The History of the Class of 1922

IN the fall of 1918, a large crowd of sophisticated Freshmen applied for entrance in the Verona High School. After due consideration the faculty decided to admit them. This seemingly unimportant event marked the beginning of the class of '22, and a new era in the high school.

At the first class meeting held we elected the following class officers: President, Paul Lynn; Vice-President, Vera Carell; Secretary, Florence Requa; Treasurer, Frances Staedler.

The first important event which took place in our honor was a hike to the Hemlocks. All the Freshmen participated and we were given the time of our lives.

Pleasure being our main object, it was decided to give the Seniors a dance. It was the first dance in the history of the school at which ice cream, cake, and punch were served, but our hearts were too large for our purses and it took us until the middle of our Sophomore year to pay back the money which Mr. Brown so kindly advanced. Aside from these minor details the dance proved a great success.

One of the most important events of the year was the marriage of Miss Marion Dailey to Mr. Kenneth Rodgers. At the close of the term Mrs. Rogers left school.

At the end of June, after ten months of continual mental study, we were allowed two months to recuperate from the strain, everyone promising to return in September.

Time passed quickly, and once again we entered High School this time as Sophomores. To our grief, many promises were broken and familiar faces absent from our midst. The smiling face of our greatest bluffer, Charles Truex, and the brilliant mind of Sadie Shifman were greatly missed.

The following class officers were elected: President, Alec Brangwin, Secretary and Treasurer, Frances Staedler.

At this time Miss Swift entered as our English teacher.

It was decided that we devote our Sophomore year to more extensive study. Amid all our hard study we found time to give the whole High School a hike to the Hemlocks, which proved very successful.

Times were hard and money so scarce that it was planned to start an old clothes campaign throughout the High School. Everyone was to wear old clothes in order to bring down the high prices. This was carried into effect but our clothes soon showed new signs of wear and tear and we were again left to contend with high prices.

Much to our sorrow, Miss Verena Chaney announced that it would be her last year with us. She left to undertake a task more difficult than an algebra problem, that of matrimony.

After an exceedingly busy year, made up of lessons and study we took a much needed vacation.

When we returned in September a new event had taken place; the High School had a Vice-Principal, Mr. Van Horn. Mr. Van Horn also taught Science and Mathematics.

The following class officers were elected: President, Paul Lynn; Vice-President, Florence Requa; Secretary and Treasurer, Lucia Williams.

This year proved to be a very active one and a social success.

Our first important event was a progressive dinner. The dinner was begun at the home of Electa Driscoll, grape fruit being served. We then went to Marjorie's where soup was served: then to Gussie's home for the main course. Salad was enjoyed by all at Florence's home, and after a long walk we reached Madelyn's, where we ate dessert, the most important course of the whole dinner. After the supper, dancing was enjoyed at Hazel's home.

Much to our surprise the honorable Seniors condescended to give a dance in our honor. This also was a success and greatly appreciated by us.

Class Night was fast approaching and our funds, from which the whole expenses of the evening had to come, were very low. Due to someone's superior mind, a cake sale was suggested. This proved an easy means by which we might earn the money. The exercises were very successful, due chiefly to the efforts of the Juniors and the remarkable way in which Paul gave the Seniors their much-needed knocks. After the exercises were over, dancing and refreshments followed.

The Woman's Club offered a prize at this time, to any student in the High School making the greatest improvement in English throughout the year. Here our brilliancy in English was made very pronounced when Everett Taylor walked away with the prize. It took the judges many days to decide which of the Juniors was the most deserving because we were always quite "above par" when it came to English.

The Senior Class for the first time in the School's history, published a year book. The Juniors stood ready to back them in their task, and many times when things were not going just right, the Juniors did "their bit" to help put it across.

This marked the close of our Junior year.

At the beginning of our last term there were only thirteen left, out of a class of thirty. At our first class meeting, the following officers were elected: President, Electa Driscoll; Vice-President, Everett Taylor; Secretary, Florence Requa; Treasurer, Paul Lynn. At this meeting a very important issue was discussed, that of a trip to Washington. In order to carry out this plan, funds had to be raised.

In December, under the supervision of Miss Rosen-treter, our musical instructor, a High School entertain-ment took place, the cast being made up chiefly of Seniors. Here we again showed another talent unknown before to the High School. About $135.00 was realized and part of this was placed in our Treasury for our trip. The play proved such a success that it was repeated in February.

Since the play did not furnish the necessary funds, we decided to hold a cake sale. It proved so successful that for a number of Saturdays we were seen in front of the school selling our cakes. From these sales about $75.00 was realized.

During the Easter vacation the much hoped for trip took place. We left Newark on Thursday and until Saturday our time was spent admiring the wonders of Wash-ington. The trip proved delightful as well as educational.

Throughout the four years of High School, Everett Taylor, Edgar Coffin, Paul Lynn and Albert Bray have made a great success at athletics. They were all members of the basketball and baseball team.

Once again our class showed its brilliancy in English when Paul Lynn won first prize in Essex County for writing the best essay on the topic "Port Terminal." This was not only an honor and credit to the class, but to the High School as well.

During January, at a class meeting, the proposition of a school paper was brought before us. The class, eager to put it across proceeded to elect the staff. The boys after getting permission, were allowed to use a room on the third floor as a print shop. Here with the door locked, and amid considerable confusion and disorder the first edition of a school paper was printed.

As we leave for the last time, we shall endeavor to carry out the good work of the class of '22.

Wednesday 26th—Juniors held a class meeting.

Thursday 27th—Typewriting room busy—near end of month.

Friday, 28th—Hi-Ys are busy with cribbers.

WHO'S WHO IN HIGH SCHOOL

If a young girl should come up to you and talk so much, and so that you should have to use an umbrella, you'll know its Betty Sonntag.

If you see a tall young fellow with glasses, carrying on a one-sided conversation with Florence Requa, you'll know him for Donald MacKinnon.

If you ever see a young man or woman looking blue, and worried around High School, you can make up your mind that he is the class treasurer.

If you happen to be at the front door about five minutes after school starts, you will probably see a young man walking quietly to school; you'll know him for our ten o'clock scholar, Albert Bray; and

If you still continue to stand at the front door until 8:50, you'll see a young girl sauntering towards the school, acting as if she had not a care in the world; you'll know her for our "Special Student," Electa Driscoll.

If by chance you visit the Kindergarten, and see a young man finale-hopping around the floor with or without a partner, and to the tune of the old "vic." you'll know him for our man of leisure, Alan Maguire.

If you visit "Chem. Lab." and an explosion occurs, look towards the corner section near the window. You'll see our coming "Edison," Edmund Smith, having his 1,769,413th explosion.

If you ever go out for a real evening of pleasure and and you meet a dark haired fellow who says he's going to Michigan in the fall, you'll know he's from V. H. S. and that his name is Everett Taylor.

If you catch a fellow anywhere in High School reading a letter with a smile on his face, you'll know him for our man of letters, Edgar Coffin.

If a little bit of a shaver, with a grin on his face, should rout you out of bed some morning to deliver a "special" from—well anybody—you'll know him for John Driscoll, Biscuits the 4th.

If you happen to enter Miss Swift's room and see a crowd of girls around the corner seat, on the freshmen side, you'll know that all you'll have to do is to get to the center of the crowd and then you will find Bill Lynn.

If, when you enter the typewriting room, you see and hear all the machines going "lickidee-split," you'll know without looking at the calendar that it's the end of the month.

WISECRACKS

Oh, darling bell! Oh, grand old bell!
 How much we all adore you
 Many a time you've saved our lives,
 And kept us from a zero.

* * *

One morning Brutus to Caesar: "How many eggs did you eat this morning?"

Caesar: "Et tu Brutus."

* * *

Bray—Mr. Van Horn is the most absent minded man I ever saw.

Coffin—what's he been doing now?

Bray—This morning he thought he left his watch home, and then proceeded to take it out of his pocket to see if he had time to go home and get it.

* * *

Will Rogers—Only fools are positive.

Taylor—Are you sure about that?

W. R.—I'm positive.

Florence R.—(After trying to sing bass)—Miss Rosentretter, do you think I can ever do anything with my voice?

Miss R.—Well, it may come in handy in case of a fire.

* * *

Mr. V. H. (In physics class)—What steps should be taken to obtain the height of the Woolworth Building by use of an aneroid barometer?

Smity—To obtain accurate results with the use of this instrument, I would first tie a string to the aneroid barometer, lower it from the roof, and then measure the string.

* * *

Taylor—I woke up last night with a feeling that my gold watch was gone. The impression was so great I arose to look.

Paul—Well, was it gone?

Taylor—No, but it was going.

MORE WISECRACKS

Here's to our faculty—

With their good points and bad,

We think, as a bunch

They're the best to be had.

To be sure they are strict,

And they often times scold,

But that we'll appreciate

When we grow old.

Then we'll look back at V. H. S.,

And wish we were there.

Doing Latin and French

And some math. problems queer,

Then we'll think of our faculty

And the after-hour detention

And we'll say once again,

"Here's to 'em, God b'less 'em!"

* * *

Father—No, I don't know the Latin word for people.

A. Brown—Populæ.

Mother—Aubrey! How dare you call your father a liar?"

* * *

Ichy—We're going to have 3.1416 for dinner.

Bill Richards—What kind of a dish is that?

Ichy—Pie.

Breathes there a man with soul so dead

Who never to himself has said,

When he sees a girl all dressed in red,

"Oh you finale hopper!"

* * *

Bray—Miss Swift reverses the Darwinian theory.

Rainey—Why so?

Bray—Because every once in a while she makes a monkey out of me.

* * *

M. Reber—Women always contradict each other.

E. Driscoll—Why, they do not!

* * *

First Mother—I understand your son is very inclined towards study.

Second Mother—Yes, he's slid to the bottom of his class.

* * *

SOAPY

"May I hold your palm, Olive?"

"Not on your life, boy."

SOCIAL EVENTS

Social activities were begun this year with a hike to the Cliff. All the high school turned out and everyone concerned had a very enjoyable time. It was "Dutch Style," everyone carrying his own eats. Games were supplied by Mr. Goeltz, and the Freshmen were kept busy bringing water from the bottom of the cliff for the Seniors.

* * *

November the fifth, the Sophomores gave a masquerade party to the Freshmen, at the school. The kindergarten room was decorated in an appropriate manner with Halloween decorations. Prizes were given to the ones wearing the best costumes. Games were played and, last but not least, refreshments of cider, crullers, and apples were served.

* * *

At Christmas time, the classes of '18 and '19 gave the Senior class a dance in the kindergarten room. This was the second of its kind given by these classes and they propose to make it an annual affair.

During the Christmas vacation, when most of the alumni were in town, a basketball game was held at the Newark City Home, between the High School and the Alumni. A dance followed. The music was very fine and everyone was in high spirits. A plentiful supply of punch and crackers was served by the Alumni.

* * *

After every basketball game this season, dancing was enjoyed by everyone. Through the kindness of Mr. Neary, an unusually large orchestra was on hand for the last game. A very exciting game was engaged in with Summit High School. Verona emerged the victor. It was surprising how the older folks took to scandal walking and finale hopping after the game.

* * *

The Junior class held a dance in honor of Miss Swift on May 5th, at the home of Alan Maguire. The rooms were beautifully decorated in yellow and gold, the class colors. After a very enjoyable evening, refreshments were served, and Miss Swift was presented with a beautiful vase as a token of appreciation.

SENIORS' WASHINGTON TRIP

IT was not until the conductor had shouted "All aboard" that the class of '22 fully realized that they were actually bound for Washington. And what a realization that was! After we were on our way, we learned that we must find something to amuse ourselves with for about five or six hours, but this was an easy thing. One of our group happened to have a ukelele and it was not long before the crowd was joining in on all of the familiar songs. This trip was a period of unending fun for everybody, and we were too well occupied to think of the dirt or the heat of the train.

When we finally pulled into Washington, the first thing that confronted us was the Union Station, the largest and most beautiful station we had ever seen. It even beat Verona Station, and that's going some. After making our way through the crowds, we were met by large busses to take us to the Winston, our hotel during our stay in Washington. We soon became acquainted with our hotel and were shown to our rooms which were certainly pleasant.

After a good dinner, we left the hotel and looked opposite us, to see that the Capitol was our "cross the street" neighbor. We walked over the Capitol grounds and then to the Congressional Library. One short evening was not enough time to see all that this library contains.

The Library is a very large building, the inside of which is largely decorated with mosaic work, valuable paintings, and statues. As we went to Washington with the idea of forgetting books, we did not go into the reading room, but got an excellent view of it from the balcony above. The library, much to our surprise, for we always thought of libraries as places to find books, and books only, had a museum where were copies and often originals of old documents and papers, letters received and sent by different presidents, peace treaties, and medals belonging to prominent generals and heroes. We stayed at the library until ten o'clock and then, when it was closed, we went back to our hotel, tired, and in need of a rest which we didn't get.

The next morning at 8:30 a bus called for us, and our first stop was at the New National Museum, a place of very great interest. As we were allowed only forty minutes, our visit was a short one, but it was certainly forty minutes of seeing very wonderful things. Then we hurried back to our bus and after a short sight-seeing trip, we went through the Old National Museum, which is especially interesting for girls, as it shows the dresses every president's wife wore, which although quite out of style, were interesting to see. After another short sight-seeing trip we were let off at the White House, which, much to our dismay, had only three rooms open to visitors, all of which were large, well furnished, but not over luxurious. We did not stay long at the President's home, and left, just a wee bit disappointed.

This was the last building we went through, the rest of our time being taken by a most interesting sight-seeing tour through the residential sections of Washington. The homes are indeed wonderful, but none are really palatial, as we see through our parts of New Jersey. We were finally taken back to our hotel, hungry but happy.

After a good dinner the boys and Mr. and Mrs. Brown went over to the Capitol, while the girls sought pleasure of their own. That night Mr. Brown treated our crowd to a good vaudeville show which was certainly a pleasure for everyone.

On Saturday morning our bus again called for us and after a sixteen mile jog, we reached Arlington Cemetery. In this cemetery are remains of soldiers from every war in which the United States has taken part. The mast and anchor of the Battleship Maine was also here, surrounded by the graves of the men who lost their lives in that disaster. The Amphitheatre, made entirely of marble, was a building of great interest. This building will seat 5,000 and has standing room for over 5,000. It was from this amphitheatre that the Unknown Soldier was buried, whose tomb we saw. After a short walk through the cemetery we crowded back into our bus, to travel for about ten miles, finally to reach Mount Vernon, Washington's estate. The home and outside buildings kept us busy for about two hours. The house contains many things actually used by George Washington and his family. The smaller houses, such as the school house, spinning house, weaving house, smoke house, gardeners' house, and carriage houses, besides an immense brick barn, seemed very queer to us. From all these buildings and grounds we were able to overlook the Potomac River and behold a fine view. On the grounds were the tomb where Washington was first buried, and the new tomb, where the remains of Washington and his wife now rest. After we had taken in all of the most interesting points, we again found our bus and started back for Washington. After riding in the bus for a little over an hour, we arrived at our hotel about two o'clock just before the dining room closed.

After a good dinner we hurried out to the Capitol to give a few last looks and take pictures. At about 3:30 we returned, packed our bags, and at four o'clock said good-bye to the Winston.

We arrived at the Union Station about ten minutes before the train was scheduled to leave, and secured the best seats in the train.

For about the first hour of the journey we were extraordinarily quiet, still thinking of Washington, but it did not take us long to wake up. The greatest noise, was made when the box lunches were put on the train. These lunches were certainly given us at a most agreeable time and were enjoyed by everyone. At West Philadelphia, three of our girls left us, and after that we all found fun for ourselves.

It was a very tired but happy group that stood on the curb, waiting for a Caldwell car about 10:30 that night.

HIGH SCHOOL ENTERTAINMENT

ON Friday evening, February 3, the City Home Auditorium was crowded and overflowing with town and out-of-town folk to behold the most spectacular event in Verona High School's activities for many years. Miss Catherine Rosentretter, the sole director, was responsible for its overwhelming success.

The stage was artistically decorated with lattice work in pink and white, and Japanese lanterns strung here and there, giving a picturesque effect. The curtains parted and the Misses Virginia and Frances MacGowan, our talented dancers, came tripping gracefully on the stage, singing "Hello" to greet the audience. They were much applauded.

Then the music started and a chorus of milkmaids came dancing out on the stage. This was greeted with great applause. But a few moments later when, in place of the girls, who were being encored, the fellows came out and did the dance, the audience fairly howled. This was only the beginning: After that followed the Rose Maiden's Dance, the Eight Little Notes, and the Yama Yama Girls.

This was followed by an intermission, at which time Miss Rosenstretter rendered piano solos and Harold Brookstone, a vocal solo.

The second part was started with a Japanese scene, followed by the "Cut-ups" who were encored many times for the way they rendered "Yoo-Hoo." The Goops, who next appeared, were dressed in fantastic costumes and did such a weird dance and were met with such great applause, that they were forced to appear many times in answer to it.

For the finale, the whole cast appeared on the stage and sang the two popular songs, "Tuck Me to Sleep in My Old Tucky Home" and "I Wanna Be in Tennessee," while the Yama Yama Girls made their way through the audience throwing balloons.

This show was such a success that it was decided to repeat it. This time the fellows made the greatest hit with their harmonious singing of "April Showers," while sitting on high stools and holding umbrellas over their heads.

Dancing followed both performances.

Credit must be given to Miss Rosentretter for the capable way in which she managed the cast.

BOYS' BASKETBALL TEAM

THE basketball season of 1921-1922 was as successful as could be expected. Only in a few games was Verona able to muster its full strength, due to sickness, keeping one or more players out of the line up. Coach Wilkin, handicapped by the lack of a gymnasium, was tireless in his efforts to whip together a winning team.

The feature game of the season was the Summit-Verona game, played on the Overbrook court. Summit put up a good battle but the superior team work of the Verona team was too much for the visitors, and they had to be content with the short end of the score.

Four members of the team will be lost by graduation. It is hoped the gymnasium will be completed before another season and that the many promising players, namely Rainey, Lynn, Brown, and Brooks, will be able to take advantage of it. In recognition of Garrabrant's all around work, he was chosen Captain of next year's team.

A baseball schedule was not arranged, for it was apparent from the material on hand that a successful ball team could not be brought together. Coach Wilkin has been supervising the inter-class games and expects to develop enough material to have a representative team next year.

I.

Come lift your voices, let them ring;
To Verona's praise and glory sing;
No stain shall darken any page
Of Verona's splendid story.

II.

Though storm may threaten to engulf,
And tempest may arise,
Her courage shall throw off the yoke,
And break misfortune's ties.

III.

Then here's to her, long may she light
The path of honor and of right;
Verona, the bravest of the brave,
Long may her noble banner wave!
