Home is where the heart is

Bob and Margie Miller have put their hearts in Honduras with 80 orphaned, delinquent boys

For many years, Stone Creek School in Captiva has been their school/home for boys in Honduras, the poverty stricken Central American republic that has a high rate of infant mortality and a high rate of delinquency. Although they are not their last, the Millers have adopted 80 boys from Honduras and are now working to get them back to their native land.

Buck Key condominiums?

County staff will review plans for 150 units on island east of Captiva

By Barbara Brundage

Plans for 150 housing units on 105 acres of land in the middle of Buck Key were scheduled for a preliminary review today before Lee County planners.

Buck Key is a 1 1/2-mile-long island in Pine Island Sound just east of Captiva Island. The island is under consideration by the state's Conservation and Recreation Land Committee for acquisition to ensure preservation in its natural state.

104 acres of the 315-acre island are owned by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and are under the jurisdiction of Sanibel's J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge.

The 105 acres being considered for development are owned by Ted Watrous. Mrs. Howard Lawrence of Winter Park is the owner of record of the remaining 18 acres.

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation owns two islands just south of Buck Key and is spearheading a move to get the key back on the high priority list for state acquisition. The two islands under SCCF ownership total 47 acres, 80 percent of which is mangrove swamp.

Bill Spilkowski of the Lee County Planning Department said last week that Ken Sprayberry, a Punta Gorda landscape architect, submitted the site plan for Watrous' parcel.

The housing is shown clustered in three- and four-unit townhouses. A clubhouse for communal use is

Test run of hurricane flags raises concern, questions from Island visitors, residents

Sgt. Jack Primm says the city's mistake in the drill might have been a blessing in disguise.

By Cindy Chalmers

Two days before the June 1 start of 1984 Hurricane Season last week, Sanibel emergency officials went through a practice run that involved flying the various color-coded, numbered flags that denote the stages of an approaching storm. The flags flying at six locations on Sanibel drew the attention of both residents and visitors, who called the Sanibel Police Department, WRCC-104 FM radio and Cablevision Channel 11 in record numbers Wednesday and Thursday with questions about the flags.

"We made the mistake of opening the signs that accompany the flags and explain the color code," emergency coordinator Sgt. Jack Primm said Thursday afternoon when the drill was complete.

"The original plan was simply to fly the flags, not to open the signs" that instruct people to stay tuned to WRCC, Cablevision Channel 11 or special alert radios for storm information. Although the drill caused confusion and concern among the public, Primm said he thought the mistake in opening the signs was a blessing in disguise.

"It sure made people take notice of the flags and want to know more," he said. "We would much rather answer their questions now than be deluged with phone calls during a real storm situation."

"As we go into hurricane season this year, I think a lot more people are aware of the flags and their role during a hurricane," he added. "I feel pretty confident that the community is fairly well informed."

While crews from the city's Public Works Department were changing the flags throughout the Island during the drill last week, city department heads were meeting at City Hall with representatives from the Lee County Emergency Operations Center for a review of each department's responsibilities before, during and after a storm strike on Sanibel and Captiva.

During May each week The Islander published an explanation of the color-coded, numbered flags that will fly during a hurricane threat, beginning with the blue number six flag (72-60 hours to strike) and ending with the black number 1 flag (18-1 hours to strike). Back issues are available at The Islander office.

How sweet it is

Photos and Story by Mark Johnson

Clang! Clang! Clang!
"Fudge-time," yells Mike Nichols as he starts another demonstration at the Fudgery in Jerry's Bazaar on Sanibel.

Nichols, manager and chief fudge maker at the Fudgery, puts on a show for the people who lean over the brass rails of the shop for a whiff of the chocolate aroma as it rises from the copper cooking kettle.

Nichols takes his show and his fudge making seriously. During the season he dressed in costumes or crazy hats and turned his demonstration of fudge making into a production.

But the entertainment is secondary to the real job at hand — turning 40 pounds of liquid goo into a five-foot-long bar of sweet delight.

"Fudge making takes practice," Nichols says as he uses a hoe-like paddle to knead the liquid fudge into the right solidity to be cut into half-pound blocks.

Nichols, who runs both the Fudgery at Jerry's and its sister store in the Olde Sanibel shopping center, has been making fudge for the past year and a half.

In the process, a combination of sugar, corn syrup, half-and-half and pure, unsweetened chocolate is cooked until the mixture comes to a boil and is then poured onto marble tables to cool.

Nichols says The Fudgery uses Georgia marble for its tables because it has a special property. "Georgia marble sucks all the calories out of the cooling fudge," he says with a grin.

The Fudgery is part of a nine-store chain that has stores in Virginia, North Carolina and Ohio.

Chief fudge maker Mike Nichols blends a mountain of chocolate goo into a sweet tooth's delight.

Nichols and his number one fudgy, Grace Davis, pour the liquid fudge onto marble tables for cooling.

Careful mixing is required to make the perfect fudge.

Above: Curious passers-by stop to take in the sights and smells of the cooking fudge at the Fudgery. Left: Rocky road and peanut butter are just a couple of the many flavors of fudge.

bill Spoonbill Spoonbill Spoonbill Spoonbill Spoonbill

Residents argue Spoonbill conflicts with CLUP, urge council denial

A copy of the following letter to Mayor Fred Valtin and other members of the Sanibel City Council was given to The Islander for publication.

To You All:
Many words have been said about the proposed Spoonbill Golf and Tennis Club. No matter who said it or what was said, there are three overriding factors:

1. It violates the wording of CLUP with 10 units vs. 42 units.
2. It violates the intent of CLUP, which is the preservation of the unique, natural character of the Island. 3. It violates the intent of the residents who voted for the measures of CLUP.

We urge the City Council to deny the Spoonbill proposal on the basis that it is contrary to the wording and objectives of the Comprehensive Land Use Plan as well as contrary to the objectives of the voters of Sanibel who favored the plan.

Sincerely,
Betty and Joe McMurtry
Sanibel

Connecticut conservationist says other values must be recognized

A copy of the following letter to Mayor Fred Valtin was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Mayor Valtin:
By now I am sure you have heard all the arguments for and against the proposed Spoonbill golf course. As a supporter of the proposed project, I am writing to convey one thought that, in my opinion, sometimes gets lost in arguing pros and cons.

All too often, it seems, opponents of any change insist that that change not take place if there are any negatives connected to it. As a long-time conservationist and supporter of conservation causes, I have been concerned that far too often many of my fellow conservationists are unwilling to recognize that any other values exist and must be recognized.

Everything in life is a trade-off, and all that most of us imperfect humans can do is try to achieve the best net balance of positives and negatives. Yes, there are some negatives connected to Spoonbill. However, every possible effort has been and will be devoted to minimizing these negatives. In my opinion, the positives far outweigh the negatives and the net balance is highly in favor of a carefully developed Spoonbill.

Further, as has been pointed out previously, some of the consequences of future possibilities for the property in question if Spoonbill is not approved represent major negatives to both the citizens of Sanibel in general and to the conservationist cause.

I ask your full consideration and support and approval of the Spoonbill project.

Sincerely yours,
Ervin Bickley Jr.
New Canaan, Conn.

Campbell calls for rejuvenation of COTI

A copy of the following letter to Fred Metcalfe, chairman of the Committee of the Islands, was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Mr. Metcalfe:
Thank you for hearing me at your recent meeting. Although you and some of your colleagues did not always make me feel particularly welcome, I do appreciate the pressure under which you must be working these days and I excuse the occasional hint at my being an "intruder."

I assume that when you sent me the COTI bylaws and other printed information about that once-fine organization, the material was intended to inform me about COTI and that what I found in that material was true and factual. I should say, therefore, that I was somewhat shocked when a negative response was expressed at the meeting when I said I, as a member, was entitled to attend such meetings. (You will recall that I became a COTI member again by presenting a check to the treasurer.) If this is not true, then the printed information you sent me is false.

Please tell me straight out: am I entitled to avail myself of the rights and privileges of membership as established in the material you sent me? I quote from that material: "Members are welcome at the meetings."

To be quite candid, I have been completely unimpressed with COTI's lack of any real action in the Spoonbill issue. I believe this lack of action borders on what I understand non-feasance to be.

Bylaws of COTI are clear and certainly express excellent goals — "promote a continuity of good local government... endorse and sponsor candidates for elective offices... prepare principles and policies en-

Club's 'contribution' is one the Island could do without

To The Editor The Islander
I have been following the comments about the proposed Spoonbill development and have several thoughts to offer in opposition to the proposal.

To begin with, I was annoyed by Charles Estabrook Jr.'s veiled threat to the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation for urging its members to oppose the Spoonbill development.

Mr. Estabrook's comment that the SCCF letter may have been a disservice to SCCF because many of the largest and most loyal supporters of the SCCF are also members and advocates of Spoonbill strikes me as a domineering threat by someone used to buying his way.

No member of the SCCF is obliged to act because of the letter, but I believe it is helpful to the membership to be informed about the issue and the timing of events related to the proposal. Surely the SCCF should forcefully state its position on protection of wetlands, which is its reason for existence. To keep silent for fear of losing financial support would be irresponsible.

As to the merits of the proposal, I don't happen to be a golfer, so the amount of land already dedicated to golf on Sanibel seems to me to be adequate if not excessive.

There is nothing about Sanibel Island that makes it uniquely satisfactory as a site for a golf club, but there are many characteristics that make it an undesirable location, among them the fact that the proposed site is a low-lying area that would require dredge and fill to create fairways, thus destroying the irreplaceable flooded lands that are so productive of birds and other wildlife.

Furthermore, golf courses are heavy users of chemicals (fertilizers, fungicides, herbicides, insecticides) to maintain their turf, and there is no way such chemicals can be kept from reaching the interior surface waters of Sanibel and causing unwanted effects through increased fertility and direct toxicity to the fauna and flora of the area not only within the proposed golf course, but in contiguous wet areas as well.

Other people have extolled the virtues of golf courses as habitat for wildlife but have failed to note the environmental contamination that results from the chemical pesticides and fertilizers used to maintain the lush, weed-free fairways, tees and greens.

It is no exaggeration to say that the Spoonbill golf course would contribute thousands of pounds of fertilizers and hundreds of pounds of pesticides to the Sanibel environment each year — a contribution I believe we can well do without.

Freshwater wetlands are a major contributor to the unique character of Sanibel — to destroy them for a golf course that could just as well go on the mainland seems to me totally wrong; and because it is proposed as a private membership club for the benefit of a select few at a cost in lost values to the public at large, I find it particularly undesirable.

Sincerely yours,
John Buckley, PhD
SCCF member and Sanibel landowner

uring orderly growth and development consistent with the unique and natural characteristics of the Islands ... recommend to Sanibel City Council such principles and policies as may be deemed necessary... give aid to the public officials... generally to promote the establishment, realization and maintenance of good local land use."

Most of the above are from Article I. Then, in Article II, it says, "The membership of this corporation shall consist of those who shall subscribe to the principles and purposes of this organization."

The "What is COTI?" brochure, in another paragraph, states that, "COTI is working just as intensely today to preserve our quality of life as it has in the past." And more: "For instance... COTI has been or is directly involved in... a number of items among which may be found "the acquisition of open space land."

In view of all those high and laudable motives, I can only conclude

Very truly yours,
George Campbell
Sanibel

P.S. The Island Reporter (5/24) carried a number of "pro" letters re: Spoonbill and some "con" ones too. Your own letter was classified as "con" — a real tribute to COTI's fence-balancing ability.

Citizen would rather switch to ensure primary vote for Goss

To The Editor The Islander
Yesterday I had a simple, easy red-tape cutting experience. I took myself to (Lee County Elections Supervisor) Enid Earle's office and, so I could vote for the best man in the primaries for the Lee County Commission, I swapped my voter's registration card marked DEM, for one marked REP.

Thus Sanibel's very own can get my vote in September, and I can switch back in October in time to re-identify myself before November.

I figured that would be a lot easier than getting Porter Goss to switch.
It isn't hard to do, so I suggest other like-minded people do the same. God knows, Porter has brought quality to this County Commission for the first time in many, many years.

Resident expresses concern about danger of metal roofs during a hurricane

To The Editor The Islander
The April issue of Florida Trend carried a brief historical review of the 1935 Keys Hurricane that still holds the Western Hemisphere's record as the most powerful one. Its winds were calculated at speeds of 200-250 mph.

In reading the account of the damages caused by flying debris, I noted with alarm that "Sheet metal roofs became 'flying guttines', decapitating several victims, amputating the limbs of others. Whirling lumber became lethal javelins impaling victims or knocking them from precarious grips on poles and trees."

That storm scene flashed into my mind upon a recent tour of Sanibel that made me aware of the rapidly increasing use of metal roofing on piling-type buildings. Those buildings are just about made compulsory by the city's building regulations. Curiously, the so-called "arty set" on the Islands considers those garish roofs as lending a "glorious islandy" look. While ROGO doesn't specifically give "brownie points" for them, it is my impression that our city officials' judgments are influenced by that nebulous "islandy" label when doling out building approvals.

The possibility now occurs to me that our city officials are unaware of the reported lethal characteristics of metal roofs which is manifested in violent wind storms of even less magnitude than a hurricane.

At least, however, some of our Island's developers had such awareness in their memories from the 1935 Keys Hurricane. They banned the use of them in their deed restrictions of land use in many subdivisions on our hurricane-prone barrier Island!!

It is, indeed, regrettable that our city's lawmakers seem to harbor the mistaken belief that Florida's home rule cities are powerless to use the wisdom often expressed in lawfully recognized private deed restrictions. As a matter of historical fact, prior to 1916 such private restrictions were the sole tool available in these United States to produce the desired neighborhood ambience that public zoning today strives toward. (Such public zoning only came to Sanibel after 1959!)

It seems to me that we should certainly not permit our City Fathers to govern us with the policy that proclaims: "The only thing we learn from history is that we never learn."

Sincerely,
Paul Howe

West Gulf Drive property owner argues unsuccessfully for density increase

Dr. Frank Quattlebaum wants to build two duplexes on his gulf-front property on West Gulf Drive.

The 1.63-acre parcel with a density of 1.5 units per acre is sandwiched between the West Wind Inn, which marks the end of the resort housing district (density five units per acre), and the single-family residential district (density one unit per acre) along the south side of West Gulf Drive.

In 1983 the city established the western boundary of the resort housing district at West Wind's west property line and reduced the density of single-family property along the gulf to the western terminus of West Gulf Drive to one unit per acre.

But recognizing Quattlebaum's contention that his property is a buffer between the two zones, the city grandfathered the parcel at the 1.5-unit density, which allows construction of two dwelling units on the property.

Quattlebaum and attorney James Dvorin appeared before the Planning Commission recently seeking a specific amendment to increase the density to four units.

Quattlebaum argued that the value of his property has dropped twice because of city action since he acquired it in 1969. The land was zoned for commercial use when Quattlebaum bought it.

When the city adopted its Comprehensive Land Use Plan in 1978, the zoning was downgraded to residential, Quattlebaum said, and last year its desirability as a single-family home site was damaged when the West Wind Inn was permitted to operate a restaurant and bar in a building only 14 feet from his property line.

But the commissioners were not convinced that Quattlebaum has suffered any loss.

"Your land has increased in value tremendously since you bought it," Commissioner Ann Winterbotham said. "The question in that area of the beach has probably increased the size of your lot."

She suggested that Quattlebaum have a new survey made, adding, "You might find you may have enough land to support three units."

Commission Vice Chairman Lennart Lorenson, who presided in the absence of Chairman Larry Simon, was concerned that approving more units would have a "domino effect." Owners of single-family properties all down the beach will ask for the same thing, he said.

Dvorin disagreed and pointed out that Quattlebaum's parcel is unique because it is the only single-family property bordering the resort housing area.

But the commissioners said a line has to be drawn somewhere and voted 4-0 to deny the request. Commissioners Henry McKee and Jerry Muench were also absent.

The City Council is scheduled to hear Quattlebaum's request for a specific amendment on first reading at 2:20 p.m. today.

Request continued for triplex next to Sand Dollar property

Planning Commissioners have agreed they need to review the 1977 development permit approved for the construction of the 36-unit Sand Dollar condominium before deciding on Mariner Properties Inc.'s request to build a triplex and a pool on a .67-acre parcel just east of the existing complex.

At the initial hearing of Mariner's request last March the planning staff reported that although Mariner had approval for 38 units on the 7.5-acre site on Middle Gulf Drive, only 36 units were constructed in three 12-unit buildings.

Through creation of condominium documents and without benefit of a development permit, Mariner retained ownership of 6.25 acres of the site.

Subsequently, the condominium association was granted easements for road and walkway accesses to recreational amenities.

A survey in April 1983 showed the property actually contains 7.89 acres rather than 7.5 acres, Ray Pavelka, Mariner's vice president of development, told the commission.

Now, in order to comply with CLUP density requirements, Mariner proposed to designate 7.22 acres of the site to the condominium owners to support the 36 units and use the remaining .67 acres for an additional three-unit building.

Pavelka explained that when the original subdivision of the property took place Mariner was not aware that a development permit was required.

The planning staff recommended that the land division violation be corrected by consolidation of the property.

Development of three additional units should be permitted under unified ownership with maintenance of common facilities, recreational amenities and drainage system shared with the existing condominium complex, the staff reported.

On May 21 Pavelka reported to the commission that the Sand Dollar board of directors had rejected the concept of common ownership.

Attorney Richard Broder, representing the condominium owners, said their main concern was that they have enough land to build back the 36 units in the event they are more than 50 percent destroyed in a disaster.

The 5.9 acres they currently have little to will support only 29 or 30 units, Broder said.

Commissioner Ann Winterbotham said the unified ownership is the first consideration.

"Legally under the 1977 development permit two more units can be built on the site, but three will over intensify the use and is too many," she said.

Broder said the Sand Dollar owners have arrived at a good faith agreement with Mariner.

As a result of discussions, he said, the site plan of the proposed addition has been revised to "preserve the view and minimize the impact."

Pavelka said he would attempt to reach a settlement with Sand Dollar owners and bring back in 30 days "a signed agreement with everything in place."

Commissioner Bill Read then withdrew his motion to deny Mariner's request and the commission voted 4-0 to continue the hearing to the June 25 meeting.

Commissioners Larry Simon, Henry McKee and Jerry Muench were absent.

Cocaine charges dropped because of technicality in arrest procedure

By Cindy Chalmers

Charges of possession and sale of cocaine have been dropped against a Sanibel man and a Fort Myers man who were arrested March 28 after they sold the drug to a woman who was cooperating with police.

Sanibel police learned last week that because of a technicality in their investigation, the State Attorney's office has dropped all charges against Keith Frederick "Kip" Buntrock, 22, of Sanibel and Keith Bernard McMenamy, also 22, of Fort Myers.

Officer Rick Kennedy made the arrests two months ago after he apprehended an 18-year-old tourist and two juveniles in a Sanibel parking lot with a gram of cocaine. They told Kennedy they had bought the cocaine for $80 from the night manager at Executives Services, Inc.

In order to avoid being charged, the woman and her juvenile companions agreed to return to the real estate office and purchase another gram of the drug with police money.

Police gave the woman five $20 bills and put a listening device in her purse so they could monitor the transaction. One of the juveniles accompanied the woman on the buy.

Kennedy said last week that was where the mistake was made. The State Attorney's office says the juvenile did not have the ability to agree to cooperate in the sting operation and that her parents should have been notified before the deal was arranged, Kennedy said.

"If the juvenile had not gone into the ESI office with the 18-year-old, everything would have been fine," he said.

"This was an all-of-a-sudden arrest," Kennedy said. "We had to act quickly. We thought we had items and with possession of burglary tools. DePaero was also charged with misdemeanor possession of marijuana.

Officers Wayne Hinz and Scott Ashby made the arrests after they noticed the three had parked their car very close to a van in the parking lot where there was plenty of room in the lot. Police discovered the three had pried a window open on the van and pushed out a screen. They found a bent coal hanger in Rose Feliciano's purse.

A Serenity Lane man was told he would have to call an attorney if he wanted to pursue his complaint about pine needles from his neighbor's trees landing on his roof and in his yard Tuesday evening, May 29. The neighbor told police he had no control over where the needles from his trees fell.

A Chicago, Ill., man reported $200 in cash was missing from his wallet that he had left on the Island Belle party boat Tuesday evening, May 29.

A Fort Myers man reported the emergency telephone was missing from an elevator at Sand Pointe condominiums Thursday morning, May 31. The white dial-type phone was valued at $36.

A Nerita Street woman reported several jewelry items were missing from her home Thursday afternoon, May 31. The woman said an opal and diamond ring, a gold chain bracelet and a sterling silver bracelet were taken sometime between November 1983 and May 31. Value of the missing items was estimated at $700.

Police looked for but could not find several juveniles who were reported shooting air guns on the 13th green at the Dunes Country Club Thursday evening, May 31.

CEPD hears breakwater pros and cons

By Scott Martell

Emphasizing the point that holding a renourished beach on Captiva for as long as possible is a vital concern, the Captiva Erosion Prevention District decided yesterday to further its study of offshore structures.

After hearing a short report written two years ago by Tetra-Tech engineer Eric Olsen, the CEPD board unanimously decided to seek more opinions and to determine the costs involved.

Olsen's report described several structures, including the Blind Pass groin extension, a "T" head groin system and an alongshore breakwater system. All these systems could give a renourished beach a longer engineering life.

The breakwater is the system

Captivan Bob Manderscheid encouraged as the one method of erosion control that most Captivians support.

Olsen's report described how such a structure might be made. In his plan, the breakwater would consist of segments 1,000 feet long, with possible 1000-foot gaps between the structures. Each breakwater would be placed in water eight feet deep several hundred feet out in the gulf.

In this design, the structures would rise four feet out of the water. The base of each structure would be about 60 feet wide and would be pyramid with the top about four feet wide.

Such a structure would break the force of wave action before it hits Captiva's beach. There is a possibility that such a structure could accrete sand, Dick Stevens, presenting Olsen's report, also mentioned that it could be very effective in a major storm.

The problems with a breakwater come with cost and permitting. "The Corp of Engineers has found that it is more economical to rebuild a beach than to put in breakwaters," Stevens said. "Far that agency the bottom line is economic. The benefit cannot exceed the cost."

Olsen's rough estimate of the cost of a breakwater was $6.5 million. In a footnote to the report, he mentioned that the breakwater could be built in segments, for example, one half mile of shoreline per year at an estimated cost of $1 million per year.

The CEPD hopes to have more information before its July 9 meeting. This should prove an important meeting as the board will at that time discuss several finance plans for beach renourishment.

Captivan Gene Peck encouraged the board to send out a newsletter to tell Captivians where the CEPD stands regarding financing renourishment. "You're been very careful and prudent (in going forward with a new finance plan)," Peck said. He added that the board needs to tell the people that plans for a Municipal Service Taxing Unit have not been dropped.

Commissioner Dewit Jones mentioned that several MSTU plans would be ready for discussion by July 9 and that CEPD attorney Jim Humphreys would have studied them.

"We need to discuss these plans in detail," Jones said. "We know this one is critical, and we must make sure it is fair."

included on the site.

Access to the proposed project will be by boat only with a long dock on Roosevelt Channel on the west side of the key. Another dock is planned for access from Hurricane Harbor, an area of sheltered water near Blind Pass. Golf carts using shell paths will provide transportation through the development.

The property is currently zoned AG, the county's lowest intensity, which permits agricultural use or development with one home per acre, Spilkowski said.

Spraberry's project is "much too intense for the site" and could not be approved as initially submitted as a Planned Unit Development, Spilkowski said.

But, he emphasized, "The purpose of Tuesday's informal meeting with the planning staff, is to discuss with the developer what he can and cannot do."

All developments of more than 10 acres must come under the scrutiny of the Development of County Impact committee, of which Spilkowski is coordinator. The DCI stage is the first step in the county's procedure for zoning changes.

Three public hearings are required before the Lee County Commission can vote on the development. The first hearing will be before the Local Planning Agency, which is composed of five high level county staff members and two private citizens. Spilkowski said that hearing could not be held before early August because of the bureaucratic process.

The second hearing will be before the Lee County Zoning Board, which meets on the last Monday of each month. The third hearing will be before the County Commission.

Carol Allin, SCFP business manager, said Friday the CARL committee is expected to consider placing Buck Key on the state's list for acquisition at a meeting next month.

Allin hopes for favorable action. She said she was encouraged after Leo Minasian, an environmental specialist for the Division of State Lands in Tallahassee, spent three hours on Buck Key in April.

"He was very impressed and said he intended to recommend that the committee add the island to its list of environmentally sensitive areas that should be preserved," she said.

Spilkowski said that if this happens the question of development on Buck Key would become moot.

Rumors that Spraberry had submitted preliminary plans for the proposed development on Buck Key on behalf of Mariner Properties, Inc., were quashed Friday by Ray Pavelka, Mariner's vice president of development.

"We have talked to Watrous about his property a couple of times in the past," Pavelka told The Islander. "But Mariner has absolutely no interest in Buck Key at this time."

Women in Business

Governor proclaims June 3-9 as Women Business Ownership Week

Gov. Bob Graham has proclaimed June 3-9 as Women Business Ownership Week.

In his proclamation the governor stated, "Women-owned businesses have become the fastest growing sector of America's small business community, contributing significantly to the health of our economy at the city, state and national levels."

The proclamation was made in conjunction with the Women's Business Ownership Conference '84, which will be held at the Hyatt Orlando Hotel June 8-9. The conference is expected to draw more than 2,000 current and potential women business owners. It is the ninth in a series being held throughout the country and is sponsored by the U.S. Small Business Administration.

Co-sponsoring the event with SBA is Women's Business Ownership Educational Conference, Inc., a non-profit organization that will continue to provide educational programs throughout the state of Florida as a part of the conference's legacy.

Conference information can be obtained by calling (305) 236-9776. The cost for participants is $50 for the conference. There is an additional $25 charge for a June 9 luncheon featuring U.S. Secretary of Transportation Elizabeth Dole as the keynote speaker.

Focus your attention on women entrepreneurs and you'd think the economy was booming as it never has before.

Consider that women entrepreneurs are starting businesses at a rate five times faster than men. And in one year, more than 3 million businesses owned by women have contributed more than $40 billion to the U.S. economy.

With statistics like that, its not hard to see why Gov. Bob Graham has designated this week as Women Business Ownership Week.

Women own a high percentage of the businesses on Sanibel. And they run a full spectrum — from motels to art galleries, travel agencies, furniture stores, real estate offices, construction firms, restaurants and gift shops.

Based on Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce membership, women own more than 60 businesses on the Islands. An equal number of businesses are owned by husband and wife teams.

This is the women's week — and as a special Islander feature we asked five successful Island businesswomen how they became involved with business, what problems they have run into and what advice they have for other women who are considering starting their own business.

Marika Lutheringer

Marika Lutheringer - Around the World Travel

Several years ago there was no way Marika Lutheringer would have gone into her own business.

"I knew all the headaches my husband had gone through owning his own business," she laughs.

Yet for the past two years Lutheringer has owned Around the World Travel — a business the format is Pan Am stewardess and travel agency employee for seven years before she opened her own knows well.

"I now have more time for a business. I'm not as tied down to the children, who have grown and left home," Lutheringer says.

One thing anyone who wants her own business should know is that it is always a lot of hard work, she says. "I get up, stay all hours at the office, go home and fall asleep — anyone who has the illusion that owning a business is anything else but hard work is cuckoo."

One problem woman face is lack of credit in order to get loans, Lutheringer believes.

"Women really need to establish some credit rating under their own name," she says.

Working women are often denied even small loans unless their husbands co-sign; when it comes to a loan for a business, it is even more difficult without a good credit history, she says.

Nevertheless, Lutheringer encourages women to start their own businesses if they want to. But, she cautions, they should be ready to take a loss for three to six years.

"Just hang in there, give yourself time, and work as hard as you can," she says. "And don't expect too much glory."

Marilyn Bowman

Marilyn Bowman - Bit of Ambrosia

Bit of Ambrosia is owned by the mother and daughter team of Marilyn and Christa Bowman.

Owning the store has made quite a change in Marilyn Bowman's life. Before opening the Palm Ridge Road clothing store both she and Christa worked in the family business — a Nebraska steel company.

Yet in that industry Bowman learned about purchasing and selling, which put her in good shape for owning the shop on Sanibel.

When she moved to Sanibel, the elder Bowman says, she found one problem particularly frustrating. She owned property out-of-state, and transferring the collateral to Florida in order to get a credit rating proved tough, she explains.

"That took a lot of perseverance," she says. "It is hard to establish credit when you are a short-timer here in Florida."

In owning any business, new problems can come up every day, Bowman believes. Running a business is always a learning experience, and you must remain flexible.

"Little by little we keep changing the format of the store and we'll probably continue to keep changing," she says.

For instance, Bit of Ambrosia started out with a line of dressier clothes. Now the store offers more casual and resort wear, including t-shirts.

"You have to really know what people buy when they come to the Islands," Bowman says. "They don't buy dressier clothes, as we learned. Marketing t-shirts may be the best thing we've even done."

Bowman also believes businesswomen have to find their niche on the Island. Just like so many other business people on the Island, she feels the Island is "saturated" with small businesses often selling the same things. But with a family that is very supportive and a willingness to be flexible, a business can do well, she adds.

Barbara Boulton

family or a very good friend."

Another piece of advice is that women should not feel pressured by male salesmen. "Even in need-to-work you have high pressure salesman trying to persuade you to buy from them — they always say they know what is the top selling stuff," Boulton says. "For the first two years I often went along with them. But now I realize they don't know any more than I do. And I also no longer have guilty emotions if I don't buy from them."

Barbara Boulton - Idle Hours

Barbara Boulton made the jump from school teacher to business owner eight years ago. She owns Idle Hours, a needleworking and knitting store at Pelican Place.

She believes women in business must break through a certain "barrier" that has to do with people's attitudes. Many people, including family, often do not think women can be serious about business, she says.

"My family (husband and two sons) thought my business was my playtime," Boulton laughs. "At first that was hard for me, but I still decided to make the commitment."

Several years ago Boulton went back to teaching for one year. She says her family's reaction then was that she finally had a decent job again.

Boulton acknowledges that family should come first, but she also feels that without a strong commitment to her business she would not be happy.

Her primary advice to new businesswomen is that they need some support. "You can't go it alone," Boulton says. "You need someone you can depend on to be supportive, either

Women in business

Betty Parke and Betty Puff - Retired

Betty Parke and Betty Puff have been in various businesses on Sanibel for more than 22 years. The two are charter members of the local chapter of the American Business Women's Association.

In 1962, after seven years in real estate in Indiana, Parke moved to Sanibel and bought the Silver Trader, which she turned into the B-Hive. After she sold that store she and Puff opened the Black Pearl. Seven years later they built Baywind Plaza, where they opened Betty's Bounty.

So the team's experience in Island business has run the gamut from laid-back tropical island to the heavily competitive market she sees here today.

"When we got started there were basically few problems," Parke says. "Competition was relatively low and there was less development."

Problems that eventually developed had nothing to do with the fact she was a woman. Instead, she says, in the early days the problem was finding supplies for the store. Today's problems, she says, revolve around heavy competition with "so many stores carrying the same stuff."

For women in business, Parke maintains it is simply "a question of getting in and doing it." She firmly believes there is absolutely no reason a woman cannot have as good a business as any man.

"Women who want to go into business on Sanibel had better search diligently for something not readily available right now," Parke advises.

"And they had better be prepared for no profit for at least three years. Any profit has to be put back in inventory."

She also says location is a primary factor in the success of any business.

grace" vacation from Tegucigalpa, the Honduras capital city where they established El Hogar De Amor Y Esperanza — "The Home of Love and Understanding" — six years ago.

"This is the one time during the year that we leave the boys completely behind," Bob says. "We have to do this for ourselves."

Even so, Margie admits, "We watch for letters in the mail — they do have our address, and we know they miss us terribly." The "missness" works both ways.

The Episcopal minister and his teacher/writer wife were working in California in 1978 when friends in Honduras made them aware of the dire need for a home like El Hogar.

Bob was the assistant minister in an affluent church in the San Francisco Bay area; Margie was teaching and writing books for teachers. On weekends the two would drive south of the border to Tijuana, where they served as volunteer counselors for families and teenagers in trouble.

"But we had reached the point where we didn't like to go home after the weekends in Tijuana," Bob says. "There was such a need for us there. The children needed us."

"It was reverse culture shock to go back to the waste and indulgence that was everywhere in San Francisco and is virtually everywhere in the United States."

Their friends in Honduras convinced Bob and Margie the need for people just like themselves was even greater in that country.

So with the support and blessings of the Episcopal Church, the Millers left opulence and abundance

Home is where the heart is continued

They went to Tegucigalpa sight unseen and immediately recruited 15 boys from 5 to 17 years old who were desperate for a home that provided discipline, stability, security.

In the six years since then the home has grown to include 80 boys, four Honduran counselors (one for each of the houses the school compound comprises), two night shift workers, a gardener and a cook.

The school has gained a reputation as one whose students are guaranteed a future far better than the one they were destined for before. That reputation is so good, in fact, that the Millers have to turn away far more boys than they can accept — their only regret about the endeavor.

Many of the boys at El Hogar are referred by the local social welfare department. Some find their own way to the school and literally beg to be allowed to stay. Some are abandoned in area hospitals (weak or sick males are regarded as useless by their families) and then turned over to the Millers. Others the Millers discover during their regular tours of the city's jails.

But no matter how they get to El Hogar, all of the boys there come from broken homes and have been rejected by everyone from their parents to the people who refuse to give them money in the streets.

"They come to us totally without a conscience."

"When you see people go to the river once a day for a bucket of dirty water, then you realize how luxurious a dishwasher is."

Bob Miller

Margie says about the boys. "They don't know how to care for themselves, their possessions or other people. They have complete disregard for everything."

But once they are in the school the boys thrive on the consistency of discipline the Millers and their staff dole out relentlessly but always with care.

"They long for the mother they had during the first year or so of their lives," Margie says. "Since then they have been tossed around from place to place. Year after year of neglect has taught them their mothers just aren't going to give them what they crave."

So they run — to the streets and a life of stealing, lying, begging. The lucky ones end up at El Hogar.

At El Hogar the boys learn basic survival skills.

Although they are mentally retarded to some degree, mainly the result of severe malnutrition as infants, the boys can learn simple skills. So they learn farming, gardening, cooking, carpentry and brick laying — enough to make them useful and important (every boy is expected to pull his own weight every day by completing three specific chores essential to the operation of the entire school) while they are at El Hogar and to make them self-sufficient once they leave the school.

Unless they leave of their own free will — a rare occurrence — the boys stay at El Hogar for a minimum of six years, or until they complete the standard Honduran public education program. They attend public schools for half a day every day, but, Margie says, their real education begins when they return to El Hogar every afternoon.

The boys are supervised all of the time and are graded every hour of the day on their attitude and behavior. The marks they receive translate into what privileges they can buy, such as tickets for swimming or watching a filmstrip or television program.

Perhaps one of the most important aspects of the training at El Hogar involves how to be a good parent, Margie says. "We try to teach our boys what good parenting involves; all they know is what bad parenting is."

The parenting training is mainly by examples set by Margie and Bob. "It's pretty fundamental stuff," Bob says. "We care, and no matter what we do, we always do it with care. The boys have a strong need for the structure we provide."

And it works. Margie says all of her boys vow they will never abandon their own children as their parents did them.

After graduation from the public school program, the boys can enroll in El Hogar's own vocational program for three more years. There they learn a trade or how to run a small business or farm. "Honduras needs both tradesmen and farmers," Bob says. "We want our boys to be able to contribute to society when they leave our care."

Six years ago, the Millers admit, many of their friends and family wondered skeptically how successful their venture could be. But the Millers always had confidence in their ability to "make something out of nothing."

"We were not afraid of living in semi-primitive conditions," Margie says. "It wasn't hard to give up the luxuries we had in the United States. In fact, we wanted to get away from all of that. We are frugal and resourceful; we know we could do it."

And now, they say, they find their most difficult job is coming back to the United States. "It is very difficult for us to witness the terrific waste here," Bob says. "In Honduras you simply cannot waste anything."

"When you see people go to the river once a day for a bucket of dirty water, then you realize how luxurious a dishwasher is."

But they do admit they "race for the junk food places and McDonald's" as soon as they hit American turf. "We can't get out of the airport without a hot dog," Margie says. "The urge to consume is always here in America. Perhaps that is why we stay in Honduras."

And the Millers say they will stay in Tegucigalpa until they are confident Hondurans can take over at El Hogar and continue to run the school. After that, they more than likely will go to another deprived area, either in the United States or in another foreign country, to find more children they can help.

"The opportunity is always there to help children all around the world and even in the United States," Margie says. "That only allows for a little meat, but Honduras is great for vegetables, so we eat lots and lots of those — and lots of beans and tortillas."

School needs temporary volunteers, financial sponsors

By Cindy Chalmers
The Millers' job at El Hogar is full time, all the time. But the couple welcomes temporary volunteers at the home in Tegucigalpa, Honduras, and also invites those who can to sponsor an orphaned boy for $650 a year.

"We have several sponsors from Sanibel and Captiva," Margie says. "Some of them have even been to the home. Without their financial support we would have to turn away even more boys than we have to already."

The $650 sponsorship fee provides food, clothing and the basic necessities for one boy for one year. Not every boy has a sponsor, Margie says, adding that 20 or so are "absorbed" in the system. Salaries for the Honduran staff members at El Hogar come from other sources.

The cost to feed one boy for a week is about $5, Margie says. "That only allows for a little meat, but Honduras is great for vegetables, so we eat lots and lots of those — and lots of beans and tortillas."

Portrait Dr. Denny Dennison

Age: 34

Roots: The mountains of West Virginia

Pleasures: My sons, David and Jonathan; learning to walk on the beach; riding bicycles, refinishing old furniture; spending time in our 140-year-old log cabin off the Blue Ridge Parkway.

Last Book Read: Lloyd Ogilvie's Falling Into Greatness

Mentor: David Burr, the pastor at First Presbyterian Church in Winston-Salem, N.C.

Wish: "My desire is that this church will become what God wants it to be in the community."

Words of Wisdom: "Challenge yourself to grow in the spiritual dimension of your life."

By Cindy Chalmers

Dr. Denny Dennison says he is on Sanibel for the rest of his life — a big statement for a 34-year-old family man who moved here less than a month ago with his wife and two young sons.

But that's how the new minister at Sanibel Community Church views his arrival on Sanibel from the mountains of North Carolina.

His first reaction when he was approached about leaving Charlotte, N.C.'s, Third Presbyterian Church for Sanibel was, "Thanks, but no thanks," Dennison says. But one visit to the island was all the persuasion the man from the mountains needed.

Since their arrival on Sanibel the Dennisons have learned the ways of the island with appreciation and enthusiasm. "How can anyone live here and not walk the beach?" Dennison asks in all seriousness. "We've actually met people who say they haven't been to the beach in a year." His southern drawl makes "year" a two-syllable word and accentuates his amazement that anyone here could stay away from the beach for even one day.

The geography of Southwest Florida is not the only thing Dennison finds quite different from his native territory. His church in Charlotte had a large youth population, and as assistant minister Dennison worked closely with programs for youth, young adults and families.

He still wants to focus his ministry on youth and young adults, but reaching the retirement population at his Sanibel church has also become a priority.

"I thought it was risky business to come to a retirement island when I had always been so involved with youth," he says. "I thought they were the ones who needed guidance in building a strong mind, body and spirit."

"But when I got here I was shocked and encouraged to find the older adults here want something for themselves at church," he says. "They are still growing spiritually."

So in addition to his programs for the youth on Sanibel and Captiva, Dennison has plans for enrichment programs that will help older churchgoers glean more from their relationship with God. One such program, entitled "Beyond Doubt," started last Sunday and is open to any island adult from 9:01 to 9:46 a.m. every Sunday this month. The program will be repeated in August.

He also plans sessions to help the lay people in the church reach out and help others in need more effectively. "I think older people need to learn what is really helpful when they have to cope with death, alcoholism or drug abuse," he says. "When someone dies there is much more you can do besides deliver a dish of Jello."

Dennison says he knew from the time he was studying broadcasting at Wake Forest University that he wanted to become a minister. "But I had

Ask your gerontologist

By Jaylene Farrell
Gerontological consultant

The words gerontology and geriatrics are derived from the Greek word geron, which means "old man." Gerontology is the branch of science that deals with the developmental process of aging; geriatrics is the science that deals with the medical problems of aging.

Dear Jo: My husband is having a terrible time adjusting to his retirement. I wish he had a hobby or something — anything. He just sits at home and complains about everything, particularly his health. His problem is that he finds the days long and often says life is not worth living. I think he is very bored, and although I can be of some help to him, he has to find something to replace his job in his life. Is boredom a problem with the elders? — Mrs. W. (The frustrated wife of a retiree)

Dear Mrs. W. — Yes, boredom, although seldom mentioned, is very much a problem for elders. To find one's niche in life is essential at any age. Many older people without hobbies find other things to do with their time in retirement and are not bored at all. For example: they travel, take classes, visit with their friends and relatives, exercise, write, etc. Many companies, agencies and community colleges offer post retirement programs to help retirees adjust to the difficulties they have encountered in retirement.

Boredom should be taken seriously in older people as it can lead to a more serious problem — depression.

Dear Jo: Do older persons' eyes tear more? Also, I have noticed that the whites of my eyes are more reddened than they were when I was younger. — B.B.

Dear B.B.: Older persons' eyes do have an increase in tearing, which is part of the aging process. The covering of the eyeball, the conjunctiva, thins with age and causes older persons' eyes to be more sensitive and often reddened by wind, cold and pollutants such as dust in the environment.

WHY YOU SHOULD SHOP AS CAREFULLY FOR YOUR MORTGAGE AS YOU DO FOR YOUR HOME.

You'll probably be living with both of them for a considerable length of time. That's why, after you've walked through dozens of kitchens and bedrooms and agonized over floor plan after floor plan, it pays to give the same careful scrutiny to the mortgage you choose.

That means more than just looking at rate and term. It means carefully considering the dependability, expertise and service of the mortgage lender.

At Florida Federal, we've been a leader in meeting the needs of homebuyers for 50 years. We offer a full range of flexible mortgage plans — plans that make it easier for you to afford your new home, easier for you to build equity in it, and when you're ready, easier for you to sell it. And we can help you decide which plan is best for you.

If you're buying a home, we hope you or your Realtor® will talk to us first. We have a lot of good new ideas. And a lot of good old experience.

Free homebuying tips: Pick up a copy of "Things to Consider When Buying a Home" at any Florida Federal office.

Florida Federal

Qualify for a LEVERAGE LINE preauthorized line of credit. Moving into a new home always entails a lot of new or unexpected expenses. When you apply for a Florida Federal mortgage loan, we'll automatically start qualifying you for a Florida Federal LEVERAGE LINE account. This is a pre-authorized credit line of $5,000 or more. Interest can be as low as prime + 1%. And you pay no interest until you use it.

For 50 years, one of Florida's greatest assets. Local offices include:

From Len Kessler

REGULARITY

Too many people believe that a daily laxative must be standard procedure in order to keep regular. An occasional skipped day or even two or three days should be no cause for alarm, states the California Medical Assn. They note that many laxatives produce undesirable side effects. Increase your bulk intake by eating more fresh raw fruits and vegetables. Drink plenty of liquids too - you can enjoy healthful regularity without laxatives.

The Cycads

Sanibel's rare carboniferous contributors

The Coontl is no longer common on Sanibel ... but native plant enthusiasts are making a valiant effort to restore the species to its former abundance.

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

A once-common and very intriguing plant of Sanibel and many of South Florida's hammocks and high lands was the Coontl, Zamia floridana.

This primitive plant has the appearance of a palm, or even a fern, and is a member of an ancient plant group, Cycadaceae. It is no longer common on Sanibel, but a few can still be found, and native plant-enthusiasts are making a valiant effort to restore the species to its former abundance.

Caya Costa still has a strong natural colony, and so does Cabbage Key. There is another colony near Miner's Corner, an over-developed place and a strange one to harbor a rare wild thing such as the Coontl. "Coontl" is a corruption of Conti Hateka, the Seminole term for the bread made from the starchy flour produced by grating the Coontl's potato-like, tuberous underground stem structure.

Coontl, sometimes called Florida Arrowroot, has two-foot-long, pinnately-compound, stiff, leathery leaves that are very much like some palm leaves.

The plant and its cycad relatives look so much like palms that some are called by that name — notably the Sago "Palm," commonly grown as an exotic ornamental on Sanibel.

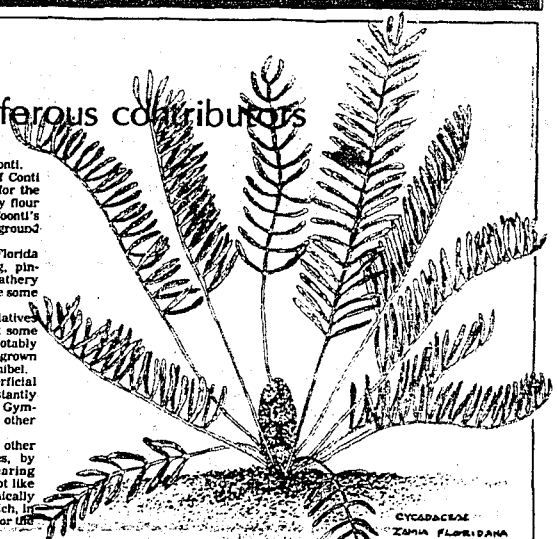

But cycads, in spite of superficial appearance, are not even distantly related to palms. They are Gymnosperms, like the pines and other conifers.

In fact, our Coontl and all other cycads reproduce, like pines, by means of male pollen-bearing structures, that look a whole lot like real pine cones but are botanically known as ovulate strobili (which, in fact, is also the correct name for the pine cones).

Male and female parts are pictured and labeled as micro- and mega-apophylls. Cycads are dioecious, which means male and female parts are borne on different plants.

This ancient, primitive plant group contributed to coal deposits. It is not uncommon to find cycad fossil impressions in coal seams. In fact, such fossils have aided greatly in establishing the cycads in their proper primitive classification, for such fossils pre-date the appearance of the modern flowering plants, or Angiosperms.

Individual cycads live a very long time. Two potted members of the African genus Encephalartos are growing today in the Palm House at The Royal Botanical Garden at Kew. One was potted a few years before the American Revolution; the other during that war.

CYCADACEAE

I visit these specimens often to check up on them, for Kew, near London, is one of my favorite places in the world. At last inspection both were still growing vigorously. One of the two is the only living member of its otherwise extinct species.

The underground stem of Coontl, sometimes inaccurately referred to in the literature as "rootstock," is the source of Indian bread. Grating and washing the flour is necessary to render the material free of the poison, Cycasin, which can kill.

Cycasin is found in the leaves and seeds as well as the tuber, but leaf toxin is important only to stockmen, for cattle sometimes eat the leaves. The resulting illness, characterized by ataxia, which causes a cow to stagger drunkenly, is called "wobbles" and is permanent.

Cycasin is also suggested to be a solitary carcinogen, one of the few to be found in our plant community.

The bright-orange seeds, almost round and about an inch in diameter, also contain the toxic Cycasin. Some Zamia seeds are detoxified by Indians in South American and ground into edible flour. This did not seem to be a practice of Florida Indians.

Zamia may be safely grown on Sanibel and should be, for it is part of our natural and cultural heritage. All that is necessary is to observe a few precautions suggested by the above comments. After all, nearly every garden has many toxic plants that are much more dangerous. Oleander anyone?

Orphans in the wild pose special problems

When you find young mammals alone you should leave them overnight. If they are still there in the morning they have possibly become lost or orphaned. Probably half of the orphans CROW raises should have been left alone.

By Holly Davies, director
Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife

Natural and unavoidable occurrences sometimes happen and cause the orphaning of young wild animals. A heavy thunderstorm will wash a nest from its niche in a tree. A very high storm tide will wipe out the nests, eggs and young of a colony of shorebirds. Strong winds will dislodge a young bird from its nest or even knock down the nest tree itself.

Nature's system of selective survival might determine that the weakest of young animals be abandoned to die. In this perfectly natural way, overcrowding is avoided and only the strongest survive to perpetuate the species.

Man has little or no control over events such as these. But even in cases where nature has seemed less than kind, sometimes we can help reunite young animals with their parents.

We at CROW are more concerned with preventing orphaned wildlife. We can refrain from certain activities that break up wildlife families.

During the spring and early summer many wildlife families are in the making. In the interest of avoiding destruction of nests and den sites a good idea to avoid the following: fires, controlled and otherwise, in areas where wildlife may den and nest; pruning, trimming and chopping trees and shrubs that might contain nests; letting pet dogs and cats run free; "rescuing" of young animals that might be away from their den or nests but that are being tended by their parents; building in areas where nesting is occurring; and of course, shooting near or among nesting sites.

For human foster parents, raising wildlife orphans is a full time proposition. Right now we have in the CROW "nursery" baby barn owls, screech owls, eastern cottontail rabbits, pileated woodpeckers, red-bellied woodpeckers, mockingbirds and opossums.

After years of practice and research the CROW staff is quite adept at providing the best nutritional diets for many species of orphaned wildlife.

It is quite another matter for human foster parents to instill in these orphaned wildlings the skills and techniques they need to survive in the wild. Only their natural parents can provide these, which is the reason CROW works toward keeping wildlife families together.

During this season we receive many calls from finders of supposedly orphaned birds and mammals. When we evaluate all the information we can find out about the particular situation, we often recommend action to keep the young in the wild where they belong, to be raised by their natural parents.

This year with the help in one case of interested and athletic bystanders, and in the other by the Lee County Electric Cooperative, two red-shouldered hawk chicks were replaced in their respective nests.

In one very experimental situation Mark "Bird" Westall placed osprey chick CROW patient number 205 and 206 (found clinging to the remnants of their nest floating in Pine Island Sound) in a foster nest here on Sanibel. One of the chicks died, but the other will be ready to fledge in a week or two.

CROW has guided many others who found young birds in placing the birds back in their original nests. In cases where the original nests have been destroyed, pseudo nests have been constructed. In these manmade nests of berry baskets, Cool Whip containers, etc. always with drainage holes to keep rainwater from filling the container and drowning the occupants), the young have been placed and then installed as close to the original nest sites as possible. After varying periods of hesitant behavior ranging from a few minutes to a few hours, in most cases the parents resume feeding and caring for their young.

It is an old wives' tale that wildlife parents will not care for their young after they are handled by humans. Most important to remember when you find a young animal that you think may be abandoned is to resist the urge to rush to the "rescue."

Unless the young one is injured or threatened by some danger, observe it carefully and quietly for some time before deciding to scoop it up.

If you do not know for certain that its parents are dead, do not assume they are just because you can not see them. They are probably close by, hidden from your sight but keeping very close tabs on their youngsters. Do not expect the parents to show themselves while you are hovering over their young — it probably won't happen.

When you find young mammals alone you should leave them overnight. If they are still there in the morning they have possibly become lost or orphaned. Probably half of the orphans CROW staff and volunteers raise each year should have been left alone.

CROW does accept for care orphans of native species of wildlife. This does not include starlings, house sparrows, rock doves or muscovy ducks, which are introduced exotics.

If you are unsure whether the young animal you find is an orphan or not, call CROW, 472-3644. We are happy to have the opportunity to help keep wildlife families intact.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

The Florida Legislature has passed the drunken boating bill that gives authorities the power of arrest over people who abuse alcohol on the water.

The law goes into effect July 1. I would estimate that from observation of boats docked at or using marinas in our area that about 50 percent of the boaters enjoy a drink while operating their vessels. So you can see the new law will affect a substantial segment of the boating public.

The law was passed in response to the large number of drinking related boating accidents around the state. Records kept by the state show that 70 percent of all boating accidents are related to operators who were drinking.

I would bet that for all those accidents the Florida Marine Patrol and other authorities find out about, probably twice that number go unreported. A tipsy boater who runs hard ground on a sand bar and injures someone on board is not going to call authorities; he's going to keep his mouth shut and get out of there as fast as he can.

The same goes for boaters who hit pilings, bridges and other stationary objects. I know of navigational markers that have gouges in them that could only have been made by a boat.

Under the new law the same drunk driving standards that apply to highway drivers will apply to boaters. That means marine patrol officers can board your boat to check for safety equipment, require you to submit to a breath or urine alcohol test and arrest you for driving while under the influence.

In Florida a blood alcohol level of more than .10 is enough for an arrest. The fines for conviction are from $250 to $500 with possible time in jail and community service.

There is already a law on the books concerning the drinking boater, but the new law stiffens fines and defines the various infractions.

For instance, under the new law there are two categories of reckless boat driving. The first is called an intentional violation of the law, such as speeding in a no-wake zone. The fine for such a first degree misdemeanor could be up to $1,000.

The charge of careless boating for unintentional infractions is a second degree misdemeanor and carries a fine up to $500 and 60 days in jail.

From what I can determine the law does not say you cannot have a cold beer on a hot summer afternoon. But if you have too many and your alcohol level is over .10, then the authorities now have the power to take you off the water one way or another.

Incidentally, the new law also gives officers the use of "reasonable force" should they want to take a blood test if you cause a serious accident.

So it's prudent to watch your intake while on the water from now on. And remember it will soon be time to renew your boat decals. Having an expired decal invites inspections, if you know what I mean. Good boating this week. And be careful.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

The several types of cone shells in Florida waters carry with them an aura of mystery and perhaps some misunderstanding. Let's examine this family of shells this week.

First the name: Cones really do have a cone-shaped body with a twisting, stacked top. Some, like the valued alphabet cone, have a short top; others, such as the Florida cone, have a rather pointed top.

Size: These shells are not large. A really giant alphabet cone might reach four inches tall, but the normal is half that size.

Varieties: Besides the two cones already mentioned, we also see the Jasper cone in these parts. All of these interesting specimens are hunters in the shell world. They stalk the shallow flats of Pine Island Sound and the edges of the Gulf of Mexico looking for marine worms and small mollusks.

One thing I often hear about from my shelling charter folks is their fear of encountering a live cone that is supposed to inflict a poisonous sting. It is common to read that about cones, but from all I've ever been able to find, although cones are spread around the warm waters of the world, only a very few in the Pacific Ocean can deliver a dose lethal enough to kill a human.

All cones, apparently, do have a rather unique "spear" called a radular tooth that they shoot out to stun or shock a potential food source. The cone then moves in and devours the small shell or fish.

The fact that one or two isolated cones can inflict pain or death puts shellers on the alert. But the fact is I cannot remember finding even one live cone in all my years of shelling. Obviously, there are living cones around the Islands, but few are ever found.

But that does not mean live cones were never common here. Some people who have been coming to Sanibel since the Causeway was built in 1963 say the Causeway Islands once were a great place for live cones.

And another thing: Cones are notorious night feeders. But 99 percent of the shellers are day collectors; therefore, they don't find many live cones.

Of course, with today's concern over preserving what is left of the living shells, few responsible collectors will take live shells. But I imagine it would be interesting to look for cones on a warm, low tide night. Don't forget the bug spray, though.

All cones have the ability to project that sharp radular tooth and even grow a new "spear" should that one get damaged.

So even though you will hear about the danger of taking cones, don't give it too much concern. The shells with a yellow background and light colored spots make a fine addition to any collection. Good shelling this week.

Adult softball begins

West Wind wins all five games in season's opening tournament

Richie Price's grand slam homerun in the seventh inning broke open a close game against the new Mucky Duck team and helped West Wind finish its hurricane drive through the Old Sports for Youth Sports tournament last weekend.

West Wind beat Mucky Duck in the final game, 14-6.

In the three-day tournament West Wind won all five of its games to win the event for the second year in a row.

The tournament is traditionally the kick-off for the adult softball league. Last year's tournament started West Wind on a season that went undefeated through 16 regular season games. The team also won the No-Securum Classic in September.

And for this season? It's still up for grabs as the slate is wiped clean in anticipation of regular season games this week.

In the weekend tournament (final on Sunday, the surprise team of the tournament, Mucky Duck, played West Wind tight through six innings, with West Wind leading 7-4.

Mucky Duck made one mistake in the early innings, however, when the team decided to pitch to Oscar Gavin. After three balls, one came within Gavin's reach and he wallowed the rawhide to the outfield. With help from Mucky Duck misuses, Gavin turned the hit into a three-run "homerun."

In the seventh inning Mucky Duck took no chances and sent Gavin to first base on an intentional walk which loaded the bases for Richie Price.

The tactic backfired as Price slammed the ball over the left center field fence for a grand slam homerun that seemed to deflate the "Ducks". Price and Gavin both ended the tournament with three homeruns apiece.

In the tournament the nine men's teams had a chance to feel each other out, find out what changes have been made for this season and who the teams to beat are going to be. The results of the 16 games played were as follows:

- West Wind over Island Exon, 8-2
- Naumann over Mucky Duck, 5-3
- Island Medical Center over Peppers, 8-2
- Dunes over Mariner, 8-1
- West Wind over South Seas, 15-2
- Island Exon over Peppers, 13-1
- Mucky Duck over Mariner, 13-3
- Mucky Duck over Island Exon, 6-2
- South Seas win with "bye"
- West Wind over Dunes, 8-6
- Island Medical over Naumann
- South Seas over Island Medical
- Mucky Duck over Dunes, 11-1
- Mucky Duck over South Seas
- West Wind over Naumann, 9-2
- West Wind over Mucky Duck, 14-6

This week's schedule includes:

•Tuesday, June 5 6:30 p.m. — South Seas vs. Island Medical Center; 7:45 p.m. — Mariner vs. Naumann; 9 p.m. — Mucky Duck vs. Dunes.
•Thursday, June 7 6:30 p.m. — Peppers vs. West Wind; 7:45 p.m. — South Seas vs. Island Exon; 9 p.m. — Island Medical vs. Naumann.
•Sunday, June 10 2 p.m. — Naumann vs. Mucky Duck; 3 p.m. — Dunes vs. Peppers.

Sportsman of the Week Mike Umland

Mike Umland is this week's Sportsman of the Week.

Last week Umland received the Sportsmanship award for Sanibel-Captiva Little League. All four boys' coaches voted for Umland. For this honor, Umland received a new glove donated by Sunbelt Recreation.

Umland is a Ranger. His coach, Tom Traucht, says he is the kind of player who is always out there trying and is the overall good sport with the kind of attitude that greatly helps a team.

The Sportsman of the Week recognizes local athletes from fishermen to ballplayers and swimmers to golfers.

The Islander welcomes nominations for Sportsman of the Week. Nominations should be in our office by noon Thursday and can be made by calling Scott Martell, 472-5185.

Rec center round-up

This column provides information about the latest classes, tournaments, teams and try-outs taking place and other services that are offered at the city's recreation complex.

•Through Oct. 1 the complex is open from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Monday through Friday. The pool is open during the lunch hour, and the complex stays open an extra hour in the evening. At least two lanes are open for adult lap swimming at all times.

•Softball players take note! The rec complex is considering a co-ed softball league. But first it must be determined if enough interest exists in the community to support such a league.

The fields are available and the competition should be fairly relaxed compared to the more competitive men's and women's leagues on the Island.

Interested Islanders should call the rec complex and voice their enthusiasm if they wish such a league to develop.

•For the kids, the summer recreation program starts June 18 and runs through July.

Recreation Director Dick Noon says a Frisbee instructor will be available. Tennis lessons will also be a new event at the summer program. A larger staff will provide everything from arts and crafts to dancing and aerobics.

The program will again be absolutely free and run every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

Every Friday the complex will sponsor a "Sports Day" fun competition in which youths will compete in various activities from track and field to shooting baskets.

To register their children from the program parents must fill out a registration form, which is available at the rec complex.

•Aerobics classes are taught in the rec center pool from 9 to 10 a.m. every Tuesday and Thursday throughout the summer. Cost of each session is $3.50.

•Sessions start with stretching exercises for 15 minutes then progress to bouncing exercises similar to the aerobic routines.

Aquaerobics works the body against the force of the water. And because of the cushion of water, there is no pain or stiffness, instructor Pat Shank says.

For more information on any of the above classes or events call the rec complex, 472-0345.

Sports quiz

Last week's question about car racing proved tough for Islanders. "Jimmy the Greek" nailed the second part of the racing quiz, however.

For the first part of the quiz, the car racer who was asked to try out for the Washington Redskins was Cale Yarborough — but he declined in order to continue racing. He did play semi-pro football in South Carolina for four years, and he was also an all-state football player in high school.

The last person to win the Indianapolis 500 two consecutive times was Al Unser, who won in 1970-71.

Others who have done the same feat include Wilbur Shaw (1939-40), Mauri Ross (1948-49) and Bill Vukovich (1953-54).

This week the quiz turns to golf.

True or false: A man once "golfed" across the entire length of the United States? And who holds the United States PGA record for the longest drive? If you think you know give us a call at 472-5185. If you're right we'll print your name in next week's Islander.

Little Leaguers enjoy special night at Terry Park

Almost 75 Island ballplayers took advantage of the first Sanibel-Captiva Little League Night at Terry Park last week. The fun-filled event raised about $500 for the league, said organizer Dick Myers.

All little leaguers got into the Fort Myers Royal game free and watched the Royals blast the West Palm Beach team, 13-7.

The Island ball players sold $1 tickets to the game. Mike Toomey, 13, sold the most tickets, and Greg Miller and Eric Rizzo were right behind him. All three were bat boys at the Royal's game.

Sheinwold on bridge

By Alfred Sheinwold

When you have nothing better to do, make declarer ruff. You might run him out of trumps or promote a trump to winning rank.

Today's South should bid four hearts over three spades to show this strong preference for hearts. North might well pass, and South would thus reach an unbeatable contract.

At four spades, South ruffed the second diamond and left the king of hearts to drive out the ace. East feebly returned a trump, and South drew trumps and ran the hearts, making his game.

BETTER CHANCE

One taking the ace of hearts East should expect a trick with the ace of clubs but should also know that the setting trick can come only from the trump suit. The best chance is to make South ruff again.

East should therefore cash the ace of clubs and then lead the ace of diamonds. This defense develops several tricks in the dummy, but declarer cannot use them. South must ruff the ace of diamonds, and now West's ten of spades will surely take the setting trick.

DAILY QUESTION

4. You open with one diamond and partner responds with one heart. The opponents pass. What do you say?

ANSWER

Bid three hearts. If partner has only six or seven points, three hearts is high enough. If he has eight points or more he will go on to game if you bid three. If your partner has good sense, don't bid his cards for him; if he doesn't have good sense, keep the bidding low.

Sanibel law requires that although your dog does not have to be on a leash in public, he must be under your control at all times. You are responsible for your pet behavior.
The Chamber of Commerce can tell you which accommodations accept families with pets.
Remember: Wherever you are, clean up after your pet! "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints!" applies to dogs, too.

GATORS
Finding alligators anywhere within the Sanibel-Captiva Islands is not only illegal but extremely dangerous.
Alligators can run up to 45 mph, so if you are close enough to feed an alligator he becomes a potential threat to children and pets.
Dogs should never be permitted to run free on Sanibel. Fence your dog, walk him on a leash or, if you must free him for a walk, keep him under voice control. Never tie your dog in an unsecured back yard.
For help with a nuisance alligator, call the following: recent relatives of the South-west Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed and have permits to handle alligators: George Cammelly, 472-7825; Steve Phillips, 472-2229; Mark Westra, 472-5126.
