Police arrest four for Ramada Inn burglaries

"We could be talking about hundreds of thousands of dollars before it's all over."
Wayne Hinz
Investigating officer

By Cindy Chalmers

Police have linked four people arrested on Sanibel late Sunday night to a major organized crime network that runs throughout Florida and very possibly into other states and even other countries.

The arrests Sunday were the result of an intense three-week investigation into numerous thefts of credit cards, cash and jewelry from units at the gut-front Ramada Inn on Sanibel.

Police Chief John Butler commended Officers Dick Church and Wayne Hinz for their actions that led to the arrests of Paul Anthony Miller, 40, of Zephyrhills; Paul Joey Lee Vinson, 32, also of Zephyrhills; Robert Charles Herring, 43, of Council adopts $3.288 million budget

By Barbara Brundage

Sanibel City Council adopted a $3.288 million budget for fiscal year 1984-85 based on a millage rate of 2.51 mills, the lowest in the city's history.

Though spending is up, the tax rate is down. The absence of the public and lack of comment from the three residents on hand at a final public hearing last Tuesday was viewed as evidence of approval.

Five issues raised at the first public hearing two weeks ago were settled by the three council members present.

By unanimous votes the council approved:

• A 4 percent merit pay raise for City Attorney David La Croix effective on the anniversary of his employment;

• A 2 percent salary increase for longevity for persons employed more than 10 years;

• Carrying over to the new fiscal year $4,000 remaining in the Below Market Rate Housing Foundation budget; and

• Using an average of the last five years salary rather than the last 10 years to compute retirement income for sworn police officers.

City Manager Bernie Murphy assured the council that there were adequate funds in the Ad-

City named in suit seeking $200,000 in damages

By Barbara Brundage

The city of Sanibel has been hit with another law suit.

Couch Construction Company of Fort Myers has filed an eight count federal complaint against the city, Island Water Association, and engineering consultants Howard Needles Tammen and Bergendort seeking $200,000 damages.

The suit claims that Couch Construction, the city's general contractor for the Tarpon Bay Road project in 1982, "suffered from extreme delays during that construction."

The suit charges that IWA delayed the project by refusing to relocate its water mains and that the association refused to cooperate by identifying the location of the mains.

City Attorney David La Croix said Mayor Fred Vatin was served notice of the suit early last Wednesday morning.

Trial of the Carbro, Inc. vs. city of Sanibel case before Lee County Circuit Court Judge William Nelson will begin at 9 a.m. Tuesday, Oct. 9, in the new judicial center in Fort Myers.

Carbro, Inc., owner of property on Periwinkle Way now occupied by the P&B Oyster Co. restaurant, filed the complaint in September 1982.

The suit challenges the city's denial of a request for a change in zoning on the property from residential to commercial and seeks damages for Council, city employees bid farewell to Murphy

The official goodbye for City Manager Bernie Murphy was a fond one at last Tuesday's budget hearing — complete with nice words, gifts and a long standing ovation from city employees in attendance at the meeting.

"Action's gain is our loss," said Mayor Fred Valtin in reference to Murphy's new position as town manager in Acton, Mass. "Many executives say they don't want to be loved, only respected — but they really hope to have both. Most don't achieve this, but I think you, Bernie, have."

Murphy, then turned around and praised the city staff. "It has been the staff that has made me look good," he stressed.

He added that he will likely be back on Sanibel — after all, he has 59 weeks of promises of places to stay, he laughed. And he invited everyone up to Acton — "But not at the same time!"

The council presented Murphy with a clock/plaque embellished with the seal of the city of Sanibel. And

Everybody loves a parade Periwinkle Way procession will kick off city's birthday party

A parade complete with marching bands, floats, a live Florida panther and even a Lee County sheriff's posse on horseback will kick off Sanibel's 10th birthday party celebration Saturday, Nov. 10.

Already 10 island service clubs and neighborhood and condominium associations have reserved their place in line for floats in the parade. In between the floats will be everything from high school marching bands to police honor guards and classic cars — all here to wish the city Happy Birthday on the 10th anniversary of incorporation.

Parade participants will take their places in line on Cass Ybel Road near its intersection with Periwinkle Way around 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 10, in preparation for the start of the procession at noon.

The parade route will travel west along Periwinkle Way to Tarpon Bay Road, then north on Tarpon Bay Road to Florence Way and across Palm Ridge Road to Wooster Lane, which leads to the Sanibel City Hall, where there will be food and festivities for all to enjoy.

Watch The Islander for details about the festivities as the celebration day draws near. For more information about the parade and to enter your own organization in the procession call parade organizer Chuck Skinner, 472-4888.

COMMENTARY

Sanibel resident casts vote for Mary Ann Wallace

To the Editor
The Islander
This letter is to acquaint the voters of Sanibel with Mary Ann Wallace. She is running in the runoff Republican primary Oct. 2 for Lee County Commissioner, District 2.

She has been active in the affairs of Lee County government for the past nine years. She has been representative and spokesman for homeowners in numerous zoning cases since 1975. She has been actively involved in the Lee County Comprehensive Plan, in revising of zoning regulations, environmental impact statements and many more similar activities.

Among the positions she has held or does hold are: chairman of the Sierra Club, Calusa group; chairman of Lee County "Friends of the Everglades"; founding member of Southwest Florida Women's Political Caucus and many more. She is businesslike, knowledgeable and effective, and if elected she will work for balancing our natural resources with growth.

Sincerely yours,
Doris Christensen

'Grounds' for discussion

To the Editor
The Islander
Comes now the season for coffee and cookies. When once gentle ladies turn politeness and hooks in. And, choosing someone they would like to see win, set out to make certain ... by having talks in.

But what of the trouble these good people take? What is the result of their labors? What's the impression the candidates make? What's the effect on the neighbors? They stay away who might otherwise cross him. Those who show up were a cinch to endorse him.

So, fresh-brewed or instant, or freeze-dried or perked. However they make it, it hasn't yet worked. That's all of the issues the candidates range. Does so much as a single guest's mind ever change?

Estero resident points to 'accomplishments' of incumbent Lee County Commissioner

To the Editor
The Islander
It appears that the politics surrounding the Lee County Commissioner race are taking a rather ugly turn not foreseen by the supporters of Mary Ann Wallace, perhaps it is time to consider the contributions of Commissioner Roland Hubert during the three years he has held this important post.

His most notable contributions seem to be the frequent speeches he makes during the commission meetings. These "nap attacks" are well documented on film. This may only be overshadowed by his memorable tie-breaking vote that allowed building permits for the construction of a 13-story condo almost within the boundary of our beautiful new state park on Black Island.

It's interesting to note that Ma. Wallace defeated her opponent handily on his home turf where he is best known.

Isn't it time to wake up and elect a knowledgeable, concerned, wide awake person to represent us?

Fort Myers Beach resident urges Sanibel neighbors to vote for Mary Ann Wallace

To the Editor
The Islander
Every time I drive through Sanibel I am impressed by its beauty and excellent planning. I live in Fort Myers Beach, and eight years ago we were close to such pristine beauty. But in eight years the changes have been alarming. To list a few: a mass of condos along the gulf and now parking on the bay; binding traffic extending new to off-season; sewer system failure; present and past moratoriums on sewer and water hook-ups; and the improperly paved Estero Boulevard that floods during rain storms.

To counter such situations and help provide the good qualities of Sanibel, it is evident that we need a commissioner to represent us other than the incumbent of the last eight years.

At the Sept. 4 primary Mary Ann Wallace received 82 percent more votes than Commissioner Roland Roberts in Roberts' own district on Fort Myers Beach.

For the past eight years Mary Ann Wallace has been well known working diligently for a cleaner, environment, controlled growth and citizen welfare. Many of the things that you hold dear on Sanibel are also dear to Mary Ann, and she has the insight, experience, intelligence and fortitude to pursue them.

Be a good neighbor and in the Oct. 2 runoff election vote for Mary Ann Wallace.

Sincerely,

Illinois visitor finds nine-armed starfish

To the Editor
The Islander
Thought you might be interested in a little news from your beautiful Sanibel Island.

We have spent our vacation on Sanibel at the Castaways for the past eight years. Can't tell you how we love it and only wish we could make our permanent residence down there. Someday we hope to live there.

The day before we left for home (about three weeks ago) we were shelling on the mud flats at Blind Pass during low tide. My daughter found this nine-armed starfish. She was thrilled. The only problem was we didn't know how we would get it home without breaking it. Well, we did get it home "safe and sound," all in one piece.

We have many beautiful shells from there and have made lamps out of your great shells. Staying right on the gulf at our favorite spot, the Castaways, we feel we have the finest shells that ever could be found!

We are sending a picture of my daughter's find. Feel free to use it if you want. We love reading The Islander and would also like a year's subscription.

Please let us hear from you, and again thanks for making your Island a special, relaxing place for us.

Request to sell sunglasses, t-shirts, film at Island Moped headquarters meets denial

The sale of sunglasses, amaze lotion, film and T-shirts at the Island Moped retail office would add to congested traffic conditions on Periwinkle Way and intensify the use of the already over-developed site, Planning Commissioners agreed last week.

Albert Evans told the commission he had applied for an occupational license to use space in the moped rental office to sell some items as a convenience for customers.

"I was surprised to be turned down and told I needed a development permit to start an additional business," Evans said.

Evans said about 150 square feet of the 375-square-foot, one-story structure would be used for the retail sales operation. It would not generate any new customers but would satisfy needs of people who come to rent bicycles and mopeds, he maintained.

But the planning staff said the on-site parking now is not adequate for the existing business and the parking areas are not buffered from the road. The 200 bicycles and 40 mopeds can be stored outside the building, and the staff recommended that if the development permit were approved they would have to be stored inside the structure or within required commercial setbacks. In addition:

- All storage areas and parking areas must be buffered from the street and adjoining properties;
 - Access to the site must be limited to designated driveways; and
 - On-site retention for a five-year storm must be provided.
- Peter Burns, who has operated the Island Moped since 1977, said there is no room on the site for these conditions to be met at this time. He said he has purchased the property just east of the business, however, and has a contract to purchase another parcel that will give him 350 feet of frontage on Periwinkle Way. His plans for the future are to develop this land as an office/retail sales complex, he said.
- Commissioner Lemart Lorenson told Burns he had "the cart before the horse."
- "If your development permit were for bringing the property into conformity with the land use plan with adequate screening and drainage I could support it," he said.
- Burns said he had been trying to improve the appearance of the business and had spent $3,000 for landscaping, that was destroyed by the current drainage project on Periwinkle Way.

Peter Burns has a contract to purchase another parcel that will give him 350 feet of frontage on Periwinkle Way. His plans for the future are to develop this land as an office/retail sales complex, he said.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said adding retail sales to the existing business had "nothing going for it."

"It's all negative from the city's viewpoint," he said, adding, "Nothing benefits the general public and it is contrary to our regulations."

Commissioner Chairman Larry Simon pointed out that it would be an opportunity for a trade-off to improve a non-conforming use.

Commissioner Bill Read said he preferred to defer permitting retail sales until an overall plan for redevelopment is submitted with various conditions attached. His motion to deny the request passed by a 6-0 vote with Commissioner Henry McKee absent.

Burns and Evans were informed they could appeal the commission's decision to the City Council.

Board approves alternate plan for rock revetment on bay shoreline

The Planning Commission has approved a development permit to allow Henry Dows to construct a rock riprap revetment along the shoreline of San Carlos Bay in front of his property.

Its purpose is to reclaim land lost to erosion and to prevent future erosion.

Hans Wilson of W. Dexter Bender and Associates designed the protection structure to tie in with an existing seawall on the adjoining property. The work would require encroaching two feet onto the property to the east, Wilson said.

But a condition of the commissioners' approval was written consent from the neighboring property owner to use her land for the revetment.

Connecting Dows' revetment to the existing seawall is the "best erosion prevention measure for both properties," Wilson told the commission.

The alternative of containing the revetment on Dows' property with a return revetment on the eastern boundary is "second best," he said.

Wilson said he had contacted the owner, Mrs. Alexander Bock, asking for her permission to extend the revetment. But she has been ill and had not made a decision to date, he said.

Wilson added Bock said she had been waiting for direction from the city.

Dows said that under these circumstances he was reluctant to impose on Bock.

Wilson urged the commission to approve the development permit authorizing the alternate method of construction if Bock's permission is not forthcoming.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers said the specific amendment approved by the City Council permitted a revetment tied in to the adjacent seawall.

"To return the revetment on Dows property is a new proposal that has not been reviewed either by the planning staff, Planning Commission or council," Rogers argued.

But the commission voted 5-1 to approve the development permit for a revetment tied into the existing seawall.

Commission recommends council denial of request for Gulf Pines single-family home

William Kreuzer wants to build a single-family home on a lot in Gulf Pines II subdivision.

The lot is one of four that was held in common ownership by Mariner Properties, Inc., in July 1976 when the city's Comprehensive Land Use Plan was adopted.

At that time the development intensively assigned to Gulf Pines was 2.2 dwelling units per acre. The land area of the four lots is 1.14 acres, which under the 1976 density regulations would round out to three units on the site if it is considered one parcel, Planning Director Bruce Rogers said.

Under another section of CLUP, however, only two dwelling units are permitted on the four lots of the commonly owned parcel.

Mariner, developer of Gulf Pines subdivision, sold each of the four lots as individual building sites. Currently Kreuzer owns one of the lots; two contiguous lots are owned by Sharon Rowan and Smart Communications Ltd., and the fourth is owned by Melvin and Shirley Bleiberg.

Under CLUP regulations one single-family home can be built on the two contiguous lots in common ownership.

But planning commissioners questioned whether the owners of these lots might seek relief and petition the council to build a home on each of the lots under provisions of a 1981 ordinance.

Under that scenario the density would be increased by four dwelling units.

A recent survey shows that Kreuzer's property has 9,830 square feet, smaller than the minimum lot size. Kreuzer was seeking a specific amendment to build a home on his lot.

Rogers suggested that the request be denied.

The best way to solve the problem would be for the three owners to get together and submit surveys for the parcel.

In the event Bock's permission can be obtained, construction of the revetment can proceed under the alternate plan.

Commissioner Ann Winterbohm cast the dissenting vote. Commissioner Henry McKee was absent.

Commission recommends against request for eight units on parcel near Middle Gulf Drive connector Herry Szalmer wants an increase in density to eight dwelling units on a 8.59-acre parcel east of Middle Gulf Drive and south of Cass Ybel Road.

Currently the density for the parcel is one dwelling unit. Because 30 percent of the site has been redesignated from Wetlands to Mid-Island Ecological zone, and because the Middle Gulf Drive connector improves the accessibility to the site, the planning staff supports a minor adjustment to permit two dwelling units on the parcel.

There is no infrastructure on the site such as roads, drainage improvements, water, sewer or electrical lines. Planning staff supports the subdivision development, Planner Jean Isley pointed out. The Middle Gulf Drive connector was built to carry through Planner Jean Isley pointed out that the Middle Gulf Drive connector was built to carry through traffic and facilitate evacuation in the event of a disaster, not to open up land for additional development.

Sanibel's Summerlin Road," she added. Szalmer originally asked for an increase to 16 units, but at last week's Planning Commission hearing Shelley Wright, representing the applicant, said her client had reduced the request to eight units.

The commissioners voted 6-0 to recommend council denial of the density increase.

Approval of improvements to relocated duplexes keeps owners, neighbors happy

Though the renovations may be completed the three duplexes cannot be occupied until all six ROGO allocations are in hand.

The neighbors along Rabbit Run are happy and so are Andy Snyder and Deborah Mutuse, who are remodeling three duplexes moved from Segunda Apartments to the Sanibel Hamlet subdivision more than month ago.

The Planning Commission last week approved completion of cosmetic repairs, improvements to the exterior and construction of new additions to the cottages before Rate of Growth allocations are obtained.

The commissioners were authorized by an amendment to the Rate of Growth ordinance adopted by the City Council Sept. 4 to allow immediate issuance of building permits required for the work.

The work is being done at the owners' risk. A $15,000 bond ($5,000 for each structure) has been posted with the city to cover the cost of removal of the duplexes in the event ROGO allocations are not obtained.

Under the "no beneficial use" priority the project is entitled to three allocations in November. The three duplexes need six allocations before the units can be occupied, but the commission has the option to allocate three more units from the surplus in November to facilitate completion.

Though the renovations may be completed the three duplexes cannot be occupied until all six ROGO allocations are in hand.

Work permitted includes construction of additions including rough plumbing, electrical wiring and air conditioning, re-roofing of the existing structures, installation of the septic system, stuccoing and painting the exteriors, installation of Bahama shutters and completion of landscaping, driveways and paving.

Klein names campaign committee

Councilman Mike Klein, a candidate for reelection to Seat No. 2 on the Sanibel City Council, has appointed 13 local residents to serve on his Election Campaign Committee.

They are: Alice Anders, John Cook, Nancy Johnson, Al Lloyd, Leonard Loverson, Penny Rogers, Bud Ryckman, Peter Smith, George Tenney and Rose Rogers.

The committee is expected to furnish guidance and assistance in advertising, fund raising, arranging neighborhood meetings and address cards. Klein feels are essential to a successful campaign.

Ryckman has been designated campaign treasurer. Campaign contributions are payable to the Mike Klein Campaign. Funds should be addressed to Ryckman at 1332 Tazuli Drive, Sanibel 33557.

Klein says his campaign will be based on his seven years of experience both with the Sanibel Vegetation Committee and on the City Council. He emphasizes the importance of the year he served as mayor and the various legislation enacted during his four years on the council.

"It was not intended to be Sanibel's Summerlin Road," she added.

Real-estate broker named treasurer for Muench

Planning Commissioner Jerry Muench, seeking election to City Council Seat No. 2 now held by Mike Klein, has named Robert Vardtal as his campaign treasurer.

Vardtal, 56, has been a real-estate broker in Sanibel since 1972. He has been on the City Council since 1982.

Muench opened his campaign last week with the first of a series of informal discussion sessions at his home each week until the election Nov. 6.

He is accepting contributions of up to $50 to fund his current campaign. Checks payable to the Jerry Muench Campaign Fund can be mailed to Vardtal, 1152 Golden Olive, Sanibel 33557.

Under the "no beneficial use" priority the project is entitled to three allocations in November. The three duplexes need six allocations before the units can be occupied, but the commission has the option to allocate three more units from the surplus in November to facilitate completion.

Though the renovations may be completed the three duplexes cannot be occupied until all six ROGO allocations are in hand.

5-1 vote okays storage area addition at Sandalfoot condominiums

The Planning Commission last week approved a specific amendment to permit a garage/storage area addition to the existing office building at Sandalfoot condominium to encroach on the setback from the centerline of East Gulf Drive.

Sandalfoot, a 60-unit complex, was built before the city was incorporated. The site is non-conforming and violates density, impermeable coverage, vegetation clearance and setback standards of the land use plan, the planning staff reported. In addition two of the five buildings in the complex are forward of the Coastal Construction Setback Line.

The commissioners acknowledged that approving another variance would be contrary to the city's objective to try to bring lawfully existing uses into conformity with current CLUP standards.

The new addition will replace an aluminum storage shed and will be a definite improvement, Commissioner Chairman Larry Simon pointed out. Planning Director Bruce Rogers said the site is already so overdeveloped that though it may seem harsh to deny Sandalfoot's request, approving it only makes the non-conforming use more and more permanent.

Irene Culnan, secretary of the Sandalfoot Condominium Association, said the owners would be willing to install a vegetation buffer along East Gulf Drive, a measure city staff recommended as a condition of approval. The commission considered the cosmetic improvements a mitigating factor and voted 5-1 to recommend council approval of the specific amendment. Commissioner Ann Winterbotham cast the dissenting vote. Commissioner Henry McKee was absent.

Periwinkle Place gazebo recommended for denial

The Planning Commission followed the recommendation of the planning staff and denied a request from Periwinkle Place shopping center to relocate a gazebo that now encroaches into the setback from the centerline of Periwinkle Way.

Tim Stone of Architectural Resources Corporation designed the expansion of the shopping center. He told the commission the location of the gazebo was changed to save a "large clump of vegetation."

Construction of the gazebo, which Stone said "is no more than a roof over a walkway and a ramp for the handicapped" has already begun.

The Planning Department recommended denial of Stone's request for a deviation to permit the gazebo because it is not essential for access to the shopping center and has a decorative rather than a functional use.

Assured that the cost of removing the structure would be minimal, the commission voted 4-2 in deny its deviation. Commission Chairman Larry Simon and Commissioner Jerry Muench were the dissenters.

The Planning Department recommended denial of the request on the basis that the gazebo is not essential for access to the shopping center and has a decorative rather than a functional use.

Amendment prohibiting docks, marinas on the bay gains commission approval

The commission agreed that the new amendment goes a step further toward achieving the city's objective to stop the proliferation of private docks on San Carlos Bay.

Humphrey, Jones and Myers, a Fort Myers law firm, questioned whether the city had made studies to support its position that boat docks have a deleterious effect on marine life in the bay.

When the land use plan was drawn up docks and piers were not regarded as having a negative effect on erosion along the bay shore.

Workman said she was surprised that the city would go against a recommendation of the past. But Commission Chairman Larry Simon told her the land use plan is a "dynamic, not a perfect" document that is subject to change.

Workman pointed out that there is a legal aspect to residents' rights to accessory use to provide access to the bay and recreational use of the water. She questioned the ordinance's intent to prohibit this use.

Commissioner Jerry Muench said he has yet to see harmful effects from existing docks on the bay.

The City Council today will bear on second reading a specific amendment, also supported by the commission, that would delete boat docks and marinas as a primary use in the bay beach ecotone. The amendment does not prohibit docks and marinas as an accessory use.

On Sept. 4 the council, with only three members present, decided to continue a second reading of that ordinance to the Oct. 2 meeting after a motion to approve failed by a 2-1 vote. Three affirmative votes are required for approval of a specific amendment.

At its meeting last week the commission agreed that the new proposed amendment goes a step further toward achieving the city's objective to stop the proliferation of private docks on San Carlos Bay. Judy Workman, a legal research assistant for be continued to give the applicant time to demonstrate that the proposed installation will comply with CLUP requirements for development on the bay beach.

Workman, representing Cross, said David Key, an environmental consultant for Johnson Engineering, was prepared to show that the proposed dock will not result in the diminution of sand along the bay shore, will not destroy natural vegetation, will not destroy organisms or materials on which wildlife feed and will not interfere with the rights of public access and use of the beach.

Key said the dock was extended to 208 feet to prevent boat prop damage to the bay bottom and sea grasses. Cross owns 1,000 feet of bay front, but this area is isolated from other sections of the beach where sea walls have caused erosion, he said.

Workman said that at one time there was a dock in the bay at this location. The dock will keep speeding power boats from coming in too close to shore and wiping out the bottom grasses, she said.

Key said the dock is designed with a four-foot-high deck that will minimize shading. Steps could be built to allow beach walkers to pass over.

But the commission was not swayed. Commissioner Mary Wegmuller's motion to deny the development permit passed by a 5-1 vote with Muench dissenting.

An appeal of the decision will be heard by the council at its meeting today.

BUSINESS NEWS

By Scott Martell

Business briefs:

Interesting bits from near and far

Islanders who find interesting business shorts in their general reading are invited to share them with The Islander and our readers in this monthly feature by Scott Martell.

Lee County — The U.S. Census Bureau reports that more than 563,000 licensed drivers in Florida has 40 percent of the Fort Myers area has at least one car per square mile (from Business Week).

The Southwest Florida chapter of SCORPE (Service Corp of Retired Executives) headquartered in Fort Myers has been providing free guidance and expertise to businesses for 13 years. During the past year alone the chapter's unpaid counselors worked with more than 250 clients in Lee, Collier and Hendry counties.

Law firms of Florida — The largest law firms are in Tampa and Orlando. The four biggest are also in that order. The next one firm in St. Petersburg. The area has seven of the state's 10 largest law firms. The two biggest are Holland and Knight with 200 lawyers, and Carlton, Fields, et al with 106. Yet only 20 percent of Florida lawyers practice in firms with more than five lawyers.

Gov. Bob Graham signed legislation passed by the Florida Legislature that allows the Western Development Bank to sell securities in Florida. The bank's current members consists of nearly all countries in Africa (with the exception of South Africa) together with non-regional member governments from U.S.A., Europe, Japan and Canada.

Executive — As the leading personnel executives of the directors feel the average performance of American workers is only 53 percent of their total capability, 140 executives were queried from medium and large corporations — half of which were from Fortune 1000 companies (from Business Week).

Lobstering on the Atlantic coast could go the way of buffalo hunting if a severe shortage of lobsters is not reversed. The $107 million industry that thrives in Maine and extends south to New Jersey is endangered, marine biologists say, by a lobster stock so depleted by overfishing that the crustaceans' survival is at stake (from Business Week).

Retail sales sagged in August, falling 0.8 percent to $196.7 billion, after a 2 percent drop in July. It is unlikely, however, that this softness is part of a general slowing trend. Once again, auto sales were largely responsible, the 4 percent dip they took in both July and August accounted for three-fifths of the drop in total retail sales during the same period (from Business Week).

The World — China has just signed a deal with the Club Mediterranee for a 280-guest holiday village in the Shenzhen development zone across the border from Hong Kong. To attract Western currency it will offer facilities for Western sports such as tennis and golf.

Cuba's drive to lure private farmers into new agricultural cooperatives — touted as an alternative to the widely unpopular state farms — is foundering after two thirds of 1,450 co-ops reported losses for 1983. Despite an exodus that has halved the number of individually owned farms since 1974, private farmers still account for large shares of Cuba's sugarcane, tobacco and fruit production. (All world business briefs from World Press Review).

New manager assumes duties at Captiva's only bank

Alice Robinson, a self-proclaimed "city girl," now has a job in the "country" as manager of Captiva's only bank, the Gulf Coast First National.

Besides a new manager the bank also has new owners. On June 1, Lansmark bought out Southwest Florida Banks, the holding company for Gulf Coast First National. Gulf Coast has a main branch on Fort Myers Beach plus four branch offices in the area including the Captiva branch.

Robinson has been with Gulf Coast First National Bank for 13 years, working her way up in seven years from teller and customer service department employee to bank officer.

Her first management job was opening up a small branch office in Santini Place on Fort Myers Beach in 1978. After a stint as assistant manager in the much larger Kelly Road branch office, she was appointed manager of the four-year-old Captiva branch six weeks ago.

One of the best aspects of banking is that it is people-oriented, Robinson feels. "I am people-oriented and have worked with the public since 1946 when I was in high school working as both a soda jerk in Walgreens and in a flower shop after school," she laughs.

Since then her employment has run the gamut from working in a foundry office and for a contractor to owning her own flower shop for eight years in Sterling, Ill.

In 1969 she moved to Fort Myers Beach, where she was first mate on the her own charter boat, "Labada."

But by 1971 she wanted to try something new and something with prestige — such as banking.

Alice Robinson

Now she sees her major challenge on Captiva as making Islanders aware of her banking background and then encouraging them to let her be their banker.

Among the services Robinson says the bank offers Captivians are a brokerage service by phone, C.D.'s and even a trust service, not to mention the interest checking accounts and saving accounts.

Robinson says she is very pleased with the challenge and the beauty that comes with working on Captiva. And the Island is appropriate for many of her main interests, including boating, golf, tennis and dancing.

She is a member of the American Business Women's Association, a former American Institute of Banking governor (Southwest chapter) and a member of United Way.

Register to vote when you do your banking

Captivians should take note of one especially important service the Gulf Coast First National bank offers — voter registration.

And the deadline for registering to vote in the Nov. 6 general election is coming up this Friday, Oct. 5. So if you haven't registered, here's your chance to do so without having to go off-Island.

So far the bank has registered more than 60 Captivians, bank manager Alice Robinson said.

American Society of Landscape Architects honors Safety Harbor Club designer

The Florida chapter of the American Society of Landscape Architects has selected Fort Myers architect Peter Burner as the winner of the 1984 Community Planning Award.

Cited for his work at Safety Harbor Club on North Captiva, 26-year-old Burner is one of the youngest members ever to be honored with the award.

In judging submissions the ASLA considers land use relationships that are "specifically designed to answer the physical, psychological and social needs of the community's inhabitants" while preserving the environmental integrity of the site.

At Safety Harbor, Burner has created a community accessible only by boat or private plane, where the automobile has been replaced by bicycles and electric carts.

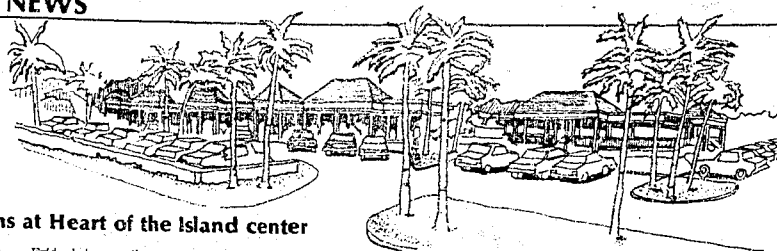

In Safety Harbor's three-year development stage, Burner's intensive research included a site inventory, topographic survey, studies of existing vegetation and environmental zone analysis. He says his goal in the Safety Harbor project was "to create a built environment in harmony with the natural one."

Accepting the award during a ceremony in Orlando last month, Burner acknowledged the natural beauty of the Safety Harbor site. "In an area as beautiful as North Captiva you don't build on the site — you build with the site. My challenge as a landscape architect is meeting the high standards that nature has set."

Burner is vice president of Daniel Burner and Associates of Fort Myers.

Facelift begins at Heart of the Island center

The Heart of the Island shopping center is finally getting its well-deserved facelift.

Last week work began on the center on Periwinkle Way that is anchored by Friday's Creative Jewelry.

Friday's is more than 25 years old and was on the Island in pre-Causeway days. During that time the center has expanded several times to the west.

The latest work to be done includes a frontal facelift that will improve the 250-foot-long facade of the roof to make it appear smaller and more irregular.

The facelift will also include significant landscaping and installation of a fountain similar to the one at Cypress Square in Fort Myers. A one-way entry and exit system will also improve parking at the center.

Ray Fenton, whose most recent projects include Jerry's and Old Sanibel, is the architect. Mark McQuade is the contractor. Dennis Dahlmann owns the center.

The work is set for completion by Dec. 10.

Chili Cook-Off

The Sanibel-Captiva Runners Club is sponsoring the chili cook-off for the first time this year. The popular event has become one of the club's main fund-raising activities, the proceeds of which go toward programs such as scouting and sports for the island's youth.

This year's cook-off takes place at the Dunes this Sunday, Oct. 7. Teams and individual chili champions will begin cooking their concoctions for competition around noon. Judging by local personalities and restaurateurs will take place later in the afternoon.

All day long bluegrass music will fill the air and the Kiwanis will sell beer, giant margaritas and their own chili, nachos and chili dogs.

Admission to the cook-off for the general public will be $2.

One-Pitch Softball Tournament

A new event for this year is the First Annual One-Pitch Softball Tournament. The competition will take place Friday, Saturday and Sunday, Oct. 12, 13 and 14 at the fields next to the Sanibel-Captiva Club. Special guests will be the Sanibel-Captiva Police Department softball teams, one of the better teams in the county. The Dunsaville men will compete in the regular round robin play against teams from Sanibel and Captiva, Fort Myers and Cape Coral.

For registration and more information call tournament organizer Dick Noon at the Sanibel Recreation Complex, 472-0345.

10K Sunrise Run

The Second Annual Sanibel-Captiva 10K Sunrise Run promises to draw even more than the 450 runners who came from throughout Florida last year. This year's race takes place Saturday, Oct. 13.

Hosted by the Fort Myers Track Club and sponsored by Pepsi, Miller Brands beer and the Phoenix Total Fitness and Beauty Center of Fort Myers, the 6.2-mile early morning run is the largest of its kind in Lee County. It is sanctioned by the Road Runners of America, the national grassroots running organization that has 410 chapters and 150,000 members.

The race route follows the wide, flat, tree-lined streets of the Dunes subdivision on Sanibel. The awards ceremony after the race will be held at the Dunes Country Club. Runners will be eligible for reduced rates on tickets for Jazz on the Green at the Dunes on Saturday night and Sunday afternoon, Oct. 13 and 14.

Friday evening before the race runners are invited to a clinic at Tween Waters Inn on Captiva. Tom Kenney from Runners Update magazine will discuss all aspects of running in Florida. He will be joined by other prominent runners from throughout the state.

A videotape of the race will be shown at Tween Waters after a special brunch on Sunday.

Registration is $7 postmarked before Oct. 10 and $9 after that date. For information on when to pick up registration forms call Lou Allshouse of the Fort Myers Track Club, 936-0333.

Jazz on the Green

Jazz on the Green returns to Sanibel under the sponsorship of Bartley Island Group for the Arts for the fourth time this year. Each year the evening jazz under the stars grows more and more popular.

This year the Sanibel-Captiva Runners Club has teamed up with the Dunes Country Club to host the event. The program will begin at 8:30 p.m. Saturday, Oct. 13, with classical jazz artists taking the stage at 4 p.m. Sunday, Oct. 14. The Peter Graves Orchestra will anchor both programs.

Tickets for each evening are $7.50 in advance and $10 at the gate. Children under 12 will be admitted free. Tickets are available at Sanibel Audio-Visual on Periwinkle Way, the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce on Causeway Road and at Rainbow Records in Fort Myers and Cape Coral. For more information call 472-5355.

Shotgun starts will be at 9 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. at the Beachview course and at 9 a.m. at the Dunes. Based on 35 teams, prize money will range from $750 for the first place team to $75 for the tenth place team. Pros will compete for a $1,000 first place prize to $100 for tenth place.

Island merchants have donated various prizes for closest-to-the-pin winners.

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

A Dingles Lake Road youth told police someone in a dark blue Pontiac Trans Am had deliberately tried to hit him as he walked along Wulfert Road around 3 p.m. Thursday, Sept. 20. The car was registered to a Fort Myers resident who has an invalid driver's license. Police told the youth to notify them if he ever saw the car in the area again.

Police responded to the beach near the Lighthouse after a resident reported there was a vehicle on the beach around 9:15 p.m. Saturday, Sept. 22.

Police found two Fort Myers Beach residents with a truck on the beach. They two said they were having trouble finding their 30-foot sailboat that they had left off Lighthouse beach earlier in the day. Using lights from the patrol car, police helped the two find their boat.

Doak Street around 2:30 p.m. Monday, Sept. 24, after a woman said someone had caused her dogs to start barking. Police found nothing suspicious in the area.

Police looked for but did not find a white male who was reportedly sunbathing in the nude on the beach near Casa Ybel resort Tuesday afternoon, Sept. 25.

A Sanibel resident reported someone was removing beach chairs from the pool area at the Ramada Inn around 1:30 a.m. Thursday, Sept. 27. Police found two men stacking the chairs, not taking them off the premises.

Police issued three speeding tickets and one citation for running a stop sign to drivers on Sanibel streets during the week that ended Thursday afternoon, Sept. 27.

Enrichment program encourages students to develop logic, problem-solving abilities

By Scott Martell
Start the drum roll and roll out the red carpet for Sanibel Elementary School's own "Superstars."

These special fourth and fifth graders have entered a voluntary enrichment program that pushes their sense of logic and thinking with a weekly worksheet full of problems.

The Superstars program stems somewhat from Florida's statewide goal of upgrading educational achievement. Again a leader in Lee County, Sanibel is currently the only school in the county using the program.

The program is run by volunteers and is in its second year of operation. Joan Rogers helped start the program last year, and now Valerie Williams and Diana Highsmith are in charge.

So far 12 fifth graders and 25 fourth graders have volunteered for the extra work.

"These worksheets are something most students do at home... they don't really have time to do them in class," Highsmith says. "At home they must do the work all by themselves.

"Some do the worksheet for fun, others do it strictly for the reward," she adds.

The rewards start with stars on a chart that show how each student is doing. Often cookies are an extra treat.

"It is kind of a game," says Highsmith. "And it requires patience. They might look at the worksheet and think there is no way they can do any of the questions. But then they get some correct and they feel pretty successful — it helps build self-esteem."

"We feel the program is very worthwhile,"

Highsmith says. "It is not really designed to teach math — it mostly teaches responsibility and problem solving. Some reports say Americans test lower than people in other countries because they cannot solve problems. This kind of program could help improve this problem."

Test your know-how on superstar questions

These three questions are a sampling of the problems superstar students must figure out:

1. Arrange the first 10 whole numbers (0, 1, 2, 3, etc.) according to the rule established here for the first five numbers: 6, 3, 4, 9, 1.

2. A recipe for a three-layer cake calls for 1/2 cup of sugar. But your mom only has 1/2 cup of sugar. Does she have enough for a two-layer cake or a one-layer cake, or will she have to give up the cake idea altogether until she gets some more sugar?

3. In one week how often does a clock show 3 o'clock?

ANSWERS
1. The numbers are arranged in alphabetical order.
2. A clock shows 3 o'clock 11 times a week.
3. A clock shows 3 o'clock 11 times a week.

Philadelphia, Penn.; and of "Jane Doe," a woman with the above three on whom police have been unable to obtain positive identification.

All four are in the Lee County Jail. They were arrested Sunday night after Church watched them enter a room at the Ramada Inn with a false key. They were apprehended as they took cash, jewelry and credit cards from the room.

Working with information gleaned from 11 burglaries at the Ramada Inn and with records of purchases made with stolen credit cards during the past several weeks, Church and Hinz put together a profile of the suspects. They made contact with numerous merchants in the Fort Myers area who were victims of the stolen credit card scam and obtained descriptions of the suspects. The merchants were told to contact the police if the suspects were seen in the area again.

The break in the case came Friday night, when another theft was reported at the Ramada Inn. Police immediately called the K-Mart store at Miners Corner, a frequent stopping point for the suspects in recent weeks. They were told the four had just used a VISA card to purchase a microwave oven. K-Mart employees had obtained the tag number of the car in which the four drove away.

Police traced the car to a rental business in Miami. Late Friday night Hinz and Church drove to Miami to await the return to the rental car.

When the suspects did not return the car on schedule Saturday afternoon, the officers returned to Sanibel. Church returned to the Ramada Inn on Sunday in plain clothes and found the suspects there.

After the arrests Sunday night police were led to a house on Pine Island where the four had a cache of thousands of dollars worth of stolen goods and brand new merchandise purchased with stolen credit cards.

Butler estimated Monday morning the four were responsible for the theft of more than $50,000 in jewelry and cash from Sanibel alone. That figure could multiply many times as the four are linked with thefts and stolen credit card purchases in other areas of Florida, the United States and even foreign countries, Hinz said Monday afternoon.

All four suspects were charged with felony burglary, grand theft and possession of burglary tools. The four also are wanted in Orange and Broward counties on similar charges, and Hinz said he expected more outstanding warrants to surface as additional law enforcement agencies are contacted.

"This is a big caper," Hinz said. "We could be talking about hundreds of thousands of dollars before it's all over."

Councilman Louise Johnson, who was not present at the first budget hearing, suggested that the

The council agreed to transfer that amount from the Legislative Department's Grants and Aids account to the Unspecified Fund account in the Franchise Tax and Occupational License Revenue

 The zoning on the property was changed from commercial to residential when the city adopted the Comprehensive Land Use Plan in 1976. The restaurant on the property became a lawfully existing use.

New commercial regulations adopted in February 1981 set up stricter regulations for lawfully existing uses.

Under the new rules the restaurant will not be able to expand, and if it is more than 50 percent destroyed after Jan. 1, 1986, it cannot be rebuilt and the property will revert to residential use.

The City Council based its denial of the change to commercial zoning on the city's objective to put an end to strip commercial zoning on Periwinkle Way and to encourage residential development by granting density incentives.

Depositions are being taken from witnesses on both sides prior to the start of the trial, La Croix said. The trial is expected to be concluded in two days, he added.

The Sabal Palm

Poor transplanting procedures have made Florida's state tree the 'dis-sabled palm'

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

Transplanting palms can be a very rewarding experience — or it can be ugly and expensive, depending on how you handle the job.

Many interesting and useful procedures have started with concepts on Sanibel only to be out-paced elsewhere:

•Example — Shoreline grades required by Sanibel are much less demanding than those that exist in the new Lee County plan.

•Example — Sanibel used to be very influential in the concept and inauguration of native plant utilization. No more. Some of the finest exotic plant landscaping jobs you are likely to find anywhere in Florida can be found on Sanibel. Probably the most noteworthy one is at Jerry's Shopping Center.

•Example — Our Comprehensive Land Use Plan was and stands today an avant-garde leader in the design, but others elsewhere are becoming more rigid as we attract types who know nothing, care nothing and are completely unwilling to learn anything about the Sanibel ethic upon which the city was founded and which attracted many of them here in the first place.

Consider this catch 22 situation: In one way our early success at maintaining Sanibel "natural" and beautiful has been so successful that many people have been over-attracted to our island and have over-built and over-invested to the extent that today there are hundreds of dwelling units up for sale but not selling, too often because of inflated, unrealistic concepts of value. We now have yet another interval "reorganization" for our bankruptcy courts to consider.

One place where we are being out-stripped and surpassed by ever the most destructive of South Florida developers, one place where we are actually being out-classed in terms of quality by those otherwise non-contributing characters, relates to our beautiful state tree, the palmetto or sabal palm, Sabal palmetto, which too often dies after being transplanted.

The sabal palm has become the dis-sabled palm.

Our state tree is the object of a great deal of belovous abuse on this island. I know of a case where upon recommendation of the Vegetation Committee 16 trees were moved from where they naturally existed on a building site to locations around the perimeter. All but four died due to improper handling by the contractor.

The standards that are official regulations on Sanibel WERE NOT FOLLOWED. I cite this example only because of a close familiarity with it, but there are plenty of other cases around. On this lot the trees took some time to die. The owner spent many conscientious hours dragging hoses and watering the plants, but largely to no avail because of improper handling of the palms at the moment of translocation.

Let us pause now to cite paragraph seven of Sanibel Resolution No. 84-49 which deals with vegetation standards:

"CABBAGE PALM TRANSPLANTING — Cabbage Palm

(Sabal palmetto) are among the most characteristic and valuable native plant species for Sanibel ecosystems. When they have these best or more of trunk exposed above ground, they can be transplanted quite successfully, but are often not handled properly, even by experienced persons. The following guidelines will be followed: (emphasis mine)

A. Cabbage palm have only one single bud, which is at the top of the stem where the leaf buds develop. This bud is a very sensitive to jolting and drying. It must be carefully protected throughout the transplanting process, and it must be watered for up to four months after transplanting.

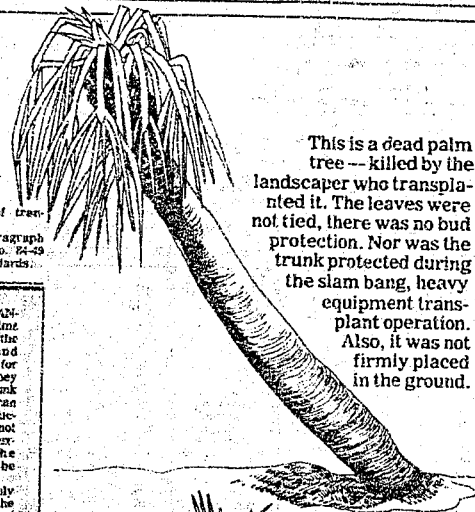

B. Before moving, all dead leaves and some green leaves should be cut with a saw or clipper, never with a machete or axe. About 10 of the green leaves will be tied together above the bud. This provides protection and prevents drying. The leaves will be tied for four to six months after transplanting.

C. Digging may be done by hand, or using much care with power equipment. The tree must be removed from the ground gently and transported carefully so the bud is not injured by abrupt movements.

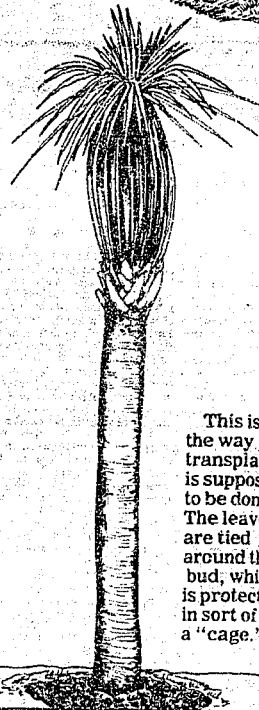

D. Planting will be made so the soil level will be approximately at the level where it was before digging. Soil will be replaced gradually and must be "watered in" so the roots are connected to eliminate all air pockets. For humid conditions, this is a most important step as many failures are due to poor soil aeration.

E. No fertilizer is needed at time of planting. After a month and at monthly intervals thereafter, a light application of commercial fertilizer is desirable.

F. Transplants must be watered thoroughly and frequently for several months. During this time it is also desirable to soak the bud and the tied leaves daily at first and tapering off after growth resumes.

This is a dead palm tree — killed by the landscaper who transplanted it. The leaves were not tied, there was no bud protection. Nor was the trunk protected during the slam bang, heavy equipment transplant operation. Also, it was not firmly placed in the ground.

This is the way transplanting is supposed to be done. The leaves are tied around the bud, which is protected in sort of a "cage."

Part II: The second of the "Big Three" undesirable exotics on Sanibel

By Charles LeBuff
Biological technician
J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge
In my last refuge report (The Islander, Sept. 18, 1984) I discussed the Brazilian pepper tree, one of the "Big Three" exotic plants growing unchecked on Sanibel. Issued was coverage of efforts underway at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge to control this undesirable plant on refuge lands.

In the second part of this three-part series I will discuss the Australian pine tree, which is represented by two species on Sanibel: Casuarina equisetifolia and C. cunninghamii. Another species, C. glauca, is well distributed in the interior of Southern Florida.

On Sanibel C. cunninghamii for the most part is concentrated in the Wulfert Point area and is not rapidly encroaching upon native vegetation. This coastal species that multiplies locally by root suckers was originally planted to provide protection from the wind on lands cultivated for citrus production.

The niter, more abundant species, C. equisetifolia, is a true survivor that has spread widely since its initial use as a windbreak for island farmers and as an ornamental along Periwinkle Way and other island roadways. For the sake of discussion, I will call this species Australian pine.

Disturbed inland sites and lands along beaches above the spring tide line are ideal places for Australian pine seeds to germinate. In about three years saplings can reach 20 feet in height and be seed producers. They often grow extremely close together in dense stands and soon overpower slower growing native plants. Their fallen needle-like leaves carpet the ground and increase the negative effects upon our native flora.

Also, because such thick stands, with their shallow and intertwining root system, adversely impact the nesting success of sea turtles. Sections of Bowman's Beach, once an excellent and productive nesting area for loggerhead turtles, are no longer suitable simply because female turtles cannot successfully excavate through the dense roots.

A similar condition exists at Sanibel's Gulfside City Park. Small Australian pines seaward of the old wooden bulkheads thwart the nesting attempts of several loggerheads each summer.

Sections of Bowman's Beach, once an excellent and productive beach for loggerhead turtles, are no longer suitable simply because female turtles cannot successfully excavate through the dense Australian pine roots.

Residents and visitors who use our beaches can participate in a limited control effort and do a great deal to reduce Australian pine encroachment. I encourage you to spend a few minutes while on the beach pulling out Australian pine seedlings. Residents and visitors who use our beaches can participate in a limited control effort and do a great deal to reduce Australian pine encroachment. I encourage you to spend a few minutes while on the beach pulling out Australian pine seedlings.

Local environmentalists who espoused justified concern for the encroachment of the Australian pine should not sit around and pull out their hair; they should get on the beach and pull up an Australian pine.

G. To insure that there is no needless destruction of native plants, for a period of up to six months following transplants, assistance by a Vegetation Permit, the city reserves the right to inspect all transplanted vegetation. At the end of the six-month period plants that have not survived shall be replaced with like plantings.

H. Vegetation permits will expire six months after date of issuance.

It is very strange that here on Sanibel where good conservation concepts were born, poor conservation is now practiced.

Many careless and uncaring "landscapers" work on Sanibel. In the instance cited above I unintentionally surprised the landscaper riding his power equipment at a moment when he was brutally jerking a palm from the ground hardly doing anything recognizable as (C) above, which states, "Digging may be done by hand or using much care with power equipment." No care was taken, and this tree died.

I find that some landscapers on Sanibel will without my permission at all chip valuable trees to destroy evidence of their callous destruction. On this same site a five-foot DBH (diameter at breast height) gumbo limbo was first topped and then the entire top disappeared in the chipper. Then even though I suggested that the six-foot remaining trunk and root be removed and transplanted, it, too, went into the chipper — evidence gone, instance won for poison.

I do not mean to condemn all of the landscapers on Sanibel. I'm sure there are some who are conscientious. One whom I know to be conscientious is Henry Nachtsheim. He always practices good conservation and good stewardship and can be trusted to do the job right.

I plan to recommend to the Vegetation Committee that licenses be issued to landscapers who work on Sanibel only after the operator has passed a comprehensive examination so that city officials can know for sure the prospective licensee (a) knows his plants and how to handle them, and (b) is conscientiously willing to preserve native vegetation as recommended by the Vegetation Committee and mandated by the Comprehensive Land Use Plan. The examination should be written by those scientists on the Vegetation Committee who are qualified to author such a document. Let's put a stop once and for all to this kind of abuse on our island.

Having got that off my chest, I would like to offer the following information relative to the transplanting of palm trees in South Florida.

These data were published by the Fairchild Tropical Garden, Dr. Henry Donselman and Dr. Timothy Broschat are the authorities.

Donselman has been in charge of palm research at the University of Florida Fort Lauderdale Center and is the state's lethal yellowing specialist. Broschat is also with the University of Florida at Fort Lauderdale, specializes in the nutrition of tropical plants.

In the region of the Fairchild Garden in Dade County the problem of maintaining beautiful palms is much more difficult than here on the west coast, where only two or three cases of lethal yellowing, a pale-attacking disease, have ever been notified.

In any case, lethal yellowing does not, either on the east coast or over here, have any effect whatsoever on the major subject of this discussion, the Sabal palmetto.

All my life I have understood that a cut or damaged palm root would die back to the trunk and that a new one would have to grow to take its place. I now understand that the University of Florida has conducted research at Fort Lauderdale that proves this characteristic is not universal in all palm species. Insofar as the cabbage palm, it concerned this is apparently true, but in the coconut palm cut roots do not die, but bifurcate and continue growth. The same with royal and queen palms and other exotics.

their growth. Thus trees that are root pruned can be transplanted with a sizable ball because of the young, short, new roots that will have started their growth.

The crown or meristem or bud should be carefully prepared prior to transplanting. It is also recommended that one-third to one-half of the existing green leaves should be cut off to reduce water loss through transpiration at the time of transplanting and during the above period thereafter. Each consider or trunk has only one meristem or bud, which is what we commonly call the crown, and this must be protected, not ripped around with heavy equipment as in the instance described above.

It is now recommended that several leaves immediately next to and around the bud be removed to prevent injury to the bud when the fronds are tied up. Remaining outside green leaves then can be drawn together and tied with string. This makes a kind of "cage" of petioles that will protect the crown, without removing the innermost ring of leaves, some impaction of the bud can take place when the tying occurs. This new factor is not in our standards.

It is also recommended that twine, such as binder's twine made of sisal be employed rather than something like nylon. This is because by the time you want to remove the binding, the sisal will have rotted away and no further attention to this aspect of the transplanting will need to be made.

Sanibel's sandy soils don't make it easy to transplant a sabal palm that has been root pruned and has started growth of replacement roots. The soil in the root ball should be disturbed minimally and the newly-sprouted roots should remain covered by soil, so it is well to soak such sandy soils prior to digging the tree. Thus it will be easier to maintain a root ball whether or not you choose to ball your palm with burlap or simply CAREFULLY and GENTLY move it from one spot to another.

The Fairchild Garden people recommend a tree crane to lift large palms after digging. They also recommend that the trunk or caudex be wrapped with a protective material such as burlap where the rope or chain is attached.

Here, however, the current practice is to go at it with a root end loader with gusto and energy. Speed as well as gentleness in transplanting the newly removed plant is essential to increased transplant success. One always takes a good look at the soil type, drainage pattern and fertility of the location where the plant originated and compares it with the place where it is to be planted and tries to duplicate that as best it can. The hole should be big enough so that the level of the trunk protruding from the ground will be the same as it was where it naturally existed. And while watering is very important to the newly transplanted palm and adequate water must be provided, the Fairchild Garden people state, "More newly transplanted palms are lost due to poor drainage than to any other factor. It is important to be able to provide supplemental watering during dry periods, but overwatering inhibits new root development and promotes root disease."

The Fairchild people also state that it is unnecessary and inadvisable to provide the planting hole with organic material such as peat moss, manure or mulch. They say this sort of thing alters the inorganic environment around the palm roots and is not conducive to the rapid re-establishment of roots in the existing soil.

The message here is that you should put the transplanted tree in the same kind of soil that it came from, if possible. They do recommend, however, that after the tree is firmly in place wood chips or other organic material such as cypress bark be placed around the base of the tree. As these products break down they will contribute nutrition to the soil and will help control weeds.

After the tree is securely planted it must be firmly braced in the ground without any movement from wind that would keep the roots "jumpy." If necessary, bracing with 2x4s or rope can be accomplished. Wrapping the trunk with burlap will protect the outer surface of the trunk.

Such a transplanted tree will stand a better chance of survival if fed with nutrient sprays that are fogged onto the leaves once or twice a month. This will provide nutrition for the tree at a time when it is establishing new roots.

Nutrition applied directly to the base of the tree should not take place until four to six months after transplanting, and then it should be applied in a circle not more than about one foot from the tree and extend outward to the approximate radius of the canopy. Many palms require magnesium salts, but the sabal palm is not among them. If you have mollus palms, you should bear in mind that magnesium is a necessity.

One always takes a good look at the soil type, drainage pattern and fer-

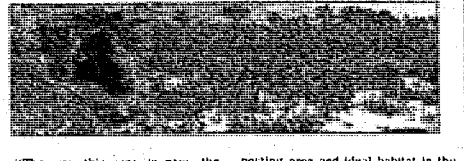

The end of summer brings the end of nesting season for skimmers, terns

By Scott Martell
Summer has officially come to an end — and along the Causeway this means the least terns and black skimmers have finished nesting.

The two species have different ideas of what to do when "winter" threatens — the least terns pack up their new families and apparently head for a South American vacation, but many of the black skimmers appear to be yearling residents, if not of Sanibel, at least of Florida.

Chris Olsen, staffer at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, said refuge workers counted 55 adult skimmers and 45 adults on Aug. 1. A refuge report showed 150 pairs of black skimmers and least terns nested on the Causeway in 1981 — so it appears fewer of these birds are now nesting in the area.

Last week refuge staffers removed the bright orange ribbons that marked off the nesting areas on the Causeway. Because these areas had been marked off and were not trampled by feet or driven over by cars for many weeks, grass seedlings of the Causeway have grown up with higher grasses.

"The way this area is now, the skimmers would no longer consider it a great place to nest," said refuge staffer Kristie Seaman. "They need a sandy spot area near water where it is wide open. If the vegetation grew up around the Causeway, the skimmers wouldn't nest here — and there are not that many options around here."

The refuge has tried to provide alternate sites, including one spot in the Bailey Tract where sand was even brought in, Olsen said.

nesting area and ideal habitat in the same vicinity. As part of the project the group even built black skimmer decoys and planted them in the freshly harrowed field with hopes that the skimmers would see the decoys and want to check out the site.

Instead, the birds flew back to their old stomping grounds by the Causeway. No one knows where the birds will choose to nest next year. They do usually choose a new site each year, though in the same vicinity — which likely means they will return to Sanibel.

ARTS ON THE ISLANDS

By Julie Niedenfuer

The Children's Center goes sand painting

31 tots take to the beach in search of subjects for their canvases

They used saltwater from the Gulf of Mexico to mix their paints while gentle breezes stirred their "canvases" and gulls wheeled overhead.

Last Friday, 31 youngsters from the Children's Center of the Islands — along with four teachers and eight mothers — trooped to Sanibel's Algiers Beach for an art lesson in nature's classroom. It was an outing they likely won't soon forget.

The children spent the morning painting in an atmosphere that allowed them to be especially creative. After all, it's not every day the youngsters get the chance to paint their subjects from life in their normal environment — a lonely shell on an empty stretch of sand or a pelican gliding along the water.

Center director Becky Pierce said the beach trip not only let the children "get out" for the morning, it "gave them a chance to study the colors and shapes of things around them," she said.

The outing was part of the center's ongoing effort to acquaint the youngsters with the arts, Pierce said. During September, for instance, the children visited the Schoolhouse Gallery, made a study of the primary and secondary colors and basic shapes, and did crayon etching and worm painting.

"We try to teach a lot of topics or concepts with art," Pierce said.

And what better way to expand a child's imagination and creativity than by letting him paint what he sees first hand.

Pierce said the youngsters not only learned something during their trip to the beach, but had a lot of fun — so much so, in fact, she said, "We plan to do it again."

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

I find it amazing that so many Florida visitors have a deep fear of either being attacked by or even seeing a shark. I guess the movies did the damage, but believe it or not, many people won't go in the water because they're afraid of sharks.

Well, under the right circumstances I'm afraid of sharks, too. But let's take a few minutes this week to talk once again about these fish.

First, although sharks in the movies appear on the surface of the water, in real life they are bottom or middle water level travelers and rarely hunt around the top of the waters for something to eat.

I know there are exceptions, but thinking over the several dozen large sharks my fishing parties have caught this summer, not once did a shark come to the surface to check out our boat.

So if you see a fin off the beach and some idiot starts yelling, "Shark!" just stop and count the fins. If there is one fin and it goes into an arc underwater, then you've seen a harmless and beautiful dolphin (the mammal).

Dolphin don't have an upright rear tail fin, so when you see them leaping you see that single dorsal fin break water while the animal gulps a breath of air before diving again. They usually travel in groups, so it's not unusual to see several working the beaches as a family.

Sharks school, too, but it is rare when more than one is seen at a time. Now if an angler is chumming with lots of dead bait with the hopes of attracting some big sharks for sport fishing, then you might see the fin school. It's not so much as a natural thing as a feeding opportunity.

At least two fins show when sharks come to the surface. The lemon shark has three back fins, the one in the center being shorter than the tall or front dorsal.

The dolphin has that broad, flat tail and no rising fin showing, so I would say that 80 times out of 100 what you see along the beaches are dolphins.

But there are some sharks around. They are in every water in the world, and in the warmer times of the year the ones come closer to shore.

Veteran shark angler Capt. Duke Sells of Tween Waters marina told me recently that on a small plane trip up from the Florida Keys he counted many large sharks within a couple miles of shore.

Yes, they are out there, but don't make fear of an attack a big concern. Many times on my shelling trips when we wade in less than 18 inches of clear water, people will ask me if they should be on the lookout for sharks!

All those Jaws movies set the fear into those who don't have real knowledge of these fish. And the movie makers forgot to mention some sharks that are completely harmless.

We have six- to nine-foot nurse sharks around the islands this time of the year. They are strong fighters, but their main diet is crustaceans. Some are caught on pindab, but this sluggish, toothless shark lives the easy life. Tourists are just too hard to eat, especially for a shark that doesn't have any teeth! Actually, the nurse does have a set of what one scientist called "jaws teeth." Incidentally, it is known to eat sea urchins, one of the few natural predators of that echinoderm.

The basking shark can reach 40-50 feet and is a plankton eater. So the "man-eating" label is untrue and unfair for many sharks that "reportedly" kill after they land them. The local blacktip shark is easy to catch and very good for eating, too.

You just can't believe everything you see in the movies, you know!

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

Do shells really get washed to the beaches, or are they there all the time — just not uncovered by the sands and winter?

Many collectors ponder that question as they walk our Sanibel and Captiva beaches. This week let's look at both "shelling theories" about how what you look for in shells arrives on the sands.

Certainly, living shells have some mobility and, to an extent, can determine movement when looking for food or nesting areas. However, most of the best collector shells — lunolons, lion paws and so on — are never found alive. They are found with some regularity, usually along the gulf beaches during periods of rough sea conditions such as northern cold fronts in the winter months.

People work the beaches during these high wave times, hoping that some of the more unusual shells will come rolling onto the beaches.

It's at that time you often hear people telling each other that shells are being washed onto the beaches, but I wonder if that's really the case.

I've always felt that the shells are there all the time — calm summer days or violent weather fronts in winter. I never could believe that a juncos could be tossed literally miles to the shore and still be in good condition.

And I couldn't imagine a delicate lion paw shell or Scotch bonnet rolling great distances to the beaches, either. I still think the sands around the island hold millions of shells, already in place, which are uncovered by storms — not washed in from great depths.

That means that some of the shells you find could have been buried for many, many years. I have found a few Indian artifacts, mostly shell tools from which, that are still in decent shape. Those shell tools could be a couple of thousand years old.

Evidence of early man have been dated about 12,000 years in this area of Florida.

If my idea is right, this giant mound of sand and shells we call barrier islands holds many more shells to be picked up. It depends upon winds and waters uncovering those shells for you.

Many shellers have told me they work the Lighthouse area of Sanibel with garden hand diggers and find many of their shells still partially buried in the sand.

Of course some shells do roll to the beaches during rough weather, but I never could quite buy the theory that the rare ones get washed miles out of the deep gulf to the beaches.

So I think Sanibel and Captiva are sitting on tons of shells yet to be found — a nice thought for future shellers.

Incidentally, if you have the chance, buy a copy of this month's Southern Living magazine. That's the September issue. Inside is a very good story with color photos of the islands along this side of Florida.

Writer Duane Young and photographer Geoffrey Gilbert were on the islands last winter to do interviews and get a feeling for Sanibel and Captiva. They have stories about Estero, Captiva, Sanibel and Gaxmarilla Islands, plus some on Useppa and Cabbage Key, too.

Good shelling to you this week. As usual, try to work the beaches early in the morning, preferably around a low tide. And remember the limit of two live shells per species per person.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-5459 for information.

other. I'm not complaining — just observing — but there is an incredible number of sporting seasons currently taking place.

And with all these seasons, from college and professional football to tennis, golf, baseball, volleyball, soccer, National Hockey League pre-season and soon the basketball practices, well, some important sports items could get lost.

And since for all practical purposes it is the baseball season that is approaching its sunset, let's look closer at what is still to come in baseball this month.

We have two big baseball events. First, Southwest Florida has a team that is within three victories of going into the World Series. And second, here on the Islands softball is not yet over — we've got what should be a highly entertaining one-pitch softball tournament coming up next week.

It takes absolutely no stretching of the imagination whatsoever to claim the Kansas City Royals as a local team. They start their playoff series with Detroit tonight. The winning team (first to win three games) will go up against the National League winner in the World Series.

The Royals have practiced in Fort Myers for years, and the Fort Myers Royals, a Kansas City farm club, play here all summer. The minor league team is likely the best sporting entertainment around, from a spectator's point of view.

At least four players on the Kansas City team are graduates of the Fort Myers farm club. This includes rookie starting pitchers Brett Saberhagen and Mark Gubiza, outfielder Darryl Motley and short stop Onix Concepcion.

Is Kansas City entertaining and worth our support? This year they are a fairly tale team and one of the biggest surprises in baseball history.

Drugs and injuries and intrigue rent the team asunder last year. This year they were 11 games below .500 on July 19. Since then they have had the best record in baseball, 44-25. They are a team afire.

I imagine the favorite team of many Sanibel folks is the team they watched up north — and that's major and good. But there's nothing like being in a town that has a top-line team competing for a world championship. Right now we have such a team, and there should be dancing on the beach and a parade along Periwinkle Way when the Royals take it all.

A little bit of spirit goes a long way in baseball and softball. And coming up is a softball tournament that should allow us Islanders to break loose.

The one-pitch softball tournament will be Oct. 12-13 as part of the second annual Festival of the Island sponsored by the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce. It will feature many island teams and a world caliber team from the Louisville, Ky., Police Department.

The one-pitch formula should be exciting and somewhat amusing. A refreshment stand will be set up. The weather in October, with cooler temperatures and clear skies, should be as dramatic as the sport. A big turnout by sports fans could turn the event into a real festival itself.

Verona Heise wins two in a row

Verona Heise has done it again. For the second week in a row we've had a tie in Greek of the Week competition. And for the second week in a row Heise had been closest on the tiebreaker total score.

Conrad Lickel and Thom Traucht tied with Heise by picking nine of 10 winning games. All three were 5-1. All three were wrong in the Raiders versus Bronco game. But Heise guessed a total of 37 points would be scored. She was off by eight points as the Broncos upset the Raiders 16-13. Lickel and Traucht guessed 41 and 49 points respectively.

Heise's win sends her to a second dinner for two at Morgan's Market and Lounge next puts her in pretty good shape for the grand prize — a trip for two to the Orange Bowl, which will be awarded to the player who has the best winning percentage over at least seven weeks of play. The contest is sponsored by Sundial Beach and Tennis Resort and by The Islander.

This week's games should also prove interesting. The Raiders might be upset by Seattle, and anything can happen at a Notre Dame game.

Good luck this week. Remember to circle all 10 games on the card, and then guess the number of points you think will be scored in the Game of the Week. These points will be used in case of a tie.

Entries must be brought to The Islander by 5 p.m. Friday or Sundial by noon Saturday. They can also be mailed to the Islander, P.O. Box 16, Sanibel 33957, or to Sundial, 1246 Middle Gulf Drive, Sanibel 33957.

Sportsman of the Week: Chris Olsen

Chris Olsen

This week's Sportsman of the Week, Chris Olsen, feels a lot better these days — thanks to a rigorous program of weights and aerobics she has recently taken up.

A friend who nominated Olsen for the sports award says, "Chris is incredibly motivated. She works out four or five times a week at the Phoenix Total Health and Fitness Center in Fort Myers, usually working with the weight machines three times a week and aerobics twice a week. Plus she is using a 'bicycle' for up to 30 minutes in her workout."

"I do feel so much better, and I do see improvements," Olsen laughs. "I feel it is showing up in a better mental attitude all around, not to mention the cardiovascular advantages."

The Sportsman of the Week recognizes local athletes of all ages, from fishermen to ballplayers and swimmers to golfers.

The Islander welcomes nominations for Sportsman of the Week. Nominations should be in our office by noon Thursday and can be made by calling Scott Martell, 472-9185.

Sports quiz

We had a little consternation over last week's quiz. Our trivia book was published in 1982, and for the first time there was a chance it had been outdated.

The question was what football rookie has scored the most touchdowns in first year. Eric Dickerson really came on last year, with 1,803 yards — a rookie record. And he scored 20 touchdowns, a team points in a game with Cedarville College in Ohio in 1982. But it wasn't the rookie record of all time.

Our book was right — the record holder is Gale

Sayers of the Chicago Bears, who in 1965 scored 22 touchdowns. Sorry, John Matustak, "Jimmy the Greek" and "The Associate" — it wasn't Earl Campbell.

Matustak and Dickerson both were right when they said a college running back once ran for more than 500 yards. Joe Koshalla of West Liberty State rushed for 504 yards in 20 carries and scored 11 points in a game with Cedarville College in Ohio in 1922. He also scored 11 touchdowns and never carried the ball for less than 22 yards!

This week we go to professional basketball. First: Has anybody ever won the Most Valuable Player award six times in the NBA? And second: What team has won the most NBA championships?

Think you know? Give us a call at 472-2185. You won't win anything valuable, but you'll become famous with your name in print in next week's Islander.

Cypress Lake Panthers win first game this season

Cochs Ray Rhodes has been saying all along that given a little time and experience, the Cypress Lake Panthers high school football team should be all right.

In the third game of the season the Panthers did more than "all right" — they skewered the Port Charlotte Pirates, 33-8, last Friday night for their first win of the season.

With three games under their shoulder pads, Cypress Lake now goes into games with a game at Riverdale this Friday.

Last week's game was a classic "put it all together" kind of a night. The offense was powerful, and more important, balanced.

The Panthers picked up 216 yards rushing as they established their running game for the first time this season. And while the passing game misfired quite a few times, Arnie Hopkins still threw for 137 yards, two touchdowns and no interceptions. Hopkins also ran for two touchdowns.

"The offense had four long practices last week," laughed Rhodes who coaches the defensive line. "It is an all new offensive line — and already this year we've had three injuries on the line. So it takes time for them to learn the system and gain confidence."

The defense also put it all together. They helmed two interceptions and snuck away with two fumbles.

The Panther offense often found itself in excellent field position thanks to their defense.

In fact, a combination of the ball control offense and the brick wall defense allowed Port Charlotte only four plays in the first quarter. The Pirates only had the ball for five plays in the second quarter until the 40-second mark and then quickly reset out four passes before the clock ran out.

One particular series showed how tough the Panthers can be. First the Cypress Lake defense stopped the Pirates on the one-inch line. Since the Pirates were penalized five yards on that same play, the Panthers took over on the six yard line with 8:42 left in the first half.

The Panthers spent most of the rest of the quarter taking the ball downfield with a strong running attack plus two critical pass completions, including the final one from Hopkins to Wilfred Rivera for the touchdown that put the Panthers up, 21-0. Add a 15-yard penalty and the Panthers drove 109 yards for the score.

After Port Charlotte scored its only touchdown — which took a quick three minutes in the third quarter — the Panthers once again tried their " flea flicker." The two hundred yards and then the long bomb to Kenny Talbert from Hopkins went for a 63-yard touchdown. While the Panthers had dominated throughout on ball control, this time it took only 90 seconds to score — it was that kind of game.

"We won — I liked it," Rhodes said after it was all over.

SPORTS TALK

Sam Bowie and nifty shooting forward Kiki Vandeweghe — will likely regain the pennant they last won in 1977 during the Bill Walton era.

Pennant? Whoops, that's the term used for baseball championships — but the slip is no wonder in light of all the sports seasons running into each other. I'm not complaining — just observing — but there is an incredible number of sporting seasons currently taking place.

Retired persons plan season's first meeting

The Sanibel-Captiva chapter of the American Association of Retired Persons will hold its first meeting of the fall season at 1 p.m. Friday, Oct. 12, at the Sanibel Community Association.

All AARP meetings for the 1984-85 season will be held at 1 p.m. on the second Friday of each month at the community association. AARP members can look forward to an exciting and entertaining year. Scheduled for Nov. 12-15 is a trip to Epcot and Disney World. Reservations should be made promptly and payment is due 30 days prior to departure.

A Christmas shopping trip to the famous Galleria in Fort Lauderdale is planned for Dec. 5 for the cost of $15 to $21 round trip, depending on the number of members making the journey. The cost is less than a one-way bus fare if you were to go on your own.

All trips are planned for the convenience of AARP members. You are picked up in front of the Sanibel Community Association and brought back to the same location.

Other travel programs planned are a cruise to the Bahamas on the Emerald Sea and a three-day holiday to Key West.

For further information, call Conna Kosch, 472-3171.

LIBRARY REPORTS

Archer, Jeffrey. First Among Equals. (London, 1984) Who will be the next King of England's choice for prime minister? The choices are: Raymond Gould, the Cambridge scholar tied down to a provincial wife; Jamie Sinclair, a politician so shrewd he's called a traitor to his class; Simon Kerslake, the conservative married to an unconventional woman; and Charles Hamilton, the ruthless land baron who will stop at nothing.

As all of their lives cross in a battle for power and success, only time — three decades between the sixties and the nineties — will tell the best

Auchincloss, Louis. The Book Class. (Houghton Mifflin, 1984) Twelve New York society women who as debutantes instituted the Book Class in 1900, have met for lunch every month over a 60-year period to discuss their

"book of the month." Lunch with the girls is far from being a literary tea party as we see their lives unfold.

Eagarle, Dirk. West of Sunset. (Viking, 1984) Newly widowed Alice Arlington and Lea Rooke, an appealing child psychologist with the knack of picking up the wrong men, are the passions in writer Jonathan Poole's life. When Poole travels from London to Hollywood to consult about the screenplay for his new novel, the trip changes his life forever.

Danley, Janet. Silver Wings, Santiago Blue. (Pocillon, 1984) A novel of the first WASPS — the women pilots of World War II. Despite the opposition and disapproval of family and friends, four women arrive in Texas, determined to win the silver wings of an army pilot and the Santiago blue uniform of the WASPS.

Fast, Howard. The Outsider. (Houghton Mifflin, 1984) In 1943 David Hartman, a chaplain fresh out of the army, goes to a small New England town to serve as rabbi to 14 Jewish families. He meets Martin Cooper, the WASP minister who will become his lifelong friend. They and their wives forge a bond that survives small-town prejudice and the larger strains of a world swept by great upheavals.

Maller, Norman. Tough Guys Don't Dance. (Random House, 1984) After drinking with a woman who reminds him of his unfaithful wife, Timothy Madden wakes up in the morning with a wicked hangover, images of his wife, fragmented memories of an argument, and a tattoo.
