Private wildlife preserve sold for $450,000

By Scott Martell

One of Sanibel's most unique properties — the Woodmere Preserve at the end of West Gulf Drive — has changed hands.

Mary Wegmuller and her sister, Martha Tessendors, have sold the property to Gary and Sandra McKnight of Slippery Rock, Penn., for $450,000.

The sisters' parents, Willis and Opal Combs, settled on the 1.35-acre preserve in 1952.

The parcel and three others alongside it are registered with the Florida Audubon Society as a private wildlife preserve.

Well-known to Islanders and visitors who toured the property during the annual botanical tours sponsored by Wegmuller and the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, the preserve is home to 108 different vegetation species.

Among the most interesting species are the joewood, Jacquinia keyensis, which was placed on the state's threatened list last year, and a wisk fern, Psilotum nudum, a "living fossil" that has changed little from the primitive form that grew on dry land 400 million years ago.

"The McKnights apparently have no intention of changing the property," Wegmuller said last week, adding that the new owners will continue to live in Pennsylvania for four or five years, where McKnight owns a coal com-

City seeks ways to combat seasonal traffic

By Barbara Brundage

The record-breaking number of cars that crossed the Causeway on two days during Christmas week and brought traffic to a standstill on the Island has spurred the City Council to seek a solution to the problem.

The bascule bridge was raised 34 times to allow boats to pass and was open for a total of three hours during a 10-hour period on Thursday, Dec. 27. That day more than 8,700 cars crossed the Causeway and set a new record, City Manager Gary Price reported to the council.

At times traffic coming on the Island was backed up three miles on Summerlin Road from the toll booth, across the Causeway and on the Island along Periwinkle Way and Sanibel-Captiva Road as far west as the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

The next day, Dec. 28, 8,905 cars passed through the toll booth. But even with 200 more cars coming on the Island there was less congestion and traffic moved smoother than on Thursday, Price said.

Leonard Bergstrand, toll captain in charge of Causeway records, said Friday is traditionally the heaviest day for traffic. "In any given week during the past five or six years you'll find Friday is the heaviest day," he said. "We really don't know why, but we've concluded it's the influx of owners of interval units who check in on weekends."

Price was concerned by the early onset of the heavy traffic, which in the past has not peaked until mid-March. "If we're getting this kind of volume at Christmas, what will it be like in the middle of the season?" he conjectured.

When life gives you lemons

Sanibel resident finds making lemonade isn't easy under Florida's new car act

By Barbara Brundage

This Thursday, Jan. 10, marks one year since Kathy Lynch cried for joy upon receipt of her brand new 1984 S-10 Chevrolet Blazer.

Today, after months of aggravation and unsuccessful attempts to have 15 mechanical defects on the truck repaired, the 23-year-old Sanibel resident is suing General Motors Corporation asking for damages or the replacement of her Blazer.

Lynch and her attorney, Greg White, who filed the suit last week in Lee County Circuit Court, are convinced that under terms of Florida's New Car Warranty Act her Blazer is truly a "lemon."

And under this statute Lynch is entitled to a new car.

The mechanical problems Lynch has tried to have corrected for almost a year are all covered by General Motors' 12-month warranty.

At least two Chevrolet dealers have tried to repair the defects more than the three times the law requires.

Lynch says the Blazer has been in the shop a total of 93 days, far in excess of the 15 days set by law as the limit before the manufacturer must give the consumer a replacement or a refund of the purchase price.

On last May 12, discouraged by the failure in having her truck repaired, Lynch wanted a new Blazer. She notified the Chevrolet Motor Division that she intended to follow the recourse offered under Florida law and file for an arbitra-

The stage is set for live entertainment at Island Cinema

By Julie Niedenfuer

Live professional cabaret, here — on the Islands? A dinner theater — on Sanibel? Not long ago the idea of either would have seemed preposterous. Area groups have a hard enough time finding facilities in which to properly house their local productions.

But now things are different. Island Cinema owners Ray Dielman and Ralph Zeiss have merged with Frank and Marsha Wagner, veterans of theater, to co-produce a series of seven professional acts to appear at the cinema (now the Island Theater and Entertainment Center).

A portable modular stage is currently under construction, and a professional lighting technician has been contracted to handle that phase of renovations that will help turn the theater into a suitable location for professional acts. A sound man was consulted but advised the theater

Take the trolley to the track

Think there is nothing to do when the sun goes down? Well, Jim Anholt has a suggestion — take the Sanibel trolley to the dog track.

Once again this year Anholt is offering the trip during the dog racing season. The trolley makes the trip to the track in Bonita Springs every Tuesday and Friday night, leaving Jerry's shopping center at 6 p.m.

Anholt recommends making a reservation by calling 472-6374. He needs a minimum of 10 people in order to make the 35-mile trip.

Anholt can take up to 34 people at a time in the trolley. The $10 cost of the trip includes round trip transportation, a racing program and admittance to the clubhouse or to the grandstands. Special arrangements can be

Seminar will examine Buddhism as a way to better understand life

The first session of the Sanibel Community Association seminar on "Buddhism — an old philosophy of life for modern times" will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. next Wednesday, Jan. 16, at the association hall.

Instructor Bill Constandse says the course is for anyone who wants to gain a better understanding of the purpose of life, acquire peace of mind and achieve happiness in personal relationships.

Constandse, a Harvard graduate and retired IBM executive, has been a Buddhist for the past 10 years. Last summer he spent a month in Bangkok, Thailand, to learn advanced meditation.

"The original teachings of Buddha, who lived 2,500 years ago, represent a philosophy of life to become a better person and to achieve happiness for yourself and in your relationships with others," explains Constandse. "That will be the basic subject of the seminar. After Buddha's death, his ideas became the foundation of three major branches of Buddhism: Theravada, Tibetan and Zen. The differences between these three schools will be discussed for historical purposes only."

All sessions are free and open to the public. For registration call 472-2155 or 472-4945.

made for groups and can include dinners in the clubhouse.

The trolley usually makes it back to Sanibel by 11:30 p.m., after the completion of the 13 races on the program.

The trip is guaranteed fun — but Anholt emphasizes that he guarantees no winners!

An architect's rendering of the proposed St. Isabel Catholic Mission on Sanibel became available for publication this week. Construction of the $35,000 building on Sanibel-Captiva Road should be complete in time for Easter.

COMMENTARY

The reasons are many for preserving Buck Key

It takes but one trip to Buck Key to know the wild island off the southeast corner of Captiva is worth preserving — keeping it a place where ospreys screech, water snakes slither, Calusa Indian burial mounds lie undisturbed and the wind whistles through the black, red and white mangroves.

The Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation has been trying to preserve the 315-acre island for years. The foundation has:

- Encouraged one landowner to donate 194 acres to the Nature Conservatory in Boston, which in turn handed the land to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The land is now part of the J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife Refuge;

- Purchased the Patterson Islands — two small mangrove islands adjoining the southern tip of Buck Key; and

- Urged first the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service and then the state of Florida to purchase the remaining 121 acres of private property.

The state has agreed to attempt the purchase. Now it comes down to negotiations — money. The SCCF file states that the assessed value of Ted Watrous' property — 103 acres of the privately held land — is $104,830. The property is surely worth much more, and it was once written that Watrous would accept $1 million for the property.

While $1 million would seem way too high, we sincerely hope the state makes a good solid offer — one that Ted Watrous can accept.

We also hope Watrous negotiates in good faith, recognizing the development problems that would go with building on Buck Key and also the importance of preserving this one entire island without a single inhabitant.

The development problems are many:

- Much of the land is low — too low to build. Bill Spikowski, senior planner and coordinator of the Lee County Development of County Impact program, has said the county believes only 40 of Watrous' 103 acres are uplands;

- With no access by car, any development would have to find parking space of at least one acre on Captiva. The developer would also have to install docks on Captiva and Buck Key for launching services;

- A fire district and fire department with trained personnel would have to be set up similar to the one on Upper Captiva Island;

- Other problems with developing the island run the gamut from how to plan around the mosquito control canals to how to handle sewage, save the mangroves and protect the key's archeological sites.

The reasons for wanting to preserve Buck Key are also many:

- The impact of even a few dwellings and permanent inhabitants would dramatically change the nature of the Island;

- Buck Key is home to many threatened or endangered species — from the prickly apple cactus to the joewood tree;

- And the key is also home to an archeological treasure — a classic one-acre Calusa Indian burial mound;

- The property as it now exists, adjoining a segment of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, is a fine nature preserve that also provides a clear recreational use. The mosquito canals are perfect canoe trails.

All these factors are reasons to keep Buck Key pristine. Watrous can develop a building plan that the county will have to approve. We hope he will not. But it will take a good purchase offer from the state. And it will take some magnanimity on Watrous' part as well.

Howe expresses dismay over city's pursuit of Causeway negotiations

A copy of the following letter to the Sanibel City Council was given to The Islander for publication. Dear Councilmen:

It was most distressing to read the Dec. 18 report in The Islander headlined "The state of the Causeway."

That report indicated that you have decided to plow ahead with the Causeway purchase proposal based solely on its financial and engineering feasibilities with little regard for its potential legal pitfalls. And such after seven years of discussions.

My memorandum to you of Nov. 23 reinvented your attention to some of those legal pitfalls. Regrettably, it did not mention the Florida Constitution's requirement that such a proposed transfer of the Causeway function must first be blessed by public referenda by the county and city voters. Nor did it point out that recent amendments to the Florida Municipal Annexation and Contraction statute might pose serious problems for the proposed realty proposal.

Those kinds of legal obstacles should better be addressed at the outset of negotiations rather than, as you contemplate, near the end after substantial public funds and manpower have been incurred for vainly studying only the financial and engineering aspects.

It seems to me, however, that the controlling aspect of the proposal is the political one. In that regard it appears impractical to ignore the hard fact that all five of the county commissioners are beholden to the vastly overwhelming number of voters who don't live on Sanibel but do insist on untrammelled Causeway access to the Islands' beaches and nature preserves.

Michigan travel agency owners look forward to Island return

To the Editor
The Islander

It will be "the best of times" when Mrs. Kissel and I drive the Causeway to Sanibel and Captiva Islands on Jan. 11. And it will be "the worst of times" when we have to return to Michigan on Jan. 18.

We enjoy the Islands so very, very much — the people, the hospitable shops, the fine restaurants. Words cannot describe the beauty and tranquility there. It's a feeling that very few places in the world can give.

We own a travel agency in Michigan and do much traveling, but we purchased an interval week at South Seas Plantation just to secure our week. We want to make either Island our home upon retirement. We love you, Sanibel and Captiva!

Sincerely yours,
Robert Kissel
Grosse Pointe Shores, Mich.

There's good news and bad news about 'going native' for Christmas

The following letter is in response to George Campbell's column in The Islander Dec. 18, 1984, about "Going Native" for Christmas gifts.

To the Editor
The Islander

Perhaps one of the nicest thrills of Christmas was provided for our family this year thanks to George Campbell, that cantankerous old fuss whose knowledge of our wonderful Island sometimes defies one's imagination.

After reading his article in The Islander I was able to feel like Jimmy Stewart due to George and a generous Sanibel landowner who allowed me to follow George's suggestion to capture a magnificent Cunninghamiana casuarina/Australian pine Christmas tree. In the darkness one cool evening we chopped it down and carried it home and put it in a bucket of wet sand. A more beautiful Christmas tree could not be found.

The good news is that we felt great about ridding the area of this beautiful noxious weed. The bad news, however, is we felt guilty about not providing the Lions Club with the profit from our tree sale, so enclosed please find our check to forward to the Lions Club so others may enjoy in our fun, too.

Ronald Levy
Sanibel

Neither does it seem pragmatic for the county commission to surrender all control over the toll rates and use regulations of the Causeway. Most quixotic, however, is the notion that 363,000 off-Island voting taxpayers would willingly ante-up some $200 million to replace a potential storm-damaged Causeway they no longer own or control when that responsibility is legally that of Sanibel's 8,200 property taxpayers.

As a directly affected taxpayer, I ask you to publicly proclaim what sensible reasons you have for chasing this tax-consuming will-o-the-wisp.

Sincerely,
Paul Howe

MUNICIPAL RECORDS

By Barbara Brundage

1985's first council session is shortest meeting in recent years

The first City Council meeting of the New Year last Wednesday was notable on two counts.

First: The five-hour session that adjourned at 3 p.m. was the shortest meeting in recent years.

And second: During the afternoon session that started on time at 1:30 p.m. (another rarity) the council heard on first reading seven requests for specific amendments in an hour and a half. All seven are scheduled for second hearings Feb. 5.

Applicants presented their cases with little or no comment from council members. Two requests for density increases generated the most discussion.

David Holtzman's contention that single-family homes are not compatible in an area near East Gulf Drive and Lindgren Boulevard opposite the Sanibel Hilton and several condominiums was disputed by a majority of the council.

Holtzman maintained his property on the north side of East Gulf Drive fronting on a Shell Harbor canal is more suitable for multi-family resort housing, which would require doubling the current density.

And E.G. Konrad, representing Reina Armstrong, owner of an 8.3-acre parcel on Casa Ybel Road, contended that land was "the highest land in the area with six-foot elevation in some places" and could support the 10 dwelling units requested.

Councilman Louise Johnson said the staff reported that 74 percent of the property was below four feet MSL and the buildable area would support no more than the two-unit density allowed by CLUP.

"We can't continue to grant density increases without very unusual factors to support," she said.

Two "after-the-fact" requests to permit maintenance improvements to remain at two Island restaurants brought only an admonition to all owners of lawfully existing properties to be aware of the limitations on expansion.

Matt Asen and Kipp Foster, owners of Chop Suey Louie's, are seeking council blessing to keep a walk-in freezer they installed without a city permit on a concrete slab outside the rear of the restaurant.

They said the freezer replaced one in the same location that had been approved by the city for a former owner of the property.

Roger Pritchard, one of the owners of Gib's Restaurant and Lounge, is seeking to keep a sliding glass door enclosure he installed to replace a temporary plastic wall in the bar lounge. He said the purpose of the repair was to correct the energy loss and noise problem and provide better security.

Ed Cassavell's plea to keep a chickee hut in front of the Janithina condominiums on the beach forward of the Coastal Construction Set-back Line brought a mixed response from Councilman Francis Bailey.

"I agree chickee huts don't cause harm to the beach, but right now the law says it can't be there," he said.

Three years ago the council by legislative decree extended the life of the hut to Sept. 15, 1984, when it was to be removed.

The council could see no problem with allowing Melvin and Shirley Bleiberg to build a single-family home on a lot in Gulf Pines II subdivision. The three-unit density assigned to a combined parcel of four lots, with two held in common ownership, would be maintained.

The council was non-committal on Heidi Wegryn Martin's request to permit her to use space at her father's medical clinic for her law office.

Requests continued for cable rate increase, below market rate units at Wil's Landing

Public hearings and second readings of two ordinances scheduled for final action by the City Council last Tuesday were continued at the applicants' requests until the Jan. 15 meeting.

Dr. Dorothy Newman, director of CHR's Housing Foundation, asked the council to delay the hearing of a request for an increase in density to permit construction of 12 Below Market Rate Housing units on residentially zoned land behind Wil's Landing until the foundation's negotiations with developer Rick Kennedy can be finalized.

Cablevision of the Islands also requested more time to come up with figures to support the need for the 14 percent across-the-board increase in rates for basic service to Island subscribers.

The second hearing of the ordinance to raise cable TV rates and installation charges was continued from the Dec. 18 meeting. At that time the council contested the method by which Cablevision calculated its percentage of profit for its profit and loss statement.

Last Tuesday Councilman Francis Bailey questioned why the council was even involved.

"They have a non-exclusive franchise, and the rates they seek are not exorbitant. Their percentage of profit is none of our business," he said, adding, "The government will soon be preempting our authority to regulate. We're wasting our time."

Mayor Fred Valtin reminded Bailey that under terms of the current franchise agreement the council must approve any cable rate changes.

Councilman Mike Klein said the ordinance also "requires us to look over their shoulders to make sure the rates are equitable. We have an obligation to residents of Sanibel to do this."

Developer loses bid for vacation of portion of Las Tiendas Lane

Though agreeing there would be no point in paving a 300-foot-long public road easement that will provide access for only six homes in a new subdivision, the City Council last Tuesday refused to vacate to developer Doug Speirn-Smith ownership of the right-of-way that is an east-to-west paper extension of Las Tiendas Lane.

City policy requires public roads in new subdivisions to be constructed to city standards and paved.

Speirn-Smith argued that covering the short street between two sand-shell roads with asphalt would make it out of character with the natural ambiance of the neighborhood.

When the Planning Commission approved a development permit for Speirn-Smith's proposed subdivision on Periwinkle Way between Las Tiendas and Sabal Street, the commissioners agreed it would be preferable to leave the street sand and shell.

They recommended Speirn-Smith appeal to the council for an

Residents of the neighborhood said they use the path as a bicycle route and for access to the gulf beach. They feared they would lose that use if the path were vacated to developer Doug Speirn-Smith.

exemption from the paving requirement or ask the city to vacate the easement to him.

A half dozen residents of the neighborhood on hand for last week's hearing objected to the city's giving away the 50-foot-wide path now covered with spartina grass. The residents of the neighborhood use the path as a bicycle route and for access to the gulf beach. If the street were private, they said, they feared this use would be denied them.

A petition signed by more than 100 Sanibel taxpayers protested on principle a give-away of public land.

Since there was no perceived benefit to the community at large in turning over the public easement to a private owner, the council unanimously decided to deny the request to vacate.

Councilman Mike Klein pointed out that taxpayers' money could be saved if the city were relieved of the responsibility for maintenance of the street. But he voted with his colleagues to retain public ownership.

Speirn-Smith would need a specific amendment in order for the paving requirement to be waived, and the council recommended he follow that route.

Council must fill two vacancies on Planning Commission

With the resignation of Mary Wegmuller effective Jan. 31 the City Council must now fill two vacancies on the Planning Commission.

Wegmuller, appointed to the commission in January 1984 to fill Emily Barefield's unexpired term, was reappointed for another three years last month.

Wegmuller said her home, the Woodmere Preserve on West Gulf Drive, sold more quickly than she anticipated. With her husband, Jake, she plans to live in Fort Myers and will no longer be eligible to serve on the commission.

"I'd be willing to commute to continue to serve," Wegmuller said. "But that is illegal."

Commissioner Larry Simon, after four years on the commission, the last year as chairman, resigned in early December. His term does not expire until Dec. 31, 1986.

Last Friday Mayor Fred Valtin said Dr. Eleanor Goldbloom, John Seabrooke and Alice Kylo all have submitted resumes outlining their experience. "All three are viable candidates," he said.

Goldbloom, a resident of Sanibel Bayous, is currently a member of the city's Below Market Rate Housing Committee. The retired physician is active in Democratic politics in Lee County.

Seabrooke, a resident of Sanibel Isles, has lived on Sanibel since 1977. He retired from the Bell Telephone System in New York, where he was an engineer. He is active in the Sanibel Isles/Water Shadings Civic Association.

Kylo, a long-time Island resident, is involved in conservation and environmental activities on the Island.

Anyone interested in serving on the commis-

Council rules on sign variances for Bailey's, Periwinkle Place

As a guide for tourists and other visitors, a map of Sanibel and Captiva showing various points of interest on both Islands will be mounted on the blank wall on the Periwinkle Way side of Bailey's Shopping Center building.

The 8x8-foot graphic, covered with plexiglass, will pinpoint locations of beach accesses, nature preserves, recreational facilities, libraries and municipal complexes, Jack Carver, representing Bailey's Center Merchants Association, told the City Council last week.

He was seeking variances from the city's graphics ordinance for installation of the map and a 16-square-foot companion map indicating the locations of the various businesses in the complex.

The association also needed council approval to replace the community bulletin board, a long-time tradition at Bailey's, with two 6x3-foot kiosks with shaker shingle roofs where notices of community activities and other messages of non-commercial nature will continue to be displayed.

The council agreed that all three proposals would be of benefit and service to the community.

Councilman Francis Bailey, owner of the shopping center, declared a conflict of interest and abstained in the 4-0 vote to approve the necessary variances.

Also last week the council unanimously approved a variance to permit the existing sign at the Periwinkle Place Shopping Center to remain where it is.

As the result of the dedication of an additional 25 feet of right-of-way along Periwinkle Way (a condition of the development permit for expansion of Periwinkle Place), the sign now sits in the city right-of-way.

The council by a 5-0 vote adopted a resolution giving Periwinkle Place Shopping Center an irrevocable license to obstruct the right-of-way.

Two new employees start at City Hall

Two new employees began the New Year at Sanibel City Hall.

Patty Murty has taken over the duties of recording secretary for the City Council, and Mary Schultz is the new secretary for the Finance and Administration departments.

Murty, a newcomer to Sanibel, has worked for eight years as the administrative assistant to the president of an advertising agency in Akron, Ohio. She and her husband, Tim, who is an attorney, have vacationed for six years at the Sanibel Beach Club.

Schultz has lived on the Island for 1½ years with her husband, Terry, and sons Andrew and Ryan. The family was introduced to Sanibel by Terry's parents, Fred and Jean Schultz, who are employed at South Seas Plantation on Captiva.

In addition to secretarial duties for the two city departments Schultz will take over the courier's job formerly held by Kathy Smith.

Phyllis Linden, Planning Department secretary, has resigned after 3½ years in the job. She will move to Atlanta to work as a secretary for the Kraig Corporation, designers of computer software for IBM.

Widow's request honored for exemption from city's short-term rental policy

Vogal Higgins is a widow who depends on revenue from part-time rental of one side of her duplex on Jamaica Drive to continue to live on Sanibel.

But under terms of an ordinance that prohibits short term rentals (less than 28 days) outside the resort housing area after Oct. 1, Higgins will not be able to rent her apartment for holiday weekends or week-long vacations as she has since 1972.

Last Tuesday she appeared before the City Council seeking an exemption provided by the ordinance for homeowners who can furnish proof that resort use of their properties dated back to before the city adopted the land use plan in July 1976.

As evidence Higgins presented a copy of an occupational license to rent the apartment. The city issued the license in September 1976.

The planning staff had recommended denial of Higgins' request. But Mayor Fred Valtin inquired how Higgins' case differed from that of Ed and Hazel Schuller, who were granted an exemption for their home in Shell Harbor by the council several months ago.

City Manager Gary Price explained that there was no evidence that Higgins' apartment had been rented for periods less than four weeks.

Councilman Bill Hagerup's motion to allow Higgins to rent her apartment for periods less than 28 days as long as she owns the property passed by a 5-0 vote.

BUSINESS NEWS

By Scott Martell

Business book review

Take a look into the future job market

Jobs of the Future: The 500 best jobs — Where they'll be and how to get them — By Marvin Cetron with Marcia Appel. McGraw-Hill Book Company, 1984. 258 pages. Available at the Sanibel Public Library.

Jobs of the Future is a fascinating book — for both those preparing for the job world and for those interested in the business world and how it is changing.

The book is also relatively optimistic — if individuals have the foresight to plan for the future.

Cetron and Appel make interesting predictions that appear to be based on facts and perceived trends rather than imaginative tarot card reading.

Part one of the book examines various job classifications, from the service industry (soon expected to provide up to 90 percent of all jobs) to engineering job prospects and positions for those who will still emphasize the humanities.

Part two, more than 60 pages, then lists various jobs, where they will be, their expected salaries and other aspects. The authors also list the best colleges and universities by specific field — so the book is multi-faceted.

But for those who are mostly interested in general reading about the future of business, then the first part of the book, written with insight and humor, is for you.

Some of the predictions are not too unexpected, such as the forecast for a continual move of business to the Sun Belt. But the authors also say a lack of water in these areas could dampen the Sun Belt's prosperity by the 21st century.

Also, certain of the older areas such as Boston, Connecticut and, of all places Minneapolis, will continue to see positive growth, the authors believe.

They don't just tell us this, they show why they believe it will be so. About Minneapolis, they write that it retains a large number of homegrown and healthy Fortune 500 companies, an entrepreneurial spirit and a dynamic combination of robust outdoor life and high culture.

Other thoughts on general business trends include everything from predicting a 25-hour work week by the year 2,000 to anticipating 8.5 percent unemployment being called "full" employment compared to the 4.5 percent figured used today.

Concerning women in the market place, the authors write:

"Women are about to enter what is surely the most exciting time for their gender in all history. With the arrival of computer technology and its equalizing effects, the doors stand wide open. In the new society, almost everything will be 'women's work.' The sheer numbers of working women will inevitably change society, and, in the end, men will come to prefer it."

Computers, of course, will be a main aspect of the job scenario in the future. The book pessimistically points out that during the next 20 years office automation will eliminate between

Try some profitable New Year's resolutions

Courtesy of the Florida Institute of Certified Public Accountants

New Year's resolutions that are unrealistic usually fall by the wayside even before January is over.

But the The Florida Institute of CPAs suggests some financial resolutions that are practical, doable and worth considering. Try one resolution a month. See if you're not financially better off by the end of the year.

1. Think big — Too often people dribble their dollars away on inconsequential things and then wonder why there's nothing left for a vacation or a major expenditure such as a personal computer. Set priorities and spend on what's important; learn to live without trivial items.

2. Plan ahead — Planning is the key to sound money management. Set goals for the next year, for five years, and even further. Set up a realistic budget to reach those goals. You'll be surprised how good you feel to find yourself nearing those goals.

3. Keep records — Set up a simple system of envelopes or files so you have at your fingertips financial information for budgeting, tax planning, investing or securing loans.

4. Find out what you're worth — Add up your assets — your house, car, personal possessions. Then total your liabilities — the mortgage, other outstanding debts. Subtract liabilities from assets: the result is your net worth. Revise this personal financial statement every year. It can help you set goals, get a loan or get started in a business.

5. Start building a capital base — Too often we live from paycheck to paycheck, without building capital. No matter how little you invest, invest something in high-yield accounts.

6. Don't give the IRS an interest-free loan — Do you look forward to a hefty refund at tax time? If so, you're not planning properly. Avoid those refunds — they actually cost you money. Have less withheld from your paycheck; invest it yourself rather than letting the government use it — and earn interest on it — for a year.

7. Take advantage of all tax breaks — Contribute to a tax deductible or tax-deferred account, like an IRA (or a Keogh if you're self-employed). Educate yourself about deductions you are entitled to whenever you incur expenses for your job, your school, your health — whatever.

8. Don't play dumb about money and let your spouse do all the work — A head-in-the-sand attitude is irresponsible and costly. No matter who works, you should both share in the planning decision-making.

9. Don't use credit cards for consumables — Credit cards are handy if you pay off the full purchase when the bill is received and when something you want is on sale. Plastic power is good for purchasing assets that increase in value. Always calculate the cost of the interest (figuring in the tax-deductible percentage) against the probable increased cost of the item if you wait until you have cash. Use credit cards for leverage, not for items that will wear out before you pay for them.

10. Shop around for loans — Before you borrow money, compare interest rates and, more important, how those rates are calculated. Interest rates can actually cost you more depending upon how they are calculated — as a one-time finance charge or as a periodically compounded rate (as on most credit cards).

11. Review your finances at least twice a year — The middle and the end of the year are good times to review your personal financial statement and your budget and cash flow worksheet to see if you are on target. If there are changes in your income, expenses, lifestyle or family size, you'll need to rework these figures.

12. Don't worry about money — If you have control over your finances — if you know where your money goes and you have realistic goals and a workable budget — there's no need to worry. But if you need professional advice about personal finances or taxes, consult your certified public accountant. Professional help can save money in the long run.

30-50 million white collar jobs from a work force that now numbers about 90 million.

But, again, the book is optimistic and spends much more time showing how one can get around this perceived problem by showing how automation will create new and more challenging jobs (up to 10 million within the next 10 years), and how computerization is in fact good for the world as well as business — improving office productivity and eliminating waste.

Cetron and Appel end their discussion on the computerized office of the future on another positive note:

"Office automation, by turning mundane tasks over to machines, frees people to create, imagine, direct, lead, excel — things no computer can do."

While a lot of this seems a popularization of ideas already being debated, the book should not be ignored. For these folks do have imagination and perception, and they write well and often with specific detail.

For instance, each chapter lists and discusses various interesting job possibilities, from computer software writer or robot service technician to hazardous waste management technician to electronic game repairman.

You can pick your field and go right to it in the book. I chose "Communications and the Arts".

It was first interesting to read that, "Writers, directors and even actors (believe it or not, Dad) should find more work available" because of the growth in cable television.

It was also interesting to read the following: "Many people, including some 'ink-in-the-veins' newspaper employees, predict teletext (which links consumers to data sources via cable or satellite) may eventually eclipse the traditional gazettes. Although it's doubtful the newspaper will completely disappear, U.S. papers are spending more than $20 million annually on a variety of teletext experiments.

"With transportation, labor and newsprint costs rising, teletext should make a dent in the newspaper market. Forward-thinking newspaper executives are planning to simply transfer a portion of their news gathering expertise to fill the void.

"About 167,000 editors, writers and reporters will be needed by 1990 to gather the news — regardless of whether it's printed in newspapers, magazines or on video screens."

And no doubt The Islander, which has been Sanibel and Captiva's community newspaper since 1961, will still be here.

Sometimes the way to keep control is to lose an early rather than a late trump trick.

This week's East took two hearts and switched to diamonds. South took the ace of diamonds and greedily led his three top trumps.

When the trumps failed to drop South couldn't lead a fourth trump since East would take his hearts. South tried to run the clubs, but East ruffed the third club and resumed hearts. South got only eight tricks.

FORESEEABLE

South should expect the six missing trumps to divide 4-2 and should foresee what will happen if he leads his top trumps. To keep control, South should start the trumps by leading low instead of high.

Either defender wins the first trump but cannot gain by leading another heart since dummy still has trumps and can ruff a heart continuation. This, of course, is the reason for leading a low trump.

If the defense continues diamonds, South wins and leads his top trumps. He then runs the clubs, winning 10 easy tricks.

WEEKLY QUESTION

You hold: ♠ J 9 8 2 ♥ A Q J 10 3 ♦ Q 7 ♣ 4 2. The opponent at your right opens with one spade. What do you say?

ANSWER

Pass. Many experts would bid one heart over an opening bid of one club or one diamond, but none would bid two hearts over one spade. Regardless of vulnerability, an overcall at the level of two promises a good six-card suit and approximately the strength of an opening bid.

Beautiful Buck Key — Will it be saved

Conservationists hope the state of Florida will purchase the island for preservation

The journey by canoe, if paddled on a straight course across Roosevelt Channel, is a distance no longer than the toss of a Calusa Indian spear.

But the change in environment, from populated Sanibel and Captiva to the uninhabited barrier Island of Buck Key, makes the trip seem more like a journey from one world to another.

One world is that which is well-known, understood — with nice homes, roads, shopping centers. The other world provides mystery in its dark, watery channels surrounded by dripping mangroves, mounds of shells cast away by the Calusa Indians — including one burial mound with human bones jutting out of the soil — and ridges of land where strangler figs act out murder and gumbo limbos stick thick, thigh-like roots out to trip the unwary.

This mysterious and uninhabited world of Buck Key soon will be the subject of negotiations between the state of Florida and Ted Watrous, who owns 103 acres of the 315-acre island.

The state would like to buy Watrous' property and 18 acres owned by Mary Ann Hotard Lawrence. The remaining 194 acres that make up Buck Key are already preserved as part of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

On a sunny winter day recently seven people filled three canoes for the journey to Buck Key. Among the explorers was Morton "Butch" Horn, a land acquisition agent for the Division of State Lands, Department of Natural Resources. It will be his job to negotiate with Watrous for the property.

Horn, a former real estate broker who has been with the DNR for the past 1½ years, described his job as similar to someone who is investigating buying an automobile — looking closely at a purchase and checking out all the facts.

"I would be at a disadvantage if I knew nothing about the land," Horn said. "I will be able to negotiate better by seeing what is buildable and by meeting knowledgeable people."

Among the knowledgeable people on the trip with Horn were naturalist and guide Mark "Bird" Westall, SCCF director Steve Phillips, and state Sen. Frank Mann's legislative aide, Don Moody.

As soon as the canoes slid into Roosevelt Channel, Westall's eyes quickly caught the black and white back of a loon. A red-breasted merganser floated by, and two ospreys watched from above.

We slowly paddled away from the docks and homes on Captiva. Ahead, Buck Key sat and from the water seemed dominated by huddling mangroves — an imposing dark jungle.

The mangroves hold the land, stop it from eroding away with the water currents. While the gulf grabs hunks of sand from the west side of barrier islands, mangroves on the bayside often build up land to the west.

"But there are many different levels of importance to the mangroves," Westall said. "I tend to see them most important as part of the food chain." In this chain, the mangroves drop their leaves, creating fertile beds that spur organic growth, which in turn feeds creatures higher up on the food chain.

The mangroves appeared a solid mass, impenetrable. Yet Westall guided the canoes into the wall that opened up to a dredged mosquito canal. We went from brightness to darkness, leaving behind the screeching of ospreys and entering silence.

The mosquito canals were dredged by the Lee County Mosquito Control District in the late 1950s and are similar to ones dredged on Sanibel. The theory — and it appears to work — is that the mosquitoes must lay their eggs on dry mud. The larvae hatch only when the water rises and covers the larvae. This necessary fluctuation will not occur when all the water is channeled into these dredged low spots.

The dredging occurred throughout the mangrove segments of Buck Key. Peering through mangrove leaves we saw that the land rose to upland ridges covered with a different kind of vegetation.

The dredging was an unnatural if necessary act — yet it provides one of the strongest reasons why a government body — the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service on the southern half of the island, and perhaps the state on Watrous's property — would buy the property with tax dollars. The channels provide a public recreational use as canoe trails.

Traveling by canoe over waterways in Florida often brings out "gator stories," and while alligators are relatively rare in the salty canals of Buck Key, this trip proved no exception.

"Did you hear the one about the tourists canoeing on the Sanibel River who thought they had struck a submerged log, but instead they were running over an alligator?" Steve Phillips.

This just occurred last year. The visitors apparently got out of the boat and moved it over the "log." When they got back to the SCCF they were told the holes in the canoe weren't caused by a rough bottom, but rather by teeth — big teeth.

"Alligators will rarely attack a person — unless that person is trying to feed it or touch it," said Horn, who with his wife, Liz Carter, has canoed many of the rivers of Northern Florida. Carter has written a guide book about the canoe trails of that area.

"Yes, that's true — it is all a matter of ignorance," said Westall, who with Phillips and other local naturalists is leading the way to educate visitors about the hazards of feeding alligators.

"It would be like me going up in the Rockies getting involved with a grizzly bear," Westall added, emphasizing the point that you should not fool with something you know little about.

Westall led the canoes into a hole in the mangroves where we docked. After travelling through the canals primarily on refuge property, we were now on the edge of the Watrous property.

And it was no wonder Westall used this place to dock — we walked immediately onto the edge of the Calusa Indian burial mound.

He showed us an Indian mandible and a femur, then placed them back exactly where he found them. "You can see by the holes dug up around here what some visitors have done," he lamented, adding he suspects as many as 15-20 skulls have been removed from the site. He also pointed out that in plans Watrous has submitted for developing his property, a corner of one house sits right on the edge of the mound.

From the burial mound area, which is about one full acre, we walked inland and began our up-and-down trek — not like Nepal, surely, but the ridges are definitely noticeable.

In the inland areas we went through virgin forests, full of Jamaica dogwood, including one which is a champion tree; mastic, which has a fruit that was the "juicy fruit" gum of the Calusa and the pioneer; and gumbo limbo, the tourist tree with peeling skin-like bark.

At the different "elevations" we traveled in different kinds of terrain. One area seemed almost desert, bare. We walked on one path where the trail was carpeted with fallen sea grape leaves. Another area was full of the waist-high sea oxeye daisy. And we had to be careful easing by a huge patch of the prickly pear — a huge, cactus-like bush with a fruit that looks like a large radish.

In each of the different terrains we came across plants which are either threatened or endangered in Florida. The island holds at least four of these species — the prickly apple cactus, beach-creeper, joe-wood and necklace pod.

The wildlife tried to stay hidden from the bright morning sun — at least all except the omnipresent spiders, whose webs caught the sunlight and turned it into a prism of colors.

Off in the sand lay the only dwelling units now on the island — big gopher holes. Phillips showed Horn the thornbugs and looked intently for coral snakes.

Back in the canoes, we slid over huge mullet looking for food up the mosquito canals. And hidden amongst the branches of a white mangrove, almost the color of another branch, sunned a mangrove water snake — one of the few water snakes that does not mind the salt water habitat of the dredged canals.

Many other things live on and around Buck Key. As we portaged our canoes past a lip of sand between a mosquito canal and Pine Island Sound, we came across many live shells, including a huge horse conch. Taking live shells home is taboo, particularly considering the ease of finding empty shells.

We paddled out in the sound for a few hundred yards — most of which was the bayside of Watrous' property. Then it was back into another hidden mosquito canal leading to Hurricane Bayou.

Hurricane Bayou is wide and open — similar to a lake surrounded by mangroves. Here white birds roost or fly against the background of green trees. And we learned not all white birds are snowy egrets or great egrets. An immature little blue heron glided by as quickly as a thrown snow ball.

The water in the bayou was fairly clear. In one shallow spot we saw where a motorboat propeller had left a deep and ugly scar. Luckily, it was cut in sand and not a fertile grass bed.

Later, crossing back to Captiva, we would see one boater stuck on sand in the middle of Roosevelt Channel, trying to power his way off the bar.

And it so it was back to the other world — Captiva and Sanibel. The mysteries of Buck Key had been shown to us and somewhat explained — a world we are glad to know still exists and hope will remain so, not just in the mind, but in reality.

Buck Key timetable

The first pioneer on Buck Key, Herbert Dwight Brainard, arrived with his family in 1896 and settled down to farm, planting citrus groves.

The northern end of Buck Key was homesteaded by Henry Perry Knowles in 1897. He owned 144 acres — much of what constitutes the Watrous and Hotard-Lawrence property today. This is the property the state would like to buy in order to preserve the entire island from development.

The third pioneer family was the Ormsbys, who inhabited the south end of the island. It was largely through the Ormsbys' efforts that a school district was organized on Buck Key in 1897. The school lasted until 1903, when the teacher left the island.

In 1914 the school buildings were used by Professor Clarence Synder of Chicago for his "outdoor school" — but this lasted only one year before Synder moved his school to Captiva.

The hurricanes of 1921 and 1926 inundated the island with saltwater and ruined the land for farming. The pioneers moved away, and natural and some exotic vegetation took over.

In 1956 Elena Duke Benedict purchased 24.7 acres on the northern point for $3,600. The following year she bought a further 169 acres on the south end of the island for $17,700. In 1979 this property was donated to the Nature Conservancy in Boston, which in turn handed it over to the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service. The property is now part of the J.N. "Ding" Darling Wildlife refuge.

In the late 1950's the lower elevations of Buck Key were dredged to create mosquito control canals. Useful in preventing the laying of mosquito larvae, and they also provide excellent canoe trails throughout the island.

In early 1983 the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation, which has been interested in preserving Buck Key since at least 1975, asked the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service to buy the rest of the island. But the agency said funds were not available.

The SCCF next went to the state Department of Natural Resources and proposed that the private lands be acquired under the State Conservation and Recreation Lands program.

In February 1984 the state declined to consider Buck Key as a new purchase. But at the instigation of Sen. Frank Mann, the state began to consider linking Buck Key with its plans to purchase Cayo Costa. Cayo Costa is 14th on the purchase priority list. The committee deferred action until an on site inspection of the island.

In May, Leo Minasian, environmental specialist for the Division of State Lands, made the field inspection and in his final report wrote, "I found the resource value of this addition, in terms of uniqueness and quality of natural communities, to be high."

In early June, Ted Watrous, who owns 103 of the 121 privately owned acres, approached Lee County with tentative plans to build 150 homes in a Planned Unit Development on the property. The land is currently zoned agricultural and is permitted one dwelling unit per acre. To change the density, Watrous would first have to change the zoning to Planned Unit Development.

In late June the state announced its intentions to attempt a purchase of all privately owned property on the island.

In early July, Watrous submitted revised plans — for 41 single-family homes and 16 quadriplexes (105 units) — to the county.

And in December 1984, DNR official Butch Horn inspected the key. He said his inspection would allow him to better negotiate with Watrous for the property. Watrous, of course, has the option to sell to whomever he wants or to submit a formal plan for development of his property.

Island vacation doesn't stop missionary family from spreading the word

By Peggy Jackson

During the holiday rush of Island visitors one family of seven vacationed on Sanibel in between missionary trips to South America and India.

But even while they were on vacation, Steve and Mercy Levenberg and their five children went to work ministering to area residents and visitors and even to a group of prisoners in Hendry County.

The family, with children from 8 months to 8 years old, came to Sanibel to visit their friends Peggy and Doug Jackson, who arranged through the First Baptist Church of Sanibel to provide them with a condominium on the gulf for 10 days.

For the past 13 years as independent missionaries the Levenbergs, both raised in Jewish homes, have been sharing their lives and their love of God with others in many countries throughout the world.

Their first child was born in France and the next two in Turkey, where Steve worked as a disc jockey during the day and ministered surreptitiously at night. He was arrested for teaching the gospel in that country, however, and the family was forced to leave for the safety of the children.

After a brief return to the United States they ministered in Puerto Rico, where their fourth child was born. After morning devotions and lessons the family would go out to parks or shopping areas, where the children would sing their testimony. The Levenbergs' music and message went to much of South America via television ministry.

Then followed ministry in three different South American countries, the family moving as their visas would allow. After their fifth child was born last year the Levenbergs felt called to minister in India and now are making arrangements for that adventure.

The day after their arrival on Sanibel the family joined Steve and Susan Morris and several other Islanders from the Baptist church who took food, song and their message to 35 prisoners at the Hendry County Correctional Institution outside Immokalee.

The family was also asked to sing at two Island holiday parties, one on New Year's Eve at the Larry Tetrault home and another at the Bob Mandersheid home on Captiva. The family also shared their ministry at the Fort Myers Christian School.

On Christmas Day they returned to the stockade near Immokalee and ministered in song to about 50 children who were visiting their fathers in prison that day.

And after Christmas dinner at the Jackson home they went to the Sanibel Community Association to sing for a community Christmas party.

The way the Levenbergs feel about Christmas can be summed up in the words of a song they sing in their ministry:

"What can I give Him
as small as I am?
If I were a shepherd
I'd give him a lamb.
If I were a wise man
I'd do my part.
I know what I'll give him
I'll give him my heart."

The Levenbergs live totally by faith and the support of their ministry by friends they meet along their travels. The children have few toys, no home, no car, no insurance policies and no savings account — yet all have a peace and joy about them seldom found in American families.

When they leave Sanibel this week they will spend a few weeks in Fort Lauderdale with friends while they make the final arrangements for the trip to India, where they hope to stay many years.

Anyone who would like to know more about the Levenbergs' ministry should call Peggy or Doug Jackson, 472-1694.

SEAFOOD BUFFET

Wednesdays

"Tween Waters Inn originated the Seafood Buffet many, many years ago. It is now widely copied on these islands but, most people think, never surpassed.

What a feast! Start with a snow crab claws or oyster cocktail, and then you can stuff yourself with all you care to eat of fresh Gulf Shrimp, charbroiled Shark steak, fried Grouper fingers, baked Flounder, steamed Mussels, Linguini and Clams, and even Roast beef au jus. Conch Chowder, of course, plus fresh local vegetables, potatoes, a copious salad bar, and, if you still have room, a selection of desserts. Inclusive of beverage — Coffee, Tea, Soda or Milk — $16.95 plus tax & gratuity. Children's prices available.

Remember, Tween Waters Inn is situated right on the water on Captiva Island. A good deal of our fish, shrimp and stone crab claws is brought in fresh daily to our own docks. You can't get it any better.

Electric cooperative has money-saving tips to use during winter cold spells

Members of Lee County Electric Cooperative, which provides power to both Sanibel and Captiva, can save themselves and their neighbors money on electric bills by following a few basic principles during winter cold snaps.

The higher the peak demand during these cool snaps, the more expensive each kilowatt hour is in the future. The key is in keeping the peak load as low as possible.

Typically, when colder weather hits energy use is very high in the morning, causing an expensive peak load. But there are some simple things you can do to ease the load.

First, close your drapes and turn the heat down to 65 degrees at night. Next morning leave it at 68 degrees until after 10 o'clock. With a light sweater you'll stay warm and at the same time save on your electric bill while you are helping to reduce peak demand.

Next, use as little hot water as possible during peak hours — from 6 to 10 a.m. and 5 to 9 p.m. If you have to shower, make it quick. But save laundry till later. If you have a timer on your water heater, set it to be off during peak hours.

It takes neighbors working together, so do the neighborly thing. Remember, as a member of a co-op, everything you save is yours. Nobody takes a profit, but everyone shares the benefits.

Children's Center has car seats for loan

One option to attempt to control the number of cars coming on the Island is to post a warning sign at the toll booth that the Island is full.

"We've considered doing this for years but could never agree on how to implement it," Councilman Louise Johnson said.

Walter Klie, executive director of the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce, said the effect such a sign would have on the business community should be given consideration.

"I'm not sure the merchants would be happy with a sign that says the Island has shut down," Klie said. "These traffic tie-ups happen only five or six times a year at most," he said, adding, "Will it be worth the trouble?"

Dave Arnold, a member of the chamber's Retail Committee, said he saw "a lot of merit in placing an informational sign on the other side of the bridge warning visitors there's no parking available or that traffic is bumper-to-bumper on the Island."

But it needs lots of discussion as to location, what point it would be put up and how often it would be changed, he said.

Mayor Fred Valtin questioned whether a sign would result in drivers turning back. "People always hope there'll be a parking space when they get here," he said.

Councilman Bill Hagerup pointed out that, "We owe it to residents who are inconvenienced by traffic tie-ups such as that on Dec. 27 to look for some way to warn or discourage casual visitors during peak hours."

Valtin agreed to Hagerup's suggestion to set up a committee including a representative of the Chamber of Commerce to look for a solution. Price was authorized to formulate such a committee.

Price said it appeared that the frequent bridge openings were responsible for the Dec. 27 tie-up.

A solution might be scheduled openings of the span, he said, adding Lee County Commissioner Porter Goss has said he would reopen the subject with the county administrator.

At council request county officials last year asked the U.S. Coast Guard to permit regularly scheduled openings of the span rather than simply opening the bridge upon demand by boaters.

"But the Coast Guard turned this down flat on the basis that the yearly averages of boat traffic did not warrant it," Valtin reminded the council last week.

The council agreed to pursue this option more vigorously and get seasonal averages of boat traffic to submit to the county for evidence.

Lynch bought the car, the Blazer was returned to Lynch certified by a Chevrolet executive as "fixed."

But last week oil continued to leak from the engine.

"It's a joke," Lynch says of the Florida statute popularly dubbed the "Lemon Law."

"It doesn't really help the consumer," she adds.

"It's really a gimmick and a smoke screen the big automobile companies hide behind.

"I'm extremely bitter," she says. "I went through all this and still don't have my truck fixed."

But Lynch doesn't intend to give up yet.

"We're going the whole way," she says. "I want a new Blazer."

General Motors has 20 days to answer the complaint in Lynch's lawsuit. Lee Circuit Judge Elmer Friday has been assigned to hear the case.

pany. Nick and Linda JanBeck will take care of the property, which includes two houses, until the McKnights move down permanently.

The McKnights are members of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

The property went on sale with a broker open house Nov. 24, and the final papers were signed Dec. 24 and 26.

"It's been a whirlwind for us," Wegmuller said. "People hardly believe how it sold so quickly. But it was a combination of a nice piece of property, an excellent broker (Marty Holtz of Island Real Estate), and a realistic price."

Wegmuller, who is having a new home built at South Pointe off Cypress Lake Drive in Fort Myers, has resigned from the Planning Commission and Vegetation Committee, both city boards that require residence on the island.

"I'm going to miss the opportunity to serve on those organizations -- they've been an honor, privilege and challenge. But this will be a brand new life for us. I think we've filled all the buckets already with tears," Wegmuller said.

dinner theater.

Dielman explains that subscribing members will enjoy dinner at the Coconut Grove Restaurant before walking a few short steps to the theater for a professional show. Afterwards they will be able to return to the restaurant to enjoy a night cap and meet the performers.

Zeiss and Dielman say the idea for the theater came about because, "It is the right time and right place, and there was no live entertainment here."

The first show Jan. 28 and 29 stars Bobby Cook, a singer, dancer and pianist from Chicago who has appeared in four movies and on Broadway and television. Sublining will be O.J. Anderson, a mime act from Toronto.

On Feb. 10 and 11 "Three for Tonight," an evening featuring a trio of very different performances, is planned. Internationally recognized cellist David Darling will present a program of everything from classical to jazz, followed by a dramatic reading by Sanibel's "The Company." Capping the evening will be an act by a cabaret-style dance team from Sarasota, "Barny and Berma." This duo won the 1984 Fred Astaire National Theatrical Dancing Championships.

Singer Marlene Arden of Chicago will appear at the theater Feb. 24 and 25 accompanied by the Dennis Hall Jazz Ensemble from Edison Community College.

Members of the Burt Reynolds Institute for Theater Training will perform March 11. This troupe provides the back-up for the stars who appear at the Burt Reynolds Theater in Jupiter, Fla. While here they will perform the comedy, "Table Manners."

COMING ATTRACTIONS

Jan. 10 meeting will introduce drug rehabilitation program

A recent survey found two thirds of high school seniors have used some form of illicit drugs. One in nine high school students gets high virtually every day. One in six 10th and 11th graders call themselves "heavy drinkers," and alcohol is being used more and more by younger children.

How can we protect our children, our homes and our community? Apathy is not the answer. The average parent, teacher, grandparent, law official and business and professional groups need to learn to recognize and deal with the potential dangers.

Outreach, Inc., a program of drug rehabilitation for young people, is coming to Fort Myers. To help inform area residents about the Outreach program, a meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 10, at Edison Community College. Congressman Connie Mack and State Rep. Keith Arnold will discuss the local problems.

The public is invited to the meeting. For more information call 466-8797.

Seminars concentrate on concerns of the elderly

Nine areas of concern to the elderly will be covered in a series of seminars sponsored by Edison Community College beginning Jan. 10. The classes will cover such topics as crime prevention, health care and legal issues.

Community experts will present the seminars that will meet every Thursday from 1 to 3 p.m. in room F-94 on the ECC campus. Advance registration is required. Cost of the series is $15. For more information call 489-9226.

'I Can Cope' will help patients, families deal with cancer

The American Cancer Society and Lee Memorial Hospital are sponsoring "I Can Cope," an eight-week educational program for cancer patients and their families, beginning Jan. 14. The program offers information to help patients, families and friends deal with the day-to-day problems of living with cancer.

Educational Concerns for Hunger Organization

Program headquartered in Lee County contributes much to solving world-wide problems

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham
There exists here in Lee County a dedicated and sincere organization that contributes much to solve problems facing mankind all over the world. ECHO — Educational Concerns for Hunger Organization — deserves the respect and support of us all.

The organization is directed by Martin Price, PhD., biochemist. Spend just five minutes with him and you know you are in the presence of a man entirely devoted to his mission.

Price is also a scientist who takes to his mission his training and skills in biochemistry acquired when he took his doctorate at Indiana University. He gained new skills when he switched to agriculture. His education in that area was acquired during two summers at Cornell University and three years of post-doctoral studies at Purdue University.

Price, his wife and Karen Ebey, ECHO's administrative assistant, plus a number of volunteers and interns have undertaken to change the world for the better. And they are succeeding. Read on.

ECHO's efforts are principally aimed at the small Third World subsistence farmer. That is not to say the organization's activities might not sometimes be applicable to the big operator of the agri-business community in the tropical world abroad — but Price's dedication, his mission, is to aid the small, Third World, usually tropical or subtropical dirt farmer who is forced to struggle often on depauperate soils under conditions of extreme drought (0 inches of rain in the Sahel) or excessive rainfall (200-400 inches in some places) and concomitant problems of soil and wind erosion.

ECHO and Price operate a Christian mission. The budget is tight, about the size of that of a small church. The small farmers Price deals with are generally reached in one of three ways: (1) through full-time professional agricultural workers on the scene; (2) through missionaries whose primary duties might be other than agricultural but who take ECHO advice, seeds and materials and disseminate them to their parishioners when they are not translating the Bible to some little-known language or spreading the Gospel to local people in some forgotten corner of the world; and (3) through native Christians who might not be affiliated with missionaries or professional agricultural organizations but who need the advice, information, seeds, etc., that ECHO furnishes.

While ECHO is definitely a Christian organization that deals largely with Christians, Price will support and advise anybody who needs his kind of help and information, whether that person be Muslim, Buddhist, Hindu or anything else.

But make no mistake — when you visit ECHO you know you are in the presence of deeply religious Christians.

Let's take a brief look at the history of agriculture, which, if you believe Leaky, started only 10,000 years ago in the Caspian region.

Only a few dozen kinds of plants today furnish mankind with more than 95 percent of the cereal, vegetable and fruit food consumed. Wheat, barley, rice and corn are among the most important of these. Root vegetables such as carrots, beets, turnips and radishes and the like are important also. Then follow the solanaceous plants such as tomatoes, potatoes, peppers and eggplant; the various kinds of cabbages from collards to Brussels sprouts; lettuces; legumes; and fruits.

Price uses an illustration of Italian pasta and meat to show the importance of a few common plants. He wonders what Italian cuisine was like before the tomato was introduced to that country. Take away the pasta — wheat — and what do you have? A plate of meat. Italian cooking literally depends on tomatoes, which are new in Italian culture, and wheat, plus meat and, of course, cheese. But two of the above-mentioned plants are immensely important to Italian cooking.

The "Irish" potato has not always been in Northern Europe and North America. It initially came from Chile. It is generally conceded that the Irish potato fueled the Industrial Revolution. Take away the potato and what do you have? In some parts of the world that have become potato-dependent you would have famine. Remember the Potato Famine in Ireland?

The Moringa, known as Benzolive in some places, is called "Mother's Best Friend" in the Philippines because it is rich in protein and other nutrients. Leaves and seeds are edible, and useful oil can be pressed from the seeds.

It is ECHO's mission to teach Third World peoples about other edible or otherwise useful plants that have been under-exploited by mankind in the past. There are a lot of them.

ECHO has succeeded in distributing plant materials and information to many people through the world. This is accomplished through two newsletters: ECHO DEVELOPMENT NOTES and ECHO NEWS.

The first of the two newsletters is sent to 500 people overseas and 350 people in the United States every quarter. In addition the Peace Corps duplicates ECHO DEVELOPMENT NOTES and sends it to people in the 50 countries where the corps works.

This practical, somewhat technical newsletter is for the agricultural worker in the Third World. It presents information, ideas, resources and perspectives relating to food and fuel production. And it provides a forum via which workers share their innovations, solutions to problems and evaluations of various projects with other workers throughout the world.

ECHO NEWS is in its seventh year of keeping ECHO supporters in the United States current on ECHO affairs. Some problems discussed in this newsletter, as you might expect, are budgetary in nature. Like many fine organizations everywhere, this one needs help, too.

ECHO DEVELOPMENT NOTES is actually a disseminator of ideas to Third World teachers and users. For example, last week we discussed how Leucaena can be used to augment the growth of, support and nurture crop plants. A method worked out in the

If after reading this you are interested in ECHO, please call Dr. Martin Price at 997-4713 and arrange a visit. ECHO is quickly and easily reached from I-75.

CROW open house visitors learn about the brown pelican

The pelican population at the Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife facility received a thorough inspection by more than 90 children and adults who attended the season's first open house Sunday, Dec. 30.

One of the purposes of the open house was to show the beauty of the brown pelican, seemingly common but an endangered species that is so vulnerable to the playthings of mankind.

The visitors saw 19 pelicans in residence in various stages of recovery. The birds' most common injuries are related to fishing, mainly to monofilament line. They become entangled in the line, which can wrap around a leg or wing or even neck. Injuries also happen when the pelicans try to steal bait and end up getting hooked, and when they panhandle fish skeletons from well-meaning fishermen. Pelicans are also frequently injured in collisions with motorboats.

Most of the pelicans suffering hook-and-line injuries do recover after treatment and a period of R & R. Motorboat injuries are more violent and more serious; if a wing is broken full recovery is less likely.

Pelicans arrive at CROW in a variety of ways — the quickest and best is for the person who finds the bird to bring it to CROW immediately. Sometimes the finder contains or at least stays with the bird until a CROW volunteer can arrive. Injured pelicans often are left at a cooperating veterinarian's clinic or with another individual of CROW's volunteer network — again awaiting transport to CROW.

Cape Coral veterinarian Dr. Gary Nelson, who is part of the rescue network, attended the open house and shared with the group his admiration of the intricate air sac flotation system that is unique to the pelican and accounts for the bird's remarkable buoyancy.

"It feels to the touch like cellophane crumbled up under the skin," said Nelson.

Shirley Walter, one of the founders of CROW, demonstrated how to capture an injured pelican and how to hold it without causing more injury. People touching or holding a pelican for the first time are surprised at the softness of the feathers, the leathery texture of the pouch and how very light this big bird is.

Throughout the winter season CROW will hold an open house from 1 to 3 p.m. on the last Sunday of every month.

CROW needs goods for garage sale

CROW workers need help from the community in order to ensure the wildlife organization of another successful White Pelican Sale this year. Date of the sale is Saturday, March 3, at the Sanibel Community Association hall.

Although the sale is still nearly two months away, CROW volunteers are already accepting donations of "trash and treasures" suitable for the sale. They will accept delivery of items at 220 Southwinds Drive anytime between now and sale day. If necessary, arrangements can be made for CROW workers to pick up your donations.

Anyone who is interested in the working on the sale as sorter, pricer, go-for, etc., should call 472-4084 or 472-1812.

CROW volunteer Beebee Roosa demonstrates the proper way to hold a pelican.

Philippines found its way into ECHO DEVELOPMENT NOTES and will be disseminated to 500 people around the world. And ECHO's "no till" gardening and "rooftop" gardening will be disseminated to people in 43 countries in the tropical world.

On a visit to ECHO you can see rooftop gardens in place. And the technique really works. It is being used in several countries and even in an orphanage in Haiti.

In rooftop gardening lightweight organic material such as wood chips, grass clippings or corn cobs is spread on a rooftop. You let the material decay, fertilize it and in due course you have a lightweight material that can support good food crops such as tomatoes, eggplant, beans and many other edibles. This really is a kind of hydroponics, but it utilizes otherwise unused space. Of course the crops must be fed.

"No till" gardening starts with newspaper. Papers are spread in several layers of existing earth that might be bare or might have rough grasses or weeds growing in it. On top of the newspaper are laid grass clippings, brush, wood chips or other vegetable matter — and nature takes its course.

The newspaper retards weed growth and eventually rots. Good black soil forms. If weeds creep through the paper simply spread more old newspapers and add more clippings and vegetation trash. Fortunately, many parasites, especially nematodes, will not thrive in the rich black soil that forms.

When we skin our land here in Southwest Florida, as unfortunately is the traditional developers' method, we don't have much organic material left. All we have is sand and shell. The best example of this deplorable activity is in Cape Coral — the whole place has been skinned.

To prove that such conditions can be corrected in the long term and that such land can again grow good things to eat, Price has poured a slab of concrete about the size of a garage pad. On this he has started a vegetable garden. The beautiful, lush tomatoes and other vegetables he grows on the solid slab of concrete that has been piled high with wood chips are really miraculous.

A great problem in many poverty-stricken Third World countries, as we observed last week in this series, is the lack of firewood for simple fuel for cooking. ECHO works to solve this problem with many plants that produce large quantities of wood fast.

Price has other fast-growing grees in addition to the Leucaena, which we have discussed. One such tree is the Moringa. We saw a tree that probably has produced 100 pounds of wood since last summer. Such highly productive trees are most useful, and this particular one is being tested extensively in Haiti.

ECHO works for the world's hungry hordes through technology and through the dissemination of services such as the technical notes already mentioned. In addition the organization maintains a seed bank and sends seeds for trial throughout the Third World. These special seeds include both the under-exploited food plants that most of us have never heard of before. But the list also includes especially selected cultivars of better-known plants that grow best under difficult tropical conditions, such as too much or too little rain, depauperate soil, etc.

ECHO distributes such rare seeds throughout the world at no charge. Recipients are expected to and do share their trial experiences, and such information is of great help in deciding where to send the same species for additional trials. All of this information is disseminated in the ECHO publications.

ECHO performs another service that has not been mentioned. Price developed what he calls "Academic Opportunity Sheets" through which researchers here and abroad can get a boost and a start on many subjects such as:

1. "The Philippines Weed" — a virtually unknown plant that Japanese soldiers used for subsistence during WW II.
2. Benzeolive meal for poultry — A derivative of Moringa that produces highly proteinaceous leaves loaded with vitamins and minerals and also is used widely as a human food.
3. Organic fibers in reinforced concrete — Thomas Edison reinforced cement with vegetable fiber. At his home in Fort Myers is a 50-year-old swimming pool that still looks good. The concrete is reinforced with bamboo fiber.
4. Natural oils to fuel lanterns for Third World illumination — Many countries lack indigenous petroleum products, and imported ones are costly. How about the Chinese tallow tree, or maybe the above-mentioned Moringa? Evaluation of the Chinese tallow tree could be a valuable research project. It produces about five tons of seed per acre and has more oil than any other plant known, except oil palms. It can even be used to fuel diesel engines.

Price suggests that anyone who is interested in pursuing any of these projects should contact him so current information can be supplied and the interested person can be put in contact with others in the same field.

He lists many other academic opportunities for students or qualified retirees interested in the general field of Third World hunger alleviation. This can be a fascinating activity, especially in Florida, where we have imaginative people working will all manner of plants and where we have the guidance of ECHO, several important libraries and the resources of Fairchild Tropical Gardens and the U.S. Department of Agriculture plant introduction station in Miami.

If after reading this you are interested in ECHO, please call Dr. Martin Price at 997-4713 and arrange a visit. Frequent visits are scheduled, and ECHO is quickly and easily reached from I-75.

This fine organization deserves your support. Its dedication to the alleviation of world hunger is both necessary and laudable. I urge you to go see for yourself.

Osprey expert will give second program in Audubon series

Naturalist Mark "Bird" Westall will present this week's Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society program at 8 p.m. Thursday, Jan. 10, at the Sanibel Community Association.

The subject of Westall's slide show/lecture will be "Hunters in the Sky."

Westall has become a leading international authority on the osprey since his arrival on Sanibel and Captiva in 1977. In 1981 he founded the International Osprey Foundation, Inc., which he still serves as president. He will be accompanied by a live osprey for his presentation Thursday.

Westall came to Sanibel shortly after he graduated from Indiana University with a degree in environmental studies and anthropology. He was first employed here as a naturalist with the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. He is presently self-employed as a canoe trip guide on area waters.

In his exhaustive probing of the barrier Islands' nooks and crannies, Westall has become an expert on the ways of local reptiles. He is one of only four people on the Islands who is licensed to deal with nuisance gators.

A former president of the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society, Westall is still a director of the society and is active in all of the Islands' nature-oriented organizations.

This season the Audubon society continues its policy of no fixed admission fee, but contributions are welcome from the audience. Funds collected in excess of the expense of the lecture series will support the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation land acquisition program and the work of Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife.

Films, car caravans naturalist cruise planned at refuge

This week's film shown at the Visitor Center of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge at 11 a.m. Saturday, Jan. 12, will be The Ark, the story of one person's attempt to build a glass house around a pond to protect the pond life from pollution.

At 11 a.m. next Monday, Jan. 14, a two-hour car caravan will begin at the flagpole in the Visitor Center area. The caravan guide will discuss wildlife management and what people can do to assist wildlife. Reservations are not required for this free program. Bring a carload of friends and join the naturalist on this drive through the refuge.

Another naturalist cruise aboard the Island Belle out of Tarpon Bay Marina will set sail at 3 p.m. Monday, Jan. 21. During the cruise visitors will watch for wildlife of the Pine Island Sound Estuary and will use some of the research techniques used to study this important habitat.

Bring binoculars and a warm jacket. Reservations can be made one week in advance by calling Tarpon Bay Marina, 472-3196. Cost of the cruise is $10 per person.

Visitors are reminded that canoe trails, walking trails and the five-mile-long Wildlife Drive are open every day of the year from sunrise to sunset. Wildlife exhibits can be seen at the Visitor Center from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. For more information about any refuge program call 472-1100.

Where there's smoke...

On Captiva one night last week it signified a drill for the Island's volunteer fire fighters

The old cliché, "Where there's smoke there's fire," did not apply last Wednesday evening when the Captiva Fire Department held its semi-annual smoke drill at the South Seas Plantation sub-station.

The drill in a smoke-filled room is designed to give volunteer firefighters the opportunity to experience the feeling of being in such a situation but without the additional danger of real fire. The idea behind the training exercise is to have a person enter the room and find the doll hidden inside.

The trainees learn to find their way through the room without being able to see through the smoke.

"Even with a flashlight you can't see more than a couple of inches in front of you," said Captiva Fire Chief John Bates.

He also explained that the drill allows the volunteers and other firefighting personnel to become familiar with the breathing apparatus they must wear to protect their lungs from the smoke. The apparatus consists of a compressed air tank, much like the type scuba divers use for underwater exploration, and a full face mask that allows the wearer a full field of vision. With this rig a person can breath for approximately 25 minutes.

The whole breathing system weighs approximately 35 pounds and, according to one of the trainees, after you've had it on for a while it feels more like it weighs a ton.

The drill caused some concern Thursday evening as South Seas residents saw the smoke pouring from the empty storage garage near the plantation housekeeping buildings.

All personnel who participated in the exercise seemed to be both relieved and excited over their performance. But according to Bates the volunteers should not get too relaxed because the department plans another smoke drill later this month — and this one will be held in a real cottage, which should make things much more interesting.

Anyone who is interested in working as a volunteer for the Captiva Fire Department is invited to contact Bates at 472-9494. The only requirement is the applicant live or work on Captiva.

Story and photos by Mark Johnson

Islander photographer Mark Johnson tried on the breathing apparatus and wore it inside the building to take the pictures printed here.

that had been hidden for firefighters to find through the dense smoke.

ARTS ON THE ISLANDS

By Julie Niedenfuer

Dates, play, actors announced for Pirate Playhouse 1985 premiere

An opening date has been set for the first production at the Pirate Playhouse since its doors closed in December 1982.

Producers Carrie Lund and Robert Toperzer are busy readying the theater for the much anticipated opening January 31.

Last week Lund and Toperzer held an organizational meeting to garner assistance from the community in such areas as administrative and box office duties, set construction and costume maintenance.

Auditions were also held last week, though the production that opens this month, "Bullshot Crummond," has already been cast. The purpose of the auditions, Toperzer explains, was to find actors for the two subsequent productions to be held in February and March that will fill out this season's three-part series.

Fifteen people tried out, and Toperzer says he was impressed with the talent demonstrated by the local actors. "Some were as good as Equity actors I've seen in New York," he says.

"I can't say which ones yet, but I can say there's a good chance we'll be using people from this area."

"Bullshot," a comedy spoof of 1930s detective movies (and in particular, Bulldog Drummond) will run for five weeks. The two later productions each will run for four weeks.

Performances will be held Wednesday through Saturday nights with possible matinees to be given if enough interest is shown, Toperzer says. Admission will be $9 for adults, $7 for children 16 and younger. For groups of 10 or more the price will also be $7 per ticket.

The three actors hired by Lund and Toperzer for the season's first production come from distant locales. Dan Deray hails from New York City; Steve Jehring, Los Angeles; and Sharon Fallon, Pittsburgh. Together with Lund and Toperzer they round out the cast for "Bullshot."

Tentative arrangements have been made by theater owners Bob Amodeo and Lee Nathurst to locate housing off-Island for the actors, Toperzer says, adding that if closer accommodations were available they would be much preferred.

Preparing the theater for opening has been no small task. Much of Ruth and Philip Hunter's personal belongings were left at the playhouse as well as props and costumes and other miscellaneous items used in plays.

To clear out the clutter, Lund is planning to hold a yard sale this Friday and Saturday, though she emphasizes it is the trivial items she intends to get rid of. Memorabilia important to the playhouse's history will be kept for possible future display either in a museum or perhaps at the theater itself, she asserts.

In addition to the relatively simple problems of dust and debris, the owners and the producers face the looming obstacle of structural repairs.

An inspector's report filed last week lists numerous safety code violations that must be complied with before the Jan. 31 opening date.

Lund and Toperzer are undaunted and carry on their preparations at a feverish pace. They admit they're workaholics. And they say they've both been amazed at the amount of support and interest shown by the community — but the playhouse door is always open in case anybody else wants to lend a hand.

Get some class the Community Courses way

Through the winter season Community Courses will offer a variety of interesting and informative classes on everything from birding to music appreciation.

Last week The Islander featured three of the eight courses offered during this season's session: birding, quilting and fabric stenciling. This week we look at courses in bridge and investments. The series will conclude next week with the final two classes, knitting and music appreciation.

Bridge for the better player

Sharpen your defensive skills and improve your play

There's no getting around the popularity of bridge. It's such a favorite in this area, in fact, one of the two bridge classes offered by the Community Courses this season, Fundamentals of Bridge, instructed by Jean Scott, has already been filled and even has people on the waiting list — and that without benefit of previous advertising.

Bridge for the Better Player, the Community Courses' second offering on the subject, still has openings. Those interested can find out about registering by calling Betty Bray, 472-2849.

In this class students will be taught how to sharpen their defensive skills as well as how to improve the overall play of their hand.

Instructor for the six-session course, Bob Osman, is no stranger to the game of bridge. He and his wife, Adelle, own and operate the Cape Coral Bridge Center, where they conduct bridge classes seven days a week. They have taught workshops at Edison Community College and Cypress Lake High School. This will be the sixth year Osman has headed up classes at the Sanibel Community Association.

In an interview last year Osman, who could not be reached this week because he's teaching bridge aboard the USS Norway, said he never tires of the card game and enjoys teaching others — he only wishes he had the chance to play more often.

Sessions will be held Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 5, 12, 19 and 26 and March 12 at the SCA building on Periwinkle Way. Cost is $32.

An investment course

Learn the rules of the financial game so you can make the most of your money

Mark Webb

You don't have to be rich to benefit from financial advice. While a good share of those in the upper income brackets do seek the counsel of professional investment firms and stock brokers, they are not the only ones who should.

Those who attend this course will learn many of the fundamentals necessary to gain a basic understanding of investments, says instructor Mark Webb. The five-week session will cover the following topics:

- Investing for income
- Investing for growth
- Estate and the taxation of social security benefits

- Tax shelters, retirement plans, custodial accounts and life insurance

- Overview of various investment strategies.

Webb, a stock broker with the A.G. Edwards and Sons firm, emphasizes the need for people to devise a plan for their money. "The main point is we're all in the money game, we all have income and expenses. How well you manage it is going to determine where you're going to be five or 10 years down the road."

And he says, "You can start with not a lot and accumulate in different ways." He adds that even $100 a month is sufficient to begin a serious accumulation program.

A Sanibel resident, Webb is a 1975 graduate of the University of South Florida with a business administration degree in finance. He worked for Bank of the Islands for two years before joining A.G. Edwards.

Classes will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays, Jan. 22 and 29, Feb. 5, 12 and 19. Cost is $15. For more information call Jean Loughney, 472-4653.

Make your reservations now to hear Chicago Lyric Chamber Ensemble

Tickets are still available for the Chicago Lyric Chamber Ensemble's first Island performance, which will be held at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, Jan. 13, at the King's Crown restaurant at South Seas Plantation.

With this gala event the ensemble will help BIG Arts celebrate its fifth anniversary.

Tickets are $35, which includes an open bar and a lavish buffet of hors d'oeuvres. Only 175 tickets are available for this performance. Reservations, which must be accompanied by a check, should be mailed to Paul Luthringer, Around the World Travel, 1633-C Periwinkle Way.

This is the fourth year the group has come to Sanibel and Captiva to perform, and like past seasons, 1985's series of concerts promises to be a delight to Island audiences.

On Monday, Jan. 14, the ensemble will perform for Sanibel Elementary School children as a gift from BIG Arts to the community.

On Thursday, Jan. 17, the group will play at a private Sanibel home, the Palazzo del Isola. Only 35 guests will have the opportunity to attend this intimate evening performance, with tickets being offered first to BIG Arts members.

The ensemble's final performance will be given at 8 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 19, at the Sanibel Community Association building. Admission will be $6.

The sweet strains of Elaine Skorodin's violin stirred many who attended last year's performances by the Chicago Lyric Chamber Ensemble. The violinist returns with the ensemble to the Islands this month to perform in a series of four concerts.

When "Smugglers of Mangrove Island" closed New Year's Eve, it marked the end of another successful production for Island author Mike Fuery.

Producer Carol Fuery said last week attendance averaged 115 to 120 each evening during the play's four-night run at the Sanibel Community Association hall. So impressed were the producers with the turn out, Carol says, they may decide to give an encore performance of the production. And she says Mike is not letting any moss grow beneath his feet either — in fact, he is already formulating ideas for his next theatrical venture.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

The first day of January marked the closing of snook fishing season for two months. This week let's talk a little about this favorite game fish and look at a couple of others you might catch around here in the cooler months of the year.

The dwindling snook population had several strikes against it, including over-fishing by commercial and private fishermen, long-range effects of chemical poisoning by aerial pesticides and the snook's vulnerability during periods of very cold weather.

The state of Florida declared a two-month off-season on snook last year as a way to protect these fish during January and February. It seems that the snook becomes very sluggish when the waters get into the low 60s and 50s. They tend to gang up in deeper water such as that in Sanibel canals.

When the fish were chilled like this and stacked up in clear waters, then so-called fishermen would throw in three-barbed jigs and heavy lures. This was not to catch the fish, but to snag them. Many, many fish were killed like this every winter by those who could find the pods of snook.

The snook is a state game fish, and the law says they must be taken by hook and line. No spearing or netting is allowed.

One time a few years ago a man was seen killing snook with a bow and arrow from the bridge on Periwinkle Way just before the entrance to Sanibel Marina. At that time commercial netters, primarily after mullet, would work the canals and catch snook in the process.

Netters I've talked to say they hate to get a snook in their nets because the fish have razor-sharp gill rakers on each side of their heads and can cut large gaps in the nets as they escape. Of course many anglers say the netters keep some of those fish. It's an on-going argument that is not worth reviewing again here.

The main problem with snook is that despite being so difficult to catch legally they are not very smart. They seek out those deeper pockets during cold weather and congregate in large numbers.

Snook are also protected by the state for the entire months of June and July, which is when they mate. The fish again gather in large numbers, usually in the passes between the Islands.

Of course when they are concentrated like this many are killed, usually by legal hook-and-line methods. The waters in the passes are too deep to net, and the hot weather makes the fish more active, so they are rarely snagged in the summer like they are when they are sluggish in the winter.

So until March 1 you cannot keep a snook. There is some discussion about whether you can legally fish for them, however. I doubt that the Florida Marine Patrol could make a case of seeing an angler setting out to catch snook. What this means, as we see it so far, is that as long as you religiously and quickly release the snook, you can catch them while fishing for others kinds of fish and have no problem with the law. An obvious attempt to catch a snook is another matter.

If you have a large feather jig with a treble hook attached, and if it's a clear, cold morning and you are casting into a deep hole known for its snook, then I'd say you would be setting yourself up for problems with the local law enforcement. Not only can the marine patrol enforce the law, but the Sanibel Police Department can, too.

Those cold days often drive sheepshead, sea trout and redfish into the canals, too, so there is a variety out there to catch. Should you have some doubt about the identification of the fish you catch, snook have a long black line from jaw to tail and are the only local fish with such a distinctive line.

Good angling this week — and remember to return those snook to the water.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

The family of cone shells has acquired a reputation that makes its members seem as dangerous as rattle snakes. Let's look at this shell that some collectors feel is really the only shell that can inflict sickness or even death in humans.

Cones are found all over the world and are considered some of the most beautiful shells that can be added to any display. Some are really cone-shaped, with flattened tops and spiraled points at the bottom. Our local Chinese alphabet cone is like this, but the Florida cone has a less flattened top with a small point.

The cone shells are among the very few shells that are truly carnivorous. They can kill and eat crabs, small fish, other shellfish and even one of their own species.

To be this aggressive the cone has to have a very special way of feeding. It has an extendable spear-like proboscis that contains a few harpoon-like needles. It is one of the few shells that can inject poison into its victims by pumping a toxin from a gland at the back of its head.

There are documented cases of humans dying after handling cone shells, but none to my knowledge has ever been associated with North American cones. All of those deaths, probably less than half a dozen, have happened in South Pacific waters. The cones there are a little larger than the ones found in our waters. It is said that textile cones, tulip cones and geography cones are the most deadly of all. I've only seen pictures of these. Each is quite beautiful — and dangerous.

In the several years I have been a shelling guide my groups have found no more than two or three live cones. Although the cones here theoretically have the same stinging equipment as their Pacific cousins, they don't appear to be potent at all.

On our Sanibel and Captiva beaches the most common cone is the Chinese alphabet cone. These are usually cream colored and have rows of dots around the shell. The average cone of this variety is about an inch and a half tall.

Many Florida cones and some of the alphabets have yellow backgrounds and dark spots. The Florida cone is my favorite because it has more detailed markings. I think they are more difficult to find, too.

Cones tend to wash ashore on the gulf side of the Islands, but I've heard that just after the Causeway islands were formed and the bridge was built collectors could find live cones on either side of these man-made islands. It was said that the cones did not become active until after dark, so collectors would use lights to look for the emerging shells. I don't imagine many are found there anymore.

Occasionally a third type of cone is found in our waters. This is the jasper cone, which looks much like a Florida cone. But they don't get very large — about half the size of the Florida variety. I expect many collectors have jasper cones and think they have half-grown Florida cones instead. Those smaller cones make great jewelry from earrings to neck wear.

Good luck with your shelling this week — and remember to limit your take to two live shells per species per person.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-3459 for information.

New Year's celebration continues with Second Annual Hangover Open

Top: Chuck Andrews was in fine form for the hangover classic. Tracy Walters, above, and Dave Taylor, right, also spent the first day of 1985 on the golf course.

Sometimes people on Sanibel are amazing — they are evidently fanatic golfers with a strong constitution — and strong stomachs.

This proved to be the case on New Year's Day, when a full field of 72 golfers took to the course at the Dunes. They came prepared — with clubs and balls, pitchers of Bloody Marys and beer carts — all to celebrate the New Year in the Second Annual Hangover Open.

Never mind that the night before was New Year's Eve — these people came to play, and no doubt to party.

"The golf competition was really quite good," maintained Dunes head pro Pat Flinn. He added that all the participants seemed to have a good time and that many also looked as though they had had a pretty good time the night before.

Leading the way in golf (but not necessarily in partying) was the mixed foursome of June and Francis Bailey, Gene Kelly and Dr. John Collucci.

Driving and drinking their way to second place was the foursome of Mark Rodgers, Tracy Walters, Rick Walsh and Larry Paul. And staggering past the rest of the pack for third place was the foursome of off-Islanders D. and J. Eliot, E. Miller and B. Atchison.

No doubt it will take some of the golfers the rest of the year to recover and prepare for the 1986 edition of the Hangover Open.

Virginia Wade brings world-ranked tennis to the Islands

Classy tennis was once again served up on the Islands last week. Virginia Wade, the English touring pro once ranked in the ladies top 10 for 15 consecutive years, thrilled hundreds of spectators in several tennis exhibitions last week at both South Seas Plantation and Sundial Beach and Tennis Club.

"Wade comes every year at this time to South Seas, but this year she added Sundial so others on Sanibel would get the chance to see good tennis," said Greg Parker, tennis director for Mariner.

At Sundial, Wade played a ladies doubles match with three young women she coaches — Pascal Parides, a leading French player, and world class players Katrine Suire and Suzie Mayer.

Parker said Wade still plays enough to maintain a world-ranking. But she is also busy coaching and is a broadcast commentator for both the British Broadcasting Company and CBS. She is entered in a major tournament at Marco Island for both singles and doubles at the end of January.

SPORTS TALK

By Scott Martell

How important is winning and losing in sports? The cliché runs something to the effect that winning is not the best thing, it is the only thing. When The Islander reports on anything from golf tournaments to softball games we ask who won — then the winners usually make the headlines.

I don't like this trend, and I hope to do something about it. And I'm certainly open for ideas on how to soften the winning-is-everything theme.

It's my feeling you cannot take the hunger to win out of sports. That hunger brings about good competition, and competition often pushes people beyond the bounds of what they have ever been able to do before.

So I feel the urge to win is important, but winning itself isn't everything. Exceeding yourself, stretching out your accomplishments, doing something better than you've ever done before — that is everything. So if there is a victory that is important in sports, it is the victory over perceived limitations.

Why is all this bothering me now? It partially stems from certain youth sports teams that wound up competing in Fort Myers last fall. The big city naturally has a much bigger pool of youngsters from which to choose a top team. So our small town teams wound up not doing so well.

It seems to me that the more lopsided the records became, the less inclined the coaches were to tell the world their games and scores.

And maybe it's no wonder, when in The Islander they read that the teams "find the going tough in Fort Myers league" and other such negative reporting.

And then we have a tendency to write about games as though they were war — one team blasts, bombards, devastates, destroys, crushes, bombs, eliminates another team. What team could want to read about how they were so treated in a loss?

But what to do about this? We must print results. And we want the story to be read, therefore, the dramatics. In golf we can't print the names of 72 competitors, so we limit ourselves to the winners. And we do want to reward excellence and achievement.

So what to do? Maybe we just need to be aware that everyone who competes is a winner in some way. And maybe in individual subtle ways we at the paper can promote all these "winners" — whether they come in first or last in the competition.

Sports medicine will be the focus of the next segment of the Lee Memorial Hospital "Medical Magazine" broadcast on WSFP-TV, Channel 30.

Beginning this Thursday, Jan. 10, each week's program will be broadcast twice weekly — at 10 p.m. Thursday and again at 1 p.m. Friday. The 30-minute program will air through March.

Drs. John Fenning and Robert Arnall of the Lee Memorial Hospital staff and Dr. Peter Indelicato of Shands Hospital will conduct this week's segment.

While many knew one segment of last week's quiz, George Michaels was the only one who knew both parts of the Dec. 25 sports quiz. For his efforts Michaels wins his choice of a bottle of wine from the B-Hive, a Sanibel Lighthouse Centennial poster or a subscription to The Islander.

The boxer whose name was originally Arnold Raymond Cream was in fact Jersey Joe Walcott, who won the heavyweight championship on July 18, 1951. Jersey Joe was unique because at the age of 37 years, five months and 18 days he became the oldest man ever to win the heavyweight championship.

Rocky Marciano was the answer to the second part of the quiz — he was the only heavyweight champion, now retired, to have gone undefeated in his entire professional career. He fought 49 professional fights from 1947 until 1956 and never lost a bout. He knocked out 43 of his opponents and defended his title six times.

This week, as a final salute to the college football season, we turn to college football trivia. First: Which one of these players scored the most touchdowns in a season: Charles White, Lydell Mitchell or Tony Dorsett?

And second: Who was the Oklahoma running back who in 1971 averaged more than nine yards a carry?

Think you know? Give us a call at 472-5185. This month we will continue our policy of awarding one of three prizes to those who answer both segments of the quiz correctly. There is a limit of one of each prize per month for a single contestant. And remember, we must have your guesses in our office by 5 p.m. Friday.

Sportsman of the Week

Jey Thomas

The first Sportsman of the Week for 1985 is young Jey Thomas, who just turned 13.

Thomas wound up 1984 with a splash, literally. He placed third overall, including adults, in the recent Lakes Park biathlon. And while he did well in the 2½-mile run that was the first segment of the race, it was the 800-yard swimming race that allowed him to pass many other participants and take third place.

His time for the two events was a dashing 26.22., which was just over one minute behind the fastest time clocked: 25.16.

Thomas has been running for six years, since he was 7 years old. His dad, Jack Thomas, began to run at that time to help his heart, and Jey asked to tag along. He ran his first 10-kilometer (6.2-mile) race when he was 7.

He started swimming with the Sanibel Water Attack Team when he was 10.

"If you train hard in both, then I guess it pays off," says Thomas.

He has also participated in one triathlon — which adds biking to the running and swimming events. In the future he hopes to compete in more of these grueling events.

The Sportsman of the Week recognizes local athletes of all ages, from fishermen to ballplayers and swimmers to golfers.

The Islander welcomes nominations for Sportsman of the Week. Nominations should be in our office by noon Thursday and can be made by calling Scott Martell, 472-5185.

SPORTS

Over-50 softball

Sanibel's over-50 softball team lost to Beach Oyster Bar, 8-2, on Thursday, Jan. 3. In the first inning the beach men scored seven runs. Discounting that first inning, Sanibel would have won their 11th game, 2-1 — but of course you can't subtract an inning.

Sanibel's record is still a winning one, however, with 10 wins and eight losses. The season goes through March, with the playoffs scheduled for the first week of April.

Sanibel's problem last Thursday was hits — or lack thereof. The men knocked out only six hits, with Jim Cook picking up two of those hits. Sanibel's only extra base hit came with a triple of Dick Traucht.

Beachview men golfers

Despite the holidays the Beachview Men's Golf Association has kept its members busy with several fun and competitive tournaments.

On Dec. 29 the fairways saw 53 men turn out to play. Ralph Ariss, Bill Reynolds, Don Miller and Art Widman stroked their way to first place with plus seven.

Lee Gibson, Bob Dormer, Joe Allen and Ken Preston grabbed second place with plus five.

Joe Steinert and Lee Gibson were named Golfers of the Week. Both shot plus four on the course.

On Dec. 22, 47 members entered the fray of golf competition before a Christmas lunch. Don Purcell, Bob Robertson, Jim Esson and J. Hornbrook took charge with plus four. Two teams tied for second place. Dave Dean, Warren Hyde, Banks Shepherd and Ken Preston formed one team. The second team was made up of Less Snell, Will Flatow, Bill Estep and Ray Howland.

Bob Dormer and Bruce Henderson won closest to the pin honors on hole number seven. The Golfer of the Week honors went to Less Snell, who shot plus eight. Roy Hull received a standing ovation for his work as secretary and treasure of the organization.

The runners-up in the mid-winter tournament were inadvertently omitted when the results of that tournament were published. Helen Leonard grabbed the honor for 18 holes, and Phyllis Harvey took the honor for nine.

Beachview men golfers honor past presidents

At the annual Christmas luncheon the Beachview Men's Golf Association honored its past presidents by presenting them a plaque.

Clay Marsh, Charles Uhr, Robert Robertson, Robert Sagers, John Forster and Jeff Dean were honored by the 175 member group.

Association treasurer Roy Hull was also honored at the luncheon.

Following tradition Santa Claus made an appearance during the festivities and passed out gifts and good cheer.

Dunes women golfers

The Dunes Women's Golf Association members played a nine-hole low net game Dec. 28.

Nancy Goetz shot through the course in 26 strokes to grab first place in Flight "A." She was followed by Millie Ford, who shot 28, and Barb Sutherland and Dot Ohlmann, who tied for third with a 31 score.

In Flight "B" Dottie Miller stroked for a 27 score to wrestle the first place trophy from Marge Yaeser, who shot 28. In third place was Donna Yaeche, who shot 29.

Martha Kildow shot 32 to win first place in Flight "C." She was followed into the clubhouse by Billie Tyler, who shot 33, and Helen Maas and Frances Falvey with 34.

Beachview women golfers

Enid Bever, Margo Peck and Mary Phillips drove, chipped and putted their way to victory with a plus three score in Flight "A" in the Beachview Women's Golf League competitive tournament Dec. 26.

Barbara Fales, Betty Puff and Molly Johnson grabbed first place in Flight "B" with a plus eight score.

And in Flight "C" Erma Mikulic and Jan Kinder shot an even score.

Good things to know

BICYCLING

The extensive network of bike paths on Sanibel is clearly marked along the edge of the road. Observe caution when driving near the bike path.
A state law and city ordinance combine to prohibit parking or driving on the bike paths. Mopeds are not permitted on the bike paths.
If you plan to spend some time on a bike make sure your vehicle is equipped with a flag, horn, good brakes and a light for night riding.
Under Florida law bicycle riders have the same rights and responsibilities as motor vehicle drivers.

CAMPING, BEACH FIRES

Camping on the beach is prohibited, as are open beach fires. Fires are permitted, however, in approved cooking containers (not to exceed 48x24x12 inches deep) with an extruded metal grill for non-commercial food preparation.
After you have your beach party please assume responsibility for cleaning up any litter or debris from the area.

CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

On the Sanibel side of the Causeway
Open Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. and Sunday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

DISASTER ALERT

Radio station WRCC 104-FM broadcasts hurricane and other emergency information that might affect Sanibel or Captiva. Cable TV Channel 11 broadcasts the same disaster information for the Islands.

DOG LAWS

Sanibel law requires that although your dog does not have to be on a leash in public he must be under your control at all times. You are responsible for the behavior of your pet.
The Chamber of Commerce can tell you which accommodations accept families with pets.
Remember: wherever you are, clean up after your pet. "Leave nothing on the beach but footprints," applies to dogs, too.

FISH

Friends In Service Here
472-0404
24 hours a day
Neighborhood help for Islanders in need of transportation, regular phone checks and assorted non-emergency services.

FISHING

No permit is required for the saltwater sport, but fishing in freshwater ponds or on the Sanibel River requires a Florida fishing license.
Licenses are available at Bailey's on Sanibel for $6.50 for residents and $10.50 for non residents.
Snook fishing is outlawed from Jan. 1 through Feb. 28 and from June 1 through July 31.

GATORS

Feeding alligators anywhere is not only illegal but is extremely dangerous. An alligator that is accustomed to being fed will become a potentially dangerous animal if left unfed for a period of time. Animals that are not artificially fed are less likely to become problems. A "tame alligator become bold — he loses his fear of man.

An alligator has difficulty distinguishing between a piece of fish and the hand that holds it.
Because of the gator population here dogs should never be allowed to run free on the Islands. Fence your dog, walk him on a leash or, if you must free him for a walk, keep him under voice control. Never tie your dog in an unfenced backyard.
For help with a nuisance gator call the following representatives of the Southwest Florida Alligator Association. They are licensed to handle alligators. George Campbell, 472-2825; Steve Phillips, 472-2329; Mark Westall, 472-5128.
