Rash of home burglaries prompts advice from police

By Cindy Chalmers

A Tash of home burgiartes on Santhel has prompted Island police to urge residents to report immediately any suspicious people or vehicles observed in residential areas.

"We're checking out all reports of anyone who doesn't look right," Officer Rick Kernedy said last week. "We will respond to any call about strange people, cars or vans."

Kennedy said Friday police are investigating five home burglaries in which televisions have been stoien. The owners of all of the homes are off-fishand on vacetion, Kennedy said, adding the lists of missing items could grow once the owners return and check their homes thoroughly.

The burglaries have been discovered by neighbors of he police officers on routine dark house checks, Kennedy said. People who are watching triends home would be wise to increase they checks, he suggested.

The recent burgfaries shoul remind residents of the importance of inventorying and recording the make, model and serial number of the valuables in their homes, kennedy said, it added only one of the victims thus far has been able provide police with a television set model and serial number. ### Council approves city's lowest ever millage rate for 1984-85

By Cindy Chaimers

By Chady Chalmers
Although their overall tax bills more than likelywill increase in 1884-85, Santhel property owners will be taxed at the lowest miliage rate in the city's history. City Manager Bernie Murphy told the City Council at a special meeting duty; told the City

Assessed valuation, however, is the key to Murphy's prediction that islanders will pay more taxes in 1984-8t in pile of the city's lower milage rate. The Lee County property appraiser has "substitutify re-valuated" properties on Sainbel, Murphy explained to the council — cooligin of the city's decrease in miliage wifn out be able to

The same figure for 1984-85 is 3739,984,660. Murphy suggested that the council invite county Property Appraiser Ken Wilkinson to a public forum or explain he new valuations and answer questions from Island cilizens. "Let him defend what he has done," Murphy said. "I am certainly not prepared to explain or defend his actions." Mayor Fred Vallit saids he had already spoken to Wilkinson. "He told me, "It was time to re-appraise. We did. That how it came out," Vallit told his fellow councilimembers. Still, however, the council agreed on he need to bring Wilkinson to Samibel for a public meeting.

They caused that by citoling both the county and city into accepting a botched solution to the obvious drainage problem of the area. IWA took no part in that biunder. It is my suggestion, therefore, that the cost of the drainage correction aspects of the project be funded by those responsible for its need. That should be done by levying a front-foot special assessment on the abutting and benefitting properties. The costs should include those for salvaging IWA's abandoned pipe.

The quaint structure could be converted for use as a theater with only a few improvements, and the exterior would be left unchanged, she said. There is plenty of space for parking on the eight-acre site, she added.

commission Chairman Larry Simon and Com-missioner Mary Wegmulier agreed it would be great to regenerate community theater on the Island

Wegmuller said she preferred the Bailey's location to the Pirate Playhouse because of Iraffic conditions on Pertwinkle Way.

But Simon was concerned that the cost of bringing the building up to the city's fire and safety codes would be prohibitive. He suggested Lund get a more work of the property of before proceeding further.

Though Commissioner Lennart Lorenson was in favor of reviving community theater; he said he was hesitant about changing the zoning to accomplish it.

Lorenson pointed out that if the cost of remodeling were more than 50 percent of the value of the building, then flood proofing would be necessary, Island real estate broker Don Bissell is helping Lund in her search for a theater location. He said the current use of the Balley's property as a warchouse "restrictive commercial."

Commissioner Ann Winterbotham said she was against a Special Use District and made the motion to desy Lund's request.

Lorenson supported the motion while Simon and Wegmuller voted "no."

Sundial East will have only one driveway

The Planning Commission has approved closing of the west driveway at Sundial East condominiums, leaving the 141-unit, three-building complex with a single entrance at the east property line.

Jim Schuelder, concominium manager, said the owners wanted to have one entrance for security reasons have one entrance for security reasons and preferred using the west entrance because it is more accessible to all the units and to the complex office.

But after hearing complaints from residents of the Sandpebble condiminums directly across the street from the west driveway, the com-missioners voted 40 to approve a development permit to close that driveway.

The Sundpebble residents main-telned increased traffic would make teined increased traffic would make their lives unbearable if the eastern driveway at the Sundial were closed. Commissioners Jerry Muench, Henry McKee and Bill Read were abent. Sundial East will be required to

East Gulf Drive drainage improvements hit snag

The Public Works Department's plan to install a drainage system along 1700 feet of East Guif Drive between the Colony Resort and Sanibal Arms on-ominiums has hit a snag.

Swates and ditches will be constructed glong both sides of the road with three outlet change is of drain excess surface water into an adjacednt capal. "There's no fleoding on the road in that area. The problem is with standing water on the developments on the guif side." he said, "And that is not the city's problem out the individual's."

Almas pointed out that when Surfaide 12 was built the surface water was retained on the property by use of french drains

A general amendment to Sanibel's land use plan designed to control the intensity of use in new development in the resort housing area has met defeat before the City Council. He claimed that condos with large units generate a higher intensity of use than interval owner units, especially in the peak season.

The proposed ordinance would not reduce intentity of use but would only decrease density, he said.

Assistant Planning Director Bob Duane had said that density in the resort housing zone would be cut from five units to 3.1 units per acre if the property owner chose to build units of high impact, which can be used for short term rentals, rather than residential condominiums.

But Johnson insisted that under the new ordinance developers would still have a choice.

Paveika questioned whether the council had considered the impact on buildback of lawfully existing units buildback of lawfully existing units.

Under CLUP regulations in effect now, these properties would not have to comply with current density allocations when rebuilding after being more than 50 percent destroyed.

But Pavelka said there is no guarantee that this will remain unchanged when the city finally comes to grips with the buildhack problem.

Motel owners will not redevelop with short term rental units at a lower density, he said.

The council had no answer to Pavelka's question of how this legislation will be administered and igisiation will be adminiscred and how much it will cost. City Attorney David La Croix said Pavelka was "nitpicking" when he called the ordinance's definition of a "bedroom" ambiguous. 'What's a bedroom can be deter mined reasonably and on a common sense basis when someone comes in with an appliction to build," La Croix sald. "Specific criterion is not needed."

Klein said Paveika had "thrown out a number of red herrings with questions designed to east double in Hagerup said after hearing the discussion it appeared the two other proponents were more concerned with reducing density and a certain type of development than controlling intensity of use, which was the ordinances primary purpose. "Thus I can no longer support the ordinance," he said said.

Johnson's motion for approval failed by a 3.2 vote with only Johnson and Kiein supporting the motion.
But the council did support unanimously another general amendment that will prohibit the short term rental of single-family homes and duplexes outside the reserve and duplexes outside the resort bousing area after Oct. 1, 1985. The ordinance contains a new definition of temporary occupancy as a period of less than four consecutive weeks (28 days), which the council had determined is the key to enforcement of the CLUP restriction on short term

Getting down to business: Don Bissell

Profession: President of Bissell Realty Service, Corp.

Personal goals: "To get the new business off and rolling and have a happy business experience. Also, to get my last three kids through college.'

When not working: "Being with the family is high on the list. I'd like to get back into golf and tennis when I have more time."

Family: Wife Ginny and six children: Steve, Brian, Trish, Janet, Barb and Wendy.

For the past eight years numerous signs have dotted the Island landscape carrying a familiar phrase: "Bissell and Holtz — Island Real

But now the Don Bissell half of that popular consortium has left the firm to start up another consortium has left the HTM to BEAT UP ARROWS "I guess it was a case of the 'seven year litch," laughs Bissell. "Marty Holtz and I had been affiliated since 1975, and we had a very happy and rewarding experience. And we had a very happy parting of the ways. I just wanted to do my own bing".

own thing."

"Doing my own thing" summarizes Bissell's entire Susiness experience. After a fulfilling career in sales and construction in Indianapolis, Ind., he moved his family to Sanibel in 1970 and started the Dairy Queen franchise.

"If was quite an experience," Bissell says about the DQ days. "It was fun hard work and a good jamily project. But it wasn't something I planned Uslob as acreer."

Two years of owning the Diary Queen was chough. Then Bissell and his wife bour obtained real estate licenses. Bissell started with Sanibel Realty and then joined Holtz as a sales associate. In 1976 the two become partners.

Now he is starting his own company in a field be knows is very competitive on Sanibel and

There are more real estate businesses than shell shops," he jokes. "But, like in most business, there is always room for another good one."

And he doesn't plan or feel the need to become the biggest on the Island. "In five years I'll still be small, efficient and simple," he says. "You don't need to be big to be successful."

While he plans to focus on "regular real estate transactions with a strong emphasis on Santbel," Bissell has some long term possibilities also in mind.

Those ideas run the gamut from looking into properties in the Iona area to establishing partnerships for commercial properties.

Partnerships for buying individual condominiums also might be the wave of the future.

"As the prices keep going up and the number of available places becomes more limited, I can of available places occurred from third to the see it happening more often that three or four people will get together to buy one apartment," he forecasts. "And I suspect these will be people who will really use the apartment, instead of renting it all the time. Dividing the cost of a ninium opens up an opportunity to more people."

Joining Bissell in his new firm are George

This and Birsell's wife,

"... As the Island develops, we need more businesses and services. These bring in younger people. So gradually we are achieving a more normal average age. And any community is better off when it is more akin to the profile of the country as a whole."

"Balance" is a word that often crops up in conversations with Bissell — whether it be a discussion about the need for a good balance between real estate buyers and sellers or bet-ween condominium and single-family home owners.

Bisself sees the growth of Sanibel as a pendulum that is now swinging back to the middle—where there is a better balance.

where there is a better balance.
In the late 190's development on the Islands was primarily motels and single-family homes.
As the city began to be formed, the pendulum swung far to the side as many developers tried to create their multi-family units before anticipated tougher zoning regulations went into

Now, as shown by the number of Rate of effect.

Now, as shown by the number of Rate of Growth Ordinance applications for single-family homes, the pendulum is swinging back to the middle ground.

In the mid to late 1970's the multi-family like the middle ground.

In the mid to late 1970's the multi-family is leader to the readerstial, all seel ages. "Now the multi-family type of unit is nearing an end—it is reaching buildout. We can see a change now with the ROGO pressure for single-family homes, More residential homes will bring back our balance."

The key to stopping the pendulum awing, then, is for the City Fathers of Sanibel to hold the line with the city's established land use plan.

"I hope they can hold on." Bissell says. "I have tolat confidence that they will. I'm sure they all want to maintain the quality of life here. Again, balance is the key for the kind of "maiure" community with a good quality of life that Bissell errentons.

Again, database is the key for the kind to "mature" community with a good quality of life that Bissell envisions.

"Over the part few years the average age on Sanibel has gotten lower," he says. "So I think we are slowly becoming a more typical cross-section. As the Island develops, we need more businesses and services. These bring in younger people. So gradually we are achieving a more normal average age. And any community is better off when it is more akin to the profile of the country as a whole."

So Bissell believes the Islands are heading toward a better community balance — in both age of residents and the type of dwelling they choose.

The market for real estate on the Islands has also finally reached a better balance, he says, "The recession created a glut of places for sale here. Many people up north who had places down here were seeking liquidity of their assets, so they tried to convert them to each by selling their they tried to convert them to cash by selling their property.

"Now, it is balancing out better between the number of buyers and sellers. It really started to even out in the middle of March and has progressed right on through the summer.

"There is a definite need for an orderly, balanced, and honest market," he maintains.
"This is the kind of market that functions better."

For instance, when there is a better balance ror instance, when there is a better balance between buyers and sellers, also of the pressure eases, he says. "And you get a more natural rate of appreciation. Rates are much better if they flow with the cost of living."

As a matter of fact, small businesses employ 47.8 percent of the entire private non-formwork force, according to the President's Report on the State of Small Business that was recently transmitted to Congress that was recently transmitted to Congress.

The report prepared by the SBA shows that small busicesses are more likely to generate jubs that will be filled by younger workers, older workers and women. In addition, a small firm is more likely than a large lirm to ecommodate he wards needs of these workers on the workers whom prefer to or are only able to work on a flexible basis — including more part-lime work opportunities. Contrary to popular notion, small businesses are more likely to provide basic job training for first-time job holders and those who are reemtering, the job market. In addition, previously unemployed workers and those out of the labor force — retirees, homemakers and students — are more likely to be hired by small businesses. As you can see, small businesses is not just a collection of self-employed workers; rather, small business crusses is seattle programmed. crosses the entire spectrum of the jo

Two officers pull over a car suspected to have been used during the getaway after a police officer was shot.

The officers instruct the two occupants to turn the car off and then tell the driver to get out of the car slowly. The driver starts to get out of the car but then pulls out a weapon and begins shooting.

The officers return fire, hitting the suspect. The suspect's partner exits the car and runs for cover behind a biliding. One officer pursues the fleeing suspect while the other approaches the fallen suspect. Suddenly a third man jumps out of the suspect car and fires on the ap-proaching officer. The third suspect then sneaks up on the other officer and shoots her "Stop!" yells instructor Don Van Meter. All the injurent people suddenly come back to life. It was a simulation. The bullets shot colton instead or lead. But if it had been the real thing Sanihel would have been mourning the deaths of Saulhel would have been mourning the deaths of two police officers.

The simulation was a part of a day-long training exercise Van Meter conducted last week for the Santhel Police Department called Survival vs. Survival vs. Survival vs. Survival vs. The program sponsored by Nutshell Training Concepts, Inc. of Columbus, Ohio, was designed to put officers into situations as realistic as possible and see how they react.

Story and photos by Mark Johnson

After the Sanibei officers handled the simulation here she was critiqued on what could have done differently to prevent themselves or their suspects from getting killed.

For example: an officer approaches a car on a routine traffic violation. The driver of the car is stiting with his left arm henging out the window. As the officer approaches the driver shoots him five times in the chest with a gain he had been have done to prevent getting shot.

Van Meter, a former lieutenant with the Ohio Highway Patrol, travels around the country training people on how to react to a possibility explosive situation and disarm it. He uses techniques designed to save lives of both the officers and the suspects by teaching officers to he more aware of possible trouble and how to stop it becrue it starts.

So provide the suspects by teaching officers to he more aware of possible trouble and how to survive a life threatening situation physically, psychologically and civiliy.

Rhodes, the officer responsible for bringing the training program to Sanibel, said it was one of the hest courses he has ever seen. The idea behind training is to help an officer to know what to look for in a given situation. In said: "When you put a person into a stress situation he will react the way he has been trained." When you had not stress situation because he might have gained erough confidence in himself to handle the problem without force.

The Nutshell course differs from the Sanibel Police Department's normal firearms training in that instead of shooting and reacting to a paper target, officers have for react to a person much can and will shoot back. Rhodes explained. Hondes and Copt. Bill Trefny Continued page 28

We are well into the second week of re-opened snook season, and the first reports indicate there snoot season, and the first reports indicate there has been a respectable showing of these prized gamelish — but not nearly the numbers of one early August a few years ago.

If you've been getting up early and working some if you've been getting up early ain working some of the better spots but not seeing any action, just keep at it. These fish are still around, and some will be caught each day around the Islands. Around the Blind Pass Furdge, the Lighthouse on Santbol, under the Causeway bridges at night and along the Captiva shore will produce the most fish.

While the snock is difficult to catch, there are while the snoot is difficult to calch, there are some others in our waters that are not so clustice and are providing many beach anglers with good catches. The two doing the best to eat your shrimp baits are the whiting and the pompano.

Whiting are caught almost exclusively along the surf line of the beaches. Anglers fishing from the resorts on Captiva have been having some good luck with whiting that measure up to 15 inches long.

These silvery colored fish have tiny, underslung mouths. They often feed and travel in schools up and down the heach, looking primarily for tiny sand fieas. They work over the shallow waters within easy casting range of most anglers.

I like a rising tide for whiting. And keep in mind that they will like small live shrimp as much as the sand fleas you can eath in the surf.

Whiting never get much larger than 18 inches, but they are good eating tish that give a good fight. There is no size or number limit on these lish. The part I like about pompano is that they can be

We used red leads ard pink bodies tipped with real shrimp. I suggest walking the beaches, casting every few yards until you feel a tug on your line. Early menings will probably work best. Nearby swimmers tend to make fishing difficult, so get out better the Use smaller hooks — about 1/0 or 2/0 will be right — when using shrimp. A half a piece of a larger shrimp will work fine, too. Good luck fishing this week. And remember — if you want a more dependable fish to catch, look for whiting and pompano.

SILINGTIES

By Captain Mike Fuery

Many Island visitors who are new to shelling don't understand how live shells feed themselves or how other shells feed upon each other.

other shells lead upon each other.

Just a few days ago a group of my shellers came upon a rather-utrange sight. Basically, there are two states of shell, The most aumerous are the bivatives, which have two sides. The various clams fall into this category, as do oysters, angel wings and scallops. Those it lying shells sift the waters for finy particles to feed upon.

The other broad estegory are univalves, which have only one shell. These are generally larger than the blvalves. In fact, they make it a point to eat stablishmen.

than the divisives. In the bivalves.

So, we have the two types of shells — one the sifter and the other the aggressive univalve that eats the itrel kind.

A couple of days ago we discovered a rather touching duel going on at a remote sandbar near Casaprilla Island.

One of my tolks looking for shells came upon a horse cootch that measured probably it indexes tall—and it was engaged in a struggle with a lightning whelk that wear good note inches tall. Two things interested us: one, that two univalves would be in a struggle, and two, that the conch had such an appetite!

It is our practice on shelling trips to return live shells to the deeper waters around the Islands, so we attempted to separate the two. But we found much conchi had falled the bly whelk, we took the whelk for a collection, and the corch went over the side of the heat in 3 feet of water.

I taked the whole incident over with a couple of my shelling triends, and we all thought it father urusual to see two shells of the same group attacking each other.

unusual to see two seems of the same group tacking each other.
White all that was going on, however, a real struggle or life was in progress further down the sandbar. A great bits heron had landed amid other rea birth and had collapsed, I waited slowly to it. Of course it struggled to fly but (ell helpleasiy at the course it struggled to by but left helpleady at the edge of the water.

I carefully looked it over while holding its dangerous beak. I could find no fish hooks—the issual cause of sea bird deaths—on its body or around its bill. Itried to get it to stand, but I pad no luck with that. I could see no signs of harm to the great blue heron, so I finally came to the conclusion that it was living its last moments before dying from oid age or disease.

My charter folks looked it over and asked about taking it somewhere. The kind people that gaff the CROW wildlife rehabilitation unit on Sambel were the only ones I could think of. We went on shelling. About 20 minutes later we looked back to see a chilling sight. Two turkey buzzards, the undertakers of the wild world, had lapied not 10 feet from the dying great blue and were waiting for the end to Timber's made it two was in as many weeks with a 7-2 score over Normandy Loungeon Sunday.

Buth teams started off slow, but Timbers burned it on in the second inning and Normandy could not cotch up.

Led by the defensive play of short stop Barb Herbert and the pitching of Wendy Bissell, Timbers controlled Normardy Lompe's effensive game.
Timbers coach Paul Leduc said

Timbers coach Paul Leduc Said Herbert was the defensive player of the game. "She was like a vacuum cleaner." he waid. "She enughi everything that came near her." Normandy Lounge was maable to get anything started because of poor hitting. "We hit really well in practice, but we can't hit during the game," said Normandy couch Tim Bursiek. He added he believed his players tense up during the game, resulting in the poor offense.

However, Bursiek did say he was pleased with the defensive play of second baseman June Bursiek and the speed of outfielder all Weiter. This Sunday Calberiston Flayers are scheduled to play Normand Lounge at 12:30 pt.m. it is a must win from the University of the Players because a fine trep the team improcessed place in the leaves behind
