Calusa Aquatic Program holiday camp for kids includes canoeing and overnight camping trip

During the holiday season the Calusa Aquatic Program is conducting a five-day aquatic camp for children aged 7-13. A three-day adventure on Sanibel and nearby islands is planned as well as an overnight camping trip to an island in San Carlos Bay. The first three days include a canoe adventure to Buck Key. This island contains a climax forest community which live Sanibel was 100 years ago. The Calusa Indians were frequent visitors here and one of the journal mounds will be visited. Also one of the lowest tides of the year occurs during the camp. This will make possible exploration of marine habitats that usually are inaccessible. Trips to grass and mud flats rich in marine life are planned. Beach and mangrove ecology will also be studied. Throughout these excursions campers will complete a nature guide using photographs, drawings and samples. The island that will be visited for the camping trip is only 15 minutes from Sanibel but is uninhabited. The 10-acre island contains a pine forest, sandy beaches and mangroves. Transportation will be by charter boat with one vessel remaining on the island during the stay.

The emphasis of the program is on fun and learning. The Calusa Aquatic Program van provides transportation to all activity sites from the campers' homes. Lunch is brown bag. All food for the camping trip is provided. Pupil ratio is limited to 10 campers. The $120 fee includes top CAP shirt, all transportation and boat rentals. The first three days of the program are Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 26-28. The camping trip will be from Monday, Dec. 29 to Tuesday, Dec. 31. For more information call 472-9222.

Restaurant veteran applauds commentary about terms that are used in the business

To the Editor

I found Charlie Koster's commentary (Dec 5 1983) very amusing and without any errors. It has been in the restaurant business here on Sanibel for eight years. The glossary of words in the article is part of my everyday vocabulary.

Sanibel mayor praises facilities for offer of help during hurricane season

Copies of the following two letters were given to the Islander for publication. The first letter is to Herb Ideberger manager of La Quinta Motor Inn in Fort Myers. The second is to Jeff Batt and administrator of Pine Village Care Center in North Fort Myers. Both men have offered their facilities for the Islands' elderly and infirm residents in the event of a hurricane evacuation.

Dear Mr. Ideberger,

It is with some trepidation that we hail the end of the 1983 Hurricane Season given the unpredictability we have learned to expect. Still, I would like to express my appreciation for your help on behalf of the city of Sanibel as well as its elderly and infirm residents whose early evacuation we entrusted to Friends In Service Here.

Your readiness to accept those who would have required transport to safe haven in Fort Myers without formalities of reservations or nominal advance of needed merits our profound gratitude. While evacuation never became a fact, we had the comfort of knowing your shelter was waiting.

We wish you and your new motor inn every success and we hope you will not object to our publishing this letter in our Island newspapers so that those on whose behalf I write can have a share in this message.

Sincerely
Mayor Fred Valtin

Dear Mr. Batt,

Given the unpredictability which made the late Hurricane Season especially notable, it may seem premature to hail its demise. Still, I would like to express my appreciation for your help on behalf of the city of Sanibel as well as its elderly and infirm residents whose early evacuation we entrusted to FISH.

Your readiness to accept those who might need nursing home care without charge merits our profound gratitude. While evacuation never became a fact, we had the comfort of knowing your shelter was waiting if needed.

We wish you and Pine Village Care Center every success and we hope you will not object to our publishing this letter in our Island newspapers so that those on whose behalf I write can have a share in this message.

Mayor Fred Valtin

Campbell defends prescription drug prices in response to last week's complaint

To the Editor
The Islander

In the Dec 3 1983 issue of The Islander appears Frank Herndon's letter to the editor all about how bad the pharmaceutical industry is. How much prescriptions cost, why doesn't the government get in the act on the congress (when did congressmen vote their own last pay increase?) why doesn't AARP (that's the old people's outfit) do something, etc. that a $30 doctor prescribes a $67 drug etc. There were more pitiful laments expressed.

I submit that a $67 prescription may well be worth twice as much as the visit to the prescriber. I believe a lot of prescribers deal with patients solely as sources for payment for the (or one of the) family Mercedes Benz status symbols.

Drug companies spend up to $5 million (sometimes twice that) to research a new drug and get it registered by the Federal Drug Administration. Sometimes the government demands studies that when stacked up on the floor alongside the researcher low or high above his head. In our case there were 15 million pages of study for one drug! Of course there are not enough people in the FDA even to count the pages let alone read them. So Mr Herndon was to get the government involved!

If the government were not involved, we might get more good new drugs — much faster.

I'm surprised Mr Herndon didn't speak in German. Some are good (some are not) but they do cost a lot less. They represent competition, usually European or Japanese taking advantage of export U.S. patents and being rewarded by U.S. ethical drug companies research efforts.

As a segment of the total market, ethical drugs have advanced in price a lot slower and a lot less than say Detroit's automobiles or Sanibel's out dominiums.

Captivan says recent CEPD meeting involved 'ugly display of bad manners'

To the Editor
The Islander

At 9 a.m. Monday Dec 2, the newly-elected Captiva Erosion Prevention Board met for the first regular meeting.

I sat just inside the back door in order to better observe the proceedings. The meeting hall was packed mainly with people of the prouderment persuasion.

For a short period of time while the board elected new officers, order prevailed.

However, when Bob Martin made several motions the fur began to fly. All parliamentary procedure was thrown to the winds as members of the audience called out various objections to the motion the board was attempting to consider.

Sheila Hoen sat in the front row and made one hysterical outburst after another until Chairman Peg Hofschnieder cautioned her that unless these disturbances ceased, she would be asked to leave the room.

At one point Lloyd Wright got up from his seat near the center of the room, approached the board and reminded them of how he had conducted business when he was on the board. Chairman Hofschnieder asked him not to interfere and to resume his seat.

Meanwhile, Mike Cohen sat on a table top at the back of the room and carried on a continual, feeing audible rebuttal to statements being made by board members.

This was well out of doubt the ugliest display of bad manners and total disregard of the rights of a duly elected board that I have ever witnessed.

These rowdy board members were subjected to an unwarranted verbal abuse. They behaved like stoics facing an out-of-control angry mob.

I sincerely hope that this performance will not be repeated in future meetings. The board has a monumental task ahead and it needs the support of all Captivans.

Let us all put the anger aside and work for the good of the Island.

COMMENTARY

Howe urges bigger water mains to facilitate better fire hydrants

A copy of the following letter to Sanibel City Councilman Mike Klein was given to The Islander for publication.

Dear Mike:

It was most gratifying to note in our local press that you have initiated official action for the city's insurance risk advisor to probe the Island's fire in public rates.

So far as I am aware, the Sanibel Fire Control District has done a commendable job in upgrading its personnel and equipment to warrant a much lower insurance rating. Nevertheless, my recent letter in the local press pinpointed the spotty location of fire hydrants in the built-up residential areas as a more likely reason for the higher insurance rating prevailing.

Regrettably, the function of locating hydrants is a split responsibility. The fire district is basically obliged to provide such protective devices. It is hampered when an undersized water main is made available by the Island Water Association. The IWA's pipe-laying upgrading program seems to be geared more to providing for future growth than to servicing existing structures. That is probably the cause of the spotty hydrant locations which in turn produces the higher ratings for home owners. As you may recall, Section 221 of Sanibel's original CLUP mandated: "The city should coordinate its activities with the fire district to assure that adequate fire protection and safety are afforded the citizens of Sanibel." It seems in consequence with that mandate for the city to require that a higher priority be given by IWA to upgrading existing pipe sizes that are inadequate for fire hydrant installations.

It is my suggestion that the city's insurance risk advisor kick off the probe with a well publicized public hearing to get input from all segments of affected homeowners and businesses. Officers of the fire district and IWA should also be invited.

Best wishes for a successful and speedy probe.

Two candidates submitted for CEPD board appointment

By Scott Martell

The names of two Captivans — Helen Kalvin and former Captiva Erosion Prevention District Commissioner Ed Olling — have been submitted to Gov. Bob Graham as possible replacements for CEPD Commissioner Dewitt Jones.

Jones resigned his seat on the board Nov. 16 after two years in service on the Cape district. There is no deadline for submitting candidates' names to Graham's office. However, one source said it was unlikely the seat would remain unfilled for the next monthly meeting Jan. 6. The board has already had only four members for one regular meeting and one special meeting. And another second special meeting is set for Dec. 20.

When I heard Jones had retired, I decided to go for it, Kalvin said. And I've been getting great support.

Kalvin and her husband George bought their Captiva property in 1968 and built their home in 1972. They have been full-time residents of Captiva since 1976 and have three grown children.

Before coming to the Island, Kalvin worked as a school psychologist and prior to that as an elementary school teacher. She also served as a first lieutenant in the U.S. Women's Air Force during the Korean War.

Kalvin said she has sustained an interest in erosion since she moved to the Island. But she said the high-handed tactics of previous CEPD boards with their myopic view of only looking at beach renourishment often kept her away from board meetings.

George, Kalvin was a member of the Alternative Methods Committee that came up with the idea of perpendicular stab fixers over three years ago.

Previous boards for them spin their wheels for two years — they look at alternative methods, laugh and shove them. George finally resigned, Kalvin said.

She is a strong proponent of the perpendicular stab fixer project. Bids will be opened for this project Dec. 20 and the experimental project which covers about 600 feet of shoreline north of Tweed Waters Inn could be in place by February.

Dewitt Jones

Using sand (in bags) to capture sand — like the thought of it, Kalvin said. I really believe they have great merit and we'll only know if we try it. If they are successful they could be extended both out ward and sideways along our coast.

Former CEPD Commissioner Ed Olling could not be reached for comment. The following wrap-up of Olling's position comes from an interview with Olling prior to the 1983 election or when he, Dewitt Jones and Peg Hofschnieder ran for the board. Jones and Hofschnieder were elected that year.

Olling retired to Captiva in 1970. Prior to that he was a mechanical engineer in oil and space technology with North American, Northrup, Lockheed and Garrett Air research. He was deputy assistant project manager for the Apollo space mission and from 1963 until his retirement was chief of the office for future projects for NASA.

Olling was appointed to the CEPD board in 1983 to replace Dan Burner. As a board member, he chaired the Alternative Methods Committee and served as vice chairman and chairman of the board.

At the time of the interview (Nov. 1 1983) Olling said he would like to have the experimental projects in place on the beaches as soon as possible to see if they worked as preventive measures. At the time, the board was considering the perpendicular stabilizers as well as an artificial seaweed project.

Olling maintained that financing renourishment — but renourishment itself — was the problem. Captivans faced. He opposed the Municipal Services Taxing Unit petition plan to finance a renourished beach. He believed commercial interests would garner it if it was the benefit of a renourished beach compared to property owners. Therefore he felt they should pay 10 times as much as the property owners.

In the November 1983 election, Olling polled 73 votes, Jones 109 and Hofschnieder 174.

Resolutions put renourishment on hold 'indefinitely'

By Scott Martell

Before a packed house of vocal beach renourishment advocates, the newly constituted Captiva Erosion Prevention District board in its first regularly scheduled meeting passed five separate motions that will delay beach renourishment into the indefinite future.

The five motions included: The board decided by a 4-0 vote to conduct the survey.

The board decided by a 3-1 vote to hire Commissioner Bob Martin's hard-picked choice for the survey — Scott Rosenberg — for a period of six weeks beginning on Jan. 1 at the cost of $2,400.

The board decided by a 3-1 vote to terminate beach renourishment. Project Manager Dick Stev is in contract as of Jan. 1. The board agreed to enter into negotiations with Stev's firm immediately to hire the project manager on an as-needed basis.

11 vote to seek a new CEPD administrator and to be responsible to the commission rather than to the public manager's events.

Commissioner Bob Martin proposed all five motions in front of the emotionally intense crowd of more than 50 Captivans who interrupted the proceeding 15 minutes and ignored warnings of possible eviction from the Captiva Community Center.

Commissioner Paul Garvey seconded all five of Martin's motions. Both Garvey and Martin were elected to the board last month.

Chairman Peg Hofschnieder after initially proposing a motion to move forward with the referendum for beach renourishment, flipped to Martin and Garvey's viewpoint. He emphasized that she always has intensely disliked the idea of a referendum in which the district would decide on a plan that property owners would have to pay for.

The third new member of the CEPD Commissioner Hans Wison vigorously opposed the idea of delaying the referendum. After Martin's motion was passed, Wison proposed his own motion that called for the Coast Guard considers partial limiting of drawbridge openings

By Chady Chalmers
The U.S. Coast Guard office in Miami is seeking public comment on a plan to limit the opening of the Sanibel Causeway drawbridge.

The Coast Guard proposes to open the bridge only once — at 4:15 p.m. — between 3:45 and 4:45 p.m. every Monday through Friday. During the rest of the day and night the bridge would open on command from boats.

Coast Guard spokesman Walter Paskowsky said the proposed timing is exactly what the Lee County Commission requested last spring.

Lee County Commissioner Porter Coas, however, said Friday night that was not what the commission requested. Coas, an island resident and the city's first mayor, was at the Sanibel Community Association to address the annual meeting of the Commission of the Islands. Although he had just news in from New York and said he knew very little about the Coast Guard's intent, Coas did say the proposed bridge opening schedule was not what the commission asked for and that he would have been with the county staff worked out with the Coast Guard.

Coas said he would be asking some questions Monday morning when he got back to his courtroom office. But he said he was encouraged that the Coast Guard was at least recognizing that scheduled openings of the Causeway drawbridge might be necessary even on a limited basis.

"It's a beginning and we can start negotiating with them for other times," he said.

Public notice about the Coast Guard's intention has been mailed to 75 agencies and individuals, from Gov. Bob Graham and Congressman Conner

Mock to Fort Myers City Hall. Comments must be returned to the Coast Guard on later than Dec. 27.

Even so, Paskowsky said, it more than likely will be "several months" before the timed opening goes into effect. "I doubt you'll see it in place for the coming tourist season," he said.

As of late last week Sanibel City Hall had received no notice of the plan. "I just had had City Manager Gary Price somewhat angry. 'I can't believe we didn't get anything about this,'" he said. Price heard about the plan from someone at a local marina last Tuesday.

The matter is on the agenda for discussion at the Dec. 17 regular City Council meeting. "That doesn't give us much time before the Dec. 27 response deadline," Price said. "But I'm sure the council will want to respond."

Price himself thinks the limited opening between 3:45 and 4:45 p.m. is a move in the right direction. "But it's certainly not enough," he said. "If late afternoon is the only time of day we have problems with the drawbridge,"

Cruising the Causeway

State trooper believes visibility of patrol car goes a long way toward slowing down drivers

By Cindy Chalmers
No Man's Land — that's what George Kantor says, the Sanibel Causeway seems to be when it comes to law enforcement on the three-mile span.
"But Kantor, a Florida Highway Patrol trooper who lives on Sanibel, has started a one-man campaign to slow down drivers who disregard the 25-mpg speed limit posted on the sign."
"It's not a crusade to give out speeding tickets," Kantor emphasizes about his effort. "I'm just trying to slow people down. The visibility of a patrol car on the Causeway does more toward that end than anything else would."
In fact, Kantor says he actually gives out relatively few speeding tickets in comparison with the number of cars he stops. "I give a lot of warnings and recite the '25-cent' lecture over and over again," he says.

And many of his stops are for safety violations — tail lights out, hanging exhaust systems, etc. — rather than for speeding. "If I don't give them a ticket, I give them something to talk about," he says.
But whether Kantor is writing a ticket or simply giving a verbal warning, other Causeway drivers see his patrol car and blue flashing lights and automatically slow down. "Without a doubt, the visibility theory works," he says.
Since July, when he started full-time with the FHP, Kantor has cruised the Causeway for about two hours almost every day, all on his own time. If his shift starts at 7 a.m., he is usually on the Causeway by 5:30 or 3 a.m. to drive back and forth for an hour before he heads to the mainland to start his workday. He repeats the process on his way home.
FHP troopers are assigned patrol cars and have full responsibility for the cars when they are both on and off duty, which means they take the cars home when they finish their shifts.

"I do it because I live here and have the ideal opportunity to do it," Kantor says about his Causeway patrol. "No one else seems to have that chance."
Sanibel police and Lee County sheriff's deputies rarely patrol the Causeway, and Kantor believes that is only because both have more important business elsewhere in their jurisdictions.
"I have great respect for the Sanibel police," he says. "They have enough to do right here on the island. This is where they need to be seen, at the beach accesses and on Sanibel streets, not on the Causeway."
Kantor has had a residence on Sanibel for 10 years and has lived here permanently since last year. He and his wife moved from Villa Park, Ill., where he was a part-time police officer.

"I have always been cognizant of the speed limit on the Causeway," he says, adding that he tries to stay between 25 and 33 mph even when driving his personal car. "Many drivers take great exception to my going 35 or 40 mph, but I have a different attitude than they do."
"I've seen speed kill and injury many, many people," he adds. "And for years on the Causeway I've looked at the collapse of animals smashed on the pavement."
While many people think the 35 mph limit on the Causeway is far too slow, Kantor says the nature of the Causeway makes it a dangerous place for drivers to exceed 40 or 45 mph. "People are looking around, craning their necks. The impatient drivers who jockey from lane to lane at 50 mph are the ones who endanger everyone else."

And the ones who most often — and most blatantly — violate the speed limit, he adds, are commuters.
"The people who drive back and forth from the mainland every day are much bolder," he says. "They know where they are going and they are not at all interested in seeing the signs. They only want to get on the island and then get back off."

"So Kantor will continue making his daily appearances on the Causeway, cruising for visibility's sake and stopping drivers for speeding and other infractions. "I give drivers a lot of latitude before I write out a ticket," he says. "But if I see someone going 55 or 60 mph, I'm going to pull them over," he says. "There's absolutely no excuse for that."

Among the most popular excuses Kantor hears from speeders on the Causeway is this line: "I'm late for the airport." Kantor usually asks to see the plane ticket in these instances.
And among the more interesting ex-uses are these lines: "I'm running out of gas and am in a hurry to get to a service station." And "My map operation starts in five minutes."

And his all-time favorite: "I know what the speed limit is, but I was't going to be driving for the full hour."

State Trooper George Kantor pulled over this driver crossing the Causeway toward Sanibel last Friday afternoon. Photo by David Dugastkin.

Acrostichum dannekeifolium

Among the largest of the fern plants is Acrostichum dannekeifolium, commonly called leather fern. In favorable habitat, leaves of the leather fern can exceed 10 feet in length.

Leaf stalks are grooved lengthwise and are flattened in order to support the weight of numerous leaves. The undersides of all the leaflets of the fern are shiny, lustrous and covered with numerous glands. The surface is colored and texture of reddish brown smooth leather. Leather fern is effective for landscape wet areas. The plant grows large on moist to wet soil in a hedge or foundation planting. It is very tolerant, shaded spots, but seems to grow best in areas fully exposed to the sun.

Many other native plants are for sale in the Native Plant Nursery at the Sanibel Captiva Conservation Foundation.

Goss discusses Sanibel Causeway, Summerlin Road, growth management
at COI annual meeting

By Barbara Woodruff
Sanibel's favorite son, Porter Goss, became the main attraction at the annual meeting of the County of Sanibel-Captiva on Friday night.

More than 150 members of the volunteer political action group and their friends gathered at the Sanibel County Association to hear Goss report on the state of affairs on the island.

Goss, Sanibel's first mayor, started COI in 1981. In the past 31 years in fostering government action compatible with the island's natural environment.

"I'm grateful for the work done here in my community," he said, adding "I'm amazed at Sanibel's success in growth management."

But he urged COI now to focus on broader horizons and look beyond Sanibel's boundaries across the water.

Goss, who was elected for a four-year term on the County Commission in November 1984, labels the current county government as not hopeless but overwhelmed.

"They're trying to do the right thing," he said, of his fellow commissioners.

The county has a (land use) plan not as precise as Sanibel's that projects a population of 1.5 million on the island in 20 years.

He questioned how this will work with Sanibel's plan.

One thing that has been proven is that growth does not pay for itself.

"We must work out a way to make new residents pay their fair share."

To this end Goss said he will continue to pursue implementation of impact fees for new development and another increase in the gasoline tax.

He also pledged to fight the use of tourist resort tax revenues for advertising only.

Goss also addressed plans for the Causeway. If anyone knows the status of the county's plan to increase the commute toll on the Sanibel

Causeway, I wish they'd explain it to me," he said. "There are lots of proposals using the AVI (Automated Vehicle Identification) system. In spite of the ticket book," he said, adding "it appears there aren't enough entries to warrant procedures with the system."

But something must be done about the transferable commuter tickets because they are a violation of the county's agreement with the Causeway bond holders, he emphasized.

But something must be done about the transferable commuter tickets because they are a violation of the county's agreement with the Causeway bond holders, he emphasized.

He also said he considered it "good news" that the US Coast Guard has agreed to principle that scheduled openings of the Causeway drawbridge are not hazardous to navigators. (See related story page 6A).

He also said he has written off keeping Summerlin Road a limited access road north of Gladiolus Drive.

But he said there is a good possibility that a new artery to the coast can be built south of Gladiolus Drive that will completely separate Fort Myers Beach traffic from Sanibel and Captiva traffic.

Goss urged Island residents to keep him informed as to what is going on, adding "I have a hard time keeping up with all my mail."

COI has always been a good message center for Sanibel, he said, adding "For every fact there are five rumors. Advice and guidance from an organization such as COI is a lot of help to be had."

COI members elected new directors at a short business meeting preceding Goss' presentation. Named directors for two-year terms were William Angel, Gilbert Birsley, Richard Corbin, Ruth Deuler, Marilyn Nucson, Ernest Klaufl, Wulfram Miracle, Edwin Underhill and Arthur Williams.

The board re-elected Burns as its chairman and Mary Lynn Lorenson as secretary. Robert Coyne will serve as vice chairman and Ruth Deuler as treasurer.

Give the 'gift that keeps on living' when Bloodmobile visits this week

The Sanibel Captiva Lions Kiwanis and Rotary clubs and the American Business Women's Association are sponsoring a blood drive on Sanibel this Wednesday, Dec 11.

The Lee Memorial Hospital blood mobile will be in the parking lot at Bailey's from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Donors will be helping someone in the community who is in immediate need of blood and they will be ensuring themselves and members of their families of any blood needs that may be encountered. Give a special gift this Christmas: the Gift that keeps on living. Appointments are not necessary. Be sure to eat a good meal before donating.

All information in the following reports was taken directly from Sanibel Police Department records.

A Naples man turned in a barbeque grill that he found in the bushes on the east side of Sanibel Bayou Road early Monday morning Nov 25. Police recognized the grill as one that belonged in the Lee County park at Downman's Beach. The grill which was not damaged and was still connected to its post was returned to park officials.

A Fort Myers man called police around 8:30 p.m. Saturday Nov 30 to report two men were sleeping in a truck parked at Sanibel Moorings condominiums. Police found a Summit NJ man and a Nashville TN man in the truck. They said they were guests of owners of a unit on the Moorings and had slept in the truck because the condominium was too crowded. The owner of the unit verified the story.

A girl's 10-speed bicycle, a man's trench coat and a pair of blue socks were found abandoned behind Sanibel Community Church late Friday night Nov 30. Police look the items to head quarters for safekeeping.

A Sanibel woman reported a sign at the Ridge model home had been vandalized early Saturday morning Nov 30. The $100 wooden sign had been painted with black spray paint.

Police investigated a break in at the Ramada Inn hotel bar Saturday morning Nov 30. A screen had been cut to gain entry. Seven cases of beer, two 1.5-liter bottles of wine and one case of Seagram's Cointreau were taken. Value of the missing alcohol was estimated at $107.

A Sanibel man was arrested for driving under the influence after he was stopped at Sanibel-Captiva Road.

An Antioch, Ill., man was charged with violation of the right-of-way after he struck a car driven by Isiah Gavin Jr. of Sanibel around 9 a.m. Friday Nov 29. David Baker of Illinois was turning left from Bailey Road onto Periwinkle Way when he turned into the path of Gavin, who was traveling west on Periwinkle Way. Police estimated there was $3,000 damage to Gavin's 1982 Buick and $1,000 damage to Gavin's 1984 GMC van.

A Sanibel woman reported her gold watch had been stolen from the kitchen counter of the condominium at Casa Ybel resort between 5 and 6 p.m. Monday Dec 2. The gold belt watch was valued at $350. Police found no signs of forced entry to the unit.

A worker from a Capsi Coral sanding company agreed to pay a 10mpet Drive man $10 to replace his ma 1 box post last Wednesday Dec 4. A truck from the sanding company apparently struck it a post and when the owner tried to straighten it the alum nail pole broke in two.

A Donax Street man complained about noise from trucks at the J.B. environmental plant on Donax Street around 7 p.m. Thursday Dec 5. Police met with representatives of the company and they agreed to install noise mufflers on the truck that are used to remove sewage sludge from the island.

Louise Johnson elected mayor

Other appointments made to Planning Commission and Code Enforcement Board

Dr. Louise Johnson is Sanibel's new mayor. Johnson, who is serving the final year of her first term on the City Council, was elected by a vote of acclamation by her peers as the first order of business at last Tuesday's regular council meeting.

She succeeds Louise Imah Fred Valtin, who filled the mayoral post for two years.

In accepting the gavel, Johnson said it was going to be hard to step into Valtin's shoes and give the community.

Valtin acknowledged the accolades saying, "It's been an honor and a privilege and I've enjoyed almost every minute of it."

Councilman Bill Rogers was elected vice mayor also by a vote of acclamation.

Johnson was vice mayor under Valtin for his past year. She served on the Planning Commission before her election to the council in November 1982.

She recently was appointed by Bob Martinez, president of the Florida League of Cities, to serve on the League's Environmental Quality Council and will attend her first meeting in Tallahassee Dec. 19-20.

Mayor Louise Johnson

With Johnson presiding, the council appointed Penny Rogers to a three-year term on the Planning Commission to replace Henry McKee, who is stepping down.

Other nominees for the post were Dr. Eleanor Goldstein, a member of the Below Market Rate Housing Committee; Robert Davidson, a civic-minded ecologist and realtor; John Smith, who lost out to Rogers by a vote of 3-2.

Rogers, who moved to Sanibel from Miami in 1978, has served as a volunteer at CROW on the city's Vegetation Committee and most recently on the Code Enforcement Board. Her term expired Dec. 10.

John Weinzette, a retired Army brigadier general, was appointed to fill Rogers' slot on the Code Enforcement Board. His term extends to Dec. 10, 1988.

Weinzette, who has lived on Sanibel since 1979, headed the Criminal Justice Department at Edison Community College until last year. He was one of the founders and first president of the Sanibel Capital Chapter of The Retired Officers Association and is a founding member of Friends in Service Here.

Smith was named to the CEB to replace Conrad Luckel, whose term does not expire until Dec. 1987. Luckel, who with his wife Peggy is leaving the island to relocate in California, resigned.

Smith has worked for Priscilla Murphy Realty since 1980. He moved to Sanibel in 1979 from Brussels, Belgium, where he worked for seven Dick Corbin, whose term expires Dec. 10, was reappointed to the CEB for another three-year term by a 3-0 council vote.

Gordon Kidoo was reappointed to represent Sanibel on Lee County's Resource Recovery Task Force.

The council deferred acting on appointments to other city committees until Dec. 17.

Council hears about need for Planning Commission attorney

The Planning Commission soon may have its own legal counsel.

The expanded duties and increased work load for the commissioner under the newly adopted Land Development Code will require a greater need for an attorney's advice. Dick Downes, the city's legal consultant who helped draft the new code, informed the City Council last Tuesday.

But Downes recommended that a separate attorney not be city attorney should be the commission's advisor. Because of the system under which applicants can go to the council to appeal a commission denial, he explained the same attorney should not represent both entities.

City Attorney David La Croix said that the commission at least during the first year of operation under the new procedural rules would benefit from legal input in connection with staff reports before meetings.

An attorney present during the hearings will be able to guide commissioners as to the limits of the rule itself as well as assist in drafting resolutions required for approval or denial of applications. La Croix said

City will offer $20,000 for unbuildable parcels

The City Council has approved the expenditure of almost $20,000 to acquire five parcels of land in the Wetlands Conservation District. The land has been declared unbuildable under current development standards.

Last Tuesday the council approved contracts to purchase four parcels in Sanibel Highlands subdivisions from members of the Lupski family and two lots in Sanibel Gardens from Gertha Stiel and Jean Nikolaus.

Earlier this year the council denied the owners requests for specific amendments to permit construction of single-family homes on the five parcels. In line with city policy to preserve environmentally sensitive land by removing it from private ownership, the city agreed to buy the properties that can't be developed.

City Attorney David La Croix said appraisals of the properties had been accepted, but it was unlikely that the owners would accept offers to purchase the lands at the current appraised values.

By making offers in excess of the appraisals, the city is in a better position in the event of an inverse condemnation lawsuit or other legal action as a result of the present development regulations concerning the parcels, La Croix said.

The council agreed that an amount representing 90 percent of the appraised value would be equitable for the Sanibel Highlands parcels.

The council approved contracts to pay Michael and William Lupski Jr. $6,000 for Lots 10, 11, 12 and 13 Block 14 appraised at $3,000; $4,000 to Stephen Gentile for Lots 3, 14, 15 and 16 Block 11 appraised at $2,000; $4,000 to Michael Lupski for Lots 3, 4, 17 and 18 Block 9 appraised at $2,000; and $4,000 to William Lupski Jr. for Lots 4, 5, 14 and 15 Block 14 appraised at $2,000.

Stiel and Nikolaus were offered $1,800 for Lots 1 and 20 Block 4 Unit 1 in Sanibel Gardens appraised at $1,500.

Louise Lupski, who represented her sons and nephew (Gentile) at the council hearings, said one parcel purchased in 1974 and 1977 had been appraised by Lee County at $14,000. Her sons have been paying $300 in taxes on the property for years, she said.

The land owners have until Dec. 20 to accept or reject the city's offer. If the offers are accepted the transactions will close Feb. 20, 1986. The city will pay all costs except for the prorated taxes for 1986. La Croix said.

Council hears about need for Planning Commission attorney continued

It was council consensus that if legal counsel for the commission were approved the job should be a part of the City's Legal Department.

For the past two years the department has hired an assistant city attorney on a part-time basis. But the appropriation to fund that position was deleted from the city attorney's 1985-86 budget.

Last the council interpreted Downes' recommendations as well serving. La Croix pointed out that the legal consultant, a resident of New Jersey, is not licensed to practice law in Florida.

La Croix said he would prepare a memo for the council outlining alternative ways to provide legal counsel for the commission.

Downes said in any event the commissioners would need guidance in interpreting their new duties. He added he will be available to work with them in implementation of the new code after the first of the year.

The Dec. 16 council meeting will be the only one in December. The second scheduled meeting falls on Christmas Eve and has been cancelled.

La Croix said an all-day workshop to go through the commission's duties and procedures can be set up before the Jan. 14 meeting.

Temporary fee schedule adopted for permits

A temporary schedule of fees for city permits was adopted last week and will be in effect until the Dec. 1 City Council meeting.

As proposed by Planning Director Bruce Rogers, the new fees represent a 50 percent increase over previous permits, in some cases more than double.

In defending the raises Rogers pointed out that the previous schedule was adopted in 1980 and in no way reflected the last five years of inflation.

Rogers said 75 percent of the Planning Department staff time is directly involved in reviewing and processing development permit applications. Revenue from fees charged for permits last year was $57,000, only 19 percent of the department's $304,000 budget, he said.

"Generally speaking we don't charge enough for applications for the larger developments," he said. Rogers proposed setting the new fee for multi-family development at $300 for the first unit and $150 for each additional unit. Currently the first unit is assessed at $2,000 with $25 charged for each additional unit with a cap of $500.

But the councilmen, who received the five-page proposed new fee schedule just before Tuesday's meeting, were reluctant to adopt the new fees until they had time to study the recommendations.

Rogers said he understood their concern and apologized for not being able to provide the list earlier.

There are several new categories of permits, such as temporary use and variances required under the newly adopted Land Development Code, Rogers said, adding it is important that fees be established for them as soon as possible.

The council agreed to accept the fee schedule as proposed for an interim period and will act on the proposal at the next scheduled meeting.

Brass Elephant gets okay to advertise separately

The City Council last week decided the Brass Elephant restaurant should be treated the same as Casa Ybel resort's Thistle Lodge.

The council deleted from the restaurant development permit a stipulation that said the restaurant could not be advertised separately from the Hilton resort.

Councilman Fred Vain said he could see no harm in the Brass Elephant advertising the name as the Thistle Lodge, which, as is the Hilton restaurant, is an accessory use to the resort. The council voted 5-0 to delete the restriction from the development permit and allow the Hilton to advertise the Brass Elephant on its own merits.

9,000-square-foot office complex okayed on Periwinkle Way

Ralph Call's office condominium project on Periwinkle Way has won exemption from the moratorium on commercial development.

The day before the City Council adopted the new land development code, the Planning Commission approved a development permit for the 9,000-square-foot complex paving the way for council action last Tuesday.

Mayor Lesage Johnson wanted to add as a condition of approval that the complex conform to all the new development regulations.

Under the new code the floor area ratio would be reduced to 6,000 square feet, which would make it economically not feasible for development as an office complex.

With the smaller floor area only a retail complex would be feasible, architect Fred Melby said.

But Johnson's motion failed when Councilman Mike Klein withdrew his second. Klein originally was concerned that the larger building might be converted for retail use in the future. But his fears were allayed by the stipulation in the condominium documents that the complex must retain the pure office use in perpetuity.

Councilman Bill Hagerup's motion to grant relief from the moratorium passed by a 3-2 vote with Johnson and Councilman Francis Bailey opposed.

Bailey based his objection on the fact that Call's project was not eligible for exemption because his plans were not started before the moratorium was imposed last March.

But Call maintained his project was conceived in 1981 and was caught in that 28-month moratorium on commercial development. When the ban was lifted in 1982, interim rules had gone sky high and the project was put on hold, he said.

Call said he actively began working with Melby in October 1981 and submitted preliminary plans for the project to the Planning Department last February.

Call's attorney, Beverly Myers-Grady, pointed out that office use is a far less intense use than retail. "A 6,000-square-foot office building will have half the impact on traffic than a 5,000-square-foot retail complex," she said.

The Island investor Stocks gain appeal as interest rates and inflation decline

By Mark Webb
Investment broker

Once again investors are looking at stocks. Now that interest rates and inflation have declined, a tentative investment in the stock market such as real estate, mutual funds, money market funds and certificates of deposit have lost some of their appeal.

For individuals seeking a long term growth in their assets, stocks have historically outperformed many alternative investments. Through common stock ownership, individuals can participate in the growth of a company in the form of dividends, dividends increases and appreciation in the market value of the stock. Additionally, the liquidity in the stock market is an extremely important advantage of owning stocks. With numerous stocks, an investor can buy and sell.

The investor has the ability to partially reduce a stock holding. For example, if a stock goes up in value, an investor can sell half of his shares. You cannot sell half of a fine work of art and hold the other half for future profit.

Common stocks also afford the investor a method of participating in the growth of the U.S. economy. Undoubtedly, the growth of the economy has no been smooth, but the trend has definitely been upward and over time the stock market has proved to be a viable value.

Purchase of Sanibel Marina, Slip's Store is logical move for long-time man of the sea

Purchasing the Sanibel Marina and the Slip's Store would seem a logical business move for Islander Myron Ireland.

Ireland closed on the sale of the over two-acre marina proper on Nov. 15. Last week he closed the deal on the Slip's Store.

The marina had been in receivership since the previous owner declared bankruptcy and Ireland made the purchase directly from a bank in Miami.

The purchase seems logical because Ireland's background is as salty as you can get. In the 1950s and 60s he ran a marine business on Long Island. He has raced boats since he was a youngster and as a youth, even worked in a boat yard. He has owned four racing sailboats and 18 power cruisers ranging from 30 to 58 feet. He and his family have logged more than 100,000 miles at sea — most between Florida and New England.

And he and his loved directly across from the marina for the past eight years.

Sometimes we looked at somewhat of a mess, Ireland said, about the view adding he plans to turn that around and see what by the time he is finished changing the 'act of the marina he will have invested more than $1 million.

When the city of Sanibel gives its blessings Ireland said he will redesign the entire marina to make it more efficient. He hopes to tear out the current 55 boat slips and rebuild with a better organized 80 slips. Before he does any work, however, the land must be rezoned from non-conforming use to commercial/retail use for a marina. He said he hopes the rezoned marina will be completed within 12 months.

He also has more immediate plans to rebuild the 600-foot bulkhead around the store and a new deck and begin a professional revegetation plan removing the pines and replacing them with palm trees.

When Ireland moved to Sanibel in 1969, he bought the Snook Motel and operated it as a family business with his wife Dolly and four daughters.

The marina and Slip's Store will also be a family affair. Ireland's nephew, Murray Lewis, will operate the store. He previously ran the boat leasing operation at South Seas Plantation. Ireland's 15-year-old son, J.R., will also help out at the store.

Implementation of new code begins with adoption of vegetation standards

As the final step in the monster project of adopting a new Land Development Code, and amending the comprehensive Land Use Plan, City Council members last Tuesday signed the originals of both documents and the revised residential density maps that are a part of CLUP.

As the first step in implementing the new development regulations, the council passed resolutions adopting the list of native plants approved for landscape and vegetation standards that will provide effective management of Sanibel's vegetative resources.

The council also passed unanimously a resolution lifting the moratorium on filing amendments to the land use plan to increase density change permitted uses and rezoning residential to commercial or vice versa.

Zoned copies of the 31-page Land Development Code can be purchased at City Hall for $25. The 119-page CLUP amendment is available for $30. Sections of each document can be purchased for 25 cents a page.

During the public hearing process last month, the city provided copies of both proposed ordinances to interested residents free of charge.

Last week the council spent more than 30 minutes deciding how to rank 22 issues that surfaced during the public hearing of the land development code and were set aside for future discussion.

After debating the merits or should be the high number, they agreed that individual council members would rank the top 10 of the 22 subjects with 10 given the highest rating.

The council concurred that some of the topics could be combined into one subject for discussion. Staff will tabulate the rankings, go find the consensus and discussion will begin with these items.

Included on the list are the use of common or open space areas, such as golf courses, to increase permitted developed area change in boundaries of zoning districts where resort housing is permitted use, or creation of an overlay cottage motel district to permit continued resort use. The use of security gates and guard houses, deletion of the density exemption from the non-conforming use and non-conforming structure limitations, possibility of a northern bypass to Periwinkle Bay

Jenks loses bid for new sign at Sanibel Plaza

The council licenses to permit the construction of a public utility sign along Periwinkle Way will grant to the new Periwinkle Gardens shopping center and to Arthur and David Joffe's Down by U.S. 909 Shop.

Both properties have been located at the old site of the right-of-way on Periwinkle Way.

The council did not force any action in his charge to change the sign on Sanibel Plaza office complex. The council in fact does not offer to remove the lighted sign on the roof of the building in exchange for a sign at the name of the center on the adjacent main road.

Jenks also asked for weighty signs to identify Sanibel Realty's new and rental divisions.

A deputy office and a boat lift business are also in the area.

Code Enforcement Officer Dick Berk said the Graphics office and permits for one street graphic permit but never. Therefore, Jenks would need a variance for his proposal.

Mayor Louise Johnsons motion to permit one

20 square-foot sign to identify the name of the center and to identify the sign to the ground level Sanibel Plaza sign passed by a 10-0 vote. Councilman Fred Valtin cast the dissenting vote.

What you've given me I don't want, Jenks told the council. He indicated he would keep the sign as quo.

He thought the council wanted to go into high end roof mounted signs. I can't defend my plan a good compromise, he concluded.

week socio-economic survey and the referendum be carried forward concurrently. Should the board decide not to move forward with the referendum, Wilson called for the board's dissolution. Wilson's motion did not receive a second.

The board also received a petition signed by 200 people who requested beach renourishment. The petition, plus the highly-charged audience resembled a similar crowd that gathered six months ago. But at that time the crowd opposed the CEPD's resolution to move forward with a referendum for beach renourishment. That group turned in a petition of 60 names.

And while the intensity over beach renourishment has lessened higher than ever in recent memory. The Islander overheard one woman telling another as she walked out of the room after the angry public comment session of the meeting. "I love you but I sure disagree with you."

Since each of Martin's motions brought up much discussion and detail, The Islander will present each individually.

First motion: To postpone beach renourishment indefinitely. — Martin insisted time and time again that indefinitely was simply a legal phrase and that the board could bring up the issue of a referendum at any time. Yet it was the idea of indefinite delay that appeared to bother the audience.

Martin had three justifications for the delay. First, he said he felt that all Tetra Tech's recent work on the financing plan (which resulted in raising commercial and county assessments) was simply gerrymandering to make the assessments more palatable. The finance plan was based on what the engineers and some of the board felt were benefits, he said.

Yet if I were asked by any individual to explain their assessment and why it costs what it did, I could not. Martin said there is no research base whatsoever.

Second: Martin added there was no detailed budget on the continual maintenance of a beach renourishment project.

And third: since the perpendicular stabilizers will not be in place until February, he said. Even the relatively moderate cost cannot be justified without due time to see if it works.

Given these factors, Martin said he proposed an indefinite delay until the basic research was conducted to determine the perceptions of the property owners. He also added that the assessment plan as it stands now would not hold up in a court of law if it were challenged.

The restless audience which had shouted its disapproval at the first mention of indefinite delay continued to try to let the board know its feelings. The commissioners tried to explain that the board's rules of procedure called for the issues to be discussed and voted on by the commissioners first and then for the floor to be opened to public comment.

When project manager Stevens emotionally pleaded that erosion of the uplands and the road was the problem and that he would like to see the board focus on the problem of erosion prevention and how to pay for it — the audience loudly applauded.

Commissioner Wilson said he failed to see his referendum inbed indefinitely and added it was disheartening to stop work that the majority not a few wants to see move forward.

Wilson also stressed that if the board delayed any more it could cost a great deal of money in increased construction costs and in potential loss of state and federal funding. And he added that the CEPD if it doesn't hold to schedule will also lose the permit to renourish.

Stevens expanded on this point, saying that the state Department of Natural Resources has already extended the permit once, until December 1986, and that if this were allowed to lapse it would cost the CEPD an additional $20,000 to $30,000 for new permits.

Before the final vote Stevens stressed that he objected to an indefinite delay. He maintained the goal of the board should be to renourish in the summer of 1986. If the board reaffirmed that goal, he said he was confident it could obtain half of the total cost of beach renourishment from sources outside Captiva property owners.

I'm embarrassed to go before some of these agencies (to try to get funding), Stevens said. They wonder what in the world is going on on Captiva.

Chairman Hofschneider however wasn't too worried about the delay.

I can't see that we would lose much in taking time to get this information. I will agree to the six weeks of research, he said. Her vote then gave Martin and Garvey the necessary majority and the indefinite delay passed 5-1.

Motions two and three: the socio-economic survey. — Once the indefinite delay motion passed with its intent to take time for the six week $240,000 socio-economic survey, the board quickly approved moving forward with the survey with a 4-0 vote.

But it should be done closely with Tetra Tech, Wilson said before casting his vote. I can't see the benefit if it were done separately. The whole intent is to give input to Tetra Tech (to study raising or lowering assessments).

However, in the third motion Martin proposed having former Iowa attorney Scott Rosenberg write the survey. Rosenberg is currently manager of Fort Meyer's beach and Bulkley Contracting Inc. According to his resume, he is a building contractor and business development supervisor and is a partner in the ground floor development and management of a fast food restaurant.

He is available, he has the background and he'll do it for $2,000 — compared to many times that for the recent traffic surveys, Martin said. And you can rest assured that he was not previously known to me. He knows nothing about Captiva and what has been going on here. He is objective and his research will proceed from that basis.

Wilson immediately questioned the ethics of the board not following normal procedure to solicit several choices from which to choose. Martin responded that time was of the essence. Should the board go to big research firms, he said, the cost of the survey could exceed $30,000.

CEPD attorney Jim Humphrey added that he was concerned from a legal perspective. You need someone who could and you legally (through various hearings). You need an expert witness and he (Rosenberg) might not qualify, he told the board.

This is highly irregular. Stevens told the board. If it is important enough to have this aspect added, then do it right. He stressed. You should write a scope of work interview and then select like you always do.

The question was also raised about what this socio-economic survey would actually entail and what its timetable would be.

I think you've said you've employed someone to do that kind of survey. You should be consulting said Allen Ten Brock, president of South Seas Plantation. When the floor was open to public comments.

In six weeks we're not going to have an answer — just a formula on how to get more data. But I hope you realize it would then take three to six months to see this all completed.

The agreement with Rosenberg does explain what his primary duties will be. They include: 1. To develop a research instrument to gather data on the positions of all property owners that will either lead support to or refute the assumptions in the financial plan.

2. To determine what other types of research would be necessary on which to base a financing plan should the board decide to implement such a plan.

3. To take such other steps as necessary to facilitate the gathering of data.

You're going to accomplish nothing more than delay to get more and more data to justify data you already have. Ten Brock said.

This is obviously just a delaying tactic and gradually and slowly you are being deluded.

Most of the public comment followed in a similar vein. We're paying and paying for your motions, Sheila Heen told the board. And we'll hold you legally responsible.

You've hired someone for $2,400 to hold up a $6.2 million project, said Russell Bilgore. It's almost maliciously done.

It's just unfair not to let the substantial majority have their way, said Lloyd Wright, a former CEPD commissioner. The property owners voted in last year's opinion poll and 68 percent said they wanted renourishment.

Every one it upset today, — and finally you're a little late, Mike Cohen said. The commissioners.

These motions mean delay, delay and the only motion not made is to disband and dissolve the board. I challenge you to go ahead and do it. This comment drew much applause.

But the comments from the public were not all negative. After a short recess to digest the idea of conducting the survey and the referendum concurrently, Greenville Schaeffer commended the new board.

I must apologize for my neighbors (the hostile crowd), Schaeffer said. I think you are hastening the consideration of this project. If you put this plan through as it stands it would be tied up in the courts for years.

Gus Peck also commended the new board. I believe we have four commissioners who are for beach renourishment, Peck said. They just take exception to the funding plans. I do believe they are sending out a positive message more so than ever before.

Medusa foot and five Terminatus, Stevens and Gooderham's contract. — Much of the public outcry came from the final two motions that terminated beach renourishment project manager Steven's contract 5-1 Jan 1.

Since we are on hold pending a contract and since we've approved the perpendicular stabilizers which need time for evaluation, we don't need

"You can go ahead and renegotiate to hire me on an hourly contractual basis, but it will cost you a fortune."

Dick Stevens
Project manager

(Stevens) level of services as we have in the past. Martin said. "The past project manager's reports show that not that much is being done. Rather it is his associate (Gooderham) who has done most of the work."

Whatever you do a fine, said a by now frustrated Stevens. But who's going to go after outside funding, coordinate with the Army Corps of Engineers, proceed with the finance plans, take care of the construction bids? You know sometimes I'm blamed for being pro-renourishment. But that's what you hired me for.

You can go ahead and renegotiate. I hire me on an hourly contractual basis — but it will cost you a fortune. Stevens added. I am willing to work on an as-needed basis, but I can guarantee you it will cost you more and you won't have the services of Matt Gooderham.

Martin amended his motion to terminate Steven's contract by agreeing to try to renegotiate the contract by Jan 1.

"It's not in our best interest to renegotiate," Wright said. "I know the costs involved and as of right now the CEPD is getting a deal."

We are going to have to pay more and get less for the money, he added. Currently the CEPD is paying $4,000 a month for the part time services of both Stevens and Gooderham. That adds up to $48,000 a year.

Stevens calculated that for 20 hours a week the board would end up paying him a one about $72,000 a year. If the as needed basis turned out to be even just 10 hours a week, he said that would still add up to $36,000 a year.

In addition, the job Gooderham has created has turned out to be much more important than expected, he said.

It evolved so that she has been doing the agent's duties plus the economic assessment and MSTJ meetings — everything adding up to what I'd call an executive director of the CEPD, Stevens said.

I can't imagine starting all over again. This is a very very foolish thing, said Helen Bradley during the public comment session.

There's no question on the project has been emasculated — we had a project manager for five years and now he's out, said Russell Bilgore.

You've taken a giant step backward, he charged. Ernie Heen, though Gooderham was encouraged to submit an application for the position she declined.

OBITUARY

Robert Casselman

Robert Casselman, long time Boston area urban and cultural leader, died Nov 29, 1988 at age 67 of a heart attack in Boston. He was 67. Casselman was most recently associate director of the Museum of Fine Arts in Boston where he initiated the reconstruction of the West Wing and the design and construction program. The West Wing is generally credited with enabling the museum to regain financial stability. Casselman served the museum until his retirement six years ago following a serious heart attack. Prior to joining the museum, he spent two years writing, continuing a book published in 1978 which analyzed various religious concepts of the afterlife. It contained Casselman's own explanation based on his own and scientific evidence. Casselman was for many years a deacon of the Second Church in Newton, Mass. and was more recently involved in the establishment of the Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ. A graduate of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Casselman had a diverse business career. The major part of his career was with Polaroid Corporation, where he handled assignments in engineering, production and marketing management for more than 12 years. The first assignment for Polaroid was a technical review. Casselman rose to the vice president of sales and advertising before leaving to join Polaroid's May Company. After leaving Polaroid in 1963, Casselman taught at MIT's Sloan School of Management and was one of the founders of the Boston Consulting Group. Later in his career, Casselman was vice president and director of research and development at Hitek Corporation. He also served on the boards of various corporations including the Mutual Bank for Savings. Casselman served under Massachusetts Governor George Wallace and Sargent in developing the reorganization of state government in the 1960s. His planning group, the Office of Planning and Program Coordination, proposed the present cabinet system and designed a management accountability system which while never fully implemented in Massachusetts has been adopted by other governments. Casselman was a founder and the first president of the Newton Community Development Foundation, a pioneering non profit group formed to build low and moderate income housing in Newton. NCDP overcame initial neighborhood resistance to build more than 150 apartments in Newton. NCDP eventually moved an elderly housing project in Casselman's honor. Casselman was also an active supporter of Newton Wellesley Hospital at MIT, Belmont Hill School, and other Boston area institutions. He was a native of Pittsburgh and raised his family in Newton. He maintained a summer home in Cataumet in Cape Cod where he was an avid sailor and tennis player, and spent his winters on Sanibel. He was an accomplished jazz pianist. Casselman leaves his wife Dorothy, daughter Margery Conroy of Syracuse, N.Y. who with her husband David has four children, Nancy, Kate and Pamela, son Carl of Philadelphia, Penn. who with his wife Cynthia has two children, Robert and Ashley, son Ted of New York, and son Fritz of Boston, who with his wife Susan Ashbrook has two sons, Benjamin and Peter. A memorial service was held at the Second Church in Newton on Dec. 4, 1988. The family requests that in lieu of flowers, contributions be made to the Newton Community Development Foundation, Second Church in Newton or to Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ.

It's Christmastime on the Islands

Children, adults alike will enjoy annual lighting of the tree

Islanders of all ages are invited to the annual lighting of the community Christmas tree across from the Sanibel Community Association on Periwinkle Way at 6 p.m. this Saturday, Dec. 14. Santa will arrive on the scene via fire truck and will have candy for the crowd. Hot apple cider will also be served, courtesy of the Sanibel-Captiva Kiwanis Club. After the tree is lighted there will be a round of Christmas carols for all to join in.

Church choirs combine for Bach-Handel program; everyone invited Sunday

The combined choirs of St. Michael's and All Angels Episcopal Church and Sanibel Congregational United Church of Christ will present a program of Bach and Handel music at 4 p.m. this Sunday, Dec. 15, in St. Michael's church (on Periwinkle Way). Robert Faulkes, United Church of Christ choir director and organist, will be director and tenor soloist for the program. Dorothy Bunck, St. Michael's choir director and organist, will be pianist and cello instrumentalist. Other principals include Betty Korc, alto; Ray Korc, baritone; and Margaret Bunck, flute.

All during 1985, musicians throughout the world have been presenting special programs honoring the great composers Bach and Handel on their 300th anniversaries. Church members believe that it is fitting during the Advent season to celebrate the composers' contributions to inspiration and worship.

The public is cordially invited. There is no charge and ample parking is provided.

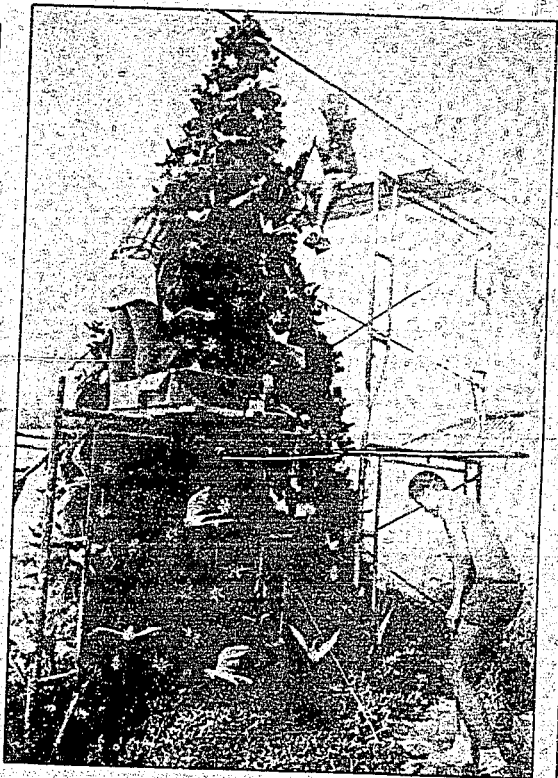

Fill a toy box for tots, get a free deli sandwich at Sundial through Dec. 16

As island headquarters for the annual U.S. Marine Corp. Toys for Tots drive, Sundial serves residents and visitors to stop by and donate a Christmas toy for a needy child.

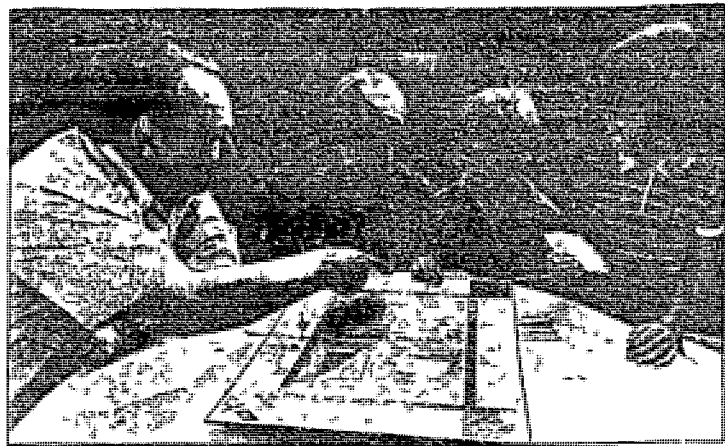

To join in the spirit of giving, anyone who brings in a toy is invited to enjoy a complimentary deli sandwich at Morgan's lounge.

A large gift box will be in the lounge until Dec. 16. Sundial is at 126 Middle Gulf Drive on Sanibel.

Last year Islanders made more than 250 children happy with their donations to Sundial. And the Marines hope to "put smiles on even more young faces in 1985."

It's your move

That's what City Councilman Fred Valtin was saying to Lisa F. and Matt Hill at Sanibel Elementary School last week as the four played a round of "The Game of Sanibel Island." The Monopoly-type board game was developed as a fund-raiser for the school island businesses, and individuals are represented in the spaces around the board.

Just in time for Christmas the game is now available for $15 at the school between 2 and 2:45 p.m. and at several local businesses. For more information about the game call Judy Vall 472-9490 after 4 p.m.

Mentor program gets test run at Sanibel Elementary School

Plan pairs willing seniors with interested students for special learning experience

By Scott Vartell

Are you an archaeologist, geologist, or a writer? Do you have other special background and training that would be useful to a young student? If so, Sanibel Elementary School wants to hear from you.

This year the school is piloting a unique program for Lee County schools. Senior Mentors for Creative Students pairs junior citizens (those over 55 or retired) with students for special projects. The program is not formal, but is instead an enrichment program for students who are bright and creative.

Those interested in becoming involved in the one-on-one program with Sanibel youngsters are encouraged to attend a meeting at 10 a.m. this Wednesday, Dec. 11, at the elementary school.

Some of the people on this island have uncredited credentials, and if they are paired with the right students they could do wonderful things with them.

ment," believes Jan Ciesielski, the program coordinator for the school.

Several students at the school recently underwent an interest inventory. To determine their hidden interests, Ciesielski said, 11 basic interests can be pursued through such an enrichment program such as the Senior Mentors, these students' overall motivation might increase, she explained.

Each student's individual project is set up after the mentor, parent, teacher and student have an initial meeting. The mentor and student will spend about two hours a week together for 10 weeks. At the end of the 10-week period the student will have a program he can share with others.

Sanibel elementary is the only school in Lee County to do the program this year. This is the third year the program has been tried in Florida.

The program is funded in Florida by Chevron USA for $50,000 plus matching funds from the state.

Department of Education. The funds help to advertise the program and also help pay for some of the students' projects.

"Some of the people on the Island have incredible credentials, and if they are paired with the right students they could do wonderful things with them."

ARTS ON THE ISLANDS

By Julie Niedenfuer

Preserving the Islands' past

Limited edition calendars, placemats and greeting cards depict days long gone by

One thing a lot of people seem to be concerned with these days is preserving the face of Sanibel and Captiva. Some make the effort through legal processes; others do what they can in their own little spheres.

Artist Nancie Zwerlein preserves chunks of the islands' heritage on canvas.

A prolific painter best known for her portraits, Zwerlein recently completed the first segment in what she hopes will be an ongoing series of paintings appropriately titled "The Sanibel-Captiva Landmark Historical Series, First Edition."

"No one's ever done it before," Zwerlein says about the collection that so far consists of 12 paintings of historical places and things on the Islands. Some are landmarks that have long since met their demise, such as the old steamboat Algiers. Others are of scenes still very much with us, such as the Chapel by the Sea.

Zwerlein's collection has been reproduced in a limited edition series of calendars, placemats and greeting cards that beginning this month will be available through the mail and at a number of Island outlets. Arundel's card shop will carry the complete line.

"Her eyes betray enthusiasm when she talks about finally seeing the fruition of her work."

"I've been doing research on this for two and a half years," she says. "Of course I'm excited about all this."

In many cases, to find out what life was like here "in the old days," the only thing Zwerlein had to go by were sketches or dog-eared photos. She also consulted several long-time residents for their first-hand tales.

Each of the paintings that appears in print will have a story from an Islander who had a personal tie with that particular landmark.

Belton Johnson, Eula Rhodes, Charlie Russe (son of the late Andy Russe of Captiva) and Francis Bailey are just some of the Islanders who helped Zwerlein with their tales of the old days.

"I don't think the calendar would be half a success without their stories," says Zwerlein. The idea for the project came about, Zwerlein says, because, "Everybody kept saying, 'This is gone' or 'Oh, that's not there anymore' or 'You should have been here when...'"

"From there it just snowballed. I decided I wanted to capture the Islands," she says.

As a portrait artist, Zwerlein has often been asked to preserve little slices of history.

"The thing about portraits is you're capturing a moment for all time," she says.

While most often that applies to people, Zwerlein frequently is asked to paint family pets. Though in this case "family pet" might not be an appropriate description, Zwerlein was commissioned this summer to paint a portrait of one of the most famous race horses in England, Red Rum, by his owners, the LeMares. "I'm the only American that's ever been asked," she says proudly.

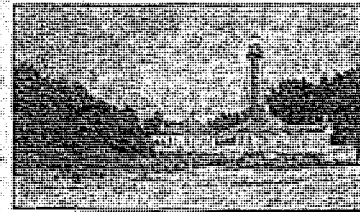

"My portraits have really blossomed. I'm going all over the United States with commissions," she says, adding that one of the most important aspects of being a successful painter is promoting.

And while she admits putting her historical collection into a printed series of calendars and placemats is commercial, she doesn't think that is necessarily bad. She feels it is one good way people can learn more about the history of the Islands they want to preserve.

"I think it's selfish for me to have this hanging with me all alone," she says, gesturing toward a number of paintings on easels. She says eventually she would like to see someone purchase the original collection and perhaps donate it to the Island Historical Museum or some other public building.

With several other historical buildings on her list, Zwerlein will be adding to her landmark collection for some time.

"I've never had the chance to paint anything I wanted to paint. Talk about dreams coming true!"

Asolo Touring Theater presents 'Antigone' under the tent at City Hall this Saturday

Barrier Island Group for the Arts presents the acclaimed Asolo Touring Theater's "Antigone" at 8 p.m. this Saturday, Dec. 14, under the tent at City Hall.

This production is an adaptation of Sophocles' Greek classic that centered on an individual (Antigone) and her struggle for what she believed to be morally right.

In this version the words from an earlier adaptation are used, but the setting is in a future time.

Director John Gulley says the pool of imagery for the production comes from films such as "Road Warrior."

Now in its 15th year, Asolo Touring Theater is a fully professional company that combines highly qualified actors, directors, designers and managers to shape its repertory of plays.

Tickets are $6 and can be purchased in advance at B-Hive, MacInloch Bookshop and Caloosa Canvas, or at the door.

BIG arts seeks RV for dressing room

BIG Arts publicity chairman Mary Ann Selpos says her group is trying to find someone who could spare a van or recreational vehicle the night of the performance, Saturday, Dec. 14.

It must be roomy enough to accommodate people changing clothes, as it will be used as a dressing room for "Antigone" actors.

Anyone who can spare such a vehicle is asked to call BIG Arts president Aaron Rutvo, 472-4575.

Goldfish painting is popular favorite in art league annual juried show

When judging was over for the Sanibel-Captiva Art League annual juried show, and the top three places, merit winners and honorable mentions had been handed out Nov. 24, there was one important award still outstanding.

Each year a "Popular Choice" award is given to the artist whose painting receives the most votes during the first week of the show at the Captiva Civic Center. Visitors are polled on their way out as to which was their favorite painting.

This year that painting — which also happened to be the first one sold — was "Places" by Fort Myers Beach artist Joy Reinhardt.

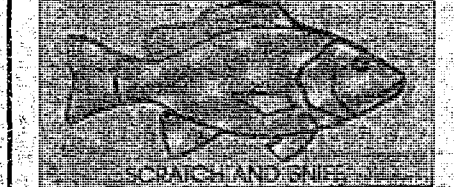

She described her painting as "water media."

"Anything soluble in water is in it," she said.

The work is a colorful, fanciful rendering of a goldfish, a favorite subject for the painter. "I've discovered you can put as many fins and things

Exhibit at Captiva library features American printmaker

The Captiva Memorial Library is presenting the "Legends Marsh: New York City Life" as the next in its ongoing series of circulating exhibits from the Jungling Museums in Sarasota. The American artist, who lived from 1858-1954, had a lifelong fascination with the city of New York and its urban society. Though born to a prosperous family of artists and raised in a fashionable New Jersey suburb, the seamy, commercial areas surrounding his 14th Street studio provided the subject matter he found of greatest interest.

His portrayals have a biting humor, reminiscent of caricature.

Marsh's style is a combination of observed realism and ordered design. Having started his career as a small and occasional illustrator, it is based on his mastery of the human figure, an instinctive sense of solid form and movement and a well-developed ability to observe the human condition.

Marsh began printmaking in the late 1920s, at first with both lithography and etching. By the early 1950s he was working almost exclusively with etching.

The exhibit will remain up through Dec. 31 at the library at 11550 Chapin Lane. Hours are from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Wednesday and 9 a.m. to noon Saturday. The library is closed Sunday and Monday.

on goldfish you want," she said.

"Now your secret's out," Dorothy Ristow, treasurer of the Sanibel-Captiva Art League, said just before handing Reinhardt her $50 prize. In her 30-year painting career, Reinhardt has collected numerous awards and honors.

The show comprised of 46 paintings and pastels from members of the Art Council of Southwest Florida was deemed by Judge Fred Messersmith as the best he had seen in years. It was taken down Sunday.

Short of holding a seance, we can't actually get endorsements from people like Ernest Hemingway, King Henry VIII, or Napoleon Bonaparte.

But we're certain Chadwick's would please them in spirit.

After a long day of battling marlin or hunting typewriters, Papa Hemingway would have loved to reward tugging a necktie.

So he would have loved Chadwick's, and our fresh seafood, choice meats, decadent desserts, and divine drinks.

Because while the atmosphere's rather more sophisticated than an African safari, the dress is almost as casual.

King Henry VIII went through six wives trying to find one who'd give him good food in king sized portions.

With the consequences of displeasing someone like him in mind, we created Chadwick's all-you-can-eat buffet.

Robinson Crusoe on Tuesday. Seafood Delight on Friday. Champagne Brunch on Sunday. And bountiful lunches every day.

Henry probably would have proposed to the cook.

Gently persuading reluctant principals to join the empire doesn't leave a general much time to catch a quick bite.

Which is why Napoleon is traditionally portrayed with a hand inside his coat, massaging his growing stomach.

If only he were around for Chadwick's dinner specials. Prime Rib and King Crab Duo on Monday. Stuffed Chicken on Wednesday. Jermain Cluckin on Thursday. And New York Strip Steak on Saturday.

Plus a special menu for other hard-to-please little people. Your kids.

All at prices so reasonable you can afford to feed an army.

We heartily endorse a visit to Chadwick's in the near future.

As would a couple of history's biggest eaters.

And one of history's smallest ones.

What's cooking?

Start making hors d'oeuvres now so you can enjoy your holiday party, too

By Bobbie Sharp
Now that the holidays are here, many Islanders are planning their annual Christmas bash for perhaps 50 or 100 of the nearest and dearest friends they have or at least feel they owe. The solution?

If you plan ahead the party can be fun. Cook and freeze most of the hors d'oeuvres beforehand, then you actually can enjoy your own party.

I have already provided two recipes for two excellent cocktail goodies in a previous article (Olive Butter and Uncle Charles' Egg and Olive Spread, published Nov. 26). Here are three more, one hot and two cold.

The hot one is my husband's favorite. It is not difficult to make, but you do have to work fast. I make these Fillo Logs by the dozen and keep them in the freezer. They keep very well for a number of months.

Fillo, phyllo and strudel leaves are just about the same, so use whichever you can find.

Fillo Logs
8 fillo leaves
1 1/2 cups cheddar cheese, grated

1 cup bread crumbs
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 eggs
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
1 1/2 sticks of melted butter
Mix the cheese, bread crumbs, cornstarch, seeds, eggs and parsley. Blend well with spoon. If you have some ground ham or tongue or dried beef on hand, stir it in and set the mixture aside.

Unwrap the eight fillo leaves and lay them down flat and cover with a damp cloth.

With a pastry brush butter the leaf. You do not have to butter the whole leaf. At the smaller end put one eighth of the cheese mix and spread it out to a thick roll. Start rolling the leaf and form in the sides as you roll. This forms a "log" which you then place seam side down on an unbuttered cookie sheet or jelly roll pan.

Do the same with the other seven leaves. This should take up all the filling. Four logs to a pan is about right. Do not crowd them. Bake the rest of the melted butter and coat the tops. Take a sharp knife and cut diagonal slices at 1/2-inch apart in the logs.

Put plastic wrap over the cookie pans and freeze the logs. Take out of the freezer the evening of the party and thaw in the refrigerator. Place in 350 degree preheated oven and cook about 20 minutes until they are crisp and sticky. Remove from oven and complete cutting the diagonal slices to make serving easy.

Stardada with Crudités
2 cups of mayonnaise (if you don't make your own use Hellman's)

1 medium garlic clove, minced
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup ground almonds
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Mix the above together. This can be made the morning of the party. Serve with the following crudités: cauliflower florets, Belgian endive leaves, raw snow peas, fresh fennel sticks. If you cannot get the fennel, use celery and carrots.

1 medium garlic clove, minced
1/2 cup chopped onion
1/2 cup ground almonds
Salt and pepper
2 tablespoons chopped parsley
Mix the above together. This can be made the morning of the party. Serve with the following crudités: cauliflower florets, Belgian endive leaves, raw snow peas, fresh fennel sticks. If you cannot get the fennel, use celery and carrots.

make these days ahead of time:
2 cups of drained red kidney beans
2 small onion chopped fine
1 tablespoon saltflower oil
1 medium clove of garlic, chopped
Salt and pepper to taste
Chopped parsley for garnish
Put in a dish of chili pepper, hot or cup chopped walnuts.
Soak the onion until golden brown pan aside. Purée the beans in a food processor or use the fine blade on a food mill. Add the cooked onion to the beans and garlic and salt and pepper. Fold in the chopped walnuts. Put in a crook neck with plastic wrap and so for serving garnish with the chopped parsley.

All you do now is set the table and get dressed!

Humane Society hopes reimbursement plan will serve as incentive for pet adoption

The Lee County Humane Society has a new plan to make pet adoption easier for families who wish to add the joy of an animal friend to their homes. The plan, developed with the cooperation of Shutterworld of Fort Myers, will substantially reduce the costs of adopting a dog or cat. For the first 25 people who agree to adopt an animal beginning Dec. 16, Shutterworld will reimburse the buyer for the cost of spay or neuter surgery up to $50 for dogs and $30 for cats.

Humane Society officials believe such a program will go far in helping to place a large number of unwanted abandoned animals who need only a home filled with love and who have the capacity to return that love many times over. The Lee County Humane Society has expressed a deep appreciation to Shutterworld for this assistance. Those who want to participate in the program should call Shutterworld, 954-0111. The Lee County Humane Society shelter is at 4220 Anderson Ave., one mile west of Interstate 75 in Fort Myers.

Needlework news

Crochet a popcorn garland for your Christmas tree

By Barbara Buelow
 Did you ever really try to string popcorn to make a garland for your Christmas tree? If so, you have found that the new improved popcorn is so light and fluffy that it falls apart when a needle is stuck through it. And if one or two break after the threading is completed, unsightly gaps of thread show. The popcorn garland, of course, cannot be stored from year to year.

If I were you, I'd put someone in charge of measuring the tree, another in charge of lights, and a third in charge of dusting and placing ornaments. In the meantime, I'd sit back in a comfortable chair with my feet elevated, slipstitch, crochets a popcorn garland.

One 100-gram skein of white worsted weight yarn and a crochet hook size #7, #8 or #9 all you need to make 12 yards of popcorn! This is plenty for a four-foot tree.

Chain four loops. Wrap the yarn around the hook (yarn over) and insert hook into the third chain.

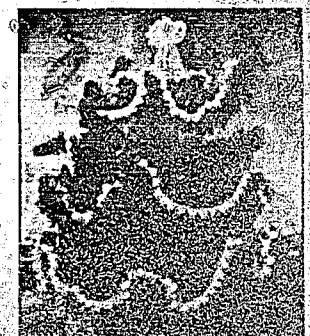

Draw up a 3/4-inch loop. You now have three loops on the hook. Yarn over and draw through two loops. Yarn over and insert the hook into the same third chain as before. Draw up a 3/4-inch loop. There are now four loops.

Yarn over and draw through two loops. Yarn over and insert hook again into the third chain. Pull up a 3/4-inch loop. With five loops on the hook, yarn over and pull through two. Yarn over and insert hook for the fourth time into the third chain. Draw up a 3/4-inch loop. There are now six loops.

Yarn over and pull through two. Now yarn over and pull through all five loops on the hook to make a cluster. Insert hook again into the original third chain hole and draw up the yarn through the chain and the loop on the hook (slip stitch).

Repeat the above instructions until all the hard work for the tree trimming is completed.

If you have any questions, stop in Idle Hours, 2410 Palm Ridge Road.

This Christmas tree is graced with a crocheted popcorn garland.

Sheinwold on bridge

By Alfred Sheinwold
North's bid in this week's hand, the Jacoby Transfer Bid used by many tournament experts, forced South to bid the next higher suit (hearts). North hoped to pass his partner at three hearts, but South's hand was so good for hearts that he ambitiously bid four hearts of three. (Don't try the Jacoby Transfer bid at rubber bridge; nobody will understand it.) South refused the first diamond but took the second. South had no chance unless the missing trumps were divided 2-2, but he also feared a club switch if East won the first trump.

South therefore led the queen of hearts.

A genius with nerves of steel might play the jack from the West hand. But West, merely human, played the king. And a genius in the East seat might overtake with the ace. But East played low.

South ruffed West's diamond continuation and led another trump. He could then win East's club return with the ace and run the spades to discard dummy's clubs.

ANSWER
Bid four spades. Many fine players would bid 4NT instead of using the Stayman Convention. Even if the opener has four spades, 4NT might be a safer contract than four spades. But now that you know partner has four spades, you might as well bid the game in the suit rather than in no-trump. Your short hearts might provide a ruffing trick at spades but might be a source of weakness at no-trump.

An unforgettable experience

Sanibel woman covers women's organizations at Geneva summit

By Scott Martell

One of the bigger news stories to come out of the recent Geneva summit between President Ronald Reagan and Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev was the well-publicized remarks by Reagan's Chief of Staff Donald Regan concerning women.

Regan was quoted as saying few women understood serious issues and were likely more interested in what the leader's wives were wearing. Meanwhile, at the Geneva summit, a Sanibel woman with NBC press credentials, Joan Marshall-Moseley, was covering two international women's groups full of well-known political women who were attending the summit.

"It was quite ironic," Moseley said after her return to Sanibel. "Those remarks just showed the naive some have on women's ability — which is exactly why these two women's groups felt they had to go there."

Moseley, a freelance journalist who in the past has been a news anchor and reporter on television stations in Buffalo, Miami and Fort Myers, picked up press credentials from WBWF in Fort Myers to specifically cover the two women's groups.

She said the overall experience was "unforgettable," adding she felt the women's groups were effective in making their views for peace known. Both groups were coalitions formed specifically for the Geneva summit.

"I'm sure this was a first," she said. "The two groups represented the young, old, NATO, women, all races and all interests."

One group, Women for a Meaningful Summit, included Bella Abzug, Mary Dent Crisp (co-chairman of the Republican National Committee), LaDonna Harris (president for Indian Opportunity), Jane Alexander, Joan Edgar (political editor of Ms. magazine) and many others.

Women for Meaningful Summit generally favors disarmament and had the support of the Rev. Jesse Jackson in Geneva.

The second group, Women for a Secure Peace, included the deputy mayor of Paris, Madame Monique Garmier-Jackson, Phyllis Schlafly (president of the Eagle Forum), Nancy Greene (wife of actor Lorne Greene), Evelyn Le Chene (Western Defense Alliance) and many others.

This group generally supports the Reagan defense initiatives.

Generally, the two groups did not agree on defense issues, Moseley said. For instance, the Women for a Secure Peace did not approve of Jackson's remarks to Gorbachev for total disarmament.

But Moseley, who is a member of the conservative Eagle's Forum that was represented at the summit by Phyllis Schlafly, said she thought the similarities of the two groups were more notable.

"They were both sincere, dignified, intelligent and each sincerely had peace as its goal — they just had different approaches (to peace)," she said.

Because of the news blackout at the summit, the women's groups had more opportunity to express their views, she said. "But they didn't have the same complement of press as a group of Rotarians or IBM businessmen would have gotten in a similar situation," she lamented.

Moseley had several other impressions of her summit trip.

She said when she covered Rev. Jackson at the most recent Democratic convention in San Francisco, she felt he had a "big presence" and was very powerful. At the summit, when faced with tough questions, however, he seemed to flatter, and his voice grew strident, she said. And later, in a face-to-face interview, he again avoided the tough questions, she added. But in person his "warmth" came through — it was almost "melling," she felt.

Moseley also found it difficult to understand traditional media coverage of the summit. In one situation, a group of seven wounded Afghans on the

Shelling fever pays off for West Virginia women

You know you have the "shelling fever" when you go out for some serious shelling for five weeks straight. Julia Eubank and Page Camp laid the fever, and now they have the prizes. Last week, out shelling off Upper Captiva with Capt. Tammy Clifford of the Foreman Adventure, the women each found an albino weik and then they found an even more rare lion's paw.

"When I found my albino weik, it looked like Julia (Eubank) was going to have a stroke," Camp laughed. "And then she found one, too."

Later, when they found the lion's paw, the West Point, Va., women knew they had struck gold. The three shells are the prize shells of a huge multi-bag collection the women plan to take back home to enjoy until they can return to Sanibel and Captiva.

way to a Swiss clinic stopped at a hotel to express their views. The media cameramen, instead of turning their cameras on this changing event, kept their cameras focused on the back of Secretary of State George Schultz's limousine, Moseley said.

In another instance, the media rushed out to cover a peace march sponsored by the Green Party, a liberal German group. The national media focused on the "peace march" aspect, but since most were unable to read the signs most media got the wrong impression, Moseley said. "It was ironic — this march was a real mixed bag," she said.

"Some of the signs said 'Free the Hari Krishna in Russia,' 'Reagan Gang — Hell!' or 'Russia get out of Afghanistan'."

"And most of this was missed by the national press because they knew the march was billed as a march for peace," she said.

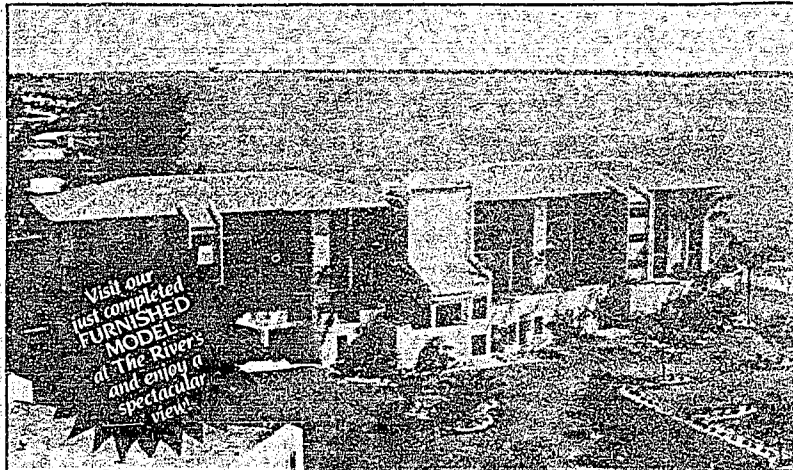

A final impression came from the host Swiss themselves.

"The Swiss police are armed to the teeth," Moseley said. "And they didn't mess around. In one case a CNN crew and I were man-handled. We were covering half a dozen or so students in front of the Geneva Airport office who were demanding that Soviet Jews be freed. The police moved in and carried them off in such a fashion that their clothes were literally dragged off their bodies. And even though we were wearing press credentials we were roughly handled, too."

Back at home on Sanibel, Moseley said she feels women should be included in future summits — and preferably in an official capacity.

"Women have increased their awareness dramatically, and we will find that true in the next election," she said. "It is unfortunate that women made a strategic mistake in supporting Geraldine Ferraro in the past election. I think she was hasty and a poor choice. She lacked much experience."

"The country needs the best — and if that means men forever, that's okay. Gender, race, color — that's not important. Competence is the most important," she added.

FICTION
The Mammals Hunters — Jean Auel — Continues the exciting adventures of the Wonder Woman of the Ice Age. In volume three of the projected series, The Earth's Children, Ayla, the independent heroine, and Jondalar of the golden hair travel to the land of his kin, the mammoth hunters. With them they bring tame horses and the ability to make fire, two of Ayla's earlier discoveries. While living with the Mammoths she will experiment with using a needle for sewing leather and will work at spreading tolerance among the clans (flatheads are people, too!).

Foreign Land — Jonathan Raban — After 35 years in an obscure African outpost, solitary George Grey has come back to England only to find that home has changed so much that he feels like a foreigner. A haunting novel in which the characters and events of the past are interwoven with the deceptions and uncertainties of the present.

Angels All Over Town — LuAnne Rice — Soap opera actress Una Cayvan takes advantage of the opportunity offered when she is temporarily written out of the script to join her two sisters for a seaside "family" vacation. It makes a tale of the renewed tightening and then liberated loosening of family ties on the way to adult life and love.

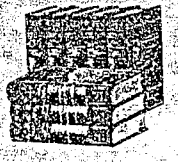

World's Fair — E.L. Doctorow — A wonderful, moving creation of the childhood of Edger Allanahler that combines the actual life he led in the Bronx in the 1920s and the world that the adult Edger imperfectly reconstructs in his memory. The climax is a visit to the 1929 World's Fair with its hopeful theme "The World of Tomorrow."

The Winning Streak — Arnold Grisman — It all starts in Las Vegas when Goldberg, an ex-treasury agent, has a stunning run at the dice and meets stunningly beautiful Barbara. A gambling odyssey follows that moves Goldberg from California to Atlantic City and involves murder, kidnapping and a huge counterfeiting scam. A real page-turner.

NON-FICTION
River Runners of the Grand Canyon — David Lavender — The documentation began with Major John Wesley Powell, that one-armed Civil War veteran who first ran the river in the late 1800s. The fascination continues to this day with Georgia White, the woman who introduced rubber rafts to the river. A grand book, filled with the exhilaration of the run.

The Open Net — George F. Illingworth — For the Walter Mitty in all of us, Illingworth has once again ventured as an amateur into the world of professional sports. This time it's as the goalie with the Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League. George gives us a very and penetrating look inside a unique brotherhood.

Part II: Australian pines re-evaluated

The dreaded weed tree could be of great value elsewhere in the world

By George Campbell
Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

About 10 years ago I was part of a team that developed natural history data for the Sanibel Report. I recall a conversation with two botanical types from Miami, Durbin Tabb and Taylor Alexander.

These men feared that South Florida would soon be a land of exotic plants and exotic animals and that we might as well get used to the fact of the future that we would have melaleuca, Brazilian pepper and Australian pine forests to enjoy — and little else by way of native plants.

I wasn't ready to accept that ultimate fate that long ago. And I'm still not ready to completely accept that situation, although the handwriting is on the wall.

But I do now accept that any of those three plants that will grow abundantly in really stressed areas of the world could be of real benefit somewhere. I mean areas like South China and Northeast Brazil — places where mankind has already, through his own destructive activities and those of his domesticated animals, destroyed or almost destroyed the land, leaving nothing but desert disaster areas.

I believe such places would benefit from the introduction of any one of these weed trees that could grow in the harsh conditions existing in such places today.

Already a hated weed tree species of Texas is the subject of intensive cultivation experimentation by a British organization called Green Deserts, Ltd. I refer to mesquite.

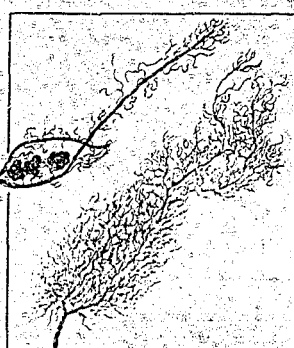

Once was acquainted with a Texan who devoted a lot of his energies to hating mesquite and destroying it on the cattle range. But in the Sudan today, mesquite is being tenderly nurtured. These trees just might be able to withstand the week-long sandstorms and extreme arid conditions of western Sudan.

A young British botanist, Stephen Bristow, and his wife and two children live under very difficult conditions at El Dainar, rural capicaci of that region of the Sudan. This young man and two local Hasaniya associates spend their days filling sacks with arid sand at Wadi El Khliella to build wind breaks around young mesquite seedlings to which they haul four gallons of water per tree per week from a micro-catchment nearby. The walls protect the seedlings from wind and sand storms. The water seems to be sufficient in quantity for the hardy Texas weed.

The two Hasaniya tribesmen are enthusiastic about the very first reforestation effort ever made at Wadi El Khliella, which has been a declining habitat for perhaps several thousand years until today. Their activities have galvanized the community so that other Hasaniya are planting mesquite trees. It is being tenderly nurtured.

Green Deserts personnel in Britain hope this ultimately will result in newly developed mesquite forests in an area that has been largely destroyed by man and his domestic animals over the last several thousand years. The perception here is that a weed from Texas, mesquite, can be their salvation.

If mesquite, a hated Texas weed tree, can be made a boon in starving Third World regions, then perhaps Casuarina can be so regarded. After all, there are 80 species of these vigorous trees and shrubs. Here on Sanibel we have seen two exceptionally viable forms. Just look at Above: Root nodules of a Sanibel Australian pine tree. A bacteria-like organism called Frankia infects the root hairs and triggers the growth of nodules that form large masses. Frankia fixes free atmospheric nitrogen to make the Australian pine a self-sufficient nitrogen fertilizer manufacturer.

Below: Proteoid root mat of a Sanibel Australian pine. Such mats increase root surface exponentially and facilitate uptake of minerals and trace elements. Tree growth can be doubled by proteoid root mats.

those great trees on Periwinkle Way and at the closed tunnel of trees on Walfert Road for examples of each of them.

Among the 80 species of Casuarina are some for each conceivable habitat where reforestation might be needed to save a culture or to feed a hungry population. Let me roam for a minute among members of this group and touch upon a few examples to illustrate my point.

The desert sheak, Casuarina decasneana grows in that over-heated central caldron of Australia, where little moisture is available for plant growth. Temperatures up to 120 degrees Fahrenheit are easily tolerated in the summer, when the temperature seldom falls below 95 degrees. In winter it freezes. Rainfall — yearly rainfall — might be as little as an inch and a half. Great years have total rains that might not add up to three inches. This tree grows well on poor sandy soils sans nutrients except for those provided by the plant itself. What a marvelous plant to employ to green the Sahel.

The granite sheak, Casuarina hughiana grows to 30 or 40 feet in size on inland, dry, poor, sandy soils. Its wood is useful. A good shade tree for the Sudan, perhaps?

Shellerbelt sheak, Casuarina campestris, is low (eight or nine feet), very thick and bushy and provides wonderful wind protection. In other crops that might not be able to withstand the full blast of a sand or dust storm: It grows in arid parts of southwest Australia, where yearly rainfall can be as little as eight inches and is seldom more than twice that. Perhaps it will do as well as mesquite in the Sudan.

The noble sheak, Casuarina nobilis, native to New Guinea, grows to a height of almost 100 feet. The Philippine mountain sheak, Casuarina rumphiana can be found in mountain rain forest habitats of the Philippines, Sumatra, Burma, Borneo and the Celebes.

Hull oak, Casuarina luehmannii, is salt-tolerant and grows to 60 or 70 feet. It might well prove useful in the saltated regions of India and Pakistan as a candidate for reforestation in the areas destroyed by salt from irrigation.

Other Casuarina species grow in damp humid tropical zones with much rainfall. Still others are adapted to hot, dry summers and wet, cold winters. Some withstand altitudes to several thousand feet and are tolerant of frost.

Casuarinas — trees for all seasons. Once upon a time I found a great stocky, well-grown, 50-foot Casuarina of unknown variety halfway up the north coast of Portugal at the ancient codfishing port of Nazare. It was the only tree in town. This strange tree withstood the cold blast of the North Atlantic each year with obvious success. Its seed cones were huge — the size of ping pong balls.

The most valuable attributes of the Casuarinas should not be new to me, for I have noted peculiar looking nodules on the roots of Casuarina equisetifolia, the rangy one that grows on our beach dunes and on Periwinkle Way. I should have had a clue, but I had to learn of this from others: Casuarinas can, with the aid of another organism, actually "fix" nitrogen much as do legumes with their rhizobium, symbiotic bacterial associates. Nodules or swellings on Casuarina roots result from infection of root hairs by a micro-organism called frankia, an actinomycete life form something like a bacterium. This tiny organism has the ability to receive atmospheric nitrogen, combine ("fix it") it chemically with water (oxygen and hydrogen) and make this nutrition available to the Casuarina host.

When the Casuarina drops litter, this nutrition enters the soil and becomes available to other plants that do not have nitrogen-fixing abilities. Thus Casuarina benefits the habitat substantially.

A study in Senegal, West Africa, showed that in a shore plantation of Casuarina equisetifolia, up to 50 pounds of nitrogen is added to an acre of dune sand per year. One must believe the same to be true on Sanibel. (See drawing of root nodules.)

Two mycorrhizal fungi symbionts also live in the root system of Casuarina. They facilitate the ability of the trees to pick up some trace elements and phosphorus.

Yet one more group of symbiotic organisms is at work in the Casuarina roots. Unidentified microscopic organisms — quite a community of them — somehow interact with the roots producing dense mats of "proteoid roots" which are reticulated growth masses of small roots offering great surface area for enhanced mineral and nutrient absorption.

So a whole raft of micro-organisms combine forces to help Casuarinas grow vigorously on

CROW ensures happy ending for gunshot-wounded bird

injured New Jersey osprey released on Sanibel to catch up with friends who already migrated

By David Dugan

Jersey the osprey had a little help on her migratory trek from the north this year. While most of her friends used their wings for a few days, Jersey made the trip via Eastern Airlines. Although it wasn't first class, she did have a carpeted cage with a view of the baggage compartment.

Though it was a happy day last week when Jersey finally was released from the Care and Rehabilitation of Wildlife hospital, the story behind her trip to Florida was not.

Holly Davies, chief of admissions and administration for CROW, said the bird was sent down by Leonard Scouy of the Taylor Trust in Milington, N.J. Davies said the osprey was wounded Sept. 18 by a single gunshot wound that passed directly through its sternum. It spent the next two months recuperating in New Jersey and was sent to CROW last month so it could be set free and catch up with other ospreys that had already migrated.

Until last Thursday, the bird was kept at CROW headquarters on Sanibel. But after a little confusion and a brief encounter with a parked car, Jersey the osprey flew off to meet her feathered friends.

CROW staffer Laura Schuchard holds the cage open so Jersey can fly to freedom. More photos by David Dugan, next page.

Left: Seconds after she left her protective cage, Jersey slammed into a nearby parked car. Her talons were stuck for a few seconds in the vinyl roof but she was not injured. November visitation tops 51,100 people

John Sims, Darling Island

In November 51,177 people visited the wildlife refuge on Sanibel. More than 7,100 toured the Visitor Center at the entrance to the Wildlife Drive. And Ron Hight, refuge manager, says December visitation is expected to be even higher.

The Visitor Center is open from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. The center will be closed on Christmas Day and New Year's Day. The facilities at Tarpon Bay Marina, including canoe rental, will also be closed on Christmas Day. All other refuge activities are open daily year-round from sunrise to sunset.

At 11 a.m. Saturday, Dec. 14, a 75-minute film titled Galapagos: The Enchanted Islands will be shown at the Visitor Center. The program looks at the unique wildlife species that are found on the volcanic Galapagos Islands.

People with questions about the films, fees, or other refuge services and facilities should call 472-1100 during normal business hours.

Driving under the influence

Officers are trained in state-of-the-art field sobriety test in time for the holidays

By Cindy Chalmers

With the holiday party season in full swing, Sanibel police expect the usual increase in intoxicated drivers. But this year officers who stop suspected DUIs have a new tool to help them determine when an arrest is appropriate.

It's the state of the art in field sobriety tests, one that surpasses the alphabet, the heel-to-toe straight line and the index-finger-to-nose tests.

It's called the nystagmus test, and officers trained in its application can tell when even the most practiced drunk driver is under the influence.

A "practiced drunk driver," Sgt. Betty Weir explains, is one who has mastered the standard field sobriety tests and has become adept at hiding the effects of alcohol in the face of blue flashing lights and a uniform.

But practiced drunks cannot out-fox the nystagmus test because it involves a reflex that simply cannot be practiced or controlled, Weir says.

The test measures a movement of the eyes as the subject gazes sideways. Virtually everyone's eyes begin a distinct jerking movement as they move to the side. But with people who are drunk, that jerking begins much earlier in the sideways gaze, Weir says. And it follows suit that the more intoxicated the subject is, the sooner his eyes begin to jerk.

Learning how to detect the nystagmus movement was a large part of an 80-hour course Weir recently completed at the Southwest Florida Police Academy. The course was directed by the Institute of Police Traffic Management/University of South Florida.

The nystagmus theory and test were developed by a sergeant with the Los Angeles Police Department. It has been upheld in several high court challenges as a viable field test for intoxicated drivers.

Weir has shared her training with every Sanibel officer who is on the road. And she firmly believes those officers now are better able to judge when a DUI arrest should be made.

"The police officer is the key to the entire DUI enforcement effort," she says. "It is only when an officer chooses to arrest for DUI that he is participating in the solution of a serious problem." To effect a reduction in alcohol-related traffic accidents, she adds, police officers must make good field decisions. And the nystagmus test can be of great help in that area.

Before an officer has the opportunity to use the nystagmus test, however, he first must pull over the driver. The main things officers watch for, Weir says, are:

- Foot on and off the brake pedal
- Very wide turns
- Headlights off
- Tailgating
- Driving over or very close to the center line
- Driving way above or way below the speed limit
- Face very close to the windshield

One of the above or any combination of the signs tells an officer the driver probably is impaired,

Sobriety statistics

• In the United States 26,000 men, women and children are killed every year in alcohol-related car accidents; 500 are killed each week; 73 every day.

• The United States has the highest number of alcohol-related fatalities per capita of any nation in the world.

• Drinking drivers cost the American taxpayer about $6 billion every year.

• Between 7 p.m. and 3 a.m. every weekend, one of every 10 drivers is legally drunk.

• Of every 2,000 drunk drivers, only one is arrested.

A typical Sanibel drunk driver? There's no such thing

By Cindy Chalmers

A profile of the typical Sanibel drunk driver is difficult to compile. Although most of the 24 drivers involved in DUI arrests and intoxalyzer tests during the past year have been men, the island has had its share of women offenders, too.

"They range in age from 17 to 66. They have been stopped during virtually every hour of the day. During one four-week stretch in September and October five DUI's ranged from 8:50 a.m. right around the clock to 4:01 a.m. On the intoxalyzer they have blown from 37 percent blood alcohol content to 25 percent. ("We didn't know whether to take that one to jail or to the hospital first," Sgt. Betty Weir says. "That's when you start worrying about respiratory arrest.") In 44 states, including Florida, a blood alcohol content of .10 percent is considered the standard for being legally drunk.

Perhaps the most popular spot for police to stop drunk drivers is along Sanibel-Captiva Road, particularly after the Captiva Bars close at 2 a.m. and drivers head back down to Sanibel. The same holds true on the Causeway, and the eastern end of Periwinkle Way around the same time, about 1 1/2 after 2 a.m., when the mainland bars have closed and islanders are arriving home. Weir estimates that at least 75 percent of the single-car accidents on the islands are alcohol-related, but she also believes the SPD should be proud of its record of apprehending many DUI's before the accidents can happen. "People know the night shift is out there," she says.

These are the signs officers look for

The main things officers watch for on the road for clues that a driver might be intoxicated are:

- Foot on and off the brake pedal
- Very wide turns
- Headlights off
- Tailgating
- Driving over or very close to the center line
- Driving way above or way below the speed limit
- Face very close to the windshield

Weir says.

Once the original decision to stop the car is made, then the nystagmus test comes into play. He might be able to count "one-one hundred, two-one hundred, three-one hundred" all the way to 30 while standing with one foot elevated six inches, but Weir says no drunk driver will be able to follow a slowly moving object smoothly with his eyes without moving his head.

And once an officer is proficient in the nystagmus test, Weir says, he can even predict with near accuracy how the subject will "blow" on the intoxalyzer.

The intoxalyzer is the computer at police headquarters that measures blood alcohol content when the subject breathes into a tube. The SPD has had its intoxalyzer for nearly a year. The machine helps uphold the validity of an officer's arrest and makes a DUI conviction more likely.

But the intoxalyzer is useless unless the officer brings a drunk driver to the station. And now, with the technique of the nystagmus test on their side, Sanibel officers are more confident than ever about bringing offenders in.

ON THE WATER

By Captain Mike Fuery

Have you ever had a big jack attack? It's one of the most exciting fishing experiences you'll ever have on a light tackle in Southwest Florida. Here's how it happens.

First jacks — or jack crevallas to some anglers — are not nearly as heavy as their close relative, the amber jack. But once for once, few fish in our waters can match the brute pulling force of a jack.

About this time of year large schools of jacks come in the five- to eight-pound league. Come in the bays, channels and other inland waters, chasing small fish. They particularly like glass minnows, perch and small pinfish.

When a spawning school of jacks attacks a school of these tiny fish, the water turns white in a circle of 50 feet or more. The tugging action is so frantic that the jacks even bite each other. I've caught many fish with marks on the sides. The same holds true for bluefish and particularly for Spanish mackerel. The larger fish get so excited they strike at anything that moves — and that's our ace in the hole.

The best part about having a jack attack is that I can happen at nearly anytime and you don't have to be in a boat. The best jack attack fishing I've ever had was in canals along seawalls. A few years ago my wife and I lived at Mariner Pointe condominiums just east of where the Causeway comes on the island. San Carlos Bay was out front and a deep water canal was behind. Early one late morning we were awakened by the dardest noise. We couldn't figure what it was. It sounded like 100 people with rolled-up newspapers whacking the Dickens out of the water down to our seawall. They suddenly it ended as quickly as it began.

The next morning a tide after sunrise we were taking a walk and the same sound started again — right at our feet as we walked the seawall on the bay. Hundreds of jacks jetted into a mass of terrified little bathfish that were pushed up to the seawall. The sound was unbelievable.

I ran for the condo, grabbed the first rod I could find and got ready to cast. The lure lasted about four strikes. One big jack crashed it and missed with another coming in right behind. The last fish got the works. It was well worth it.

Many people who live on canals can get on this act on but you have to be ready on a jerry because you might only get in one last before the school moves.

While living at Mariner Pointe I fished with an expert plug caster named Row Taylor. He lived near the T-Block there and would fish at every and I mean every chance — lol — during comier calls in his favorite television shows. Taylor was and still is one of the best snook plug casters I've ever fished with. But he hated jacks. He'd be down on the dock casting for snook and force of those big schools of jacks showed up he would leave. Lures get expensive when you're feeding hungry jacks.

Here's my all time favorite jack attack lure. I take a Boone's Da To Special, a top water plug in any color and tie it to about two feet of 40-pound mono leader with black swivel. From that swivel I come back about one foot with another leader and tie to a size 1 yellow jig. The jig gives the outfit weight to cast long distances and out front of the lure it appears that the lure is chasing the jig.

Top water lures are the only outfit for schooling, big jacks. The action is so thrilling that having an underwater lure and not seeing the rapid feeding at the top of the water would spoil the fun.

There is a special trick to getting strikes that you have to cast long and accurately. You want to drop that lure right into the middle of the frenzy or just beyond and bring it back through the pack.

SHELLING TIPS

By Captain Mike Fuery

The moon snails that prowl the shallow waters of the island sound and the Gulf of Mexico are some of the most prolific hunters in the shell world. Let's take a look at this interesting family, the most famous of which is a still many people call a shark's eye.

The lovely shiny grey Atlantic moon snail has many names given by shell collectors over the years. We generally call them shark's eyes although new shellers sometimes mistakenly think the shells have something to do with real sharks. They don't of course but these eye shells have a tiny center that is something I like that of a shark hence the name.

Collectors in Texas have been known to call the same shells 'bull's eyes' and up along the Carol an coasts moon snails are called 'cat's eyes'.

During a particularly low tide just after the full moon this month we had the opportunity to observe some of the largest living shark's eyes I've ever seen.

These snails remain buried in soft sand along the beaches uncovering when they need to seek food to sustain them for a few days. On these very low tide mornings the living shells dig to surface. They do not look like the dead ones you see in collections or on the beach.

These living shells have a massive muscular foot that covers about 90 percent of the shell. To the untrained eye the shell looks like a large cream colored glob — more like a mass of sponge than a shell.

When touched by man the shark's eye quickly tries to stuff all that meaty foot back into its shell and protect itself with a tough door (the operculum).

Moon snails can grow to the size of a tennis ball. They are mostly rounded with a slightly flattened base. The average is more the size of a golf ball. The best of them are grey with the deep blue center eye.

Around here we also have the colorful Atlantic nautilus and the lady's eye which are in the same family and are as valued as the shark's eye.

These rounded shells have a very effective way of feeding as they work the shallows. They love to live upon small bivalves.

You will often find shells particularly sunny Venus camea with a tiny perfectly round hole in one of the valves. That means the clam met its doom by moon snail attack.

The moon snail has two weapons going for it

One is that the shell with large foot is very active and can travel around seeking out and actually excavating clams. Of course this does no mean it can get into the shell.

To reach the interior of the victim shell the shark's eye uses a long hard tooth I like to put a pun a hole in the shell. Then it produces an acid that finishes the job of opening the smaller clam.

Shark's eyes are popular among collectors. The shell is usually shiny and easy to work with in preparing for display. We returned all the living shark's eyes to the deeper waters but we found it most interesting to observe a shell so well adapted for underwater hunting.

Capt. Mike Fuery offers daily shelling trips to North Captiva and Cayo Costa Islands. Call 472-3459 for details.

The most important thing is to work the lure hard and fast. Make that top water plug splash loudly. The Dalton Special is great for this but others will work too.

The cold weather we're finally getting will bring the small bathfish in to protected waters so if you live along a canal or seawall keep a rod rigged and ready for a big jack attack.

ISLANDER SPORTS

By Scott Martell

Sportsmen of the week:

Ron Wrenn and Tom Kaplan

This week's co-Sportsmen of the Week Ron Wrenn and Tom Kaplan have put themselves through the grinder daily, running up to 60 miles a week and occasional 50 to 200 mile marathons. And this Sunday, Dec. 15 all their effort and dedication culminated at the British American Marathon in which the two will race their first 26 mile course.

Both are Sanibel businessmen in their 40s. Wrenn owns Sir of Sanibel at 47th and 10th. Kaplan is the area manager for Ely-Ward.

The men generally are up by 6 a.m. for a run before work. Their schedule has been to run four six to eight six and six miles Monday through Friday. They then take the day off on Saturday before running 20 miles on Sunday.

They will use the run for play, says Becky Kaplan. "But now they are showing incredible dedication — it's like they want to try everything once. They don't appear to be that concerned about their speed in the marathon. But they want to make sure they finish."

Wrenn and Kaplan are the best of luck this Sunday.

South Seas tournament is big success for Big Brothers-Big Sisters program

Some of the biggest names in professional golf helped turn the 1985 7th Annual South Seas Traditional Golf Tournament into a successful fundraiser for the Big Brothers-Big Sisters program last weekend.

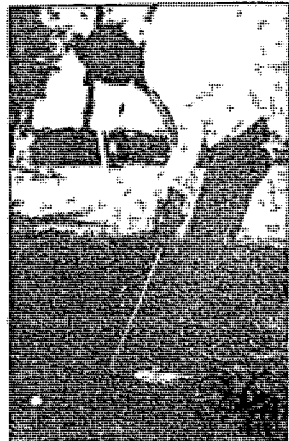

Lou Graham, the former U.S. Open champion and winner of five other PGA events, won the tournament Sunday by shooting in as low as 66 on the par 66. His two rounds of 71 and 66 gave him a 136 total over two days, which was one better than Mark Lester with 69-71-140.

Tom Shaw grabbed third place with 72-70-142. Bobby Nichols and Tommy Aaron tied for fourth with 143. And Johnny Miller and Jerry Heard tied for sixth with 146.

The tournament combined 51 amateurs and 17 top notch professionals.

Local amateurs who did well included John Naumann who won the closest to the pin contest on hole number eight. And Scott Siers a three-man team with Bob Hughes and Walter Preiser grabbed second place in the amateur class.

The professionals who played at South Seas together hold more than 50 PGA tournament wins. They included:
 • Johnnie Miller who has 22 professional tournament wins in club, pro and 1973 U.S. Open.
 • Jack Nicklaus who has six professional wins.

- Bobby Nichols who has 12 tour naments wins including the PGA Championship.
- Tom Shaw who won the Doral Open in 1968.
- Jerry Heard director of golf at South Seas who has five tournament wins.
- Tommy Aaron who won the 1973 Masters championship.

Sports quiz

We all know Sanibel and Captiva have their share of people from Ohio but judging by all the correct guesses in our riddle try a questions last week there must be a good share of westerners here as well.

Nine people guessed the names of four rodeo events and seven also knew where the largest rodeo is held.

Lance Lingo Bill Halvada Jack Reed Ted Saterms Jimmy the Greek Ann Bethune and F.P. Lethane all know bits and pieces of the quiz. They knew that the largest rodeo is the Calgary Exhibition and Stampede at Calgary Alberta, Canada. This rodeo holds the records for attendance with more than 1 million spectators in 1977 and more than 140,000 spectators in one day in 1974.

These seven people along with Pop Murphy and Bill Canning also knew that rodeo events include steer wrestling, calf roping, bull riding, saddle bronc riding and bareback bronco riding.

This week we'll try to stump Islanders with a swimming question. First, The earliest reference to swimming comes from what country?

And second, True or false — a swimming race in the Olympics was once won by the length of a finger nail?

Think you know? Give us a call at 472-5185. We'll ask one or three prizes to everyone who answers both parts of the quiz correctly. The prizes are a subscription to The Islander, a bottle of wine from the B. H. Vine, or a Sanibel Lighthouse Centennial poster by David Mardon.

SPORTS MEDICINE

By Dr. John Collucci, D.O.

In my last article I discussed the importance of being in shape. I presented a simple graph/outline as an approach to exercise and included these three basic guidelines for getting in shape:

1. If you are young with no health problems start with a simple physical exam.
 2. If you are under 40 but have certain risk factors and health problems start with a basic physical exam plus minimal lab tests.
 3. If you are over 40 and health risk factors include you will need a more involved program to ease your way into shape.
- Truth is the word for the day. Don't let to your health. Admit to the four paces a day, smoking, habit, 40 gm of salt a day, excess weight, if red meat diet and the more exercise you get, the more you can do on Sunday. We'll discuss various As this series continues I will discuss various risk factors. This week my topic is cardiovascular disease (CVD) and the aerobic exercise as a way to combat it.

What's in the news today? We read about herpes AIDS and others. But let's not forget about the 40,000,000 people with CVD. This includes hypertension, coronary heart disease, rheumatoid heart disease and strokes.

More than 1 million people die each year from CVD. This can be prevented with common sense — stop smoking, be aware of what you eat, and exercise.

Arteriosclerotic heart disease can be prevented by diet manipulation. We know that by reducing blood lipids (fats) we can decrease body cholesterol. By simply decreasing your total cholesterol by 25 percent, the risk of heart disease could be decreased by 50 percent.

One of the main aspects of fitness today is the aerobic exercise. If approached intelligently this could be the best thing to hit America in a long time. So what can aerobics do for you?

- It can decrease cardiovascular disease by decreasing blood cholesterol (mainly low-density lipoproteins, low cholesterol) and by increasing high-density good cholesterol.
- It can help weight control by burning calories and fat. Exercise also has been found to decrease appetite.
- Aerobic exercise can decrease blood pressure and pain which makes less strain on the heart. In fact, the heart can rest between beats.
- It can decrease loss of bone minerals that usually occurs with aging and therefore decrease osteoporosis.
- It can help improve the way we handle stress.
- At it can help create a feeling of well-being. Following regular exercise chemicals are

SPORTS PIGSKIN PICKS

Only rarely does someone win the Pigskin Picks contest with an 8-10 score. But Henry Groh has done it twice this year. Both times he was the only contestant to guess eight for 10 winning games.

Groh is the last person this year to have his name submitted for the Orange Bowl tickets. However, by popular demand we will continue the Pigskin Picks through the bowl games.

Winners will receive free dinners at Morgan's. So keep on playing — the rules remain the same. All you have to do is fill out the accompanying form by circling the teams you think will win. The person who guesses the most winning games correctly wins dinner for two at Morgan's at Sundial resort.

The Game of the Week will decide the winner in the event of a tie for this game fill in your guess for the total points that will be scored. The person closest to the final score wins. Good luck this week!

Circle the team you think will win each game. For the Game of the Week also include your guess of the total points that will be scored in the game.

Dunes men play 'beat the pro'

The Dunes Men's Golf Association seemed to have a pro Pat Flinn's "number in a 'beat the pro' tournament last Wednesday, Dec. 4.

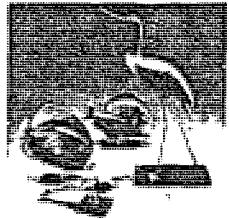

Although Flinn had a fine round of 68, including an eagle on the 454 yard 16th hole, 13 Dunes men using net scores still beat Flinn for 18 holes. Two beat Flinn in the nine hole division.

Flinn's eagle was a beauty. He hit a great drive down the fairway and then hit a five iron shot that landed two feet from the hole.

But despite these dramatics, George Christensen, Jim Manera, Paul Cornelius, Sam Clark, Ed Reed, Bill Ford, Clare Giandon, Wendell Lapp, George Ohlmann, Erik Myers, Earhart Becker, Corky Collins and Bob Maloney all wound up with lower net scores than Flinn.

Joe Vasko with a round of 26 and George Kulvin with a round of 30 beat Flinn's nine-hole score of 32.

released from the brain which, for the lack of a better word makes us high. This might explain why some types of depression are resolved by the positive attitudes people develop about themselves following regular exercise.

Now a word to the wise: Investigate before you participate in aerobics. Aerobic conditioning is not something to be taken lightly and should not be taught by just anybody with a pair of leotards and a record player.

There have been complications and death from untrained instructors and fly-by-night body shops that cannot recognize risk factors or deal with a cardiac emergency.

Certification is the name of the game. As the proliferation of fitness centers becomes a way of life, we need and must set standards for the management of our lives. Although it is not universally accepted or required, I believe, instructors in aerobics should be certified in basic anatomy and physiology and exercise physiology and that they should be able to identify cardiac risk factors and administer CPR.

The "gold" standard, in my opinion, is certification by American College of Sport's Medicine. Other credentials to look for in instructors

- AFAA — Aerobics and Fitness Association of America
- AIAA — American Institute for Aerobic Research
- AFAC — Australian Fitness Accreditation Council
- NSCA — National Strength and Conditioning for Coaches
- MFT — Master Fitness Trainer U.S. Army
- YMCA — Instructors course

In my next column I will conclude my discussion of aerobics and look at other risk factors in fitness smoking. After a few such articles on basic concepts of health and prevention of risk factors, I will examine individual exercise plans, conditioning goals and basic diet concepts.

Dr. John Colucci is a doctor of osteopathy who has practiced on Sanibel and Captiva since 1986. From time to time in this column he will address various aspects of sports medicine and getting or staying in shape.

Readers are invited to ask Colucci specific questions that he can address in future columns. Address your questions to Colucci in care of The Islander, P.O. Box 56, Sanibel 33957.

Over-50 softball men lose by one

Sanibel's over-50 softball team is playing a tight this year. This week they lost with a pitcher in one run. And last week they had the nastiest of losing a game by a run.

Sanibel went up against Beach Overlay Bar last Tuesday night and the Island team was shucked 8-7.

Sam Smith led the Sanibel attack by picking up three singles. Jim Cook burnt a double.

Sanibel now sits with a 3-2 record this year. Last week the team had its second rainout in as many weeks. Tonight the men will compete against Gulficus Thursday. They will face Crowther Roofing.

Dunes women tennis players

The Dunes women are fielding from six to 10 doubles teams in four different divisions.

In the top "A" division the Dunes currently ranks third. In the B division the women field 10 teams and are leading their league. The Dunes B-2 team is also in first place in its league. And the Dunes C-2 team is also making a good showing with a third place tie in its league.
