Chilly weather won't stop shellers

Marilyn Gummerson's first thought was, "There's another darn fragment of a junonia."

But she was wrong. When she dug the shell out of the sand by the Beachview Cottages one recent morning, she uncovered a perfect junonia.

"Finally, after 14 years," the Kansas City, Mo. native sighed.

Gummerson has found many fine shells in those 14 years, but the junonia is already her prize possession. She is an avid shell collector and does much craft work with her finds.

Upper Captiva is apparently the hot Marilyn Gummerson spot for some lucky shellers.

Last week James Tannis, 6, and Elisabeth Tannis, 4, were on a shelling trip with their folks and Capt. Tommy Clifford on the island just north of Captiva.

And lo and behold, two albino whelks stuck their crowns out of the sand for the two youngsters to find. The Lilburn, Ga., family has been shelling for years — since long before the two children were born. But as far as good finds. James and Elisabeth appear to be catching up with their parents in a hurry.

Shelling is a "family affair" for the Salsberry family from Oklahoma. Every year for the past three years, somewhere around 19 members of the family have all ventured to Sanibel for sun and shells.

But Jan Salsberry was the lucky one this year. She found a rare Scotch bonnet along the beach near Sanibel Siesta condominiums.

She has found one Scotch bonnet before — about six or seven years ago in the Bahamas. The Tulsa, Okla., native has found some nice shells on Sanibel and adjacent islands, but counts the latest Scotch bonnet as her best find. Perhaps the shell bucket she received for Christmas helped her

Scientists say fossilized bone found on Sanibel could be 1 million years old

A two-foot-long fossilized bone fragment from an extinct Pleistocene elephant possibly 1 million years old is the latest acquistion of the city's Island Historical

The specimen, identified by Dr. Gary Morgan of the Florida State Museum as "a fragment of the proximal end of the humerus (upper armbone) of either a mammoth or a mastodon," was found by Islander William Compton last spring on the bank of the lake on his property off Wooster Lane.

Compton gave the bone to the city's Historical Preservation Committee for safe keeping in the museum, the former Uncle Clarence Rutland home now restored on the City Hall site.

Island historian Elinore Dormer, a member of the Historical Preservation Committee, thought the specimen was probably a petrified palm branch and said she occasionally used it as a door stop while on duty at the museum.

During a visit to the museum last November, Dr. William Marquardt, an archaeologist with the University of Florida Institute of Archaeology and Paleoenvironmental Studies, spied the speciman and his interest was sparked.

Marquardt suspected the fossil might be of prehistoric origin. He asked permission to take the fragment to Gainesville for Morgan to examine.

In a letter to Dormer last week Marquardt confirmed that Morgan had identified the bone as a relic of the Oligocene or Pleistocen epochs and could be anywhere from 10,000 to 1,000,000 years old. Both the mastodon and the mammoth of those periods were large, elephant-like mammals having conical projections on their molar teeth (see accompanying drawing of a mastodon).

The bone fragment wil be on display at the museum later this month, Dormer said. Marquardt said if any more fossils come to light

Morgan will be happy to examine them. The museum is open to the public from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Thursday and Saturday. There is no admission

OMMENTARY

Thanks for giving us a piece of your mind through your letters

In the first issue of every new year, we at The Islander like to thank everyone who helped make our Commentary page more lively and interesting during the previous year by sending us letters.

In 1985 we received more letters than ever before. 218 readers from around the United States and Canada registered their pleasure and displeasure, their support and their criticisms concerning a variety of issues confronting the Island community.

The subjects of the letters ranged from complaints about photographs we published to heartfelt concern about nuclear war and hunger in the Third World. Nearly a dozen writers were visitors to the Islands who onEDITORIAL ly wished they could stay. One writer was a college junior who resented the "sweeping generalizations" on the part of older Islanders toward students who spend their spring breaks here.

Nine writers praised the Sanibel Police Department for action taken during emergencies and other times of need. One writer lambasted the same department.

Seventeen writers were concerned about a proposed new decal plan for drivers crossing the Causeway; nine complained about traffic on the Island; and nine more passed along their thoughts about the Island's bike path system.

The top three subjects for letters to the editor last year, however, were erosion and the Captiva Erosion Prevention District (25 letters), over-development and commercial regulations (27), and the vacation of Bay Drive Bridge (21).

Because of the following readers, our Commentary page in 1985 was a reflection of what is important to the residents and visitors of Sanibel and Captiva. To you we say thanks for giving us a piece of your

Reader says there is a solution to renourishment controversy

The following letter to the new board members of the Captiva Erosion Prevention District was given to The Islander for publication. Dear Commissioners:

In my 15 years as a Captiva resident, never have I seen or heard such a storm of controversy as that being caused by the issue of beach renourishment.

Since the CEPD board is, by necessity, in the middle of the storm, it is understandable that priorities can become clouded and the paths of action murky. Nevertheless, it is clearly the responsibility of the CEPD to resolve this difficult issue, and to this end let me suggest the following:

Let me suggest that there is, indeed, a way for the CEPD to act that has had a long history of success in these United States. It is called "voting," and in cases of extremely controversial issues, this democratic process allows the issues to be put before constituents and the majority to rule.

Therefore, since beach renourishment is certainly the most controversial issue to have faced Islanders since the Sanibel Causeway. I further suggest that the CEPD now has but one clear priority. That is to devote all of its collective time and energy to the writing of a fair and equitable referendum to renourish or not renourish, and to put this referendum before the voters at the earliest possible time. Not a new idea but then, neither is democracy.

I would further suggest that any other action (or no action) would be irresponsible in the extreme because it would build more dissidence and add to the chaos you are experiencing inside and out of your meetings. Let the people vote, and the storm will abate which way it goes.

A. Laney Lee Captiva and St. Louis, Mo.

Governor appoints Orville Schaeffer to CEPD

By SCOTT MARTELL

Orville Schaeffer, business consultant, resident of Captiva since 1980, and frequent member of the audience at Captiva Erosion Prevention District meetings, has been selected by Gov. Bob Graham to fill the CEPD seat vacated by Dewitt Jones last

The move stabilizes a board that in recent months has gone through an election that seated three new members to the board and then accepted the resignation of Jones shortly after that election.

The seat on the board was also sought by Captivans Helen Kalvin and Ed Olling, who generally oppose beach renourishment, and Mike Cohen, who strongly favors renourishment. Kalvin eliminated herself from consideration about three weeks ago. At that time Schaeffer's name had not been submitted to the governor's appointment secretary.

Schaeffer lives on Wiles Drive on Captiva and is a beachfront homeowner. He assumed his duties as a CEPD commissioner yesterday, Monday, Jan. 6. But he cannot vote on CEPD actions until official forms are filled out and submitted

"My feelings about beach renourishment are the same as Gov. Graham's — I am neither for or against it," Schaeffer said. "I am, however, in favor of fulfilling the CEPD's enabling act, which does give us the duty of designing and constructing beach protection structing beach protection devices." devices. St. Michael's bells toll in memory of Malcolm Beattie

By BARBARA BRUNDAGE

The carillon bell at St. Michael and All Angels Episcopal Church tolled for three minutes Friday morning in memory of Malcolm Beattie, ardent conservationist and civic activist.

Friends and fellow conservationists gathered at St. Michael's at 11 a.m. to pay tribute to Beattie, who died at his Sanibel home Dec. 23, 1985.

Father William Walker, St. Michael's interim priest, officiated at the memorial service.

Beattie, who had lived on Sanibel since 1963, was one of the founders and a former chairman of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. Dr. William Webb, also a former SCCF chairman, delivered the eulogy. Though he had "shared many memorable times with Malcolm, I will not make a personal statement," Webb said. "Instead I will remind us all of Malcolm's contributions to our community and society.'

Webb pointed out that because Beattie was a "very private person - in the original meaning, that is belonging to one's self," he knew very little about Beattie's life before Sanibel

"However, I do know something about his life after he retired to the Island," Webb continued.

"Malcom's mark on Sanibel, Captiva and Southwest Florida is very clear. His modest nature did not result in bronze plaques, but his dedication to the preservation of the environmental integrity of this area was very clear."

Webb cited Beattie's important role in dealing with Lee County officials on the proper zoning for Sanibel, limits on density, and permissable heights of buildings, adding he was one of the prominent citizens who worked for the incorporation of the city of Sanibel

Dr. William Webb In his eulogy To Malcolm Beattie

Short of holding a seance, we can't actually get endorsements from people like Ernest Hemingway, King Henry VIII, or Napoleon Bonaparte. But we're certain Chadwick's would please them in spirit.

After a long day of battling marlin or battling a typewriter, Papa Hemingway would have loved to avoid battling a necktie. So he would have loved Chadwick's, and our fresh seafood, choice meats, decadent desserts, and divine drinks. Because while the atmosphere's rather more sophisticated than an African safari, the dress is almost as casual.

King Henry VIII went through six wives trying to find one who'd give him good food in king-sized portions.

With the consequences of displeasing someone like him in mind, we created Chadwick's all-you-can-eat buffets.

Polynesian Paradise on Tuesday. Seafood Delight on Friday. Champagne Brunch on Sunday. And bountiful lunches

Henry probably would have proposed to the cook.

Gently persuading reluctant principalities to join the empire doesn't leave a general much time to catch a quick bite. Which is why Napoleon is traditionally portrayed with a hand inside his coat, massaging his growling stomach.

If only he were around for Chadwick's dinner specials. Prime Rib and King Crab Duo on Monday. Stuffed Florida Grouper on Wednesday. Jamaican Chicken on Thursday. And New York Strip Steak on Saturday.

Plus a special menu for other hardto-please little people. Your kids.

Tuesday, January 7, 1986

All at prices so reasonable you can afford to feed an army.

We heartily endorse a visit to Chadwick's in the near future.

As would a couple of history's

"when it became evident that the board of County Commissioners was dedicated to full-scale development not preservation."

Beattie was one of the persons who worked for the creation of the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge, which he saw as a way to preserve an area of outstanding natural beauty, Webb said. "He was one of those far-sighted persons who saw the need for a local conservation organization that would be concerned with preservation of other natural areas of Sanibel, Captiva, Pine Island Sound, San Carlos Bay and the waters of the Gulf of Mexico," he said.

Webb called Beattie "a tower of strength" at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation. Beattie headed the foundation's land acquisition work until a a year ago. The SCCF now owns and protects about 900 acres of wetlands, which Webb said was "a tribute to Malcolm."

In recognition of this work the SCCF board in 1984 named its land holdings in the Sanibel Gardens area the Malcolm B. Beattie Preserve.

A few months ago the SCCF named Beattie a trustee emeritus — the first time such an award had been given for outstanding service.

He was active in working with other citizens to study aspects of the natural environment of Sanibel and to employ environmental experts to study geology, hydrology, soils and the ecology of vegetation and wildlife that were used as the scientific basis for the Comprehensive Land Use Plan.

"Malcolm retained a wide interest in community affairs. Involved with the city of Sanibel, he served on several important committees and helped guide the affairs of our fledgling community with his gentle wisdom.

"Malcolm Beattie has indeed played a major role in our community. He is missed," Webb concluded.

Beattie is survived by his wife, Sarah; two sons, Peter and Edward; five grandchildren, including Barbara Johnson of Sanibel; and several great crawled along Periwinkle Way all day last Monday, Dec. 30, 1985, when 9,423 cars crossed the Sanibel Causeway.

This traffic count set an all-time record, topping the previous high of 9,355 cars set at the height of the 1985 winter season last March 18. On the mainland Dec. 30 cars were also backed up on Summerlin Road as motorists waited to go through the toll booth. On New Year's Day traffic dropped off dramatically, with only 5,916 cars coming onto the Island, toll Captain Leonard Bergstrand said. This marks the start of the traditional two-week lull before the seasonal increase in traffic begins the end of January, he Bergstrant said typically there is a steady rise in the volume of Causeway traffic until it peaks just before Easter, which falls early this year on March 30.

Sanibel city officials, concerned at the portent for March from record-breaking traffic this early in the year, are looking for ways to route traffic off the Island more ef-clusive. Butler said, because the Periwinkle Way between Tarpon Bumper-to-bumper traffic Bay Road and Casa Ybel Road.

When traffic flow indicates that Periwinkle Way eastbound traffic is being blocked between these two points, off-Island motorists will be directed to West Gulf Drive and the Middle Gulf Drive connector to Lindgren Boulevard.

Traffic control personnel will be stationed at the intersection of Sanibel-Captiva Road, Tarpon Bay Road and Palm Ridge Road and also at the Periwinkle Way and West Gulf Drive intersections with Tarpon Bay Road (see map) to direct motorists along the back route, Police Chief John Butler

explained.

Traffic personnel will control turning onto Periwinkle Way from Casa Ybel Road and Lindgren Boulevard. Police tried out this pattern for the first time Dec. 31. But its success was not confectively by reducing the glut on crunch on New Year's Eve was not as critical as the day before, with almost 900 fewer cars crossing the Causeway.

Butler said he expected objections to this traffic pattern from Palm Ridge Road businesses who might charge the city is preventing their customers easy access.

But he pointed out that motorists rerouted on Tarpon Bay Road could reach Palm Ridge Road via Gumbo Limbo Road or Florence

City Manager Gary Price stressed that this traffic pattern is experimental and will be put into effect only when the traffic flow indicates Periwinkle Way is being blocked eastbound from Tarpon Bay Road to Casa Ybel Road.

The pattern will facilitate a faster getaway for visitors wanting to go off-Island, he said.

Local traffic will not be restricted, and a reduction in the volume along Periwnikle Way will permit easier access from private drives and other city streets, he added.

Many Island residents already use this route to by-pass Periwinkle Way during peak traffic hours, he said.

Small Business Administration

This week the U.S. Small Business Administration answers the following question:

"I am a small business owner. An insurance agent recently suggested I obtain business life insurance for myself on behalf of my company. Is this a worthwhile expense?"

Business life insurance provides protection for the owner-manager of a small business. When an ownermanager dies, this type of insurance can provide a financial cushion for his or her family and

When the life savings of an owner-manager are invested in a small business, what happens when he or she dies? Does the business close? Does the family have to stand by and watch those savings go down

You can protect your business and family with business life insurance. Make sure the insurance covers every aspect of your business.

Business life insurance can be written for numerous specific purposes. Chief among these are: a sole-proprietorship insurance plan to provide for maintenance of a business upon the death of the sole-proprietor; a partnership insurance plan to retire your partner's interest at death, and vice versa; a corporation insurance plan to retire your shareholder's interest at death or vice versa; key employee protection to prevent a setback that develops from the loss of a vital employee.

Once an owner-manager has set up an insurance program for his or her business, it should be checked periodically. Your agent or broker can provide technical advice about the arrangement of policies.

Seven simple steps can make filing your taxes less of a headache

By April 15 approximately 97 million Americans are expected to settle their debts with the American government. Undoubtedly it will cause tens of millions of headaches.

tidote. Taxpayers can design a plan to Don't expect to organize all of your taxmake filing easier. Although every individual's return poses a unique set of tax circumstances, there are some steps every taxpayer can take to make filing less of a headache.

According to the Florida Institute of CPAs, the following seven steps will help make filing easier if you prepare your own return or if — as 45 percent of all taxpayers do — you get professional help with filing your return.

• 1. Know if you will itemize deductions. Itemizing allows you to lower your tax bill. Specifically, it allows you to subtract from income amounts spent on medical and dental care, state and local taxes, charitable contributions. loan interest payments and certain job and investment expenses.

Items you subtract from income are called deductions. If you are single you should itemize when you have more than $2,390 in deductions. If you are married and file a joint return, itemize when your deductions total more than taxes withheld. At the same time the $3,540.

•2. Use last year's return as a guide. Examining your 1984 tax return IRS processes your tax return it matthat was filed a year ago can help pre-ches your return with the information vent you from overlooking certain items. See what deductions you claim- IRS questioned about 4 million taxed and whether you will claim them payers about discrepancies between again this year. Have you received intheir information form and return. terest and other investment income in 1985? A guick check of Schedule B from last year will remind you of interest and other income you can expect to report this year.

• 3. Organize tax-related receipts. Depending on how organized your records are, you will need to set aside an hour or two to collect and examine Aspirin, however, is not the best an-receipts from tax-related transactions. related documents on the same day you prepare your return or meet with your CPA. Make this a separate task.

Give some thought to your expenses for 1985 that might have been taxdeductible. Did you pay interest on credit card purchases or store important financial documents in a safe deposit box? Perhaps you bought new tools for your job.

Assemble proof of all deductions you plan to claim. Taking the time to leaf through old checkbooks and receipts might remind you of other taxdeductible expenses that are otherwise easily overlooked.

•4. Assemble information forms. Information forms are sent to taxpayers by employers, banks and other financial organizations that pay interest or dividends, government agencies and certain other "payers." The most common information form is the Form W-2, the report of wages and payers send you an information return they mail a copy to the IRS. When the provided by the payers. Last year the

5. Know how the rules affect you.

This is probably the toughest part of filing. Perhaps the best way to find out about tax rules is to ask the IRS for Publication 17, "Your Federal Income Tax." It explains tax rules in a straightforward manner. Use the index in the back of the book to find explanations of rules you think pertain to you.

6. Get the right IRS forms. There are three forms from which you must choose. The 1040EZ is the easiest to fill out. It is for single persons with no dependents and less than $50,000 of taxable income. Those 65 or older should not use this form because it does not allow you to take the senior citizen exemption. The only deduction you can claim on the EZ form is for charitable contributions.

The 1040A Short Form must also be used only by those with incomes under $50,000. But it allows you to claim certain deductions and credits you cannot claim on the 1040EZ. You can claim the extra exemption for age on the 1040A. as well as deductions for IRA contributions, charitable donations and the special deduction for working married

The 1040 Form, also called the long form, must be used by anyone with $50,000 or more taxable income. In addition, IRS rules cite 22 other specific circumstances in which taxpayers are required to file Form 1040. The circumstances range from reporting foreign earned income to claiming a tax credit for the elderly or disabled. These complicated tax situations have spawned dozens of "attachments," which are forms that must be filed with your 1040 to explain specific tax circumstances to the IRS.

The most common reason for using the 1040 is to itemize deductions, report self-employment income and report taxable Social Security benefits.

7. A last resort. As a last resort you might want to ask the IRS for a fourmonth extension on filing. Do so by filing Form 4868. Even if you file for an extension, you face a penalty if least 90 percent of your 1985 tax liability is not paid by April 15. And you will also be required to pay interest on any taxes

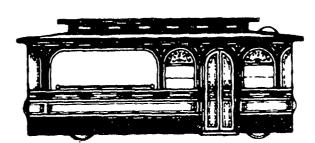

Forms, publications can help with taxes

It's time again to think about taxes, and the Internal Revenue Service has once again supplied the Sanibel Public Library with selected forms and publications to help patrons prepare their 1985 tax returns.

"Publication 17 - Your Federal Income Tax, and Publication 334 - Tax Guide for Small Business, can be checked out for two-week periods.

Single sheet forms are available for the most used forms: 1040EZ, 1040, Schedules A and B, and 1040W. The library also has a loose-leaf book of master sheets for making photocopies of other forms. Ask the volunteer at the desk for any of these materials,

Pro-renourishment Captivan says governor 'has done it again'

To the Editor

the Islander

The appointment of Orville Schaeffer to the board of the Captiva Erosion Prevention District is another knife in the back of the overwhelming majority (68.4 percent at last count) of Captiva property owners who support the beach renourishment project. Our beloved governor has done it again. Let's look at the record.

In recent years Gov. Bob Graham has appointed Peg Hofschneider, Ed Olling and Charles Bruning to the CEPD board - all vocal antirenourishment people. To top this off, he now gives us Orville Schaeffer, perhaps the most virulent antirenourishment person on Captiva

This was a sneak appointment. Mike Cohen and Ed Olling had petitioned for this job and the governor's office asked us for input. He chose to ignore our input and came up with Orville Schaeffer — a boiler-room political appointment at best.

Now where do we stand? Until recently the CEPD had a 3-2 prorenourishment majority. The CEPD had a credible record then of listening to the public. It bent over backwards to listen to the objections of Captivans to the beach renourishment plan and then acted upon them. For the record:

1. We told the state and federal governments that we would not accept renourishment funds that were contingent on additional beach access and parking on Captiva Island.

2. We told Lee County we wanted a new restrictive parking ordinance so Captiva would not be overrun by traffic that might be attracted by the new beach. This has been done.

3. We told Lee County we wanted a new zoning ordinance to reduce multiple dwelling density from six to three units per acre, thereby reducing building pressure resulting possibly from a new beach. This has been done.

4. We monitored the renourishment project at South Seas Plantation for several years to see how it would hold up. It has been an unqualified success.

5. We told the state and Sanibel Island we wanted to build a long groin at Blind Pass to retain the sand on our new beach. The permits and money for this project are on hand.

6. We told South Seas Plantation they should make a major contribution to the beach renourishment project. They have agreed to support a project that would assess them in excess of $1

7. We told Lee County they should also make a substantial contribution to the cost of the renourishment project, and they have agreed to contribute $1 million out of surplus Causeway funds.

8. We further made provisions to assess Lee County $600,000 to take care of its share of protecting our public highway — the area between the S curve and the old Post Office.

9. We drew up an economic apportionment plan that would assess more than 90 percent of the amount to be assessed against private property owners to gulf-front property owners. 10. We created a special community service district to include the Captiva

Civic Association, cemetery and church properties so they would receive a reduced assessment. 11. We conducted two traffic surveys in order to get an accurate count of traffic on Captiva. As a result of the surveys the CEPD increased the assessments to be levied against commercial properties, thereby reducing private property assessments.

12. The CEPD conducted a poll of all property owners on Captiva in order to determine the extent of their support for the renourishment plan. More than 80 percent participated in this poll, which showed a 68.4 percent prorenourishment majority.

services to come up with an economic apportionment plan that would satisfy its legislative mandate and yet be fair

This was the record of the prorenourishment majority serving on the board of the CEPD. At no time did it use its voting strength to implement the renourishment plan without first receiving and acting upon input from Captivans from all walks of life. An enormous amount of time and effort as well as more than $600,000 - has been expended in arriving at a renourishment plan that incorporated the wishes of all Captivans. It is now time for the new board of the CEPD to act upon the beach renourishment plan. It must be as fair to the wishes of all as was the old board, otherwise there will be unprecedented turmoil on this Island. It must honor the democratic process and ideal.

We have a beach renourishment plan this is not a plan of just a few, but which represents the ideas of just about everyone on Captiva. Let us not turn this project over to the state of Florida or the federal government - you all know what strings will be attached to a state or federal program. Going to the dogs

Is Florida's big money 'sport' inhumane to man's best friend?

By George Campbell Illustrated by Ann Winterbotham

During the approaching winter "Season" a lot of our fellow citizens will become busily engaged in making lots of bucks milking the Yankee snowbirds. High costs for low values is a way of life in the Florida tourist industry. So it has always been for the half-century I have known this over-exploited peninsula.

I think perhaps the rottenest big money "sport" is greyhound racing. Daily during the season, we are exposed to the litany of the dog and rabbit killers. It goes like this:

"Man runs because he MUST COMPETE."

"The horse runs because he is FORCED TO RUN."
"But the greyhound is BORN TO

There is not much meaty substance to all that facil baloney. When the racing season opened at a South Florida track, a sports writer was there. "I like the dog track; it's a nice place to spend a lazy winter afternoon," he wrote.

It might have been a lazy afternoon for him, but it was a cruel, grueling afternoon for the dogs. And the raw cruelty to the live animals that were used to train the dogs was more than grueling — it was lethal. For the rabbits used to lure the dogs, it meant a slow, painful death.

HOW MAN GETS HIS BEST FRIEND TO RUN LIKE CRAZY

At a dog race two conditioned responses take place when eight flip-front chutes crack open. First, eight greyhounds take off like machines at a furious pace chasing a fake bunny on a mechanical trolley. And second, the crazed crowd of human gambler "sportsmen" leaps to its feet screaming and shrieking for the duration of 31-second race.

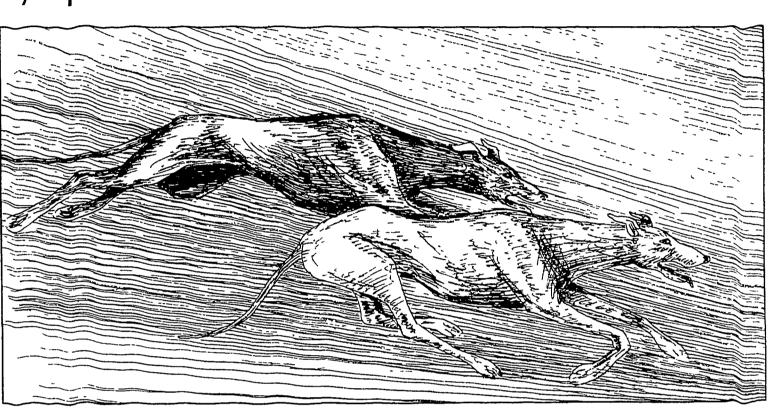

The most of the folks in the crowd subside dejectedly into their seats. These are the losers. A lucky few carry on idiotically all the way to the payoff window. The scene is repeated for each race for the duration of the meet. Big bucks change hands, and with each passing season this shameful "sport" becomes more firmly entrenched in our Florida scene.

Greyhounds are trained on live animals — rabbits and sometimes cats. Young dogs start out often in groups in fenced "coursing" fields. Imported western jack rabbits are released to be run down and torn to pieces by a pack of young learners. The reward is the taste of fresh warm blood.

After coursing in this manner the dogs suffer a personality change. No longer gentle pups, they become savage killers with one thought — a lust for blood.

Often rabbits are not killed during coursing trials. Then the maimed, suffering jacks are used again and again until they are torn to pieces — alive! There are half a hundred greyhound breeding farms and quite a few dog "colleges," as they are called, in Florida. There are many more in Texas and Kansas and a number of other states. One Florida farm keeps about a dozen studs (some of the best are of Australian origin). Stud fees are usually $250 with a litter of six to eight pups guaranteed. The best studs command the best prices. Roman Earle, an Australian import, once the most valued dog in America, cost his owner $32,000. He sired hundreds of racing dogs at $250 per service.

Greyhounds are taught to run like crazy by luring them with live animals, usually rabbits, all of which die awful, sometimes prolonged deaths.

Yellow Printer, who came to Florida from Ireland, once commanded a $400 stud fee, the highest recorded.

When the pups are a couple of months old the sexes are separated and for about a year they lead a happy life in huge runs hundreds of feet long. During this period they receive the best of food and sophisticated medical care. Parasites are non-existent; grooming takes place daily. And lots of dollars are spent on them.

At the end of a year intense training begins, first in the coursing runs where groups of dogs are lured by wild jack rabbits. The reward is the taste of hot blood. Later, training tracks are employed where the dogs race after live lures — rabbits or sometimes cats — tied on to the mechanical lure trolley from which they dangle head down. The trainer can regulate the speed of the trolley to suit the capabilities of the trainees.

It is now that the most cruel treatment of the live lure, rabbit or cat, is meted out. Usually the live lure survives longer and can be sped around on the trolley over and over, with the crazed dogs trailing after it and getting occasional rewarding tastes of fresh blood.

Some training tracks simulate race tracks even to the bright lights and, in Australia at least, taped crowd roars are broadcast over a loud public address system. Then when serious racing begins, the dogs are already conditioned to the stress, lights and crowd sounds of the real race track.

One might conclude that the only cruelty is to the live lure animals, but that is not so. That ancient breed, the gentle greyhound, is turned into a blood-thirsty killer, slavering after hot blood. The rigorous training often results in an enlarged heart, leading to a short life. Injuries to the dogs are often sustained. Losers have been known to be killed on the spot by an angry owner.

One such dog, stabbed by his furious owner, was rescued from the track by a nearby Humane Society. Surgery was performed, the dog lived and eventually was adopted by an Island family where he lived for five years, a much-loved, appreciative and gentle pet. So it is not true that dogs with racing experience can't make good pets. With care and understanding they sometimes do revert to their natural amenable behavior pattern.

It costs between $800 and $1,200 to get a pup through his first year. Then the four-month coursing and training period can add another $600. Some dogs are then ready to race.

But with costs like that, owners are quick to detect faults — slow starters, slow learners, timid or injured animals and others that skilled, money-wise trainers and owners recognize to be doubtful or poor investments. These are "eliminated." Eliminated in the simplest terms means killed.

In Florida alone 1,000 such animals are snuffed out yearly. Only a few of the thousands bred throughout the United States even become big earners on the race track.

But dog racing is big business. About 20 million people bet more than a billion dollars a year on the dogs in this country. There are many dog tracks in a dozen or more states around the country. A total of about 50,000 racing dogs are on farms, at training colleges or at tracks at any one time.

Many states, recognizing the base cruelty of dog racing, do not permit this activity. It is sad that Florida is one of the biggest markets for this dishonorable "sport."

If you feel, as I do, that man should treat his fellow creatures with whom he shares this planet in a more decent and humane fashion, perhaps you will join the effort to put a halt to dog racing. Short of complete success, at least let us try to stop the use of live lures in greyhound training.

Live lure training is not a necessary part of dog racing. Dog racing is very popular in Australia — but the use of live lures is a criminal offense there. The Aussies have proved that live lure cruelty is not necessary to sustain the earning power of the race track.

Please write to state Sen. Frank Mann and ask for his help in cleaning up the cruel practices employed in the Florida dog racing industry. Maybe he will make this issue an important part of his gubernatorial campaign.

Island birds are focus of lan. 9 Audubon show

The roving eye and camera lens of Al Milliken have fashioned a new program titled "Wander and Wonder" for the Sanibel-Captiva Audubon Society's public entertainment program at 8 p.m. this Thursday, Jan. 9, at the Sanibel Community Association.

Milliken's Audubon show, emphasizing birds of the Islands, will be presented in two 20-minute segments. James Walsh will handle the mechanics of the presentation because Milliken himself cannot attend Thursday's meeting.

There is no admission charge for the Audubon lectures, but contributions toward program costs are gratefully received. Earnings from the society's activities are contributed to the land acquisition program of the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation.

Tuesday at the Center programs begin this week with Everglades lecture

The mistakes made 100 years ago affecting Florida's Everglades are still being made today, according to Jan Michael Jacobson, director of the Everglades National Park

Jacobson will speak about these problems and show slides of the Everglades in the season's first Tuesday at the Center program at 2 p.m. today at the Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation off Sanibel-Captiva Road. Jacobson's lecture and slide presentation is called "Everglades Ecology: Fact, Fantasy and Politics." His thesis is that scientific factfinding has not been the basis for decisions about the Everglades, but that most decisions have been politically motivated. For more information call the SCCF. 472-2329.

Training sessions set for new refuge rovers and other volunteers

At 1 p.m. this Friday, Jan. 10, refuge staffers will conduct a car caravan tour along the Wildlife Drive beginning at the Visitor Center. Participants should bring binoculars and should plan on spending about 1½ hours on the drive.

The refuge staff will offer orientation for all people interested in volunteering at the refuge in any capacity at 10 a.m. next Wednesday, Jan. 15. The session will be over by noon.

Also on Wednesday, Jan. 15, refuge volunteers and their families and friends are invited too meet in the Visitor Center parking lot at 5:30 p.m. This training session will be a discussion of the refuge after dark. A special Halley's Comet watch will take place after the training session. The cloud date is Jan. 22.

Seasonal staffer joins wildlife refuge team will soon get to know the new seasonal staff member at the J.N. "Ding" Darling National Wildlife Refuge.

Her name is Laurie Shore, and among her duties will be establishing interpretative tours and programs for refuge visitors. Tours in the past have included everything from a boat ride around Tarpon Bay to a car caravan along the Wildlife Drive. Shore, 26, is quite knowledgeable about south Florida. The Miami native attended the University of Florida

Many visitors and Islanders and Florida International University. She has a degree in parks and recreation management. Her educational background has come in handy in her professional life. Shore comes to Sanibel directly from the Everglades National Park, where she was also a seasonal employee.

"About five years ago I decided to be a park ranger," she says. "I'm an outdoor type person, and I want to see the nicest parts of the country.'

And the "nicest parts of the country" includes Sanibel, of course.

Bob and Libby Myers of Tennessee and their granddaughter, 3-year-old Rebekah Peterson of Minnesota, picked up a good supply of cans, whiskey bottles and even the sole of a shoe as they walked along the beach at the Tarpon Bay Road public access.

And Wendy McKee of Coral Gables was the first to arrive at The Islander laden with litter collected from Captiva. McKee found her collection as she walked along Captiva Road between 'Tween Waters Inn and the S-curve. She also picked up some scattered trash around the pond beside Bailey's on Sanibel.

Last week's participation in the anti-litter campaign was quite encouraging. The enthusiastic attitudes of Islanders and visitors alike can make a difference.

We invite everyone to bring to our office next to the B-Hive any trash they collect from the Islands' beaches, bike paths and roadsides. We will gladly take your picture for the next week's paper if you make an appointment for Wednesday, Thursday or Friday. First-time participants will receive their choice of an Islander t-shirt or a subscription to the paper for themselves or a friend.

Community Courses instructor hopes to offer students new ways to look at art

By JULIE NIEDENFUER

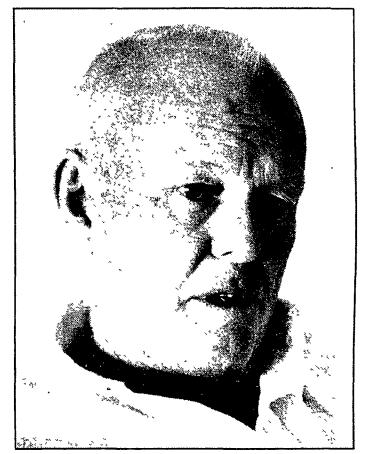

Being a success in the art world requires 3 percent talent and 97 percent hard work.

At least that's what Sanibel resident Sherwood Finley says. And he ought to know. His highly successful 25-year career as a commercial illustrator in New York taught him that philosophy he now so firmly

Using the knowledge he gained in his lifetime as a professional artist. Finley will soon help teach others something about his field. But in the "Looking at Modern Art" class he will teach as part of the Community Courses winter session sponsored by the Sanibel Community Association, students will not learn how to illustrate.

Instead they will learn new ways of looking at modern art. And Finley says the class is as much for those who dislike modern art as it is for those who like it. Perhaps even more. He says he hopes to open a few at and appreciating things.' eyes and, maybe, a few minds.

"There is a lot of interest in modern art and an awful lot of questions about it," says Finley. "We've sorted out art historically — we've learned that we should respect Rembrandt and he doen't require discussion." But there are many modern artists who are either unknown or misunderstood, he says. And that is something he would like to see change.

"I plan to share my likes rather than my dislikes," he says about the class. "I won't provide necessarily the answers, but I will show different ways of looking

Something students might discover, he says, is that a "good" painting is not necessarily one that has all the proper elements and that a "bad" painting can be technically correct.

"At any given moment in your life a picture is good or bad depending on your reaction to it.

"Anything is possible in art, and that's what makes it so fascinating," he says.

Finley did not set out to become an illustrator. In fact, he didn't even major in art in college. He reluctantly admits to possessing a modicum of talent which he says probably sparked his initial interest in the field; but he insists hard work was the key to his

He says the early days — the years before he refined his raw talent — were "interesting." But he persevered, and his work eventually began to sell. And it sold for the next 25 years.

A decade ago he gave up commercial illustration and now paints strictly for his own pleasure. He also dabbles in sculpting and occasionally makes a mobile or two. He calls himself "an experimental guy."

The upcoming Community Courses class is Finley's first, and he looks forward to the experience with "great optimism."

Students will meet in his studio at 909 Gumbo Limbo Lane in Gulf Pines subdivision off Sanibel-Captiva Road. Classes will be held from 1:30 to 3 p.m. Wednesday, Jan. 15, 22, 29, Feb. 5, 12, 19, 26 and March 5. Cost is $24, and a maximum of 12 students will be accepted. Sanibel Public Library buys book about sea life with gift from Shell Club

IN THE REFERENCE ROOM

Within a Rainbow Sea — Christopher Newhart — A superb collection of color prints of underwater plant and animal life with a lyrical prose exposition written by the photographer. Purchase of this book was made possible by a gift from the Sanibel-Captiva Shell Club.

Family and Friends — Anita Brookner — With an artist's eye the author (an authority on 18th and 19th century painting) presents this witty analysis of family relationships and human behavior. The book presents an acerbic view of human nature that is entertaining, refreshing — and all too true.

Be Buried in the Rain — Barbara Michaels — A contemporary Gothic by the author who also writes under the name Elizabeth Peters. The heroine, Julie Newcomb, is spending the summer acting as a companion for her stroke-felled grandmother at her Tidewater plantation. Dr. Alan Petranek, an archaeologist, is trying to solve the mystery of two skeletons found on the property. The story is an eerie blend of romance and suspense.

Mara Simba: The African Lion — Roger Caras — A remarkably dramatic story written by a respected naturalist. The lion's life is followed from cubhood in the pride, through exile as a lone hunter, to the pampered status as leader and protector of his own pride. The lives of the other savannah animals and the plants upon which they all ultimately depend are skillfully woven into the picture.

If you're going to discard deceptively, don't let yourself fall into habits that a clever opponent can read.

Fifty years ago Albert Morehead made a grand slam by reading Hal Sims and Willard Karn, two of the best players of the day who were renowned for their skill and above all for their craftiness.

Morehead took the ace of diamonds, drew trumps with the king and queen, led the queen of diamonds to dummy's king and returned a heart from dummy to his own queen. These plays made it obvious to the defenders that he had no problem except in clubs. It was a cinch that he was missing the queen of clubs since otherwise he would show his hand and claim the slam.

Morehead then led a trump to the ace, waiting to see which opponent would discard a club. When Sims (East) discarded the deuce of clubs (as though he had no club worth guarding), Morehead promptly led dummy's jack of clubs through Sims and let it ride for

SPORTS TALK

By Scott Martell

1985 in review: A good year for Island sports

1985 was a notable year for Island sports. Many major events, such as the PaineWebber Tennis Classic and the South Seas Traditional Golf Classic, entertained us. But so did many other participation sports that didn't always get big ink but had big followings, such as weekly golf tournaments.

The following brief look should remind you of some of the good times Island sportsmen had last year.

• The year started out with a bang as a group of Islanders, mostly senior citizens, signed up for the Red Cross 50-mile swim. Some set out to accomplish 10 miles. Others tried to add up 50 miles. Each set his own pace. Libby Rogers, 66, became the first to reach the 50-mile mark.

 The Suds-Seas Classic was held on Sanibel for the sixth year. The event pitted 16 Michigan ballplayers against some of Sanibel's finest softball players. The Sanibel team wins almost every year, but the Michigan team keeps coming back for more

- sun and beer, that is. The Sanibel Glass men showed they were the best men's basketball team, winning both the regular season and the championship tournament.

 Ivan Lendl defeated Jimmy Connors, 6-3, 6-2, in the final match of the first Sanibel Harbor PaineWebber Tennis Classic at the end of March. Lendl pocketed a $50,000 check for the tournament victory — a win that spiraled him to the top for the men's tennis rankings for most of the year.

•53 men and women turned out for the Third Annual Sanibel-Captiva Conservation Foundation golf benefit in April. Four teams tied in the tournament.

• Larry Paul, Pat Lovetro, Jack Reed and Dave Gibson won the Island Fishing Club's first grouper tournament in May. They hauled in a whooping 143 inches of grouper in a tournament that had a 12-grouper-per-boat limit.

• The Astros in little league action, and the Phillies in girls' softball, captured first place in their leagues in 1985. The Astros finished 16-1, and the Phillies, 7-3.

• The "ancients" on the Naumann team surprised the men's softball league by winning the Old Sports for Youth Sports Tournament that kicked off the men's softball season.

 The Timbers women and the Dunes 86er's men won the No-Seeum Classic in September. Both teams upset regular season winners. West Wind for the men's league, and Cablevision for the women's.

• Islanders thought they might host a Tinman Triathlon in April 1986. But some residents complained about the impact of a national media covered event, and the race was cancelled in December.

• For the second year in a row, Sundial

On New Year's Eve, 44 players turned out for a tournament. Two teams tied for first place. One team was Harvey Gigstad, Don Purcell, Lee Gibson and Ray Howland. The second team was Warren Hyde, Bob Manns, Pat McGuffin and Rudy Bernardi. Both teams shot minus one for the day.

Playing a "low putt" match, the women in the Jim Ketchem blasted a plus 13 on the fairways and 18-hold division finished in a three-way tie for first greens of the Beachview course Dec. 28 to win the place. Laura Cope, Helen Leonard and Martha Kildow all tied for first place with 35 putts.

And in the nine-hole round Billie Tyler grabbed first place with 15 putts. Dot Miller and Peg Wilhoit followed with 16 and 17 putts respectively.

• Corky Collins grabbed sole possession of first place in the 18-hole division of a DUNES MEN'S GOLF ASSOCIATION tournament Jan. 2. He shot a 44 score over 18 holes.

Paul Cornelius and Ed Bowie picked up the second place tie by shooting 42 shots each.

But only Slupica guessed the name of the richest horse race — the All-American Futurity. In this race quarter-horses run a track of more than 440 yards at Ruisoso Downs, New Mexico. The richest first place prize was $437,5000.

• The Sanibel Fire Department also maintained a streak. The firefighters defeated the Sanibel Police Department for the third year in a row in the two departments' annual golf challenge.

• And in the second year of the Pigskin Picks football contest sponsored by The Islander and Morgan's Market, Paul Brundage won the grand prize of two Orange Bowl tickets. Brundage was one of more than 100 Islanders and visitors who played the game in which contestents tried to guess college and professional football game winners and scores. Brundage turned around and donated his tickets to the Sanibel Police Recreation Club, which sponsored a trip to the Orange Bowl for two Cypress Lake High School athletes.

Winter's cooler waters can affect anglers' fishing success

A change in water temperature of only a few degrees will drastically change the success anglers have while fishing in our Island waters.

Right after Christmas the water temperature started to drop as the first really cold weather of the season moved in. Fishing suffered, even though the drop was only about six or seven degrees.

This week let's talk about some theories that could affect your fishing tactics when the water temperature drops.

First, fish are cold-blooded and many become less active when the water goes from the pre-Christmas high 60s to lows around 62 degrees. A change that small doesn't make much of a difference to humans, but it throws fishing for a loop. Many fish simply slow down to the point where they don't have to feed. Snook are famous for this, and it has been one of their near downfalls because greedy anglers can use snatch hooks, nets and even bows and arrows to kill that has barnacles or potential hiding places for a near dormant snook in a cold snap.

I've always been amazed that some fish you can catch during a cold snap are actually cold to the touch. When we were fishing the deeper holes of Bull Bay in Charlotte Harbor on Chrismtas Eve day, we caught several trout that were very cold to the

On the other hand, a few local fish seem to tolerate that very same cold water and even become more active. The hearty sheepshead is a prime example of a cold water fish. When the cold hits, these black and white striped fish take the place of sea trout, redfish and other warm water favorites.

Sheepshead love to live and feed around anything small, hard-shelled crabs. That's why nearly any dock around the Islands has one or two sheepshead hanging around this time of year.

Incidentally, while fishing the shacks in Bull Bay we discovered a couple of interesting things. When we caught a sheepshead the fish seemed cool, but not as cold as the trout seemed to be.

And in the very clear water we could see sheepshead in with schools of mullet under the stilt houses. The sheepshead moved right along with the big mullet, just as if they were a part of the family. Mullet and stripe fish don't compete for the same food, so perhaps many schools of mullet we see this time of year will have a sheepshead or two. That might be worth a cast.

Another fish that doesn't seem to mind the cold that much is the popular flounder. These fish must measure 11 inches to keep. These mild tasting fish are a real favorite with many anglers. Even people who won't eat "fishy" tasting fish love flounder.

Along with sheepshead, flounder move into our waters this time of year. Some think they live offshore in the warmer parts of the year. We do know that sheepshead make "runs" in the winter and spring from the gulf to the inside bays. Many of the larger sheepshead we have caught recently have

We probably haven't seen the last of the cold fronts. January and February are the coldest months on Sanibel and Captiva, and each front will change fishing. Right now, with warmer temperatures of the first week of the New Year, trout fishing has come back very nicely. Offshore some snapper and grouper are showing up.

But if you have to fish in cold weather, sheepshead and flounder might save the day.

New Year's luck leads visiting sheller to three lion's paws

As we start the New Year I want to tell you about few shelling-related items that closed out the old year and some that could lie ahead for 1986. I suppose every sheller has his own idea of what a hanner day might be in shelling. Finding a junonia would be high on most lists, however.

Perhaps you are familiar with another highly valued shell, the lion's paw. This great big scallop is very difficult to find, and even half of the bivalve is considered a prize. In the past two years I've seen

But you know how sheller's luck goes. On one of those really foggy mornings last week I had a young college fellow and his family out with me walking the beach. Are you ready for this? He found three large lion's paws in less than half an hour, and his father found a smaller, perfect one at about the

I've never found paws in that spot before and probably will not ever again. It was a very low tide, and the fog was so thick we couldn't see more than 100 feet. Kind of makes you sick, doesn't it?

I generally don't talk about shell finds because every guide has those good days when they find something really special. But the four lion's paws set record for my boat.

And not long ago I had several woman on a shelling charter who brought a new dimension to modern

I noticed one gal was wearing a radio and suspected that she liked to listen to tapes while she SHELLING walked the beach. I listen to my AM/FM headset myself occasionally when I'm shelling.

But these ladies had gone a step further. They had purchased two-way communications radios. This way, they explained, they could fan out in all directions on the beach and still talk to one another about what they were finding. Of course, if one found a particularly good spot she would call over all the others.

We had split up on a wide beach on Cayo Costa Island, and I had forgotten about the two-way radios when I noticed one lady off by herself, chattering away. I thought, "I've got to keep an eye on that one," before I realized she was conversing with one of her shelling partners.

So what's ahead for 1986? Well, many of us have had our fingers crossed that the Captiva Erosion Prevention District would decide to dredge sand from offshore to renourish the beach. Dredging pulls uploads of interesting shells we don't normally see. But it seems the renourishment plan is on the back burner again. But if they ever do decide to dredge, we'll have a few months of great shelling.

Last year saw the passage of several new laws affecting fishing and shelling. If you have ever stopped at one of those tacky roadside stands that sell seashells, you probably noticed that most of the shells for sale were colorful queen conchs. Years of over-harvesting these shells in the southern part of Florida, particulary in the Keys, has resulted in the passage of a law that makes it illegal to "take, harvest, kill, molest, harm or mutilate" any queen

I don't recall ever finding a queen conch this far north, but you can see from passage of the law that Floridians are becoming more concerned about protecting their natural resources.

Good shelling in the coming year. A few violent cold fronts will stir up those shells and make collecting better for all of us. We should see some of those fronts in the next several weeks.

Capt. Mike Fuery has been showing Sanibel and Captiva residents and visitors the ins and outs of shelling and fishing since 1972. Since 1976 Fuery has operated his charter business from Captiva's 'Tween Waters Marina on his boat, the Grey Pelican. He is the author of Capt. Mike Fuery's Florida Shelling
