Police have special shoe tags for kids

A new waterproof identification tag that ties securely and almost out of sight on kids sneakers is available through the Sanibel Police Department. The SPD obtained the Lifesaver Emergency Alert cards from the Southwest Florida Crime Prevention Association Officer Ann Westbrook. The SPD's new school resource officers plan to distribute the tags at island schools. Any parents whose child does not attend school on the island can get a card at SPD headquarters. The 1 1/2 inch cards have room for the child's name, address and three phone numbers to call in case of emergency. The cards also have room for basic medical information such as allergies, medications, blood type and insurance company.

Porter Goss will address Committee of the Islands annual meeting next month

Lee County Commissioner Porter Goss, the first mayor of Sanibel, will be the guest speaker at the Committee of the Islands annual meeting Friday evening, Dec. 6. The meeting will begin at 7:30 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Association auditorium. COTI members are urged to mark their calendars now for this meeting. Refreshments will be served.

At the annual business meeting new board members will be elected. Five new members have been nominated: Richard Corbin, Ruth Deuber, Ernest Klaut, William Miracle and Arthur Williams. Gil Bursley and William Angst have been nominated for their second two-year terms. Members will be given a brief update of COTI's accomplishments for

United Way campaign hits 50 percent mark

Chairmen Doris Frey and Don Letter proudly announced last week that contributions to the Sanibel United Way campaign have reached 50 percent of the $24,000 goal. Frey and Letter urge those who have not already made their pledges to do so soon so that 100 percent of the goal can be realized in November, which is United Way Month on Sanibel. November lends to be the time when we count our own blessings and share with others. Frey says, adding United Way offers a means of supporting 21 worthwhile local agencies. The Sanibel campaign has received checks and pledges from individuals ranging from $5 to $500. One business has pledged $300 and challenges other businesses to match that contribution. If you have not mailed your contribution this week, you can use the coupon on page 15B of this week's Islander.

Lions sponsor free hearing tests this Saturday

The Sanibel-Captiva Lions Club is sponsoring free hearing tests for the public from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 23, at Hialeah's. The testing will be conducted by audiologist D. Jane Hayford. Upon completion of the test, Hayford will give an audiogram and a list of otologists that can be consulted if the test indicates further action is necessary or reconmended. Although they are not necessary, reservations can be made by calling Lorna Loremsen 472-4865. At the same time it is Saturday the Lions will hold their annual plant sale and turkey roost at Bailey's.

Bloodmobile will visit Captiva Nov 21

The Edison Regional Blood Center bloodmobile will be at South Seas Plantation on Captiva from 8:30 a.m. to 5 p.m. this Thursday, Nov. 21. Donors should inquire at the security gate for directions to the past year and its stand on various issues now under study. The business will be kept to a minimum to allow ample time for the guest speaker. A new program called Culture will be a highlight. ## Former weekly editor sends birthday congratulations

To the Editor
The Islander

Congratulations on the start of The Islander's 25th year. Having edited a weekly, I know the dedication in hard work and the effort it takes to lay out still another issue each week. I salute you and your staff and thank you for doing such a professional job.

A sound, locally-edited newspaper is vital to a community. To call The Islander a natural resource, would omit a lovely criticism, but it certainly is a valuable community resource. High on my consumer list.

Johannesburg bishop lauds ECHO's efforts

A copy of the following letter to George Campbell was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Mr. Campbell:

Thank you for your letter of the 18th September. I fully endorse your efforts as they could be happy to be used to appeal to Live Aid to donate some of their funds to ECHO. You can use this letter as you wish. God bless you.

Yours sincerely
Johannesburg, South Africa

Editor's note: ECHO stands for Educational Centers for Hunger Organization, which has its headquarters in North Fort Myers. It is under the direction of Dr. Martin Price. ECHO's work is developing no-till techniques for growing crop plants under extremely adverse conditions in hunger stressed countries of the Third World.

Remember when you used to write those glowing letters in praise of Island climate and Island beauty and end them with an invitation to come down and see for yourself? You sent them out to distant cousins and acquaintances you didn't really like. It was "our way of rubbing it in that you were lanned and happy while they were pale and miserable."

Have you learned your lesson yet? Have your worst dreams come true. Your mother in law coming to spend the holidays the same week your derelict professional party pal from college decides to drop in? Have you wisely amended your tone to extol the burdens of no-see-ums, mildew and body odor?

No, you say? You have not yet become that hardened and bitter you claim? Beware! I say — another holiday season approaches.

County administrator urged to consider opening Sanibel Causeway to bicyclists

A copy of the following letter to County Administrator Jerry Maxwell was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Mr. Maxwell:

Lee County continues to deny bicyclists their rights to use public roads by denying cycling over the Sanibel Causeway.

The publicly stated position of bicycling being unsafe on the Causeway and bridges has been shown to be without merit. It has been suggested by some public officials that bicycling is allowed on other bridges in the county only because they are not as long. They evidently are not aware of bicycling outside Lee County. For example, bicycling has always been allowed over the Gorrie Bridge at Apalachicola, Fla. The bridge and Causeway are 24 feet wide and five miles long. Sanibel Causeway bridges are 20 feet wide and much shorter. How can you reconcile these facts?

A special study should be done on this subject so that the county commissioners can have additional information to make an informed decision. Dan Burden, bicycle coordinator for the State of Florida, has helped other communities with similar policy issues. Please give this matter fair consideration and don't let personal preferences of some individuals determine what the law is on this matter.

In the meantime, will you provide shuttle service for bicyclists as has been recommended by the Florida Department of Transportation?

Sincerely yours
Marion Fryar

Captain says CEPD election was really a referendum

To the Editor
The Islander

It is important to read the results of the Nov. 5 election to the Captiva Restoration Prevention District board carefully. This vote was a referendum in the guise of an election and the electorate was expressing its perception of the incumbent board in the electorate's view. Nothing has been done money has been spent and down the road the assessment plan is too burdensome. Hurricane Juan just a few days before the election was a boomerang.

Instead of galvanizing Captivians to swing behind the CEPD it said to them "They are still fiddling while we burn."

It is interesting to note that the candidates were not selected because of the positions as expressed by the press or on Candidate's Night Oct. 2. The top vote getter was Hans Wilson, who has an ocean engineering background and who offers to pursue beach nourishment with appropriate caution. The next two Robert Martin and Paul Grey were against nourishment and the assessment program. The fourth candidate Albert Dimon only four votes behind was definitely pro-nourishment. Even the fifth Lyle Jackson also pro-pumping and assessment was not very far behind. The losers were the old board represented by Chuck Brunning. He took it for all of us.

The conclusion then seems to be that there is no mandate to kill nourishment as we heard on Channel 20 TV Wednesday Oct. 5. The mandate is to refine the program for nourishment and see if more acceptable financing can be negotiated.

District meetings were never well attended and no strong effort was made to keep Captivians well informed. The success of an erosion prevention plan needs a concerned population that can extend both the benefits and the drawbacks of the program and that is capable of accepting compromise to benefit all Captivians.

In haste

South Seas property owners say let's get on with renourishment for southern Captiva

To the Editor
The Islander

We came to Captiva 11 years ago. We knew about the risk of erosion, but we took a chance and bought a beach home. South Seas was building midway in the resort.

On our frequent walks up the beach during those years we watched the diminishing width with trepidation. One older house that was the closest to the water became our measuring stick. Larry Hoff and Linda Morrow used to sculpt and carve there. At first we walked in the water in front of the house. Then we walked under the eaves. Then there were intricate signs directing you through the rear. Bobby Johnson built a stunning aluminum house. Almirante. It looked like it was all furnished in white too. As we got closer and closer due to less and less beach, we felt we were invading her privacy. Eventually there was NO sand, and we walked carefully on sand bags that replaced the beach right under the front of houses.

We experienced other walkers getting closer and closer to our own front porch and walking at the stead of the shells. When we went the other direction, south another house stuck out in the water as our measuring guide. When the Mucky Duck was opened by our next door neighbor (who insisted it would never become a restaurant — just a local neighborhood pub like in England) we watched the sand process.

The old road right on the beach became exposed. We no longer witnessed loggers' heads living again and we saw fewer big birds. We shuddered the day the freak wave went from gulf to bay and caused such havoc.

Then the beach was renourished. We played and nurtured little sea out plants. Martye Anderson (perfectly watered) the whole row past all 33 homes in our condo group. Daily she nourished them. Toping Latch time folks returned they were astounded at the dune the sea oats formed. The wonderful natural barrier also afforded some privacy from shellers. South Seas did much more extensive plantings near its own miles.

For four days now the sea has raged and pounded in the highest tides we've seen. The water washed in right up to the sea oats. In the aftermath the Mucky Duck is undermined. This wonderful gathering place where young folks reunite on the beach and dinner cheer each other in a private shape. The house that stuck out in the water is gone.

Now the waves have withdrawn to normal. And our renourished beach is STILL THERE. After all it was our own sand returned from the water and pumped back to compatible shores from whence it had come. We're glad and dry and have our privacy and safety.

We look forward to the day when the rest of Island southward can join us in the same security. The road got cleaned up really fast but on Halloween night making way in one lane through the rubble was tricky. We hope next Halloween it will be a treat.

Let's get the job done. Best of luck to the CEPD board. We hope they resolve their difficulties and pay for it.

Captivan blames Island employers for mix-up at the polls on election day

To the Editor
The Islander

In the recent election on Captiva three non-resident, registered voters attempted to vote and were challenged at the polls.

The poll watchers on duty that day from 7 a.m. to 7 p.m. were armed with the names and addresses of 20 non-resident voters who were on the Captiva Poll List.

Prior to the election we got a rumor that Captiva had voter challenges would be made and many of these non-resident, registered voters who work on Captiva failed to show up at the poll that day.

Of the three who were who did show up were challenged at the poll on Captiva and the other one at the Lee County Courthouse in the absentee ballots.

What are the election officials prepared to do to purge the voters list of non-residents and to inform voters that when they do not reside on Captiva they are not eligible to vote there?

These workers have been urged by their employers to register to vote as part of their quote "good citizenship training." But the employers have failed to mention that when these workers move to Sanibel Fort Myers Cape Coral or anyplace else they are no longer eligible to vote in the (Precinct 17) Captiva election. These employers have also failed to mention that it is the worker's responsibility to call the election office and have his name removed from the Captiva Poll List.

Howe adds City Hall reporter to list of people to single out

To the Editor
The Islander

Thomas Sharp in your Nov. 12 Commentary singled out five city officials, two lobbyists and Alice Rylo (the dutiful member of the public) for their participation in the Nov. 6 City Council discussions on the proposed C.U.P. and Land Development Code amendments.

I feel each of the eight participants deserves the praise given by Sharp. For those concerned readers intent on grasping the tenor of the proceedings however, he was remiss in not recognizing your City Hall reporter, Barbara Brundage.

Her objective and precise reporting is a reward and pleasant sustenance for those of us who are concerned but are unable to attend every meeting to catch the flavor and continuity of the total subject.

Thank you Barbara! Your reports are truly historic documents.

pressing now, nice it would be to get everyone together at Thanksgiving — and your house.

Get ready.

It starts now and doesn't end until tulips bloom in Illinois and sap runs in Vermont. Your time is no longer your own. Your home will never be the same. Your existence has just changed from peaceful islander to hurried innkeeper, cook, tour guide, maid and travel agent. You'd best start preparing today.

Most people clean their houses and stock their refrigerators when company is expected from out of town. Islanders spend their time and energy working on their tons and collecting menus from Island restaurants. It creates Island ambience after all to leave sand scattered on the bathroom floor and spider webs strung, above lamp shades. (Islanders have great respect for nature). In fact, I find sprinkling a little sand in the bed gives the home an authentic Island touch that helps shorten the stay of any irritants. The Island Look excuse works for everything from an overgrown front yard to Michelob-exclusive refrigerator offerings.

The place to sample our native cuisine is definitely out. You could fix your company a true Island meal, but then there's the blood of fingers and wall gouges from inept stone crab claw crackers, the drawn butter-stained carpeting and that unmistakable Lysoil defiant odor of an escaped roach slithering away under something.

Lunch is safer. Crab salad sandwiches and citrus cups. Light and easy, you tell them that. How we eat on the Islands. (Then you can sneak off and stuff yourself with last night's doggy bagged grouper as they lay out on the beach.)

Paper plates are a must. Even better use Dick Workman's suggestions and serve lunch on a seagrape leaf. Sure it's kitschy, and you wouldn't be caught dead doing it with Island friends — but those Northerners will love it.

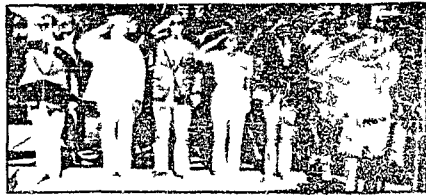

Feeding our guests, you have probably discovered is the least of your problems. Enter Latching them in the water. You will have no problem if the sun shines every day, if your guests are sun-conscious and early leadders. If there are no children. But what to do with that sun reddened mother in law and that part the town "red perpetual child." The latter comes from the beach to wonder where all the hot spots are. How do you tell him that lukewarm is the best you can do that cold water is quickly thrown upon anything that has the potential to be hot here? How can you confess to this erstwhile partner in mischief that your idea of excitement is a bottle of wine and a Captiva sunset?

The mother in law, you will discover is the easier of the two to deal with. Just keep sprinkling that sand on the foot and setting the broom out in a conspicuous spot. Better warn your mosquito to smooch and spider first, though.

My favorite way to entertain winter guests is the condo tour. First, we stop at the really office and collect brochures. Isn't this fun? Then we make the rounds of some really nice places where you might want to stay next time you come down. Remember, one cannot be too subtle with battling the effects of hyperthermia. That traumatic Northern Inlet. Linn of giggling madness induced by over-exposure to goose feathers.

Happy Thanksgiving — and don't let the cold turkeys get you frustrated.

Veterans gather at City Hall for memorial service

More than 30 veterans gathered for a memorial service at Sanibel City Hall on Veterans Day last Monday Nov. 11. As an expression of gratitude to the members of the United States armed forces past and present the ceremony was sponsored by the American Legion Post 125 and the Sanibel-Captiva Chapter of The Retired Officers Association.

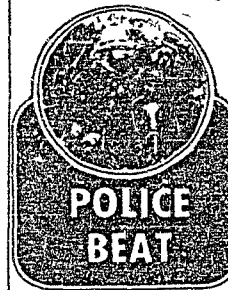

The island's oldest and youngest veterans Bellus Johnson of Captiva and John Fout of Sanibel at leaded Sanibel Sgt. Police Beat

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

An employee of Captown Development Corp. notified police that two grinder pumps and one water shut-off valve were missing from a construction site on Tarpon Bay Road early Friday afternoon, Nov. 8. Value of the missing equipment was estimated at $1,870.

A visitor from West Germany reported someone had stolen her purse from the ladies room at Jerry's Shopping Center late Saturday morning, Nov. 9. Police found the purse and all its contents in the wastepaper basket in the restroom. Nothing was missing.

Police looked for but did not find two white males who reportedly left Morgan's Market and Lounge after they paid only $3 toward a $7 bill. Morgan's employees said the two left in an older model blue pick-up truck.

A Fort Myers resident reported someone had a cooking fire burning at the end of the fishing pier near the Lighthouse around 11 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 9. Police advised the owner of the grill of the city's ordinance prohibiting such fires. The fire was extinguished.

A Causey Court resident complained about noise coming from a house under construction near his home around 7:30 a.m. Sunday, Nov. 10. Workers at the house were advised of the city's noise ordinance and agreed to stop working.

A Lindgren Boulevard man reported four mailboxes on his street had been vandalized the night before Sunday, Nov. 10.

Police on routine patrol found a pay telephone ripped off the wall at Island Pizzeria on Periwinkle Way around 2:30 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 12.

Police found a Sanibel man lying near the bike path just east of the 711 store on Periwinkle Way around 1:45 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 12. The man was intoxicated. Police drove him to his house across from the 711 store.

A Brooklyn, N.J. man was advised of the city ordinance that prohibits camping on the island except in the campground after police found the man in a camper on the beach near the Lighthouse around 7:30 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 12. The man agreed to move his camper to the campground.

A Fort Myers resident reported the passenger window of his truck had been broken while the truck was parked at Pointe Santo Condominiums Thursday afternoon, Nov. 14. Police determined a large coconut had fallen from a tree and caused the damage.

An Oregon City, Ore. couple reported their rental car had been broken into while it was parked at the Tarpon Bay Road public beach access between 5 and 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14.

A purse containing $29 in cash, two wallets and $100 in travelers checks was stolen from under the front seat. The handle and lock on the driver's door were pulled from the door.

A Brentwood, Tenn. man reported his car was broken into while it was parked at the Tarpon Bay Road public beach access between 5 and 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14. The vent window on the driver's side had been broken out. A Gucci purse valued at $100 and $2 in cash were stolen from the floor in the front of the car. The purse had been covered with a newspaper.

A Sanibel man called police shortly before 10 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 14, when he became concerned over a strange car in his neighbor's driveway. Police investigated and learned the neighbor had simply had unexpected company.

During the week that ended Friday morning, Nov. 15, police issued two citations to drivers for speeding, two for driving with a suspended license, one for passing on the right, one for improper passing, and one for no fuel and wipers, and reckless driving (25 mph).

Police ask person with burglary info to call again

Sanibel police are asking that the person who called the SPD last week with information about the burglary of Friday's Creative Jewelry please call again. The caller's anonymity is assured. Chief John Butler stresses that thieves by passing the alarm system at Friday's and stole more than $10,000 in jewelry on a Sunday afternoon in early October.

Community helps celebrate IWA 20th anniversary

The Island Water Association celebrated its 20th anniversary recently with a picnic to which the entire Island community was invited. Attendance estimates went as high as 600 for the day's festivities.

The picnic at the Reverse Osmosis Plant on Sanibel Captiva Road featured free barbecued chicken and ribs, hamburgers and hot dogs. Other activities included volleyball, softball and a drawing for a free video cassette recorder. Bluegrass music was provided by the Virginia Squares.

Land Development Code review continues

By Barbara Brundage

The public hearing and second reading of the proposed new Land Development Code and an ordinance amending the Comprehensive Land Use Plan moved at a snail's pace through four days last week.

At press time Monday the painstaking review of the two lengthy documents that total almost 500 pages was still going on, and no one was making too much as to when a vote to adopt the new regulations would take place.

But Mayor Fred Vallin said it was a fairly safe bet to say the earliest the task might be completed would be today after the agenda for the regular council meeting was dealt with.

Unlimited and sometimes repetitious input by the public tended to slow down the procedure as council made good on its promise to let everyone have his say.

By last Friday at the end of three full days of discussion on the council had made decisions on four major issues they had.

Approved changes in the residential density map that include lowering of densities on eight parcels within the 600-foot Periwinkle Way corridor. The new densities range from .05 to .2 and 0.3 units per acre.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers explained that a higher density of 2.2 units per acre was assigned in 1982 to parcels fronting on Periwinkle Way as an incentive for alternative development. It was the city's mistake to extend the density bonus to the eight properties that have no Periwinkle frontage, he said, adding the only rationale for retaining the higher density now would be to perpetuate a mistake.

Reverted to residential from commercial eight parcels located from one end of the Island to the other five of them on Periwinkle Way.

The council opted to retain the current commercial designation on four other parcels including six acre vacant tract owned by John and Sarah Bailey on the north side of Periwinkle Way between the Dairy Queen and Sanibel Sewer's polishing ponds. Also left commercial was a lot on Periwinkle Way next to the Punta Ybel Plaza, the site of Ray and Margaret Garner's old Tick Cottages a 600-foot vacant lot just east on the Periwinkle Freiler Park exit drive, and a lot on Las Mercedes Lane just south of Periwinkle Way owned by E.L. McCintock Jr. and used by Executive Services Inc.

Approved revisions to regulations for lot conformities to conform (or "variance") designated buildings and structures and lots with separate rules for each category.

City Attorney David La Croix explained that the intent of the change is to permit these non-conformities to continue until they are removed.

When a non-conforming structure is damaged or destroyed to an extent greater than 50 percent, or the fair market value or replacement cost, it must be built back to comply with existing requirements with the exception of density in the district.

Exemption for permitted uses allowed in current build-back regulations has been deleted, but a provision for the City Council to grant exemptions on a case-to-case basis is a mitigating factor. La Croix pointed out.

Under the new rules non-conforming structures can be repaired or remodeled in any manner as long as no greater non-conformity is created, the city's planning consultant, attorney Dick Downes emphasized.

If a non-conforming use is discontinued vacant abandoned or not used for 12 consecutive months it must come into conformance with regulations of the district.

As long as the use of the structure is not changed it can continue forever. La Croix said.

Approved the concept of a new commercial district map. The two existing commercial districts — General Office and Retail District and Primary Office and Retail District — are retained but the names are changed to Limited Commercial Retail and Service District (LC) and Town Center Limited Commercial Retail and Service District (TC).

The LC district will consist of the existing three easterly commercial nodes on Periwinkle Way. The TC district (basically the Palm Ridge Terwinkle-Tarpen Bay triangle) will be enlarged to encompass commercial parcels along Tarpen Bay from a fourth of Periwinkle Way and will extend eastward on Periwinkle Way to include Mave's Sanibel Square and the new Village of Sanibel retail-office complex just west of St. Michael and VII Angels Episcopal Church.

As a bid to reduce the amount of future commercial development Island-wide, the council accepted the staff's recommendation to cut the floor area ratios in both commercial districts. For properties with 20,000 square feet or more and an excess of 100 feet of road frontage a 10 percent FAR will be allowed in the LC district, 12 percent FAR will be the limit in the TC district.

For all other properties in both districts 5 percent FAR will be the rule.

Currently 10 percent FAR is allowed in the General Office and Retail District and 13 percent in the Primary Office and Retail District.

A 2 percent bonus in FAR that can now be earned by developing beyond minimum standards has been eliminated.

Rogers said the rationale for only 5 percent FAR for properties less than 20,000 square feet was to encourage consolidation of small parcels to permit larger buildings and eliminate a proliferation of curb cuts and signage.

Owners of small parcels who would find it economically not feasible to develop their land at the permitted percentage and are not able to combine their property can seek relief by the variance route, Downes said.

The council accepted the proposed general regulations for the commercial districts but revised the vegetation buffer standards to eliminate the requirement that 50 percent of the trees used must be 12 feet tall.

Last Saturday the council continued a page by page review of the amended land use plan from which the development regulations have been deleted. Those regulations will be replaced by new zoning and subdivision ordinances in the Land Development Code.

Year's final ROGO period ends without any holdovers for 1986

In less than half an hour last Tuesday the Planning Commission wiped out the backlog of single-family Rate of Growth Applications that had been hanging fire for almost 18 months.

All 77 hopeful homeowners including 39 applications leftover from the July period and 38 new applicants received allocations. There are no holdovers for the 1986 ROGO year.

In addition allocations for 13 multi-family dwelling units were divided among six projects.

The City Council decided last June to allow up to 75 single-family allocations in the July and November ROGO periods. That decision set the stage for eliminating the problem of applicants having to wait in line for many months.

The November process was lightened by the addition of 23 single-family allocations that were terminated when the applicants did not obtain building permits by the Oct. 31 deadline.

In order to satisfy the needs of all the single-family applicants this month the commissioners opted to allocate two additional dwelling units from the surplus.

Three of the 13 multi-family dwelling units available went to three projects under the without-benefit use priority. James Peters received one unit for his duplex Baysboro Homes project, another and John Armenia received the third for his seven-unit condominium complex.

Of the 18 remaining one-unit units Peters which will enable him to complete his duplex project.

The nine multi-family allocations left were divided equally between Baysboro Homes, Armenia and Williams/Winter. At the request of developer Bob Horak the commission awarded a fifth unit from the multi-family allocations to Baysboro Homes to complete that complex.

An ordinance adopted last June increasing the ROGO cap to permit 210 new homes on the Island each year goes into effect 1984.

The single-family and multi-family units will be allowed during the 1986 ROGO year that began Nov. 1.

B-Hive parking will not have to comply with proposed new code

Requiring B-Hive shopping center which is currently undergoing extensive remodeling to conform with parking standards proposed for the Land Development Code that has not yet been adopted would be unfair, the Planning Commission said last week.

Instead of 56 spaces for on-site parking as shown on the original site plan for the complex, 58 spaces would be required by the proposed Land Development Code regulations.

Last Tuesday by a 6-0 vote the commission deferred the increased parking requirement as a condition of approval of a revised development permit to divide the original B-Hive building into four separate businesses.

In ear of action at last Tuesday's meeting the commissioners recommended council approval of an ordinance extending the commercial parking requirement for other six months from Dec. 6 to June 6, 1984.

During the period the staff and council will have the opportunity to fine-tune the commercial regulations in accordance with the Land Development Code and to discuss any other changes which officials say is expected to next week.

Dance studio, rental business earn permitted use status

Dance La Croix' without a home for more than a year might find a haven in the Tropic Center.

The Planning Commission last week paved the way for dance instructor Diane La Croix to convert classical ballet and jazz dance classes in the Periwinkle Way complex by declaring a dance studio a permitted use at that location.

Planning Director Bruce Rogers explained that professional studios are not included in the permitted uses in the current Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

But the commissioners agreed a dance studio was similar in character to other uses permitted in the General Office and Retail Commercial District.

Since an increase in rent forced La Croix to move out of the community association building last October she has been searching for a suitable location with wooden floors and high ceilings.

Rogers said La Croix projected there would be classes of 20 or 25 students after school and some classes for adults in the evenings.

Commissioner Jerry Muench was concerned that noise might be a problem for residents of the adjoining Periwinkle Terrace Park. His fears were allayed when City Attorney David La Croix assured him the noise ordinance would apply to the dance studio.

The commission also determined that though a dance rental business was not in CLUP's list of permitted uses in commercial districts, it was similar to uses that are permitted.

Warren Deubner's plan to convert all equipment such as lawnmowers, trimmers and the like at an old building at the rear of Santa Rosa on Old Mill Island tomorrow needs further approval from the commission.

The 2,800-foot space was last occupied by a lawncare service, similar in nature to what Deubner proposes. His new business would represent a change of use, Rogers said.

The commission voted 5-0 to permit the tool rental business. Commissioner Mark Westall was absent.

From the Islands' front desk

From the Sanibel Capital Chamber of Commerce Board of directors

More than 200,000 people cross the threshold of the Islands front desk every year. That much traffic takes its toll on the chamber building and this year a facelift is in store to repair the wear and tear. The 60-year-old building was last renovated in 1975.

Although details are incomplete, the board of directors has solicited ideas from architects and expects to decide on a plan for improvements. It is possible an expansion can be made in the coming year.

Chamber workers report an average of 200 people visited the chamber headquarters each day in October. This number will reach up to 1,200 visitors during peak season.

Causeway traffic figures from Lee County show 171,828 cars crossed the span in October of this year. This compares with 161,877 in October 1984. From October 1984 to October 1985 a total of 2,222,587 cars crossed the causeway to the Islands.

The directors agreed at their regular meeting last week that the experiential sign near the Causeway alerting drivers when beach parking lots are full must be monitored carefully to ensure it is fair and accurate at all times.

The Petal Committee of the chamber has established a phone network whereby every chamber member can be notified quickly when a matter of importance arises. Board member Dave Arnold says the need for such a communications system became apparent during the recent public hearings at Sanibel City Hall regarding land use on the Island. Many chamber members will be affected by changes in development regulations and the board feels it is important that members can be notified of similar meetings in the future.

Thanks to board member Myron Ireland for the design construction and installation of the new flag pole at the chamber office. The pole replaces the original one. Luther Kask helped install the new pole.

New members accepted at the November board meeting were Sue Mar Charters, John Rogers (condominium at Tortuga Beach), The Connection of Fort Myers, Capt Tom Clifford & Possidon Adventure, The Cleaning Company Inc. of Fort Myers, the Bangkok House Restaurant and Island Chef. Member ship in the chamber now stands at 550.

Book review

Two works document the development of federal programs for the disadvantaged

The New Class War: Reagan's Attack on the Welfare State and its Consequences - Frances Fox Piven and Richard Cloward - 163 pages - New York: Pantheon Books

Losing Ground: American Social Policy 1945-1974 - Charles Murray - 323 pages - New York: Basic Books Inc.

By Donald Scott

For five days in August 1985 the Watts neighborhood in Los Angeles exploded in a riot that left 53 dead and $700 million (1985 dollars) in damage. This civil rights protest had its roots in the poverty of the participants. A year later Ronald Reagan was elected governor of California.

The New Class War and Losing Ground document and explain from the viewpoint of the authors what has happened in the arena of federal programs for poor and disadvantaged Americans since that momentous time.

This issue deserves attention because the number of people involved is large - 32 million but the amount of money is not - $4 billion. And for poor people survival is at stake.

To put this current history in perspective consider the good fortune of the Egyptian living while a pyramid was going up - steady work for years and no riots to trouble the Pharaoh.

In the Middle Ages serfs tilled the Duke's fields and by ritual understanding hunted in his forest kept enough from the harvest for winter comfort and had refuge in the castle when raiders came. They helped defend the premises saving their own treasures and lives in the bargain.

More recently for some the castle took other forms to provide survival security: the ethnic American or political party social club or even the labor union. In Detroit the father of the bride asks not whether her United Auto worker suitor can support her. What's his business?

Poor people have no such sanctuaries. Perhaps this prospective can illuminate why their lot is so much sadder. The federal budget (and national school "aid" program) and "aid" competition which is a job security program is at stake.

New Class Wars analyzes the development of the equation between property and jobs. It views attention on the various ways in which the parties have tried to assure an adequate labor supply at a minimum a mutually acceptable price in an environment where the workers are generally very cautious and frequently armed.

The book identifies the most powerful recent allies of the poor - the Great Recession programs of the 1960s and 1970s with their millions of beneficiaries and the tens of thousands of federal agency employees to service them. These gave status to the beneficiaries and permanence to the programs, and they confirmed the legitimacy of the grievances addressed.

The book then documents the Reagan Administration's reduction in the funding of many of these programs and how they have transferred much of the remainder to the individual states - closer to the people.

The New Class War concludes that a major consequence is that each program must now compete for funding in each of 50 state legislatures, greatly diluting the impact on the constituents. This effect was intentional and encourages states to compete for industrial growth by offering lower taxes and less expensive labor conditions.

Constituent groups other than the poor concentrate their efforts on a Congress. Some of these groups are very large (the aging and defense-oriented groups). Some are small but endowed with special honor (the farmer who is the backbone of America or the veterans who are the defenders of freedom). Large tax cuts in 1981 made it difficult for Congress to revive support for programs previously eliminated or reduced. This hindrance is all the more tight because difficult to call the "cease fire" (the program) costs $30 billion and Social Security and federal pensions cost another $50 billion - money which also means survival (but I think often in more than minimal comfort compared to the poor) for 45-plus million direct beneficiaries and spouses.

Also indirectly affected are children of recipients who might otherwise have financial concern from their non-working parents. They total nearly all the votes cast in the 1984 presidential election.

Interest charges of $100 billion on top of the above give a deficit burdened Congress little room for funding what is left.

Losing Ground traces the expansion and results of social expenditures for the poor in America. The original cornerstones set in the New Deal were social security, aid to families with dependent children (AFDC) and Workmen's Compensation and Unemployment Insurance.

Along the way a minimal Social Security entitlement regardless of contribution became a right. AFDC originally intended for widows came to include unemployed mothers and great controversy (of 11 million beneficiaries present) ensued.

The author concludes that after 15 years of intensive expenditures most of the poor are little better off.

Several reasons stand out. Motivation to succeed was often lacking when non-performance was equally rewarded with achievement. The idea was that not only opportunity must be equal but results as well (education regardless of grades or employment regardless of qualifications). Also to qualify for

A program individuals often disadvantage themselves to become eligible (e.g. unwed motherhood or classroom disruption).

Losing Ground is a serious book that is carefully documented and written in a calm voice. The conclusion chapter is excellent - positive clear and responsible.

To sum up, these two books look at the poor people of America who do not have enough votes to command priorities in money transfer programs or enough academic or social education to earn good wages.

By contrast 3 million U.S. farmers are in the budget for about $30 billion - perhaps because of national farm debt is $212 billion - about half of it owed to small rural banks. Even so, there are reports of solvent bankers shifting assets to relatives to qualify for special assistance intended for the insolvent. And again unlike the poor, there have been tractor caravans and courthouse rallies and rock concerts to help focus attention on this problem.

After the Watts riot, national attention was once again riveted on poor people when Newark rioted in July 1967. In these riots 40 died and 10,000 troops were mobilized. These protest events frightened property owners. At DC, quadruped Medicare and Medicaid were enacted, food stamps reached 20 million people and Social Security benefits rose sharply - by 100 percent from 1965 to 1972.

In the total U.S. budget programs for poor Americans amount to less than 5 percent. Citizens concerned about deficits and tax reform should be aware of the content of these two books to help them judge whether cuts in these areas are preferable to cuts in other areas or tax increases.

To conclude, I am in mind of Willy Loman's caring wife Linda saying, "He's a human being at last!"

CLUB NEWS

CONA members want to restrict parking at Gulfside City Park

The board of directors and association delegates of the Committee of Neighborhood Associations met last Thursday, Nov. 14. All officers and board members were present with the exception of God Carrington who is recovering from surgery.

Vice president Elmer Sillbert presided over the meeting. Treasurer Mary Vernon reported a balance of $1,878 in the CONA account.

Sillbert reported he had had considerable discussion with City Manager Gary Price over the possibility of designating Gulfside City Park for island residents only.

Rotarians hear from Island resident about expedition to Mosquito Island

Twenty seven members and 25 visitors attended the regular breakfast meeting of the Sanibel Captiva Rotary Club last Friday. Guest speaker for the morning was Alice Anders, a Sanibel resident who recently participated in an expedition with Jean Michel Cousteau, son of Jacques Cousteau to Mosquito Island in the British Virgin Islands. She told the group Mosquito Island is only one mile long, 1/4 miles wide and 200 feet above sea level. Anders shared many interesting facts about her trip with the club.

The group also discussed the need for a city board of health. It was pointed out that a few years ago a seven man committee appointed by then-City Manager Bernice Murphy studied the idea and recommended establishment of such a board, but no action was taken.

Urban Palmer, Fred Holtz and God Carrington were appointed to serve as the nominating committee for the upcoming elections.

The next CONA meeting will take place Thursday, Dec. 12.

CLUB NEWS

Shell club announces monthly meetings schedule

The schedule for various meetings of the directors and members of the Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club has been changed slightly this year.

On the first Monday of each month the club holds a Dutch Treat Luncheon to help members become acquainted with each other. The luncheons are held at the Pulling Pelican and begin at 11:30 a.m.

On the second Monday of each month the board of directors meets at 1:30 p.m. at the Sanibel Community Association.

And on the third Monday of each month the regular membership meetings are held at 8 p.m. at the community association.

Some important dates also club members should mark on their calendars in addition to the regular meeting dates above are:

Monday, Dec. 2 — 9 a.m. — First gathering of the District Workshop at the community association. Under the direction of Kay and Art Ford participants will make shellcraft items for the 8th Annual Sanibel Shell Fair set for March 6-8.

Thursday, Dec. 2 — 7 a.m. — Members will meet at the Sanibel-Captiva Chamber of Commerce for the first fossil field trip of the season. The trip will be to the Sarnia p.

The club welcomes new members. Robert and Doris had May and Tom McIlharg, Ruth Baker, Wes and Judy Dixie, Marge Purrington, Carolyn Lowrey, Nancy Muschan, Edward and Janette Smith, Frances Saeller and Mrs. and Mrs. C. Southerton.

President Ralph Moore announced recently that the club has received its first international member. Patrice Marquis of Lancy, France, is the club's newest member.

West North East South
 3 ♣ 4 ♦ 4 ♠ 5 ♣

Opening lead - ♣ K

By Alfred Sheinwoid

Since West's opening three-bid promises not defensive strength, East knows the opponents should be able to make a high contract in a minor suit. East should bid four spades at once, robbing South of bidding room. South expects to beat four spades but must bid because the side might have a slam. When South bids five hearts, East cautiously passes. If would be foolish to double and perhaps drive South into a makeable contract in another suit.

There is nothing much to the play. East easily gets two hearts and the ace of diamonds, defeating the contract. If East passed at his first turn (the so-called "palooka's auction"), South would bid four hearts and would make that contract if East passed again. If East passed first and then bid four spades over four hearts, South might well have the courage to bid five diamonds.

WEEKLY QUESTION

You hold: ♠ 10 9 5 3 ♣ Q J 10 3 0 A 7 4 ♠ 2. Partner leads one diamond; you respond one heart, and he then bids 2NT. The opponents pass. What do you do?

ANSWER

Bid 2NT. Partner's rebid promises balanced distribution, stoppers in the unbid suits and 19 or 20 high card points. (With only 18 points he would open with 1NT), with more than 20 points, he would open with 2NT or jump to 3NT at his second turn.) Since you have seven points in high cards, you know that the combined count is 26 or 27 points, which should be enough to provide a reasonable play for game.

The golden orb weaver makes a comeback

After crashing to near zero, the population of this valuable insect-eating spider is recovering

By George Campbell

Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

Very much in evidence in parts of South Florida in the late summer and fall is the golden orb weaver or giant orb-weaving spider, Nephila clavipes.

For many years this species could be seen on Sanibel hanging from large 8- to 10-foot orb webs strung between high branches of trees or between utility wires, sometimes 20 to 30 feet above the ground.

Many islands still had large numbers of golden orb weavers while Sanibel, on the contrary, had few. Until this year. Before this year only in the I.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge could one be sure of seeing golden orb weavers in any numbers.

In years gone by these beautiful, beautiful and valuable creatures were common here. I suppose that under the best of any house, at any given time in late summer some 10 years ago, there were well over 50 adult females and about the same number of smaller males.

But something happened to the golden orb weavers on Sanibel. Death overtook the population, and Sanibel was the poorer for it. The reasons for this decline will be subject for speculation later in this article.

These spiders belong to a class known as Arachnida. Arachnid was a Greek mythological weaver who, proud of her ability to weave intricate designs, challenged the goddess Athena to a weaving contest. For this she was punished by being turned into a spider and forced to weave forever the silk from her own body.

Spiders are, perhaps, the most common arachnids. There in this class are true scorpions, whip and scorpions, daddy-long-legs and the all-too-familiar ticks and chiggers.

There are many thousands of kinds of spiders; they are among the most numerous creatures in the world and are found in all climates and even at very high altitudes—some above 20,000 feet. Though no spiders have wings, many are airborne on silken parachutes.

All spiders have eight legs. The head and "chest" are fused into one unit called the cephalothorax. The terminal segment is the abdomen, which has spinnerets from which issue the web filaments.

Throughout the tropics and subtropics of both the New and Old Worlds lives a genus called Nephila. The large spiders of this genus weave intricate orb webs, sometimes of great size and tensile strength.

Orb webs are only one of the several different kinds of common spider webs. Some spiders spin rather flat things with strands going every which way. These you can sometimes see in the corner of your garage. Beware, for such asymmetrical webs often are the homes of deadly black widows.

Other spiders create horizontal sheets of webbing among plant stems or on the ground. There is the funnel or tube-shaped web that emerges from some crevice. Modifications of that kind are the webs of trap door spiders, which live "there" but row a web with underground sheet webbing at the top of which is a light-fitting, camouflaged hatchcover.

But the orb web is the most beautiful and admired of all spider webs. There are few sights in nature more striking than that of the first rays of sun illuminating pearly dew drops adhering to the strands of an intricately woven orb web. Such spectacularly beautiful sights can be found here on Sanibel by those with a discerning eye and a yen for natural beauty.

A common victim of the golden orb weaver is the honey bee. At one time around tree yards on Sanibel one often could see spiders feeding on worker bees as they blundered into the deadly net.

Apiculturists of South Florida spend a lot of time squeezing these spiders between calloused thumb and finger, thus supposedly preserving valuable bees. But I don't think this practice was the reason for the diminished numbers of Nephila on Sanibel.

Prey of this species are, rarely, lizards. I once found a skink hung in a spider's web. It was being wrung rather neatly in multiple strands of silk that reduced its frantic struggling and completely prevented its escape. Being rather fond of skinks, I released the animal after removing all of the many layers of silk from around it. I tossed it toward the ground only to have it hung up once more in another nearby spider's web.

This incident will give you some idea of the tensile strength of Nephila's webbing. This skink weighed in at about 1/2 ounce and was very wiggly and active.

The web is so strong that in Fiji natives made fishing gear from Nephila silk. It could be doubled or

The golden orb weaver has a web as strong as steel. The protein component of this "high-tensile" silk, fibroin, is indigestible to all animals—except spiders. Almost daily spiders recycle their webs. This conserves their own protein reserves and adds to their nutrition through pollen grains stuck to the webs.

tripled and spun into strong threads suitable for catching fish.

Studies made here in the United States indicate that the tensile strength of steel of the same diameter as Nephila silk is less than the spider's filament. Of course with monofilament far too common everywhere today, the Fijians have forgotten this "homespun" method of fishing.

The silk of the spider comes from spinnerets that are controlled with skill and agility. Every spider has several different kinds of webbing available. These silken strands are extruded from differently-shaped, tube-like spinnerets and are placed in the various patterns of the web. The strongest one in the present species is the firm, dry cord that makes the radial strand. This is what the spider skillfully walks on when she travels across her net.

Another kind is the sticky thread that is used for the spiral web and connects the various spokes or radials. The spider herself does not touch this thread but depends on its stickiness to capture her prey. When prey touches and adheres to the web it causes vibrations throughout the net structure, signaling the female spider to rush to the victim and bind it up with fine strands until it is immobilized.

The golden orb weaver lays her eggs on the underside of leaves and in some parts of its range guards them until they hatch. By May or June on Sanibel tiny golden orb weavers can be seen usually on vegetation low to the ground. They appear as adults in higher areas after a few months.

I watched one all summer long in the "Ding" Darling refuge since mid-May. It was at first a tiny little thing in the low shrubbery, but by October it was fully adult and very prominent and high in the mangroves. Soon, with the cold weather, it will disappear.

Many spiders live for years. I have had South American bird spiders living in my collection for upwards of 10 years, and 25 years is not unknown. I have no data on the longevity of the present species. However, I believe the adults normally die in the cold winter weather of South Florida; the species being carried on by overwintering eggs. In the deeper tropics I think Nephila might survive longer than one year, but I have not been able to secure firm data on this detail.

Our Nephila species is clavipes. The large female I chose to examine closely has a spread between the tips of her two front feet of 4 1/2 inches. Her abdomen is 2 1/2-inch long; her cephalothorax is 1 1/2-inch long. The abdomen is brownish-red with silver spots all over it, and the cephalothorax is silver with six dark spots around the periphery.

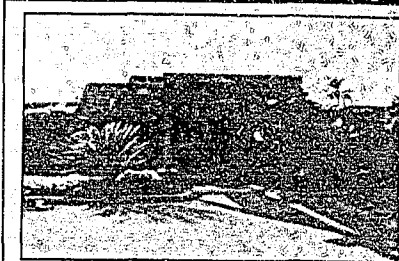

The eyes are at the very front of the cephalothorax. In the present species I can count only six eyes. Many spiders have eight eyes, and maybe clavipes has eight, too. My own two are too non-functional to tell for sure.

The No. 1 Independent REALTOR in Southwest Florida

Archaeologist will present lecture at community association

Archaeologist Dr. William Marquardt will speak at the Sanibel Community Association at 7:00 p.m. this Tuesday, Nov. 21.

Earlier this fall Marquardt, an archaeologist with the Florida State Museum, and other archaeologists and volunteers excavated a skeleton believed to be over 2,000 years old on Sanibel. His return to the Islanda this week is sponsored by the Sanibel Captiva Conservation Foundation and is open to the public.

Marquardt will report on the findings of his fieldwork in Pine Island Sound during this year and last. Included in the discussion will be a description, augmented by slides, of the Iseopoda die.

During his stay on Sanibel, Marquardt will visit several sites here and on Captiva and Buck Key. He is optimistic that a pending state grant to match funds already generated locally will enable him to do fieldwork on these barrier islands in the near future.

For the past year Marquardt has been working with graduate students from the University of Florida on Joestyn Island, an important and relatively well-preserved Calusa site near Pine Island. His research there is the subject of a paper he will present at the forthcoming Southeastern Archaeological Conference.

Excavation of the Uteppa burials was prompted by the inadvertent exposure of human remains as a backhoe operator moved a tree. Uteppa had been assumed to be an important prehistoric community for many years. In 1973-80, however, lost excavations revealed an occupation level on the island at 2075 B.C., the earliest date so far recorded for human presence on the southwest coast.

Community church members prepare for Christmas bazaar

Committee chairmen have been announced for the 1986 Annual Christmas Bazaar sponsored by the Sanibel Community Church. Nancy Wierman, general chairman of the bazaar, says the following chairmen have been named: baked goods, Betty Johnson and Billie Elder; books, Loraine Anderson and Ruth Hays; stuffed items, Gladys Anderson; Christmas crafts, Alda Irwin and Pauline Williams; handicrafts, Nancy Wierman; food, Joan Rogers; refreshments, Blanche Ford; pine cone crafts, Lois Morton; kissing balls, Fae Miller; jellies, Emma O'Connor; palm crafts, Mary Weaguller; and plants, Tom Kyle.

The bazaar is scheduled for 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. Saturday, Dec. 7. Workshops are being held each Tuesday at the church so Guild members and friends can make various items for the bazaar.

Morning, evening walks will guide visitors through Corkscrew Swamp

The National Audubon Society's Corkscrew Swamp Sanctuary is planning an "Owl Prowl Night Hike" and an "Early Bird Rambles" this month with Ranger Rick Bartz, chief naturalist at the sanctuary in North Naples.

The owl prowl is set for 9 p.m. this Saturday, Nov. 22. The early bird rambles will take place at 8 a.m. Wednesday, Nov. 20.

Both programs will begin at the sanctuary Visitor Center. Cost for adults is $5.25, for children $3.15. Group size is limited. Interested persons should call the sanctuary office, 627-7771, weekdays from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. to ensure reservations.

Need a personal scribe? Call Friends In Service Here

In times gone by, when few people could read or write, every community had its scribe, a lettered individual who for a fee or permanent retainer would read or inscribe documents for those who needed his services.

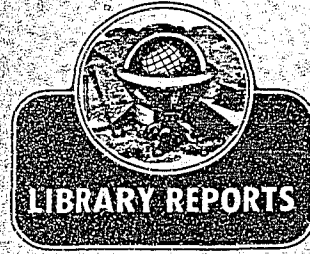

Today only those who find it physically difficult to read or write have the same need for a scribe. To answer this need they are invited to call FISIH, 472-0464, whose volunteers are prepared to visit and to help.

There is never a charge for any FISIH service, and complete confidentiality is assured.

Captiva slide show series continues with a trip 'down the Thames'

A series of professional slide presentations and narrations by Harrison Weymouth Jr., historian and photographer, continues at the Captiva Memorial Library from 8 to 9 p.m. this Wednesday, Nov. 26.

This week's show titled "Down the Thames," takes viewers on a journey by boat from London downstream to Greenwich. The trip proves the validity of the observation: "Every drop of the Thames is liquid history."

The next installation of the series is scheduled for Wednesday, Dec. 4, "The Statue of Liberty and Scenes of New York Near the Turn of the Century" includes the dramatic narrative of the statue from its inception in France to its dedication by President Grover Cleveland in 1886. Also in the show are views of life in Manhattan as depicted by some of the finest painters of that era.

ARTS ON THE ISLANDS

Curtain will rise Nov. 21 on brand new season at Pirate Playhouse

Carrie Lund and Robert Toperez had barely unpacked their last suitcase after driving here from Pittsburgh when they plunged into the 1985-86 theater season at the Pirate Playhouse. With opening night set for Nov. 21, it seems the producers/actors didn't start a chorale too soon.

Last year's theatrical season at the old Island landmark didn't get rolling until late in January. That it did at all was no small feat, considering the obstacles Lund and Toperez had to face — bringing the building up to code and finding housing for the cast, among others.

Thanks to their perseverance and that of a hand full of dedicated volunteers, the rest of us Islanders were able to enjoy a fine theatrical season from the new generation. Pirate Playhouse.

In terms of finances, the 1984-85 season was also deemed a successful one — attendance was 12 per cent higher than originally anticipated, and box office receipts fell just short of expenditures — a rarity for a first year theater of this size.

Lund and Toperez now face new problems. In the past, playhouse owners provided the actors with off-island housing and a car to drop their luggage expenses. This year, however, they are responsible for all their needs. It's a major problem, which are housing and car. They tried to find a three-bedroom house first, late January until the end of March for the three to five actors who will appear at different times in later Pirate Playhouse productions. ("Four Poster" which calls for a cast of just two opens this Wednesday, Nov. 21, and will run during both the Thanksgiving and Christmas holidays.)

It's important that the housing be on the island, Toperez says. Last year we had problems commuting people back and forth. We worried about actors not making it on time.

Last week, Lund and Toperez held organizational meetings to try and drum up support from the Island community. Help showed up in force in the form of the Island Theater Wing, a group of enthusiastic residents who made it clear they want to be part of the theater survival on Sanibel. The wing, which is officially registered with the Secretary of State, is a non-profit organization dedicated to the proposition that theater is good for our community. (See related story.)

The group intends to take on the important administrative and dispersing needed fund raising projects the actors do not have time to do themselves.

"Our job is the product," Lund says. "We're hopeful we can reciprocate the ideas — they have the knowledge of how to do it right. Their skills and expertise are more than welcome."

Tickets cost $10 this year and for the first time season subscriptions are available. Theater patrons will get to see four shows for $36.

"We're willing to take a financial loss ourselves," says Lund, adding, "But there's a limit how far we're willing to go in the hole."

Says Toperez optimistically, "It's been proven that if you can survive the first three years, you have a much better chance of surviving a much longer period."

He points to the bell that hangs at the box office window that people ring for service when they come to buy tickets. It's all pointed up and ready to go, he says.

Islanders form theater wing to help culture thrive on Sanibel and Captiva

Gil and Vivette Bursley enjoyed the comedies at the Pirate Playhouse so much last spring that they decided to organize a group of volunteers to help raise money to back not only future seasons at the Pirate Playhouse but other cultural entertainment on the islands as well.

The Island Theater Wing, under the direction of Gil Bursley, Mary Carter, Milena Leskev and Harriet Tengel was born over the summer. And with the cultural season just gearing up, it's time for members to put their ideas to work.

It really breaks down into two issues, Bursley says. One is organizing an island theater wing, a non-profit organization able to support any theatrical organization on the island by making grants, etc.

As a non-profit organization, the money (from the ITW) can't be tied to any one profit organization, he explains.

"The other is raising quick money for the Pirate Playhouse" — to help them get a start.

A temporary board of directors was appointed last week, made up of the four organizers. Their next job will be naming committees to take on the various tasks of helping Pirate Playhouse producers, Carrie Lund and Robert Toperez get the new season off the ground. A meeting will be held at the playhouse Dec. 7 for the appointment of a permanent board and committees.

The volunteers hope to assist the Pirate Playhouse in some areas where manpower is badly needed, including ticket and advertising sales, and box office help.

Another goal of the wing, Bursley says, is to do what it can to see that the theater remains a theater. One possibility, he says, is to press the owner to donate the property and take a tax write-off.

"I don't think our group could raise enough funds to acquire the property," says Bursley, a former Michigan state senator and current chairman of the Committee of the Islands.

But Sanibel is fortunate that just shells there are lots of patriots and writers here — Sanibel is very much a cultural center.

Anyone interested in supporting the Island Theater Wing can write Mary Carter in care of the Pirate Playhouse, or attend the Dec. 2 meeting. For more information call 472-0006.

A perennial favorite returns

Craft fair will draw artisans and art fans next weekend

By Julie Niederauer

On Saturday, Nov. 30, even more so than usual, Sanibel will become a mecca for people from all over the country. Hundreds — maybe thousands — are expected to descend upon the Sanibel Community Association on Periwinkle Way seeking what will be offered there in abundance — arts and crafts.

In the few short years of its existence the BIG Arts Annual Craft Fair has grown from a small gathering of local artisans and craftsmen to a major juried show recognized nationally.

Locally, the perennial favorite is still a celebration of the arts by the Island art community. In addition to paintings, sculptures, jewelry and fiber, visitors will find a festive atmosphere complete with live music, refreshments and activities for kids.

Of the 60 exhibitors in this year's show, eight are residents of Sanibel and Captiva. The Islander asked three — a weaver, a sculptor and a basketmaker — about their crafts. We wanted to know why they do what they do, if and how living on the Islands has influenced their work, and why they think their craft appeals to others.

Betty Wakefield
Basketmaker

"I also started taking fiber I've spent my time doing (weaving) in the past to fiber. I'm doing beautiful in show for it. Instead of playing bridge or golf — which I no more are into pastimes — but you have nothing to show for it."

"Being on Sanibel (Island) changed the nature of my work as much, but because of the three craft fairs I have all I need to do. I couldn't weave if I didn't sell some things. They accommodate so fast. And I like to see the people who buy them."

"The colors and the feel of the material appeals to people. Some people say they can't wear them, but a material like is just right for Florida."

Daniel Vall
Wood sculptor

"What I'm doing (since moving to Sanibel 16 months ago) is quite a departure. I'm a fourth-generation woodworker trained in cabinetmaking — my dad's trade. It requires a good deal of precision, not the freedom I now enjoy with my sculptures."

"There is such an interest in art on this Island it's conducive to my work. And I've had good success in marketing my work. As a matter of fact, our original intent was not to stay on Sanibel. My wife works at the school and is well acquainted with Wellington Ward. He's a good pusher of mine. It seems the plan evolved for us to become permanent residents mainly because of the arts."

"My work is quite different from anything I've seen on the Island. It's fresh. My birds are free-forming. I call it stylized realism. One comment I get is that my sculptures are animated, that they look like they're in motion."

"I started here about five years ago in one of those classes with Polly Matsumoto. Before I knew it I really started taking off with it. I can't sit with idle hands, plus I found a good source of supplies and that's important. It's relaxing and you can do any way with it you want to. It's endless, really."

"I've branched out, gone into heart-shaped baskets. I use colors and stains and have three sizes of shopping and picnic baskets. I do garlic and onion baskets and small round ones — the proverbial Easter baskets."

"I come from an artistic family. I've always been the one who wanted to be doing something, but I had no artistic abilities. Down here there's a lot of artistic ability — it's catching. This is definitely the place to be for that type of thing."

"From the reaction at the Lions fair, I think everybody likes baskets for some reason. They're looking for something different from what you see in pits at K-Mart."

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

Over the past couple of weeks I've been talking about catching reef fish. We are moving into one of the best times of the year for catching redds in "the woods" or back country of the islands in Pine Island Sound.

Let's look at a few baits that not only redds, but others such as snook, snapper and sheepshead might want. From now until the end of the cooler season, all these gamefish will be patrolling under the mangrove branches, way back in the woods. If you keep up with our weekly fishing stories, you'll know that my favorite bait is the little, silvery shiner. It's also called a pichard or green-back minnow. A couple of weeks ago, before the last cold front, I had a group out looking for redds down near China Island in Pine Island Sound. I had some really good sized shrimp, just what any self-respecting reef fish would want to eat.

We cast a couple of those shrimp under the branches and got immediate bites — from pinfish and small snappers. They were eating us alive. I moved the boat 50 yards to the right and cast out two more big shrimp. Nothing moved around our corks, and the bait finally died of boredom. I had a few pichards in the bait tank and put two on the hooks, replacing the shrimp. The baits were in the water about 30 seconds before both had very hard hits.

We lost the first one because the girl holding the rod quickly decided it was more than she could handle and tried to pass the rod to her husband. Dumb mistake number one. The guy who had the other strike decided to let his fish run up to Boca Grande before he got around to setting the hook. Class number two fish goodbye, too.

The point is that even though we had large, perfectly lively shrimp — and the big reds were there — they didn't encase our bait we tossed in the silvery baits.

The bad news is that the shiners will be increasingly difficult to catch on the water until, most, will migrate south with other baits. There will be some shiners left in the Sound, especially around the pilings that mark the Intra-coastal Waterway. You'll need a net that is six to eight feet long and that sinks quickly. And be prepared to get the net stuck on the sides of the structures should the tide sweep it into the pilings.

You've heard me say this over and over, but remember that many marine fishing laws have changed in recent months. Snook must measure 24 inches, and redds and grouper both measure

The Florida Marine Patrol boys have rulers to measure those exact lengths. I don't know about you, but I've never met a 566 reef fish. But that is the fine if you get caught with an underized fish.

"Woods fishing" is called so because you are back in the mangrove islands of Pine Island Sound. If you have a small boat chart of the area, you'll see there are several dozen small, fishable islands, specially on the Pine Island side of the sound. Every pocket between the over-hanging branches is a possible better hole, and the more you look and explore, the better you'll do and the more spots you'll add to your fishing.

A couple of last things about redds. The best time to fish is an hour or two at the most before and about an hour after the highest tide. And when the fish pulls that cork under, don't strike! That's one of the most difficult things new anglers have to learn. I tell my people to let the corks be under for about five seconds before setting the hook. More experienced anglers wait until they feel the slack go out of the line. Reds don't have teeth, so they need to have that bait for a few seconds.

Good angling this week. And be persistent.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

We went nearly a year without it, but a red tide did make its way to our Island shore during the last of Hurricane Juan. Let's look at what this means to shelling this week.

Red tide kills fish. But I have seen it so bad that it kills shells and even bottom grasses. The organism robs the water of oxygen. Fish that are not migratory, that is territorial fish, die by the hundreds. That happened about 10 days ago, and nature is just now cleaning up the beaches.

Scientists in Florida have studied this complex natural occurrence. We know that blooms of algae suddenly appear only in the Gulf of Mexico, and move on shore. Territorial fish such as grunts, pigfish, mullet and grouper refuse to leave their homes as this killing tide sweeps into their area of the gulf.

I've seen red tide outbreaks kill so many calfish that the dead fishes' whisker spines fall off by the thousands and stick into the feet of shellers.

A couple of years ago in January, red tide moved in and killed hundreds of fish, especially sea trout. We were fishing on the eastern side of Buck Key and watched as a trout would come to the surface of the smooth water, gasping as they died from lack of oxygen. That's pretty bad when a fish wants to get OUT of the water.

What are some of the benefits for shell collectors during these times of red tide? Well, there aren't many while it's happening, but the bad times only last a couple of days.

While the red tide is here many people will sneeze as they walk the beaches. Others will suffer watery eyes or a slightly sore throat. This is because the red tide microorganisms atomize as the waves pound into shore, and the same thing that kills fish irritates humans. But don't worry — the effects are minor and short-lived.

Most red tides I've seen have been associated with mild weather, but the most recent outbreak got tied into the effects of a hurricane out in the gulf. The strong westerly winds drove the tide into the beaches.

But, as I mentioned, all is not bad that comes from these surges of the red tide.

One of our most interesting collector items is not even a shell at all, but the bone from the head of the lovely calfish.

Folks call it the crucifix shell. Those who look for these particularly unusual "shells" say they look much like Jesus on the cross. I've seen many of these myself, and they are indeed very interesting and a definite addition to any good collection.

Shellwater catches are often killed to great numbers during periods of red tide, and after a few weeks on the beach, the flesh is gone and what remains is the perfect crucifix shell. You might want to soak yours in a bleach solution to turn it perfectly white.

So, out of disaster for many living things comes some beauty, after all. I can recall times when whelks, large and small, conchs and even sand dollars died from the ravages of the dreaded red tide. I've often wondered if it is nature's way of dealing with over-population. Guess we'll never know. Good shelling this week.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Island. Call 472-3459 for information.

'Pee-wee' in everything but spirit Future soccer and football stars get a taste of competition on the field

There's something enticing about watching the very young play ball, whether it's Junior Pee Wee football where a player cannot weigh more than 85 pounds, or whether it's the youngest group of Sanibel soccer players who are kindergarten and first graders. They aren't quite as organized. Instead, they improvise with the creativity of youth.

Last weekend, the three soccer divisions faced off on the field at Sanibel Elementary School. One set of two teams in kindergarten and first grade. The next division is second and third graders, and the final division is for fourth grade and older.

Nearly 50 youngsters have joined this grassroots league that plays only on Sanibel. And these fellows know how to improvise.

Last Saturday umpires Roger Fleming and Janet England gave lots of advice as more than a dozen youths pushed the ball up and down the field. And "pushed" was accurate more than a few times. Several youngsters, not yet used to kicking the ball so much, couldn't help but occasionally push with their hands.

And even if, as one parent remarked, the kids sometimes looked like a herd of nervous sheep as they trotted first one way then the other, they were learning good skills — and they were scoring goals.

Five goals were scored in the kindergarten-first grade game. And they created quite a stir among the parents-spectators who were having a good time encouraging their children.

The same could be said of the spectators at a recent Junior Pee Wee football match at Rutenberg Park — except the day we went was "homecoming" with an incredible array of football hoopla.

In fact, because of the hoopla — such as real spectator stands, a clear loudspeaker, a "Bin crew" capturing all the action, and 18 cheerleaders spurring on that action — at first we wondered if we had walked into the wrong game.

And the Junior Pee Wees, with a group of Sanibel boys and coaches helping lead the way, played like the University of Florida on this day, leading 29-0 after one half and finally winning 38-8.

Things were a little more organized here, with coaches on the field telling their players "to run a huddle, but make sure and consider that option pass if it is available."

Added all up, even in youth football the entire event is glamorous. Soccer is more laid back. But both groups of youths were obviously having fun. And that might be why watching them is so enticing — they are youngsters playing youngsters' games.

South Seas co-ed softball winds up

The South Seas Plantation co-ed softball league is down to its final two games tonight.

In the championship tournament the semi-final game at 6:15 p.m. will pit Cap'n Al's against Sales and Marketing. The winner of this game will go up against Sundial.

This scenario has been established through the past two weeks of playoff action. Last Tuesday, Sales and Marketing beat Human Resources, 13-10, and Cap'n Al's and Grounds each won a forfeit over Chadwick's and the Front Desk teams.

Then in Thursday action, the Sundial players showed their might by beating Marquis, 8-1. Cap'n Al's defeated Front Desk, 8-5. And Sales and Marketing defeated Marquis, 12-11 — all setting up tonight's final games.

Rec center round-up

The Sanibel Recreation Complex offers a full agenda for Islanders as this month is winter. The center provides information about the latest classes, tournaments, teams and try-outs taking place at the complex next to Sanibel Elementary School.

- The gym will be closed Thanksgiving Day, Thursday, Nov. 28. The gym normally is open for basketball practice from 7 to 9 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday.
- The Sanibel basketball league will begin play Tuesday, Dec. 3. Games will be played at 7 and 8 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday. Entry fee for each of the five teams in the league is $250 and is due by 3 p.m. Friday, Nov. 29.
- Any man interested in an over-24, half-court basketball league should call the rec. complex at 472-0245.
- Co-ed recreational volleyball will begin Monday, Nov. 21, from 7 to 9 p.m. A coaches' meeting for forming a volleyball league will be held at 6 p.m. Monday, Dec. 3.
- The "Swim to Stay Fit" program is getting underway once again at the rec. complex pool. Call 472-0245 for details.
- Aqua aerobics classes in the pool are offered from noon to 1 p.m. every Tuesday and Thursday under the instruction of Pat Shank.
- The center offers a full schedule of regular aerobics in the gym under the instruction of Maggie Amoroso. Call for days and times, 472-0245.
- The weight room is open from 10 a.m. to noon Monday through Friday; from 6 to 8 p.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday; and from 1 to 3 p.m. on Saturday.

U.S. boardsailing team expands winter clinics schedule

For the second year, the United States boardsailing team will offer a full schedule of winter clinics for "intermediate" to "advanced" boardsailors. Taught by national team members under the direction of Coach Major Hall, 33 four-day clinics will be offered between mid-January and mid-May at the USBT winter training site in Melbourne, Fla.

The USBT clinics are designed for anyone above the beginning level and cover both recreational and racing skills. The instruction employs techniques developed by the team, while training for the 1984 Olympics and makes extensive use of videotaping to speed up the learning process.

The clinics will be conducted on 1000 racing superlights. Clinic packages include hotel, board charter, instruction and shuttle service. Melbourne regional airport is serviced by People's Express, Delta and Eastern Airlines.

Seachview men hit the course at home and off-island

Sixty-plus players have turned out for the recent island competition in the Beachview Men's Golf Association.

On Saturday, Nov. 9, the winning team in the field of 61 players was made up of Bob Neek, Roy Hall, Jim Maserie and Ray Howland. They shot plus 13 for the victory honors. In second place with plus 12 was the team of Les Saell, Rudy Mikulic, Jack Richardson and Norman Lipsey. And in third place with plus 11 was the team of Lee Gibson, Homer Hilsow, Tom Judson and Bob McFarlane. Golfer of the week of Tom Judson, plus nine.

Sixty Beachview men played in a tournament last Monday, Nov. 11. The winning team with plus 10 was composed of Roy Hall, Jim Mason, Rudy Mikulic and Dwight Hughes. In second place with plus seven was the team of Jim Briscoe, Jack Richardson, Bruce Henderson and Bill Alquist.

Gene McIlhenny made an eagle on the sixth hole. Forty men traveled off-island to the Oa Box Country Club in LaBelle last Thursday, Nov. 14. The winners in the four man best ball competition with 129 were Jerry Kohmescher, Tramp Bradley, George Fletcher and Jim Briscoe. The two man best ball winners with 89 were Bob McFarlane and Jack Harrington.

Beachview women golfers compete in tournament

Members of the Beachview Women's Golf Association played their scheduled golf tournament Nov. 13. The play of the day was high team points, high individual points, and the longest drive on number nine hole.

High team with plus eight points was made up of Sybil Ruben, Jan Klander, Margo Beck, and Ginny Ferrier. The second place team with plus three points included Winnie Cominsky, Ginny Reeves and Ruth Kohmescher.

High individual with plus four was Margo Beck. Herta Howland had the longest drive on the ninth hole.

Dunes men play two best ball golf

The Dunes Men's Golf Association sent 57 members into the fray on Nov. 13 for two best ball of four competition.

Ed Reed, Paul Cornelius, George Christensen and Fritz Myer edged out Bob Davison, Corky Collins, Don Bush and Bob Keator 110 to 111 for the 18-hole group.

John Seabrooke, George Kalvin, Art Johnson and Fred Lorenz won the nine-hole group with a 56 score. Joe Vasko, Keith Sprouse, Andy Van Haste and Fred Lorenz grabbed second. Lorenz was drawn for the first place team to make the fourth man.

The animal's eight legs are equipped with two pairs of long, thin, hair-like bristles...

One will often see a smaller spider in the same web with a large female golden orb weaver...

The male's coloration and the abdomen might be only a 1/4 inch long. The overall distance between the tips of the front feet is only about 1 1/2 inches...

In spite of her rather formidable-looking, lateral-moving fangs, our Nephila is relatively harmless and can be handled with impunity...

If you don't happen to be a beekeeper, you should encourage Nephila around your house because it eats many pest insects...

The regrettable demise of the Nephila on Sanibel I attribute to the Lee County Mosquito Control District's adulticide fogging...

...mutation and fenitox on the "Ding-Ding" refuge. For the better part of a decade...

...Eisewerth and Smith. They began to be hard to find, but they were much less common than 10 years ago...

...it is a mistake to attribute our good mosquito season, meaning paucity of mosquitoes, this past summer to the Lee County Mosquito Control District...

...Lee County mosquito control officials might yet have an opportunity to clobber us with "nerve fog" chemicals that kill adult mosquitoes as well as lots of wildlife...

...Sanibel's Comprehensive Land Use Plan has a section of law dealing with better and more environmentally sound mosquito control...

...Perhaps it is time to open CLUP to the mosquito control section and see what can be done. City Councilman Mike Klein has stated he would do something along these lines...

Astronomer cautions about the commercialization of Halley's comet.

Consumers who want to catch a glimpse of Halley's comet should guard themselves against reports during the appearance of "the most incredibly commercialized celestial" object in history...

Cohen says people will have to make an effort to see Halley's comet, but one thing that shouldn't get in the way of seeing it is equipment...

Cohen suggests getting binoculars with a "rich field," which means wide lenses that let in more light. He prefers 7x35 glasses or better still, 11x56s...

Cohen said a wider field of view is more important than the magnifying power of telescopes because the comet will be too big to fit into the view of most telescopes...

"If you want to buy a telescope, buy it for other things," he says. "The comet's going to come and it's going to go."

"I want to see people buy telescopes. I want to see them turned on to astronomy. But I want to see people buy something they can use again. A telescope is a lifetime investment..."

Many telescopes advertised are not suitable for seeing a comet he cautions. "There is a lot of junk on the market. Some companies have gone into business just for Halley's, and they will go out of business after it's gone..."
