an ordinance as a general amendment to the Comprehensive Land Use Plan that drastically changes performance standards and sets new criteria for commercial development on Sanibel.

The Sanibel-Captiva Rotary Club presented a check for $600 to Mayor Porter Goss and Recreation Director Dick Noon this week. The funds will be used to purchase equipment for the new recreation complex.

Obituary Vogal Higgins

Vogal Higgins of Jamaica Drive died on Tuesday, Jan. 25, 1983. He was 70 years old. He had been a resident here for the past eight years and moved to the Island from Anderson, Ind.

Retired from Emge Meat Packing Company in Indiana, Higgins was neighborhood coordinator for Neighborhood Watch on Sanibel, a member of the Masonic Lodge and the Scottish Rite Valley of Indianapolis.

He is survived by his wife, Aline Higgins of Sanibel, and one brother, G. Noble Higgins of Anderson, Ind.

The remains will be sent to the Robert Loose Funeral Home in Anderson for service and burial.

hole between the heart's pumping chambers, opened up a constricted artery, shortened another that was too large and moved still another that was on the wrong side of the heart.

"It's amazing what they can do," Nikki's proud father, Russell, says, adding of the eight-hour ordeal, "It's a long time to sit there and wonder."

During her young life Nikki has spent nearly nine months in the hospital. Both parents say they are fortunate to be working for a family-run business. They are chefs at the Cafe Orleans, which Coby's parents, John and Martha (Marty) Vroman, own. Their jobs at the cafe have allowed them the freedom to take leaves of absence to be with their daughter.

Residents of Sanibel since 1974, the Amadios bought their house on Sanibel-Captiva Road from Coby's parents just before Nikki was born.

"Our family is close," Coby says. "This has been a lifesaver for me -- to have someone to lean on, to cry on. It was hard on them, also. They tried to be strong for us."

"My in-laws (Dominic and Irene Amadio) call Nikki the miracle baby," she adds.

After open heart surgery, Nikki spent 11 days in intensive care with a collapsed lung and a blood infection. "The greatest thing was seeing she had pink lips right after surgery. It was a wonderful site," Coby remembers.

She praises both the intensive care unit and the surgeons. The surgeons' hands, she remembers, were like the hands of football players, adding, "I wondered how such big hands could work on such a little heart."

Sanibel sweetheart reigns as heart association princess continued

For six weeks after surgery Nikki was on intravenous antibiotics. During this time, Coby moved in to be with her child, joining five other babies who were under care in the same room. She helped nurses administer medications, IV's and blood tests and was ever-watchful as her child began improving daily.

"I was there so long people called me the house mother. I used to tell people I didn't watch General Hospital - I lived it. I was playing nurse 24 hours a day," she says.

Nikki was finally released from the hospital after two months, but later returned for a double hernia operation. Last September doctors fully repaired her rectum, and her hospital days appear to be drawing to a close. The medication she takes has dwindled to one from the nine she had to take just after heart surgery.

The nearly $70,000 in hospital bills were covered largely by the Amadio's health insurance and by the government's Children's Medical Services program. The remaining balance has been worked into a manageable payment plan over the next six years, Coby says.

The exact cause of Nikki's problems may never be known. The fourth and fifth lumbar of her vertebrae are fused together, and doctors have determined that this occurred between the fifth and sixth week of pregnancy, before Coby was actually aware she was pregnant. A virus may be the culprit, but no one is sure.

Seeing Nikki today, with a bright smile, endless curiosity and bountiful energy that is childhood ("She sure wears our two dogs out," says Russell), it is not hard to understand why she has been crowned Princess for Heart Month.

A host of activities are planned for Heart

Tonight, dine in the legendary Thistle Lodge.

It's an authentic re-creation of Sanibel's first inn.

And yet, the crowning achievement of the Thistle Lodge Restaurant isn't the turn-of-the-century atmosphere.

It's the marvelous food.

Our menu features such adventurous dishes as Shrimp Creole, Veal Calvados and Chicken Rochambeau.

As well as more traditional fare, like thick steaks and fresh seafood selections.

And every day there's a famous New Orleans-style brunch, too. Including such crowd-pleasers as Eggs Hussard, Oysters Benedict and freshly blended Sazeracs.

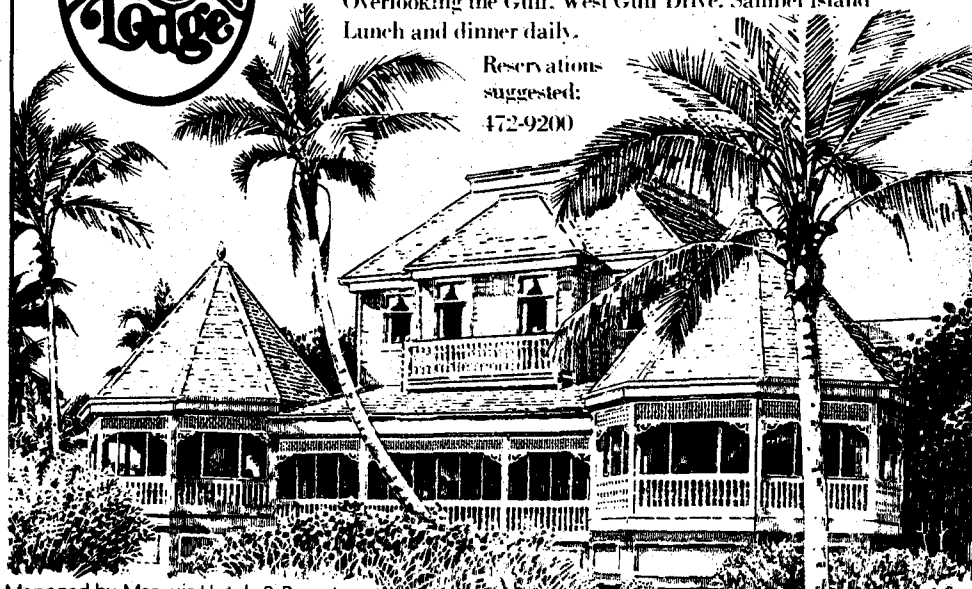

And our lounge offers the Island's best live entertainment and dancing.

Sanibel sweetheart reigns continued

Month, beginning with a Silver Anniversary Heart Ball sponsored by the Heart Association this Saturday, Feb. 5 at 8 p.m. at the Del Tura Country Club on North 41.

Coby and Nikki have even taped a public service announcement promoting the event, which will air on WINK-TV this week. Tickets are $10 and can be obtained at Cafe Orleans. Proceeds will go toward research on heart disease.

Also planned to benefit the Heart

Association is a hoedown at the Lani Kai on Saturday, Feb. 12, on Fort Myers Beach, where four different bands will play from 1 to 5 p.m.

Coby says her ordeal with Nikki has been a maturing experience in many ways. "I am more sensitive to the problems of children, and I have also become more aware of the whole medical field."

With young Nikki now enrolled in the Children's Center of the Islands growing and learning with other children her age, the Amadio's say they're thinking of having another child.

Acutely aware of the risks of childbirth, they are nonetheless determined -- fostered, undoubtedly, by the love that Nikki brings to them. Says Russell, "We're still willing to take the chance."

GREETINGS from the sea...or is it the Gulf? Whatever...I'm so glad to welcome all of you to Enchanting Sanibel and the world of F&B Oyster Co. ...my favorite dining spot where my column originates.

□ Hope your week was simply fantastic...ready to hear the latest gossip from under Gertie's hat? ITEM: Carl Cobia and his friends scheduled to appear at the Civic Center stopped at F&B Sanibel for dinner. The combo was simply "eaten alive" by the young admiring females flocking at the door. It's a wonder they left Elliot D.J. untouched.

□ And how about Willard Scott, the Today Show's weatherman dining not once, but twice at F&B Captiva. Boy! Oh! Boy! The celebrities won't leave the restaurant alone...they just keep coming on in for those super features...I'm gonna camp out on the restaurants' doorstep armed with my Polaroid. I'm definitely a celebrity seeker...aren't you?

□ I must help all my new friends who have inquired as to the mystery of F&B's initials... Detective Gertie on the beat...One theory expounded to me, was when Henry Bouillabaisse was in town to cast his new film "Freshest and Bestest", he dined at an unnamed restaurant and decided to call it F&B as a tribute to his movie...but alas...he discovered the name was already in use. He had even tabbed Crab Hunter for the starring role! Oh! Well, Henry...better luck next time. Swim in next week for the answer to what F&B REALLY means...until then...ta ta...gotta swim...

Cottage falls from trailer during move

By Carol Kranichfeld

Islanders last week were reminded for the second time in as many months that relocating houses is no simple task.

Many residents of Captiva and the Blind Pass end of Sanibel on their way to work early Monday morning rounded one curve on Sanibel-Captiva Road only to face a small, Florida style cottage -- sitting in the road.

The relocation, a job contracted by Pioneer Home Movers of Bonita Springs, began at 12:30 a.m. Monday and was supposed to be finished before sunrise. But before the house was out of the driveway the movers had trouble.

The flatbed's wheels crossed the ditch and sent the house sliding off the eyebeam.

The project was four miles from its final destination on Dimmick Road in Belle Meade subdivision.

The house, which was constructed many years ago on John Oster's property on Sanibel-Captiva Road, had been inhabited by Islander Jeff Holck for two and a half years. The property on which it originally stood was recently subdivided as part of the White Heron expansion.

Still structurally sound after all these years, Holck's cottage would have suffered worse damage, said one contractor as he surveyed the scene, had it not been built of Florida pine. "Termites can't even eat through that stuff," he explained.

TUNE INTO

Peppers

Weekdays 11:30 to 2:00, we find Gary & Bud leading unsuspecting tourists into... yes, into Col P. Screamer's Lunchtime Arena! They tempt them with a mouth-watering display of seafood, pasta, salads and desserts. The fiends! T-Bone hides in the kitchen unwilling to expose his role in this plot to satiate every Sanibel noontime appetite with buffet temptations & monstrous sandwiches.

Fun in the afternoon continues 3:00 to 5:30 Mon. - Sat. with Mike & Stan (alias Col. P. Screamer) holding hostages by power of their sinfully sumptuous margaritas & savory Happy Hour Buffet.

Tune in at 5:00 for "All Our Bountiful Dinners."

Update:

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

A year ago we were concerned about a number of serious cases of envenomation by spiders here on the Islands. A number of additional cases -- some old, some new -- have appeared since that first account.

The most recent victim is Harry Kair, D.C., P.A., well-known Sanibel citizen and practitioner. Here is Kair's own account of his travails:

"I had heard of the Brown Recluse Spider while practicing in Illinois and have seen pictures of the aftereffects of the bite. But there hasn't been all that much information published in journals or periodicals about this spider. Most of the information is about Black Widows.

"Since Nov. 24, 1982, I have learned a whole lot more about this dastardly varmint than I really care to know. My exposure started about 1 p.m. that day with a very mild itching sensation on the outside of my left ankle.

"As the day progressed the itching continued and a burning sensation began. By 5 p.m. my foot and ankle were swollen and it was virtually impossible to put any weight on my foot because of the pain.

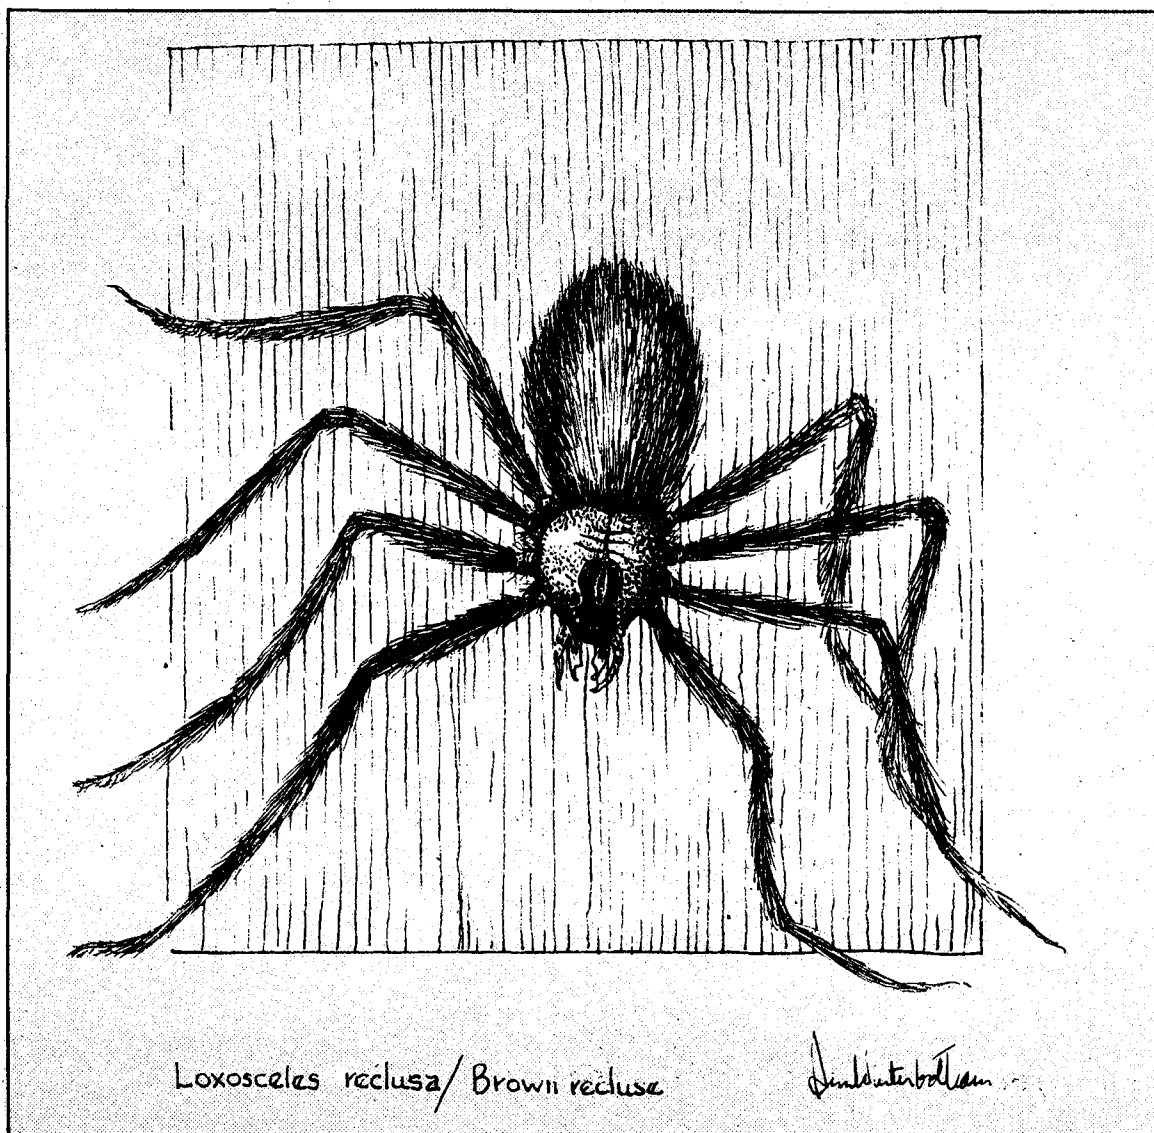

"I finally arrived home and started soaking my foot in hot Epsom Salts water -- which did nothing except get my foot wet. There was a small red welt on my ankle far out of proportion to the symptoms it was creating.

"The following morning, after a particularly miserable night, the little red welt was a larger, black welt, which meant the tissue was necrotic (dead). My wife called Dr. James Moseley as I couldn't even walk to the phone.

"Moseley said he wanted to see me immediately and my wife drove me to his office. After I described all of the events that had happened, Moseley said the only thing that could create that many symptoms so rapidly without the patient's knowledge of being bitten would be a Brown Recluse.

"Moseley said there were two ways to treat this bite: massive dosages of antibiotics and cortisone and the symptoms would be manifested for two to three months, or excision of the venom 'pocket' and as much of the necrotic tissue as possible.

"I opted for excision, which Moseley did right there in his office. I was also placed on antibiotics, and within four days I was able to put weight on my foot again. It seems completely ridiculous that a grown man would have to crawl on his hands and knees because his foot hurts.

"It has now been four weeks since my introduction to Brownie. I don't have the slightest idea when or where I was bitten. I was not able to work for 10 days. I am still on antibiotics, which are keeping the symptoms down. And from some of the horror stories I have heard about other people who have been bitten (everything from amputations, skin grafts that won't take, erosion of muscle tissue and atrophy to people dying), I realize that I got off easy."

Another case, only now brought to my attention, was the 1979 bite sustained by Tony Proctor, former Cape Coral City Councilman who is also well known for his recent close but unsuccessful bid for election to the Lee County Commission.

Proctor told me about his unhappy experience. The spider bit his left hand between the thumb and index finger. At first he felt little pain. Soon the skin fell away, exposing decaying, necrotic flesh and a large eroded cavity.

He sought aid from an allergist and a skin specialist after it became apparent that a serious and very painful problem existed. His family physician decided to hospitalize him when the erosion seemed to threaten tendons in his hand.

He remained in the hospital for about a week and underwent a skin graft and plastic surgery. His scar today, although neatly sutured by the plastic surgeon, is about three inches across and an inch and a half front to back.

All concerned with Proctor's case felt the bite was that of a Brown Recluse. More about that possibility later.

Two more bite cases have been reported -- both on the same person. The victim, a Fort Myers Beach woman, has requested that her name not be used.

The first bite took place in North Carolina, where the Brown Recluse is known to range, in 1981. It was a serious bite that resulted in the woman's hospitalization for more than a month during which the patient underwent skin graft surgery.

The second bite happened last August here in Lee County. The typical eroded cavity was excised. The bite was very painful and five months later is still not completely healed, though no skin graft has been required.

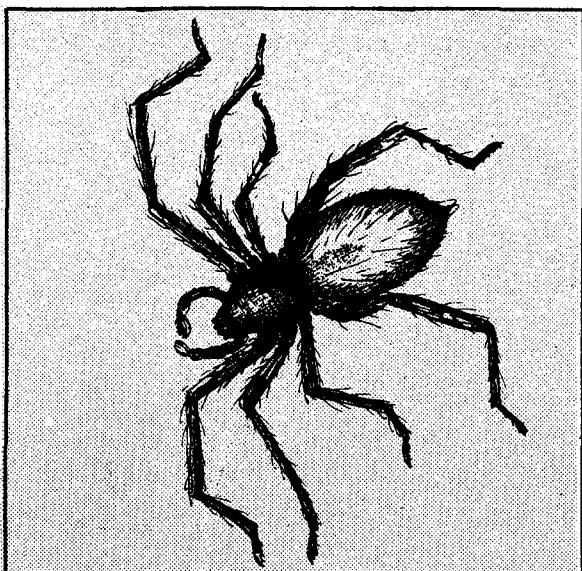

In each of these cases, the Brown Recluse, Loxosceles reclusa was thought to be the offending spider. But in these cases as well as all others that will be cited below, no spider specimen was ever collected.

The reports lack firm data and contain little of substance that could lead to positive identification of the spiders. This has troubled me, for there have been several other serious injuries on Sanibel and Captiva attributed to the Brown Recluse.

Charlotte Heimann, one of the victims, helped in my studies. Her accomplished daughter Karla, formerly at the University of Florida, took up the question with Dr. G.B. Edwards of Gainesville, entomologist and arachnologist.

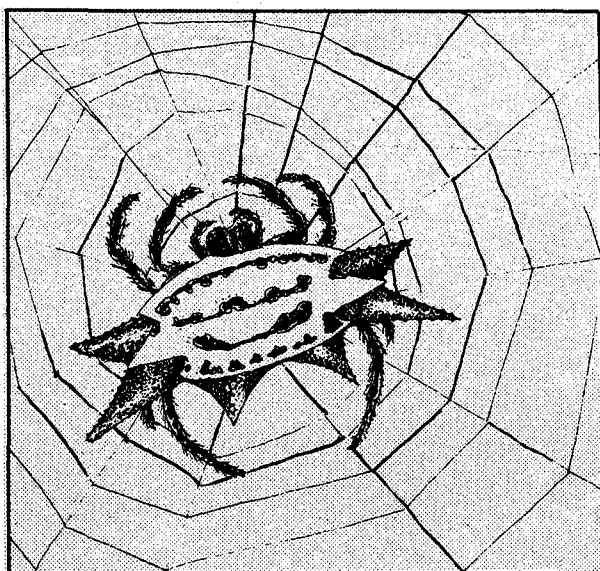

Edwards kindly lent me, via Karla's good offices, a small but important collection of arachnids of this region. Also on permanent loan are several Brown Recluse Spiders, specimens I have long sought.

For all of this help I am very appreciative, for spider identification here has been difficult for me, and I do get phone calls from panicky people who have had unpleasant experiences.

Dr. K. C. Emerson, medical entomologist; Dr. Jean Gentry, Dr. Stephan Halabis and Dr. James Moseley, all physicians; have been very cooperative in helping to put together this discussion, as have the several victims of presumed Brown Recluse bites.

There are numerous species of Loxosceles throughout the Western Hemisphere. All must be presumed as such, although by no means have all been evaluated. Loxosceles are important in South America.

On a 1980 visit to world-renowned Instituto Butantan in Sao Paulo, we learned that an antivenin is being developed for use in the treatment of Brazilian Loxosceles species, possibly L. gaucho.

No such protection is prepared in the United States, where the Brown Recluse is common in Oklahoma, Texas, Arkansas, Kansas and Missouri. Its range is spreading probably by means of man's agency, for it is appearing in Illinois, Iowa, Mississippi, Louisiana, the Carolinas and Georgia. In many of those states it is well established.

It has been observed at Valdosta, Ga., only a few miles from the Florida line. A small number of specimens have been found in Florida, but the best available opinion is that the Brown Recluse is not breeding here -- not yet, anyway.

With the huge influx of people (and materials to feed and house them) that Florida has experienced, it is not surprising that individual spiders may be transported in luggage, clothing, lumber, paper and other cargo.

So don't be surprised to find Loxosceles reclusa show up here one of these days. Close relatives that might also show up are the South American species, L. laeta of Chile and the aforementioned L. gaucho, both of which might possibly get along better in our mild climate than would the Recluse, which is naturally accustomed to colder, more northerly habitat.

One alien species is already established in California! Another, L. reclusa, seems to appear in the United States occasionally, but so far not in Florida.

With the thousands of jets that enter Florida from South America, it would really be surprising if one or another neotropical species did not find its way to our shores.

The most likely place to encounter the Brown Recluse is in clothing or in bed. The reclusive creature usually hides inoffensively at one part of its sticky, asymmetrical web.

In most places where it may live -- among papers, lumber, rubbish, under boards, tiles, pipes, rocks and behind furniture or wall hangings -- it is quite unlikely to bite. But if it is resting in an article of clothing or hiding in your bed, the disturbance of your dressing or rolling over can cause it sufficient discomfort to bite. Adult females are more likely to bite and are much more venomous than the males.

The condition resulting from envenomation by a Brown Recluse has been named loxoscelism, or by some authorities, necrotic arachnidism. There is nothing funny about a severe case of loxoscelism, as you already know from Dr. Kair's account.

Charlotte Heimann called her bite a very bad and unforgettable experience. Comparing her description with known cases of loxoscelism, one can be convinced that she was indeed bitten by a Recluse or other quite venomous species, even though she did not see the spider.

If it was indeed a Recluse, it may have come here in a truck, moving van or even a personal car. But we will never know for sure because the biting animal was not collected and positively identified.

There are several other cases. Carol Davenport, Island Water Association chairman, another possible Recluse victim, found her experience most unpleasant. Her symptoms were those of loxoscelism.

Barbara Jones of Captiva had her hand in a bag of wood chips when something bit her left wrist. Six quarter-inch red marks appeared and caused arm swelling, and each eventually grew to a half-inch in diameter.

Jones told me that it was a most unpleasant and painful experience. Her doctor administered penicillin and required her to immobilize the arm in a sling for some six weeks. It was an unforgettable and "messy" situation.

Another Captiva resident, Jane Morgan, was bitten on at least six different occasions during a period when she was working near and frequently entering a tool shed. This was a couple of years ago.

Her symptoms were serious and like those of loxoscelism, with necrotic tissue and deep craters. Several times large quantities (half-cup) of pus-like fluid were drained from grapefruit-sized swollen areas.

Dick Noon of the Sanibel Police Department suffered his bite in 1973, but he spoke of it as though it were only yesterday. He had been working with well pipes, and if his bite took place among the pipes, as he suspects, disagreeable symptoms were delayed until the next day and were systemic. This delay is characteristic of loxoscelism.

By evening of the next day, Noon was "really in trouble." The whole affected calf swelled. The bite site was swollen to grapefruit size and was very red -- with a white center. It was very painful, and eventually the hard core began to slough off and would not heal for at least two weeks. The back of his calf eventually healed and no scar is visible today.

Noon and his doctor believed the bite to be either Widow or Recluse. I believe it may be the latter or possibly Chiracanthium species. The delayed reaction is not characteristic of Widow envenomation.

It is certainly possible that L. laeta, L. gaucho, L. rufescens or other forms -- even L. reclusa -- could be here and causing the above-described problems.

Spiders of the genera Chiracanthium and Aysha are also possibilities. There is no proof that native forms cause symptoms like those of loxoscelism, but one European relative, Chiracanthium mildei, now established in North America, does and may have become naturalized on Sanibel.

After a year's search I have still to find any known dangerously venomous spider on Sanibel other than the Black Widow, Latrodectus mactans, which is not at all uncommon.

large crater that sometimes requires surgical repair or skin grafting. Such a crater may be one-half to one inch in diameter.

General severe pain of the affected limb may develop as well as vomiting, malaise, escape of hemoglobin from the red cells (hemolysis) and reduction in numbers of blood platelets (thrombocytopenia).

In proved cases of loxoscelism it is recommended that the bitten area be excised, but only if treatment starts within several hours of envenomation. Corticosteroids are employed early on, but too often a victim does not present himself for treatment until several days have passed and the lesion is well developed. In such cases corticosteroids are of little value. The developing ulcer should be cleansed with peroxide and dressed frequently.

A new treatment, which funnily enough employs some old remedies, consists of an aqueous triple dye solution of gentian violet, brilliant green and acriflavine. Scarlet ointment -- a real golden oldie! -- may be employed along with antibiotics.

These "new" treatments are also now used for pit-viper (for Sanibel, read rattlesnake) bites. An innovative

It seems that so far all victims of serious spider bites have failed to collect specimens or, in fact, never even saw the offending creature.

If you are ever bitten by any small creature, it is desirable to collect the specimen. Any bottle or vial will do. If the specimen is dead, be sure to add a splash of gin, vodka or medicinal alcohol. Or pick it up in a wad of tissue and put the whole in a plastic bag, dampening it with a shot of any alcohol.

Try to make sure the specimen is available should it be needed by medical personnel for identification. A good ID can give the physician necessary clues so proper treatment can be initiated promptly.

Dr. Halabis emphasizes that a spider bite victim should not walk or otherwise exercise because any such activity will cause the venom to circulate faster in the system. Application of ice might slow down the dispersal of venom, he says.

To sum up: loxoscelism is a morbid or diseased condition that results from the bite of the Brown Recluse or Violin Spider, Loxosceles reclusa. Chiracanthium mildei causes similar symptoms as do possibly others of that genus like C. inclusum.

Loxoscelism begins with a bite that may or may not be painful and is followed by a painful erythematous ring-shaped vesicle, which is a red-colored raised area caused by congestion of neighboring capillaries. It then progresses to a gangrenous dry, black slough.

A sometimes fatal condition is called viscerocutaneous loxoscelism. Like the above, it is, in addition, even more systemic with fever, general rash and hematuria or bloody urine.

Little annoyance or pain may be present at the moment a Recluse bites. But after an hour or two, localized pain sets in and the swelling and erythematous ring condition ensues. Inside the "red ring" an ischemic or blood-deficient white ring develops, making the whole appear like a "bullseye," as it is called in medical jargon.

Eventually the lesion might rupture and the resultant growing ulcer might invade deeper tissue -- even into layers of muscle.

In due course the dark slough of dead tissue (eschar) will form and eventually break away, often leaving a treatment, suggesting the desirability of oxidizing the venom, is to apply oxygen gas to the affected area by means of a plastic sleeve or bag fed by a tube of oxygen gas under modest pressure.

Recluse venom is more active than that of the Black Widow. It contains seven or eight toxic proteins, no one of which has been isolated and proved to cause the necrotic lesion described above. Rather the lesion may somehow result from the interaction of all or several of the components of the venom.

The accompanying illustrations should enable one to identify the tawny-colored Brown Recluse and positively distinguish it from the Black Widow.

Note the fiddle-shaped marking on the Recluse's "head" end or cephalothorax -- hence the alternate common name, Violin Spider. The cephalothorax is about an eighth of an inch in diameter. The abdomen is a quarter-inch long at most, while the reddish brown legs are about three-eighths of an inch long. Young animals have pale legs, yellowish in color. Legs are covered by fine hairs and some rows of erect larger hairs.

A good identification aid consists of the three pairs of eyes on the front of the cephalothorax as contrasted with most other spiders, which have eight eyes.

If you encounter what you suspect to be Brown Recluse, do preserve it for positive identification. Once and for all, I for one would like to know if it is really found on Sanibel. Failing that, I would like to know the positive identity of the spiders that are causing more than a little trouble here.

Postscript

Since finishing the above, a spider has bitten a visitor at one of our beach motels. It bit him five or six times and made him "very sick." The offending spider was collected and turned out to be our neat little Gasteracantha, a common orb weaver with a hard abdomen armed with spines. I have called this the Orb Weaving Crab Spider. I do not believe bites of this spider are as dangerous as those discussed in the body of this piece.

Lee County forester gives Tuesday program on prescribed burns

Lee County Forester David Fox will be at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation today to discuss Prescribed Burns and Their Uses as part of the foundation's Tuesday at the Center lecture series.

Prescribed burns have been used on foundation property when wholesale invasion by exotic species of the property has warranted the burns.

In competent hands, prescribed burns have proven themselves extremely successful in eradicating high concentrations of such exotics as melaleuca and Brazilian pepper, setting the stage for natural re-seeding by more desirable native vegetation.

A native of Ohio, Fox was first employed by the U.S. Forest Service in the Francis Marion National Forest near Charleston, S.C. He has since worked for the Florida Division of Forestry and was stationed initially in Blountstown as a pine initiative forester selling forest investment.

He is presently stationed in Lee County as an urban forester. A geology graduate of Thiel College in Greenville, Penn., Fox also holds a master's degree in forestry from North Carolina's Duke University.

His lecture will begin at 2 p.m. at the SCCF center on Sanibel-Captiva Road. General admission for non-foundation members is $1 for adults and .50 for children. For details call foundation manager Steve Phillips, 472-2329.

Next week's lecture, White-tailed Deer, will be presented by Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission Wildlife Officer David Palanzi.

Foundation manager discusses snakes, lizards

By George Campbell

Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Manager Steve Phillips delivered an informative and well attended lecture for the foundation's Jan. 25 Tuesday the Center program. More than 15 snake species, 16 turtle and tortoise species, three crocodilians, nine lizards and numerous frogs were the subject of his discussion.

Sanibel is especially well endowed with a rich herpetofauna, as these animals are collectively called. Phillips cited the disappearance or decline of some species and the exuberant increase of others.

Illustrative of this he mentioned the serious decline of the Green Tree Frog, a Sanibel jewel of yesteryear. Still present in small numbers, this once plentiful species has declined due to salt water intrusion and other environmental destruction. Also contributing to the Green Tree Frog's decline is the presence of the much larger alien Cuban Tree Frog, which eats our native forms. Automobile traffic has also taken its toll on the Green Tree Frog, Phillips added.

The rare and endangered narrow-snouted toothy Florida Crocodile, although present on Sanibel, is seldom seen, being known from only two or three specimens. By contrast, there are several hundred American Alligators -- broad-snouted and less toothy -- on the Island, Phillips said.

A good distinguishing field mark of the American Alligator, he added, is the closed-mouth appearance of the teeth. In the gator, only the teeth of the upper jaw are visible. In the crocodile, however, both upper and lower teeth are readily seen, making the crocodile appear more toothy.

Phillips discussed the two dangerously venomous snakes of Sanibel at length -- the rare and seldom seen Eastern Diamondback Rattlesnake and the common but also seldom seen Eastern Coral Snake.

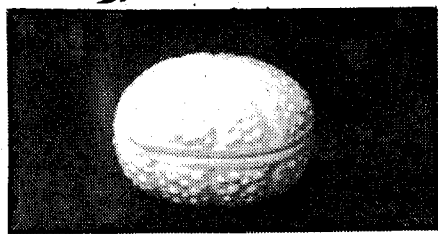

The former occasionally drifts down the Caloosahatchee River on debris and lands on Sanibel or the Causeway islands. There may be some old Diamondback Rattlers around, too.

The Coral Snake, although common, is a secretive, burrowing animal and is hard to find. Because of its small size it seldom offers any problem, but this relative of the cobras does have a powerful neurotoxic venom. The Rattlesnake venom is hemotoxic.

Phillips wound up his fascinating session by displaying a number of confiscated reptile leather products, including a $475 turtle skin wallet. After the lecture a number of live snakes were available for examination.

Winter programs help visitors understand refuge operations

The program schedule for the 1983 winter season at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge has been set to help the more than 160,000 visitors who normally tour the refuge between February and April understand what the refuge does to manage wildlife. The following programs will be given through Saturday, April 16:

Orientation slide program -- At 9 a.m., 1 p.m. and 3 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays at the Visitor Contact Station auditorium.

Wildlife talks -- At 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Wednesdays and Saturdays at the observation tower on Wildlife Drive. At 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. on Fridays at the boardwalk on Wildlife Drive. Subjects will vary.

No sign-ups are required for either program. The five-mile Wildlife Drive, walking trails and the two canoe trails on the refuge are open to the public seven days a week from sunrise to sunset. Wildlife observation is best at sunrise, sunset and at low tides.

The Visitor Center Contact Station off Sanibel-Captiva Road is open from 8 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. Monday through Friday. Anyone with questions is encouraged to visit the center or call 472-1100.

CROW elects new officers

At a recent meeting of the organization's board of directors, Adellaide Charbonnier was re-elected to the position of president of Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife.

Maxine Michl replaced Dr. Phyllis Douglass as first vice-president. Because of pressures from her veterinary practice, Douglass said she had to resign from her position as an officer. But she will remain active on the CROW board.

In addition to her board activities, Douglass volunteers time to CROW pro bono publico treating injured wildlife.

Other officers elected to the board include Barbara Toomey, second vice president; and Dr. K.C. Emerson, third vice president. Mary Lee will retain her position as treasurer. Helen Webb accepted the nomination and was elected to the position of secretary.

The board accepted the report and recommendations of Elijah Camp, chairman of the Bylaws Committee, and adopted a revision of the bylaws that became effective Jan. 5.

An annual meeting is scheduled for March 1983, at which time all CROW members will have an opportunity to participate.

Anyone wishing to join CROW can do so with a minimum donation of $10. For more information about the organization call 472-3644 or write to P.O. Box 150, Sanibel 33957. All donations to CROW are income tax deductible.

'Eagle Lady' returns to Island for encore

By David Meardon

As part of the ongoing celebration of the 200th anniversary of the bald eagle as the nation's symbol, "Eagle Lady" Doris Mager will lead an encore eight-mile walk through the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge this Saturday, Feb. 5.

Young and old alike are invited to participate in the walk or to sponsor walkers on a per mile basis. Last June 20 walkers on Sanibel braved a searing sun and biting insects to raise more than $400, which benefitted the Florida Conservation Foundation's raptor research and education program, which Mager heads. She led similar walks in 15 Florida communities last summer, covering 200 kilometers.

Mager has spent much of her life working to improve the plight of raptors. Over the past 20 years she has rehabilitated hundreds of birds of prey, including 45 eagles.

In 1979 Mager garnered national attention by staging a "nest sit-in," spending seven days and six nights in an abandoned eagle's nest in an effort to draw attention to the plight of the bald eagle.

Mager will bring a bald eagle to Sanibel and plans to show it to elementary school students the day before the walk and to walkers at the end of the eight-mile trek.

Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation Manager Steve Phillips says he hopes to double participation and pledges this year.

The first 50 finishers in the walk will earn a signed bald eagle print donated by artist Lew Phillips. The top pledge-getter will receive a framed Florida bald eagle print, a limited edition signed by artist Richard Younger and valued at over $200. Second and third prizes are a bicentennial eagle print by artist Guy Coheleach.

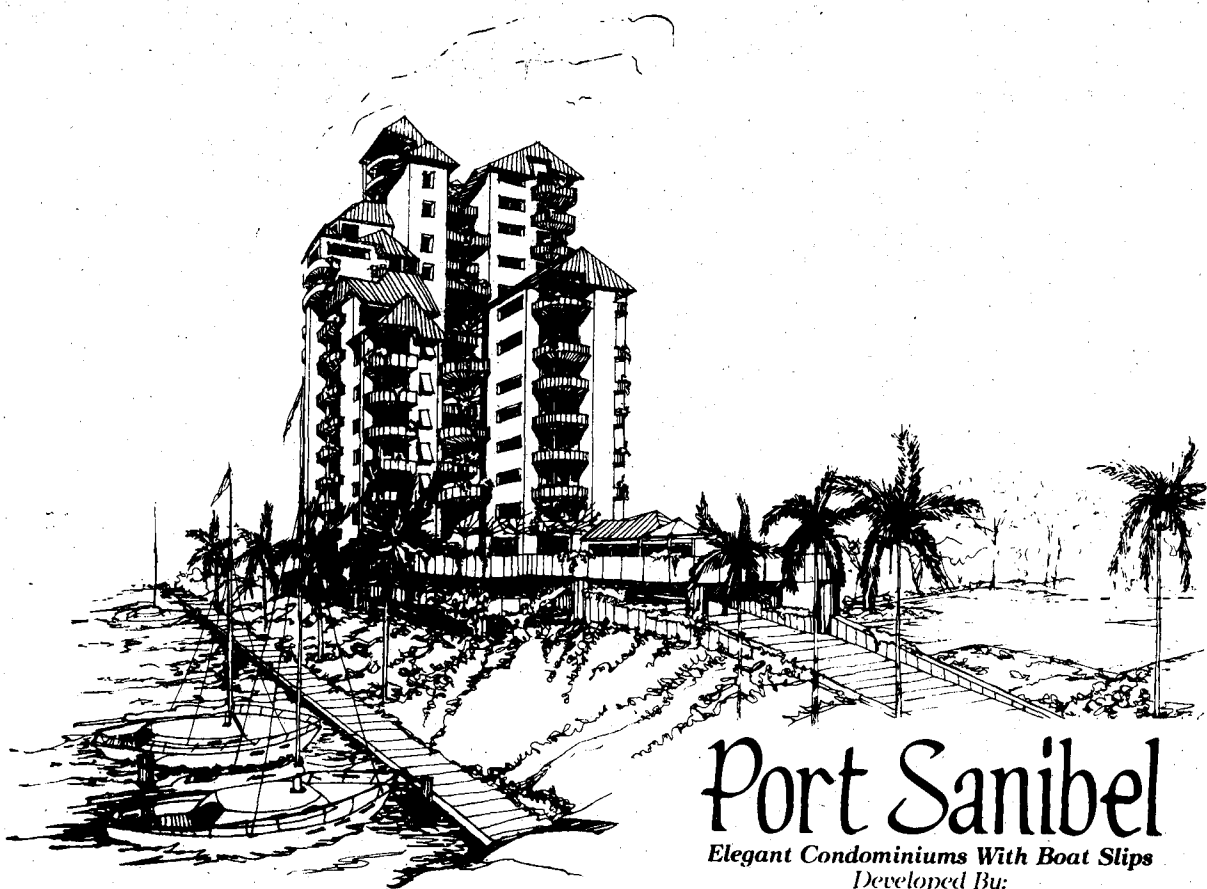

Registration for the eagle walk starts at 7 a.m. at the Ding Darling Visitor Center on Feb. 5. The walk will begin at 8 a.m. The entry fee is $1, and each walker will receive a bald eagle guardian pin and identification card. There will be checkpoints and refreshments at each mile.

Mager will lead the walk through the refuge and back to the Visitor Center via the bike path on San-Cap Road.

In addition to Mager and other walkers who participate, pledgers will have an opportunity to sponsor the following Sanibel "celebrity" walkers who have already signed up for the event: Holly Davies, Bill Hagerup, Louise Johnson, Mike Klein, Charles LeBuff, Dick Noon, Steve Phillips, Mark "Bird" Westall and George Weymouth. For more information, contact Phillips, 472-2329.

The eagle walk on Sanibel is sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, SCCF and The International Osprey Foundation.

Fitness Caper registration starts for April program

More than 250 women have participated in the past six Captiva Fitness Capers that has become a regular spring and fall event at Tween Waters Inn.

Registration is underway for this spring's seventh fitness caper, which will be divided into two sessions beginning April 18 and April 27. Previous caper participants or those who are new to the plan are invited to one or both of the week-long sessions.

Coordinator Boots Freeman says the caper has evolved from one that is strictly fitness oriented to one that focuses more on behavior modification. This spring's sessions will include daily poolside discussions on problem eating awareness led by Sanibel winter resident Elaine Walker.

Walker promotes recovery programs for alcohol and drug dependent individuals and their families in Minneapolis, Minn., where she is involved with the Walker Residence and Walker Health Care Center and Foundation.

Cost of the Captiva Fitness Caper is $497 per week per person for double occupancy accommodations and meals at Tween Waters Inn. Single occupancy is $616. The program is $343 without room and meals.

For more information call Tween Waters, 472-5161, or Freeman, 472-2426.

Episcopal church

plans prayer breakfast

St. Michael and All Angels' Episcopal Church will hold its ninth prayer breakfast on Saturday morning, Feb. 12.

The featured speaker will be the Rev. Richard Holloway, one of the foremost teachers and preachers of the Episcopal Church. Holloway is the rector of the Church of the Advent in Boston, Mass. He was formerly the rector of Old St. Paul's Church in Edinburgh, Scotland.

He was educated at Union Theological Seminary in New York. He regularly broadcast for the BBC and is the author of several books, including Let God Arise, New Vision of Glory, A New Heaven and Beyond Belief.

Everyone is invited to the prayer breakfast beginning at 8 a.m. next Saturday, Feb. 12, at the church on Periwinkle Way.

Community association announces winter schedule

Because of the Tuesday night Bingo games, the monthly meetings of the Sanibel Community Association have been moved to the second Wednesday of each month for the winter season.

The next meeting of the season will take place at 6:30 p.m. next Wednesday, Feb. 9, at the Community Association hall. This year's programs are as follows:

Feb. 9 -- Scottish Bag Pipers -- This is a replay of the program of piping, singing and marching that proved so popular at the association last year.

March 16 -- Shell Show week -- No membership meeting.

April 13 -- Sanibel Police Chief John Butler.

The community association board of directors monthly meeting will be held on the fourth Wednesday of every month for the 1983 season.

St. Michaels adds Saturday service

A Saturday evening Holy Eucharist service has been added to the regular services at St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church for the winter season.

The 5:30 p.m. service will continue each Saturday through April. All are welcome.

Common Visions presents poetry

Common Visions, a group for the arts, will present an evening of poetry by Island artists on Monday, Feb. 11, at 7:30 p.m. at the Captiva Community Center.

Admission and refreshments will be free. Contribute your work by calling Terri or Tori, 472-4373, before Monday, Feb. 7.

Sign up now for shell show hospitality team

The first five members of the Sanibel Shell Show Hospitality Team have signed up for their duties during the March 3-6 show. Audrey Ritchie, Helen and Stanley Beck, Doris Platt and Jeannette Smith were the first to offer their hospitality.

A time schedule has been placed in the Sanibel Public Library on Palm Ridge Road and will be there until next Wednesday, Feb. 9, for those who want to serve on the committee.

If you enjoy meeting people, welcoming visitors and wearing your happiest face, then sign up today. If you do, you can pick the times you prefer to offer Sanibel's gracious hospitality and play a key role in the exciting and glamorous "Tiffany" of shell shows.

Chief host and hostess, Rolland and Charlene McMurphy, will appreciate your offers to serve in this important capacity. For information call the McMurphys, 472-5556.

Unitarian-Universalist discussion group plans meeting Feb. 6

The February meeting of the Sanibel-Captiva Unitarian-Universalist Discussion Group will be held at the Sanibel Community Center this Sunday, Feb. 6, at 7:30 p.m.

The topic Life Values and Suicide will be moderated by the Rev. Jack Zoerheide, minister of the Fort Myers Unitarian-Universalist Church.

The group is open to all interested visitors. Winter visitors are especially welcome. For information or transportation call Helen Walther, 472-3905.

Cross stitch on anything from page 11B

Cotton, color-fast, embroidery floss is used. It's washable and inexpensive and has a broad color range. The number of strands used depends upon the size of the canvas mesh (number of squares per inch). Smaller mesh is good for detail work on children's clothing, shirts, napkins and handkerchiefs.

By the way, waste canvas does not limit you to cross-stitching only. Any embroidery or needlepoint stitch will work as long as you don't split a canvas thread. Backstitching is commonly used to outline a design.

If you do not like to count stitches from a graph, draw directly onto the canvas (using pens with ink that don't run when dampened). Baste the canvas to your project. Cross stitch, needlepoint or do any stitch through canvas and project. Then dampen and pull out the waste canvas.

If you have any questions, stop in at Idle Hours in Periwinkle Place.

P.S. Last call for the elusive "Condominium Sweater" directions, rumored to be quick, easy, and economical. Bring the instructions into the shop for a free skein of yarn.

Nature guides

Griffing Bancroft 472-1447

Offering bird tours of the islands commencing at dawn. The tours start at the Island Cinema in the Island Shopping Center and last approximately three hours. $10 per person, with a minimum of three people. For more information, reservations and exact times call the MacIntosh Book Store at the above number.

Capt. Ralph Bartholomew 472-5277

Offering aquatic nature tours through the waterways of Sanibel, Captiva, upper Captiva and Cayo Costa with lunch at Cabbage Key. Participants may also go for nature walks on barrier islands if they choose. Participants have a choice aboard either a 34-foot cruiser or a 24-foot open fisherman with high freeboard. Call for reservations and details.

Mark "Bird" Westall 472-5218

Offering a choice of canoe trips on the Sanibel River, through the Wildlife Refuge or to Buck Key. Trips last approximately 2 1/2 to 3 hours. $20 per person. Inquire about discounts when calling for reservations and information.

George Campbell 472-2180

Offering two natural history field trips - one by land and one by sea. The land trip is on Tuesdays and Thursdays and takes interested persons through Sanibel's wildlife habitats. The four-hour trip costs $10 per person. No reservations are necessary. Simply meet at 8 a.m. sharp on any Tuesday or Thursday at the recreation complex next to the Sanibel Elementary School on Sanibel-Captiva Road. The aquatic field trip to Cabbage Key and Cayo Costa is by special arrangement in the summer and includes breakfast at Cabbage Key, a walk across Cayo Costa and a visit to an embryonic barrier island. Specific dates for the 1983 winter trips are Jan. 21; Feb. 11, 18 and 25; March 4, 11, 18 and 25; and April 1 and 8.

Charles LeBuff Caretta Research, Inc. 472-3177

An introduction to Sanibel's beach by walks led by Charles LeBuff on Saturday and Sunday mornings. Learn about Sanibel's history, beach dynamics, shell and interesting marine life. Call for information and reservations. Proceeds go toward sea turtle conservation on the islands.

Capt. Dick Frieman 472-1315

Offering nature adventures since 1970 to North Captiva and Cayo Costa, with lunch at Cabbage Key. Departure time is 9:30 a.m., return at 3:30 p.m. Call for reservations and information.

George Weymouth 472-4600

Shopping

Sanibel is a veritable shopper's paradise. Tasteful boutiques and casual island shops join forces to present visitors with everything and anything a vacation shopper could want or need.

Most island shops are open from 10 a.m. to 5:30 p.m., although are open evenings during winter season.

At the Lighthouse (eastern) end of the island are Punta Ybel Plaza and the Sea Horse Shops, which provide a variety of products that can cure your sweet tooth or tickle your shell finder's fancy. Need a good haircut or coiffure? You can get it in either of these shopping centers.

Tall Australian Pines shade Periwinkle Way, Sanibel's main thoroughfare. It's all here on this stretch of road -- the fast and not-so-fast eating spots, casual and elegant boutiques, hand-wrought jewelry, craft designs, shell shops and balms for health product fanatics.

Watch to your right and left as you drive or cycle along. Photographic supplies, bait and tackle, deli foods, fresh seafood and baked goods, knick-knacks and what-nots all can be found along the drive to the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road.

Along the way, shopping centers such as the Heart of the Islands, Periwinkle Place and Tahitian Gardens offer a variety of island delights.

Palm Ridge Road, the Periwinkle Way turn-off to Captiva, offers several shopping centers featuring everything from imports to gift shops for the discriminating shopper, plants and shells, delis, a pizza parlor, boutique shop and the Island Apothecary pharmacy.

At the Tarpon Bay Road-Periwinkle Way intersection the Island Shopping Center features the island's only supermarket and movie house.

A left on Tarpon Bay Road takes shoppers past Sanibel's original schoolhouse, which now holds original island watercolors and woodcuts.

Then on to West Gulf Drive and westward to an interesting little artisan shop and gallery.

At the intersection of Periwinkle Way and Tarpon Bay Road you can choose instead to turn right and follow the signs to the Tarpon Bay marina, where you will find a cluster of quaint shops overlooking the back bay. Some antiques, shells and shellcrafts, what-nots and clever clothes can be found here, as well as a great seafood sandwich and soft drinks.

The ride to Captiva with its lush foliage and enchanting view of the Gulf is well worth a day's outing. Talented artists display their works in one roadside shop, while other shops feature nifty gifts for Grandma to take home to little hands as a pleasant hodge-podge of remembrances from these barrier islands.

Whether for shopping or merely browsing, island shops offer a surprising variety from one-of-a-kind collectibles for the discerning shopper to postcards for the simple souvenir hunter.

Refuge Advisory Committee meets with interim manager

By George Campbell

J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge interim manager Bob Ziobro met with the Refuge Advisory Committee under the chairmanship of Dr. K.C. Emerson on Jan. 26. Ziobro discussed a number of projects and problems at the refuge.

Co-op student Bonnie Bell from Louisiana State University, who will be on the refuge staff at least until May, was introduced to the committee. She has had interesting experiences with endangered species in Puerto Rico that will be useful on Sanibel considering our Island's number of endangered species.

The firm in charge of the "Ding" Darling exhibits, Wilderness Graphics, has been accumulating specimens for the exhibits. Many have been located, often from road kills. The committee was assured that in no case were animals killed for the displays.

Anis and Mangrove Cuckoos are still needed for the exhibits, as are a few other wildlife forms. Should any apparently valuable specimens be seen, notify Emerson or Chris Olsen at the refuge, 472-1100.

Olsen has selected the titles for the book list that will be stocked in the refuge shop that will be manned by the Cooperative Association.

An energy audit of the Visitors Contact Center building has been accomplished. Leaks, air conditioning and heaters were examined and all will be put in order. The heating system already functions adequately.

The refuge tractor is down for repairs. Damage to good specimen trees because of careless mowing with heavy equipment was also cited. Viewing "window" pruning techniques were discussed, as was the "pruning up" of Buttonwood Mangrove trees.

Pruning of low branches and understory allows for better viewing windows than does cutting down entire trees. Lorimer Moe, who represents the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society on the committee, mentioned the need for good viewing sites because the refuge offers a great opportunity to create friends for conservation by making the public welcome and satisfying the need to view the wildlife of the refuge. However, such a facility should be provided without destruction, accidental or intentional, of valuable native vegetation.

The solar powered travelers information system on the Wildlife Drive does not work. These devices are supposed to broadcast refuge information on a wavelength that can be picked up on car radios. Electronic failure of the day-night automatic switch-off mechanism is apparently the problem.

The new permanent manager for the refuge probably will be named in the next few weeks but will not resume duties on Sanibel until mid-April at the earliest.

Steve Phillips, who represents the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation on the committee, opened discussion of the planned Feb. 5 Bald Eagle Walk. Famed "Eagle Lady" Doris Mager will lead the fund-raising eight-mile walk. All are welcome to join. For information call Phillips, 472-2329.

Mrs. Charles Krausse, representing the Anglers' Association, offered to raise more money for vegetation acquisition. Emerson gratefully accepted the offer on the behalf of all concerned.

The incident in which a television reporter allegedly fed an alligator on the refuge grounds was discussed by CONA representative Dr. Calvin Brown. Although WINK-TV personnel have been approached for an explanation of the incident, none has been received. A further effort to discuss the issue will be made.

The next meeting of the Refuge Advisory Committee will be held at 9 a.m. on Wednesday, Feb. 23.

Foundation prints guide for anglers

Anglers who can't distinguish a snook from a grouper or a foot from an inch will never have to guess about their catch again, thanks to an innovative ruler recently introduced by the Natural Resources Foundation.

Dubbed The Boat Sticker, this handy little ruler contains accurate line drawings of the 12 most popular saltwater sport fish found near Sanibel and Captiva.

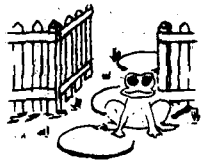

The sticker contains legal information about the size and catch limits as well as open and closed seasons for various species to aid both local and visiting fishermen.

Also found on the Boat Sticker is a list of radio frequencies and telephone numbers for emergency aid and rescue organizations, law enforcement agencies and fish and wildlife conservation agencies.

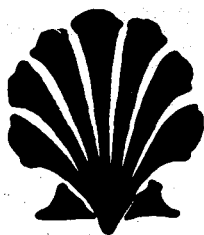

Water resistant and of a thickness meant to endure the saltiest seas, the Boat Sticker is available in two formats (one with peel-off vinyl, one backed with pressure-sensitive mylar) through Natural Resources Foundation President Dinesh Sharma. They can be applied easily and permanently on a boat, camper, automobile or any flat surface.

Anglers who would like the ready-to-use ruler should send $1 and a self-addressed stamped envelope to 2750 Rhode Island Ave., Fort Myers, FL 33901.

Glassblower, painter share gallery billing

Prism lovers will be captivated by the Schoolhouse Gallery's upcoming exhibit of handblown glass by local artist Don Hayes.

The exhibit, which opens this Sunday, Feb. 6, will contain recent works by Sanibel's only glassblower who, according to gallery owner Fred Fox, "brings the medium to life, allowing the glass to display its own unique properties of life and movement."

Hayes will share double billing at the opening reception from 5 to 8 p.m. Sunday with Fort Myers artist Tom Bond, whose dynamic watercolors will also be on display through early March.

Known for painting an exceptionally broad range of subjects, Bond philosophizes that the artist should enjoy the ability to express any subject that inspires him rather than limit himself in any way.

Both artists began exploring their respective creative fields at about the same time, in the early 1970's, and have since gained tremendous respect and notoriety through their single-mindedness in pursuing careers in the art world.

Hayes, who will display some of his unusually true-to-life shell forms and mobile tektites, which play with the refraction of light, says, "My forms cannot be merely individual and unique; they must be simple and clean pieces that not only capture the imagination, but also show the nature of the glass itself in its magic and excitement."

A former assistant to glass master Harvey Littleton, Hayes was honored as artist-in-residence at Wisconsin's Peninsula School of Arts early in his career and later explored the southern United States with solo exhibits. In Arkansas he received no less than 15 special mentions and awards in two years.

Today Hayes has an enormous outdoor studio at his home on Sanibel-Captiva Road and is represented throughout the year at Schoolhouse Gallery.

Washington, D.C., native Tom Bond began his career as a poster artist for a store chain in his hometown. Then he took a position with various departments of the Federal Government designing and illustrating books, brochures and magazines for the Army, Navy and Air Force.

When he discovered he had a ready-made market for his watercolors, Bond began pursuing a full-time career as an artist. One-man and juried exhibitions throughout the southeast have added many awards and credits to his name since.

Schoolhouse Gallery owner Fred Fox cordially invites all Islanders to attend the opening reception for Hayes and Bond this Sunday. Wine and cheese will be served, and both artists will be present to answer all patrons' questions.

Library fair opens month of arts for Islands

The Sanibel Public Library has put out an APB for Sanibel and Captiva artists who would like to exhibit paintings at this weekend's Sanibel Library Arts and Crafts Fair.

All works should have been completed within the last two years and will be offered for sale at the show with 20 percent of sales benefitting the library.

Artists can bring their paintings to the Sanibel Community Association hall between 10 a.m. and noon on Wednesday, Feb. 3. Each artist will be limited to eight entries, three of which should be framed and suitable for hanging. The remaining five can be unframed but should be shrink wrapped for hanging or placement in bins.

For more information contact Harriet Sagers, 472-3949.

Local fiberartists Polly Matsumoto and Anita Amodeo begin their final series of craft classes for the 1983 winter season this month. Each class is complete in one day, and all materials are provided for in the workshop fee.

The schedule is as follows: Wash Basket -- Thursday, Feb. 10; Melon Basket -- Thursday, Feb. 17; Hearth Basket -- Thursday, Feb. 24; Potato Basket -- Thursday, March 10; Hen Basket -- Thursday, March 17; Garlic Basket and Handmade Paper -- Thursday, March 24; and Triangular Shawl -- Monday, March 28. An oval picnic basket class will be taught, but no date had been selected at press time.

For more information and registration call Amodeo, 481-1964.

Still Life Watercolor Workshops will be the focus of the Sanibel-Captiva Art League activities during February, when art league members meet for three consecutive weeks to learn from veteran art teacher and fellow Islander Marguerite McDonald.

McDonald has taught art classes from kindergarten through adult levels and is most recently known for her instruction at the Sanibel Resources Center and for supervision of two art league workshops in basic drawing.

The former Pennsylvania resident taught art prior to her arrival on Sanibel and was instrumental in both high school courses in Beaver, Pa., and university courses at

She holds a bachelor's degree in art education from Edinboro State College and graduate work at Pennsylvania State College.

This year's art league workshop will be expanded to include watercolor. The workshop will be held on Feb. 10, 17 and 24 from 9 a.m. to noon at the Sanibel Community Center and will be open to all art league members free of charge.

Non-members who would like to participate in the workshop can join the art league by sending $10 to Ruth Fox, 714 Durion Court, Sanibel.

All workshop participants should bring water color materials including paper and sketching paper and pencils. For more information call 472-4232.

Southwest Florida will be represented this weekend at the Fort Myers Exhibition Hall when the Edison Porcelain Artists host the annual China Show and Tea.

The exhibit on Saturday, Feb. 5 from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

will cost $1 and will treat visitors to porcelain decoration demonstrations and antique hand-painted china as well as sale and display pieces. China painting supplies will be available for purchase as well.

At least 60 hand-painted items will be given away as door prizes throughout the show, and special drawings of large, hand-painted pieces will be held to benefit Lee Area Retarded Citizens.

Refreshments will also be served.

The Lee County Alliance of the Arts has scheduled a series of winter classes with creative Islanders in mind.

Beginning today instruction in painting, photography, quilting, weaving, calligraphy, color design, needlework, basketry and floral design will be available at the McGregor Boulevard center in Fort Myers.

Guitar, ballet and jazz classes will also be offered along with courses in music appreciation and opera.

Classes will last for two months. If you would like to see an additional class, workshop or activity on the agenda, let the arts center staff know. For information call 939-2787.

An opening reception for the Florida Artist Group Area VII will be held this Sunday, Feb. 6, from 1 to 3 p.m. at the Cape Coral Arts Studio featuring work from Lee, Collier, Hendry and Charlotte counties.

The exhibit will remain open through Feb. 25 and will be representative of works by members of the prestigious state-wide organization of professional artists encompassing the fine arts in all media. The vast variety of work will fall into the painting category, though many different styles and media will be displayed.

The Cape Coral Arts Studio at 4533 Coronado Parkway is a non-profit facility of the Cape Coral Parks and Recreation Department. Public viewing hours are from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Thursday and from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday. For more information call 542-7714.

Cross stitch on anything with pull-away canvas

By Barbara Boulton

In previous articles I have mentioned, even though most needleworkers already know, that counted cross stitch has become very popular.

By using charted designs the needleworker makes a cross stitch on a special even-weave fabric to correspond to the symbols on the graph.

The "special even-weave fabric" needed for this hobby sometimes inhibits the stitcher. Waste canvas, or pull-away or tear-away canvas, makes it possible to cross stitch a design on anything you can stick a needle through.

When the canvas is basted onto a fabric (such as an article of clothing), it provides an evenly spaced grid. Cross stitches are worked through both the canvas and the fabric at the same time.

After the embroidery is completed, the canvas is dampened and becomes limp. Its threads are pulled out one by one and discarded as waste, leaving only the evenly worked stitches on the surface of the fabric.

Waste canvas is sold in different sizes and looks very much like needlepoint canvas. The difference between the two, however, is critical. The weave of waste canvas is made strong and stiff with a sizing solution. When the sizing is wet it dissolves, and the canvas weakens and becomes flimsy. Don't use it for needlepoint projects; waste canvas must be stitched to a fabric with body.

Knit fabrics in t-shirts and sweat shirts work well with waste canvas. I have found it necessary to use a hoop after the waste canvas is basted on the material to keep the stitches even. Plain bath towels and mats work well with large mesh waste.

1983 library fair promises more than ever

By Carol Kranichfeld

More than 1,000 tickets were sold to last year's Sanibel Library Arts and Crafts Fair Raffle, but this year Islanders are placing their bets that the 1,000 mark has already been topped.

The fair, which has become one of the Island's favorite annual events, has come a long way since its inception in 1972, when then-librarian Harriett Howe chaired a committee of five to run the fair's activities.

Visitors to the 1983 Sanibel Library Arts and Crafts Fair will be fascinated by the unusual demonstrations presented by local artisans all weekend, including centuries-old wool and flax wheel spinning by Margaret and Frank Tranter to typical Island palm frond weavings by Mary Wegmuller.

Silk painting nonpareil will be demonstrated by Islander Lahja Tishler, and artisan Bob Dugger will compliment Tishler's works with china paintings of sea shells and hibiscus flowers. The deft brush strokes of their talented hands will enthrall watchers, and a wide variety of their works will be represented.

Gleaming copper bowls and great metal birds will be pounded into shape by metalsmith Bill Ives, and wood carvings will be demonstrated by Danish McGurl, whose array of the tools of their trade is worth the visit alone.

Nancy Wierman will set up a booth to show quilted tote bag construction, a precision craft handed down from generation to generation in American history. Needlecrafters should not miss this clever and relatively simple method of making lovely and useful quilted bags.

Tinsmith Davie Owen and potter Duey Liber will also demonstrate their talents.

The Nantucket basket purse will be made by Stan Knight, an expert in this exacting craft in which the finest of cane strands are woven around wooden skeletons for an almost watertight basket, beautifully shaped and of featherweight. Finally furnished with a hinged lid and ivory fittings, the purse is a work of art.

The fair will be held on the grounds of the Sanibel Community Center from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. both Friday and Saturday. Tables will be stocked with books, magazines and more for sale. But hurry -- the best is snatched up early because the prices are always right.

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Christian women celebrate birthday

Color Me Perfect will be the theme of the Sanibel-Captiva Christian Women's Club meeting on Thursday, Feb. 10.

The meeting will celebrate the club's fifth birthday on Sanibel and Captiva. The luncheon will be held at the Sundial resort from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. The cost will be $6.75. All visitors and residents will be warmly welcomed.

An interesting special feature will be presented by Darcie Spruance of Fort Myers, who will do a color analysis demonstration and give tips on wardrobe planning.

Jean Haynes from Dunedin, Fla., will be the guest speaker. The actress and drama instructor is married to a doctor and has four children.

Musical entertainment for this special occasion will be provided by Lee Roy Friday, former owner of Friday's Creative Jewelry shop on Sanibel. His accompanist will be Olive Ritter of Sanibel.

Reservations are necessary. If you are not contacted by Feb. 3, call Audrey, 481-1864, or Irva Cain, 472-4275. Free babysitting service is available by registering with Ruth Rau, 472-1218.

If you find you cannot attend after making reservations, please call Audrey, 481-1864.

Girl Scouts meet Thursday at Children's Center

Girl Scout Troop 81, the "Sanibel Sunflowers," will meet this Thursday, Feb. 3, from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the Children's Center of the Islands.

Parents are invited to attend badge presentations at 8 p.m. and should be prepared to take cookies home. Scouts should bring their badge books.

Deadline nears for entering Shell Show

Entry forms for the 1983 Sanibel Shell Show can be obtained in any of Sanibel's super shell shops.

The Exhibits Committee urges all who are interested in competing for the many prestigious awards to send in completed forms as soon as possible. Space in both the Scientific and Artistic Division is limited and entries are pouring in.

For information call Dorothy Putnam, 472-2320.

Artists, gardeners, readers, eaters set for library arts and crafts fair

Approximately 50 artists and craftsmen will participate in the 12th Annual Sanibel Library Arts and Crafts Fair on Friday and Saturday, Feb. 4 and 5, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Association hall.

But that's not all. The fair will also boast a plant sale, galley for the hungry, bake sale, books, books, books, magazines and the raffle on Saturday, Feb. 5.

Amateur craftsmen can donate any hand-crafted item to be sold at the fair. Donations will be appreciated, and proceeds will go to the Sanibel Library. Call Betty Parke, 472-2946, for details.

'Something for everybody' promised at ABC Sale

There will be something for everybody bargain-bent at Captiva's 1983 ABC Sale on Saturday, Feb. 26.

Space at the Community Center where the sale will take place will be enlarged 25 percent by an additional tent to house some of the new and used furniture already on hand.

Twenty wicker chairs, a number of two-drawer chests, 100 new pairs of children's shoes and some rare Audubon prints are among items that have already been received for the sale. Even a 1975 Ford station wagon has been donated.

There will be the usual variety of native plants, baked goods, Island shells, jewelry, appliances, scads of books and some very good clothing for men as well as women.

As customary an auction will highlight the affair that benefits of the Captiva Civic Association and the Captiva Memorial Library.

Raffle tickets can be purchased during the sale from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. for goods and services donated by Captiva merchants, such as meals at local restaurants and offerings from specialty shops. Sanibel merchants also are donating items for sale at bargain prices.
