Verona High School 151 Fairview Avenue Verona, New Jersey 07044

HOW CAN ONE DEFINE VERONA HIGH?

Verona High School vēr-o-na hī skūl/ noun: (1) a small single level red brick building located at 151 Fairview Avenue in Verona, New Jersey. (2) a grouping of 422 students from grades 9 through 12 who live in the same small town and share the common goal of graduating. (3) the building where each Verona student spends a total of approximately 5040 hours over a four year period. (4) the location at which Verona students spend their "wonder years" learning about life. (5) the place where jocks, brains, punks, nerds, preppies, guidos, metalheads, deadheads, new waves, musicians, and teachers all join together to form...

JUST the RIGHT

Mix

On a hectic winter day Laura Haymann and Eileen Scully take time out between band practice and test taking for a friendly, calming hug.

Greg Marion is still smiling even after fighting with the coke machine for his soda.

Adam Friedberg enjoys the ever popular combination of cafeteria food: pizza and fries.

Kim Fisher, Todd Piro, Daren Clancy, and Doreen Zjawinski get a bit "saxy" during their early morning band practice.

STUDENT LIFE

stirring it up

Making your way through these halls today takes everything you've got.

Takin' a break from all your hassles sure would help a lot.

Wouldn't you like to get away?

Sometimes you gotta go where all the trends are not the same,

And the jobs are just a game.

You want to go hang out with friends

Just to get out of your rut

You want to go where everybody's

Fun and Games

Whether they're hanging out in the lot, or just eating fries at Pilgrim Diner, VHS students always find something to do with their weekends. Even though our student body is relatively small, we certainly have managed to discover a wide variety of hang-outs.

If you're looking for a little competition, you might hit "Ballbusters" for a few rounds of pool; but beware of hustlers! If you prefer an individual challenge, you could go to Sports World to test your skill at games like "Mortal Combat" or "Street Fighter."

Of course, some VHS students would rather catch a good flick, or head over to the mall for some serious shopping. Others will brave harsh conditions to meet up in the wilderness, build a fire at Split, or hike up to Lookout. But no one will miss the chance to go to a great party.

So when it comes to having fun during their free time, VHS students definitely have their choice of places to go to have a good time.

Top: Nine-ball, corner pocket . . . Sue Erlikh and Mary Clancy play little 8-ball at Breakers. Above: Christine Buckley "cracks" herself up.

Clockwise from top left: Tom Valente asks Kim Gervasio, "What's cooking?" at a weekend BBQ. Laura DeGrande and Diana Ambrose shop til they drop at Garden State Plaza. Rock on . . . Mike Scalera, Joe Ferraiolo, and their band Betrayal jam on a Saturday night at the club, Obsessions. And even with loads of homework, Erin Brennan and Karen Datzko still find time to hang in the lot.

Causing some Confusion

HASSLES top ten

10. No longer able to wolf down lunch during English class.
9. Can't finish your homework before first period anymore.
8. Forced to take finals even though you've been accepted to college.
7. Being given a 7:30 because you had trouble getting to school at 8:10.
6. Stray bangs, cowlicks, and frizz on picture day.
5. Your locker and your next class just couldn't be further away from each other.
4. Can't hide the answers to tests in your hat anymore.
3. Hacking up a lung in the bathroom from excess smoke inhalation.
2. Having only one minute left to go to your locker, go to the bathroom, and get to your next class on time after lunch.
1. Dodging cars that are going the wrong way on Sampson.

Clockwise from top right: Pat Filoso's guide to a bad hair day: "Just roll out of bed!" Mike Ball wishes he had enough time to return these books to his locker between classes. Joe Carollo and Dave Bussin are caught breaking the rules.

Clockwise from top left: Senior girls Pam Ochab, Christina Chiappone, Jeanine Homeland, and Lauren Lupi get chastized by Mr. Cesa for being late from out-to-lunch, while Kelley Dippel is all smiles even after the late bell went off five minutes ago . . . "Which way do I go?" wonders Brian Buoye as he avoids a head-on-collision with Aimee Benimeli on Sampson.

Friends are Forever

From those first nerve-racking days of kindergarten to the stresses of applying to college, the support of friends has helped to relieve the pressures of school. Almost everyone would agree that some of their best memories involve experiences with close friends.

When we were little, our time was filled with make-believe and games. Whether it was riding bikes or dressing dolls, we always found something to do with our closest friends. Even fights couldn't separate us. Kim Gervasio recalls, "When I was in fourth grade, someone asked if I was going to play basketball, Jeanine Homeland whispered, 'She's too short to play basketball', so I dove across the desks and hit her. We're still friends, though." Even now our friendships withstand minor differences, proving that they are stronger than ever.

Over the years we have learned many things in the classroom, but the friendships we have formed take on a special meaning because we have grown together, enduring life's happiest and most difficult moments.

Lauren Lupi and Kellie Reilly prove that they have always known who is the "Boss."

Jen DiMauro and Laura Haymann have been best buds since birth.

Matt Papera, Gerard DiNola, and Jerry Bryda have waited for graduation since fifth grade.

"Hey Leener, nice boots!"
Eileen Scully and Cindy Cocchiola are always the adventurous (and fashionable) ones.

Strutting our Stuff

There's no doubt that the students at VHS are all very unique. However, even the most individualistic students are not immune to the latest trends.

Just what is a trendy wardrobe? This year, you may spot several students wearing flannel or ribbed shirts, or their favorite college sweatshirt. More than a few girls these days have added chokers to their collection of accessories, and no wardrobe would be complete without a pair of Doc Martens. Although many have succumbed to the "new" 70's fashions including tie-dyes, bell sleeved poet's blouses, and bandanas, popular common trends also prevailed. As usual the Gap remained a favorite store, while Campagnie Express/Structure attracted VHS shoppers as well.

Even hair styles were trendy this year. Last year guys sported short "almost shaved" heads, while this year "bowl cuts" became popular. Even a guy who used to take pride in his perfectly groomed "do" followed the trend of the shaggy or slicked longer hair.

Generally if a few students like certain fashions, several more will jump on the bandwagon, because, as long as there is high school, there will always be new trends.

Right: Although Brian Van Oostendorp has been wearing flannels for years, once again he is back in style. Above: Liz Gregory knows her choker chain looks good, but she is having a little trouble breathing.

Rollin' in Dough

What is something that almost everyone has but almost no one wants? A job, of course. Although some people actually enjoy working, most students feel that the only benefit of a job is receiving the weekly paycheck.

During the school year, many students find it difficult to juggle the demands of school with the pressures of a job. In the summer, those that have jobs would rather spend their time working on their tans. Yet the lucky ones who don't need a job have the nerve to complain about having nothing to do all day! Poor babies!

Most students, however, need the extra cash that working provides, and many of them have had some crazy experiences on the job. Melanie Balestro recalls, "One day at Tot-Lot a girl got her underwear stuck on a tricycle and couldn't get herself off, so they had to cut her shorts off and she cried. The child never came back."

But despite the mishaps, annoyances, chaos, and general discontentment about working, jobs will always remain a part of VHS students' lives.

Nicole Gilsean rings up an order at Bagelwich.

our own special blend

Boys put their hats back on. Girls gossip. Teachers take their posts outside their doors. Mr. Cesa stands guard at the end of the library hall. Freshmen rush along, trying to avoid upperclassmen. Seniors strut their stuff while taking their time. A frustrated student bangs a jammed locker. As Head Custodian Anthony Carsillo observes, "It turns into Grand Central Station every 46 minutes."

Some would say the three-minute passing time between classes is nothing but commotion and chaos. But to students it isn't chaos; it's the time of day that best reflects the uniqueness of the people at VHS. We like to call it OUR OWN SPECIAL BLEND .

It's our last year of high school and it's time to move on.
So many memories together we've shared Lending a hand to each other. . .
. . .showing we cared
We came into this together
And now we must leave apart
But all those high school memories
Will keep us in each other's hearts
Everlasting friendships
we've shared in four years Of love and laughter —
of sadness and tears
Goals and dreams lie just ahead
But of the past few years, there is so much to be said
We came in as freshmen,
feeling lost and confused
By sophomore year. . .
. . .we were no longer abused

*"Squash the Frosh" was out of the way
We could walk down the halls
without much dismay
By junior year we finally felt right Always working and wishing for Friday night
Now we are seniors —
what more is there to say?
Graduation is near and we are on our way
The future lies ahead of us
With so many things left to do
But leave the special memories in your mind
Those memories will always be true
When you go off to work or school
And you walk right out of the door
Remember the wonderful times
You've spent with The Class of '94!

The Final Countdown

What is it that makes seniors want to pretend that homework just doesn't exist, cut class and head to the beach, or simply sit around pondering the meaning of life? It's the same thing that makes us not want to write this article: senioritis.

For the few underclassmen who are unfamiliar with this dreaded syndrome, senioritis is a condition in which students lack motivation and become lackadaisical about their school work. In other words, we just don't care anymore!

Almost all seniors are affected by senioritis, although there is no one cause of it. The overwhelming workload is often enough to bring on an epidemic of senioritis. Having four tests and a ten-page paper due on the same day can be so stressful that you can't help being indifferent. For those who get accepted to colleges early, doing school work seems pointless; and for those who are still waiting to hear, the suspense distracts them from their classes. Many seniors find that four years of high school is enough and it is now time to relax.

"From the first day of senior year," Danine Alati explains, "the countdown until graduation is on, and everyone is bound to get senioritis sooner or later." Regardless of the cause of the "disease," the only possible cure of senioritis is obvious — GRADUATION!

Clockwise from near right: Colleen Fennelly, Kim Gervasio, Pam Ochab and Jeanine Homeland escape from their daily hassles by trekking to the beach. A prime candidate for senioritis, Pat Hayes, is not into doing his English work. Dave Anico could be the spokesperson for senioritis, bored into a deep slumber by his classwork. Jeff Cole crashes wherever possible after pulling an all-nighter writing a paper. The thought of attending class makes Jaime Simeonidis decide she would rather be cleaning out her locker. Jerry Bryda decides that catching the perfect wave is more important than attending history class. Susan Erlikh and Karen Kealy toast the good life on vacation, while their fellow classmates are slaving over schoolwork.

Together in Spirit

"We are the seniors, seniors . . ." boom the cheerleaders at the fall sports' pep rally. This traditional cheer psyches everyone to chant along demonstrating their school spirit. At this pep rally the participants in all fall sports are encouraged as they begin their season, and the gym erupts with students' excitement. Pep rallies however, are not the only place where students' overall spirit is displayed. This year was the first time that a "Spirit Week" was celebrated at VHS which increased the support of school teams. In mid-October, after a week of school-spirited activities, all the fall sports played at home within a 24-hour period drawing larger crowds. "I am glad that we had 'Spirit Week'," commented Nicole

Savino, "because it encouraged people to come to see a girls' soccer game which usually has few fans."

Spirit seems to be initiated by any activity that is not school-related. Traveling to new places always seems to be a boost of excitement. Lynn Qualely recalls, "I had the best times on the trip to France. It was just constant laughs and good times." For seniors, college acceptance was a most thrilling experience, and it incited new spirit and allegiance.

After all the hours spent cramming for tests, researching in the library, and complaining about the grueling work in high school, these exciting, "spirited" times are the special moments that we will never forget.

Heading for the Highway

It is your seventeenth birthday. You roll out of bed, throw on some clothes, and head down to DMV. On the way there, you cannot help remembering the horror stories you have heard about grouchy test administrators who take pleasure in failing new drivers. You pull up to the course, get in line behind the other nervous "drivers", and wait. And wait. An hour and a half later, it is finally your turn to take the test. Somehow, you maneuver your car through the challenging course, and breathe a sigh of relief when you are told that you have passed the test. Another hour and a half later, you hold in your hands the prized possession, complete with horrendous photo: your license.

Getting your license is something that you have eagerly anticipated since early childhood. By the time you are a junior, you can hardly wait to get behind the wheel. Some of us are lucky enough to get our licenses before our senior year. The less fortunate are forced to bum rides off their friends and make the most of having their permit. But almost everyone would agree that the freedom that goes along with having your license makes the agonizing wait well worth it.

The Sophomore Squeeze

Since sophomores are stuck in the middle, no longer naive "frosh," but not yet respected upperclassmen, what makes second year students unique? The answer might very well be nothing, but many "sophs" agree that their second year at VHS is more exciting than they anticipated.

The major conquest of most sophs is to skip a few steps on the totem pole by making older friends. Although recently they were immature freshmen, these sophomores finally feel the desired acceptance from the upperclassmen. They are now recognized by seniors at weekend hang outs, offered rides home by the captain of the team, and playing varsity sports.

Sophomore Chris Blum is "having a lot of fun this year. I'm friends with a lot of the upperclassmen because of sports."

Dori Ferruggia agrees, "Being a sophomore is cool so far," with a chuckle she adds, "but it would totally be the highlight of my year if someone asks me to go to the prom!"

Although some sophomores might feel as if they simply blend into the woodwork with no particular distinction this year, most others comply that it's great because, "Hey, at least we're not freshmen anymore!"

Back on the Bottom

Most freshmen are filled with conflicting emotions when they move from the top of the middle school heap to the bottom of the heap at the high school. They experience a combination of excitement, fear, and anticipation all at once. Often they are unsure of what high school is really like, so they expect the worst.

Getting lost, being trampled by upperclassmen in the halls, and winding up with wicked teachers are among the most common freshmen fears. An especially anxious Nat Gambuzza says he worried about "getting jumped, scalped, or being subjected to some other form of torture by seniors." But after a few days at VHS, he realized nothing that dramatic would ever happen here.

Once the initial shock of being a freshman wears off, most frosh realize that being at the bottom of the totem pole is not so bad. As Dave Baker commented, "I sure can get used to all the older girls here!"

Tossing It Up

VHS may be called a melting pot, or at least a tossed salad, because regardless of their age or class, seniors, juniors, sophomores and, yes, even freshmen manage to become friends. In such a small school students are at least acquaintances if not great friends with people of other grades. It is not uncommon for a senior to offer a sophomore a ride home or for a junior and a freshman to go out on a date.

"Even though I am a freshman," explains John Alati, "I am friends with a lot of the sophomores from when we went to middle school together."

Often clubs, activities and sports are reasons why upperclassmen and underclassmen initially get to know each other and establish friendships. On a sports team it does not matter whether a participant is a freshman or a senior because students become friends due to a common interest.

Although diverse types of people attend VHS, it is not rare for all people to be friends. "I guess I have a good mixture of friends," says Eileen Scully. "Because of my involvement in activities, I have formed friendships with people in all grades."

Even if VHS is not known as the most exciting of places, the small student body enables people of all classes to form bonding experience with each other. Since there are different types of people in the various grades, friendships definitely reflect a mixture. VHS is a tossed salad because the friendships formed are Just the Right Mix.

Mrs. Schoenig doubts that the pass she has received is valid.

"It's Not Just Teaching..."

A teacher's job is not always finished when the bell rings at 2:36. Many teachers are involved in activities outside of the classroom, devoting time to get to know students on a more personal level. Teachers are advisors to clubs, coaches of teams, and liaisons between the students and administration. These extra-curricular activities require great amounts of time and effort, but many teachers find the experience rewarding.

Mrs. Belott, who advises Youth in Government, Mock Trial, and the senior class, puts in between five and ten hours a week during these activities. She feels that "the variety of the activities keeps one from being bored, but sometimes it's exhausting!"

Mr. White, who advises Shadows, The Fairviewer, the freshman class, and runs an after school open-gym program has "no idea how many extra hours" he puts in and doesn't even want to think about it. He says that "advising can at times be more enjoyable than teaching itself because everyone involved is doing it because they enjoy it and want to work at it."

Mr. Moran is the advisor for both the Spotlight Players and Video Production Club. Mr. Moran feels that being involved in extra-curricular activities is worthwhile because he is able to talk to students about subjects other than those discussed in English class — things in their own lives.

IN LOVING MEMORY . . .

In February of the 1993-94 school year, the VHS community lost a great teacher and friend. Mrs. Jeanne Byrne, a business education teacher at VHS for 22 years, passed away after missing the beginning of the school year due to her illness.

Senior Susan Erlikh, a former student of Mrs. Byrne's whose thoughts echo the thoughts of so many of Mrs. Byrne's former students, recalls her as "not only a great teacher, but a wonderful person as well. She cared about all her students and always treated everyone equally. Everytime you walked into her class she would greet you with a smile. One memory of her that always stands out in my mind is how she would always have a box of Shop-Rite brand animal crackers in her drawer. Almost everyday she would pull out the box and share her animal crackers with us. She was like one of us. She was just like a teenager. I remember when she had just ordered a brand new racing red Mazda RX-7. I never thought of a teacher being interested in such a hot car, but Mrs. Byrne was different. She loved to ski, she loved her car, and she loved life. We all wonder why such horrible things have to happen to such good people. Mrs. Byrne's memory will forever be in the hearts of all the people who knew her. She will never be forgotten. . ."

Our Thanks To...

In the past, the senior class at VHS has dedicated the yearbook to a select teacher who has had a significant impact on the students. This year, we would like to dedicate the yearbook to the entire staff of VHS. We would like to thank all the teachers and administrators for making our four years here interesting as well as educational.

The hours spent in each class will be remembered not only for the information learned there, but for the teachers who have repeatedly proven that they care for us as individuals. Although we are moving on, we will never forget the lessons they have taught us both in and outside the classroom. Even though we may have seemed unappreciative at times, we would now like to express our sincere respect and admiration.

Teachers Have Stress Too...

Contrary to popular belief, students are not the only ones who suffer from school-related stress. Teachers feel the pressure of demands on time, energy, and a heavy workload, too.

Mr. Moran commented, "I am most stressed by students who do not want to learn. For me, every discovery I make about the world is exciting and I try to communicate my love of learning to my students. I get stressed when students decide that nothing is interesting or worth knowing for its own sake."

The stress level for teachers who are teaching at a school for the first time is often very high. Miss Mariniello feels that her most stressful teaching experience was definitely her first day at VHS, because she was faced with a new school and new students all at once. "I was nervous and excited at the same time. Fortunately, only the excited feeling remains."

Another cause of stress among teachers and students alike is fashion problems. Miss Warshaw commented, "My most stressful teaching experience was trying to fit through the door wearing my Marie Antoinette costume for 'Back in Time' day during Spirit Week!"

D. THE WRITE STUFF

*H*ow do you feel about having mid terms at VHS this year?

"Mid terms seem harder than finals because they require knowledge of more specific information."

Sonia Burke

"I like just having finals better because mid terms take place during the middle of the winter sports season. During finals classes and sports are over and there is more time to study."

Chris Neidz

"I liked mid terms so that finals don't count as much. I think it scared freshmen to think that one test would equal a full marking period grade, and now with mid terms and finals the grade is split between two tests."

Sandy Peterson

Mid-terms Cause 'Flurry' of Confusion

The 1993-94 school year brought with it a complete change of administration at VHS. Principal Benedict Tantillo and Vice Principal Glenn Cesa decided that a major goal of their administration would be to re-emphasize academics at VHS. Among the changes put in place was the addition of mid-terms to the schedule.

Ironically, the mid-term schedule fell during a horrible spell of bad weather. With ice, snow and bitterly cold weather forcing four snow days and a scattering of delayed openings and early closings during mid-terms, it took nearly three weeks to complete what should have been a five-day schedule.

Many students were intimidated by the planned schedule of having to study for mid-terms and attend a regular delayed-opening schedule at the same time. They ended up having the weather to thank for providing lots of extra study time. In fact, no two exams ended up being held on consecutive days.

"I think that the weather was a sign," explains senior Julie Camp, "that we should not have mid terms at VHS!"

Clockwise from left: Al Ruglio hurries to complete his English mid term. Jerry Bryda does some cramming before his exam. Danielle Birriel cannot concentrate on studying Chemistry. Jeff Liddle is shocked when his teacher explains how extensive his math exam will be. Dori Ferruggia, and Marcello Hernandez take some last minute notes for their Spanish mid term. Joe Symons prepares for his history exam.

Seniors Struggle to Survive Stress

"College acceptances..." booms the voice on the morning announcements. Every senior longs to hear his name announced as being accepted to his first choice college. The stress of the struggle to survive senior year and to actually make it to college is a difficult journey that at times seems to be impossible.

The dreaded SAT (Scholastic Aptitude Test) is a major cause of stress to every student who plans to attend college. "It is a cruel method of torture," insists Surbhi Kapadia about the SAT. Some seniors suffered from Achievement tests in three different subjects in addition to the SAT. Other lucky seniors who were not required to take the SAT endured their own "tortures" by being forced to take the ACT (American College Test). Although the testing process was enough to drive any "striving-for-graduation senior" crazy, the application process itself proved to be equally as stressful and unnerving.

"If I had to write one more essay about an issue of local, national or personal concern I think I would have thrown up!" confesses Tim McAuliffe. The essays were unanimously agreed upon as the worst part of the application process. Whether a student had a college planner, a guidance counselor, a teacher or a parent helping him with his applications and essays, the process is never a simple one.

Kristine Jannuzzi could never find the time to finish her applications because "with papers, tests, band and other activities I seemed to always have something to do."

Although in the past we have heard that senior year is the time to blow off classes and coast through school, we have realized that this idea is only a hopeful myth because senior year is as hectic, if not worse, than the rest of high school. It is our last chance to shape up in hopes of achieving something for ourselves after high school. All we can hope is that our rigorous academic schedule of juggling writing a 10-page paper for Mr. Luks, studying for one of Mr. Veitch's killer Chem. tests, and trying to understand Blum's AP history book will pay off when each of us enrolls in that school to which we strove so hard to be accepted.

What do you find to be most stressful about senior year?

"I hate not knowing where I'll be next year and what I'll be doing. Uncertainty is scary!"

Robyn Englishman

"It was stressful to have to deal with mid terms and finals this year on top of everything else."

Gerard DiNola

"It was difficult to keep up with my AP and Honors classes while worrying about the college situation."

Gretchen Hildebrandt

Clockwise from right: Steve Warner copies his assignment before the bell rings. Jenny DiMauro plans what she will include in her English essay. Mike Scalera, Aimee Benimeli and Danine Alati review their Spanish grammar. Joe Carrollo ponders the meaning of life. Danielle Birriel and Mike Ball are both ready with the answer. Tim McAuliffe, Julie Camp, Dave Bussin, and Adam Friedberg take part in a history debate. Craig Quinn patiently waits to discuss college options with his guidance counselor.

Too Many Term Papers

"Internal documentation is what we will be using in research papers," explains Mrs. Nadler to her English II class.

The ordeal of writing a term paper is perhaps underclassmen's most academically stressful experience. This year English teachers began teaching freshman the basic rules of writing a research paper, but not until sophomore year do they utilize all of the knowledge in creating a ten or more page term paper.

It seems a shame that when the weather gets warm and summer is approaching, students are forced to remain indoors slaving over a term paper. "I never thought that I would get it done," tells Stephanie Shapiro. "But once I got started writing it, it wasn't so bad."

By senior year, most students become old pros at compiling note cards, foot-noting, and writing "works cited" information.

"Last year I thought that writing my literary research paper was a pain," explains Kelly Dippel, "But that seems like cake compared to doing term papers in three classes this year."

Students would do anything to avoid dealing with term papers. "Call me lazy," challenges T.J. Onorato, "but once I realized I had to write a term paper in Journalism I, I regretted taking the class."

Not only must freshmen newcomers deal with the heavy workload of high school classes, but the thought of a term paper is enough to send them screaming back to middle school. At least they have some time until next year to get adjusted to the "term paper process" before they, too, must get a workout lugging around library books and sacrificing the best weather days of the year indoors academically challenging themselves by writing a term paper.

Clockwise from above: Sarah Gerhold, Joe Martino, and Chris Malanga listen as Mr. Luks explains when their term paper is due. Jennifer Drappi and Stephanie Buonomo share their research while working in the library. Mrs. Belott advises Devon Ercolano on how she may improve her paper. Erin Schmidt transfers the rough draft of her paper onto the computer.

What do you think of term papers?

"I actually didn't mind researching because it was interesting to learn new information about my topic."

Joe Panzariello

"Writing a term paper is a annoying because it involves a lot of work, but I can definitely say that I learned something from doing it."

Tom Daggs

"This year I had to write two term papers, and it definitely was not fun. They take long to do and they involve so much work."

Dena Carnevale

Clockwise from left: Students in English I were shocked to hear that they would have to learn to write a research paper. Matt Dadaian helps freshman Dave Dickman learn how to use the computer. "What did he say?" inquires Laura Gambuzza after Mr. White announced to his Journalism I students that they would have to write a term paper.

CLUBS/ACTIVITIES

creative combos

While many students await the bell at 2:36 to go home, others eagerly anticipate participating in after-school organizations. Whether it means creating a yearbook, traveling to Boston to represent a country at Model U.N., bringing clothes to needy families or any number of other things, clubs and extra-curricular activities are what help to make VHS students well-rounded people. The different organizations allow for every person to get involved and let not only their intellectual but also their creative minds work. Due to VHS's small enrollment, many students are involved in a multitude of extra-curricular activities and have found that mixing personalities and ideas usually results in. . .

CREATIVE COMBOS.

The collective mix of personalities of the period 7 Journalism II class was a chaotic but productive bunch.

DREADFUL DEADLINES

"Where are the quad-paks? "Who's got those basketball pictures?" "Who knows how to copyfit?" "I need a computer!" "What do you mean the photographer canceled?!"

Room 132 during the Period 7 Journalism II class, could be quite chaotic. The class, with 32 students, was the biggest in the history of the school's journalism program. With practically one third of the senior class in Journalism II, adviser Tom White and editors-in-chief Danine Alati and Mary Clancy had their hands full pulling together all the diverse opinions and loose ends in order to meet strict deadlines.

What many people don't realize about yearbook production is that work on the 176-page publication begins before the prior summer and continues through the school year, with December, January, February, March and April deadlines.

Before last summer, the class agreed upon the theme, "Just the Right Mix," and in no better place was this theme illustrated than in the Journalism II class itself. Although it was a rare combination of people and opinions, the final product of craziness was a yearbook reflecting "Just the Right Mix" of the diversity among students at VHS.

Clockwise from left: For a change photography editor Matt Papera is in front of the camera instead of behind it. The friendly relationship between club editors Gerard DiNola and Kim Gervasio made working together bearable. Through the chaotic mess of room 132 editors-in-chief Mary Clancy and Danine Alati managed to keep control. Sports editors Dave Bussin and Lauren Lupi choose pictures to use in their section. Layout editors Erin McAleer and Kellie Reilly make some final checks on their layout.

STOP THE PRESSES!

VHS students were busy this year keeping both the student body and the community informed and entertained through their literary efforts.

The Avant-Garde staff continued to strive for excellence this year. Club members judged the art work, poetry, and short stories that were submitted early in the year. The theme, "Journeys," allowed for much creativity in the entries. The Avant-Garde issues were distributed at the Creative Arts Festival in May.

The Verona Highlights, another VHS publication, is received by members of the community monthly. The newsletter is produced by the Publicity Club, and is almost completely student-run.

The Fairviewer allows students to sharpen their journalistic abilities by writing news and feature stories. Published several times a year, the newspaper covers school events, and also issues outside of VHS. "Although putting together the newspaper requires much time and effort, it is very rewarding when the completed issues arrive," commented Co-Editor Pete Klein.

CALL THE FCC!

VHS has many different ways to interact with their students, three of their most effective ways are Morning Announcements, WVHS, and T.V. Production.

The Morning Announcements are given daily over the loudspeaker to inform the students of school events and activities. The five students who participate in announcing are Danine Alati, Jenn Bachan, Julie Camp, Suzie Kuzma, and T.J. Onorato.

WVHS is one of the most delightful ways to enter the doors of VHS. This school radio station plays everyday from 7:30-8:00 A.M. They play music of their choice to entertain all the students who arrive to school early.

Maurice Moran's 7th period class is no ordinary class — they are the T.V. Production class. The purpose of this class is to improve students' knowledge of advanced technology. Despite a limited amount of equipment, students are able to learn how to videotape and edit. The T.V. Production's finished tapes are used by VTV, the town's T.V. station.

Counterclockwise from top: Mike Verrone says, "Oh, so this is the T.V.!" Danielle Birriel, Stephanie Young, and Karen Kealy practice videotaping. Julie Camp reads the announcements.

BACK TO BUSINESS

Unlike most clubs, the work done by D.E.C.A., C.B.E. and Anorev, is done outside of VHS.

Joel Throne leads the D.E.C.A. club of 21 members. D.E.C.A. serves to give students a chance to explore areas of interests in the marketing sphere, while giving them an opportunity to meet many other students interested in the field. The group attends many competitions including the regional D.E.C.A. competition in January, the state competition in March, and the National Competition in Michigan in April.

Loreen Sellitto's 4th period class makes up this year's C.B.E. class. This is a group of students who wish to pursue a business career. They learn skills in class and use their knowledge in work outside of school.

Sharon McGee advises the ANOREV program. The members of this club promote wellness to grade school students through skits, cheers and group talks. The group goes to all four elementary schools in Verona to present their program, which includes talking about how members enjoy having drug and alcohol free fun. This year the ANOREV group also performed at the H.B. Whitehorne Middle School.

HIGH ON LIFE

Ever have one of those days when everything just seems to go wrong? For some students, Peer Leadership is the perfect way to turn the day around.

The 60 member club is divided into small groups. Each group meets once during the week when students have the opportunity to discuss any problems, knowing that whatever they say will remain confidential. Occasionally, the meeting will center around a specific group activity that encourages students to openly express themselves.

Counterclockwise from top: Jessica Montagno helps Mrs. McGee brighten up her office. Amar Patel shares a story with his group members. Jeff Cole and Mrs. McGee have an interesting conversation.

Advisor Sharon McGee commented, "It's a great chance for kids to get to know each other on a level that they ordinarily wouldn't reach through school activities."

Many participants agree they gained something special from their experiences in peer leadership.

"Peer leadership has really made me grow as a person," expresses T.J. Onarato.

"Peer is a great way to make friends," indicates Jessica Smith. "It also really helps to relieve stress."

Kellie Reilly says, "It really makes my day when I get that pass first period that says I have Peer Leadership. I look forward to talking with my group."

HONORABLE MENTIONS

The academic success of VHS students is recognized through their acceptance into the school's various honor societies.

The Math Honor Society consists of thirty students who achieved excellence in math. Advisor Danielle Mariniello commented, "Our goal is to promote the use of math in technological society."

Concern for the welfare of others was evident in Spanish Honor Society, advised by Maria Lanahan. The members held a holiday food and clothing drive in Union City.

The French Honor Society, advised by Harlette Warshaw, recognizes achievement of students studying French. Members conducted a bake sale during the International Weekend Olympics to raise money for a scholarship given to a senior in the society.

Members of the National Honor Society demonstrates outstanding scholarship, leadership, service, and character. According to advisor Patricia Maisenbacher, the Honor Society seeks promotes academic achievement and publicly recognizes students' accomplishments.

Quill and Scroll is the journalism honor society in which members must be in the top ten percent of their class, and have substantially contributed to school publications. Selection of Quill and Scroll members is made by Shadows and Fairviewer advisor Thomas White.

THE SQUARE ROOT OF PARLEZ VOUS = HOLA

Although some students can't wait to leave school when the bell rings, others choose to participate in subject-related clubs that let students see another aspect of the subject and the teacher.

Members of the Math Club help other students who are having difficulty in their math classes. The club consists of 19 members, who excel in math. The Math Club allows students to receive help by someone on their own level, benefitting all those involved.

Maria Lanahan, Spanish Club

advisor, leads 21 motivated Spanish students to expand their Spanish vocabulary. They combine their endeavors with the Spanish Honor Society. The members also obtain a better understanding of Spanish culture.

Advisor Harriette Warshaw helps members of the French Club develop a greater interest in French culture. After studying a unit on French Impressionism, the club went on a trip to the Metropolitan Museum of Art to see the 19th Century European art collection. "Participating in the French Club has been an educational experience, and I've learned many interesting things about the French culture," said member Cindy Cocchiola.

In conclusion, all club members gained a better understanding of their subject.

SPOTLIGHT . . . CAMERA . . . ACTION

Aspiring actors and actresses at VHS can refine their talents by joining the Spotlight Players, under the direction of Maurice Moran. This year's club consisted of twenty members. Whether the students were participating in productions or weekly workshops, they were dedicated and involved. "The main purpose of this club is to foster interest and understanding in the performing arts," said Mr. Moran.

The Spotlight Players first production this year was Arsenic and Old Lace, performed in the fall after five weeks of rehearsals. The performance starred Joe Mathers, Liz Wojtal, Gerard DiNola, J.T.

Myers, Melissa Spinella, and Laura DeGrande. "The preparation was tough," said senior Laura DeGrande. "We had to memorize lines and learn stage presence all in a few weeks. But all that hard work really paid off once we got to perform." At the time Shadows went to production, the Spotlight Players' plans included a Spring musical and their annual trip to Bucks County in Pennsylvania.

PEACEMAKING YOUTH

VHS students have the unique opportunity to experience government on the local and international level by joining the Youth and Government and Model UN clubs.

In December the seven members of the Youth and Government Club held a mock town council meeting, acting as mayor and council members at the Council Chambers. "This experience enabled me and my fellow club members to appreciate the governmental process," says member Mike DeMiro.

Unlike the Youth and Government Club, Model UN members confront world-wide governmental issues. The club consisted of twelve members who are selected by advisor Debra Roth on the basis of a try-out. The students travel to Harvard University in December to attend a conference interacting with students from all over the country. Each high school represents one country in a mock UN session. This year VHS students were the Slovak Republic. Junior Angelos Kottas commented, "After attending the conference, I realized how difficult it must be for countries to make crucial decisions and compromises with other nations."

IS MY BUZZER WORKING??

The competitiveness of the Math Competition Club, High School Bowl, and Mock Trial kept members on their toes this year.

This year's Math Team is involved in six New Jersey Math League competitions, and an American National High School Math Contest. Advisor Lillian Gonzalez-Roig says, "The competition gives students an opportunity to challenge themselves with interesting and thought provoking math problems."

High School Bowl members are also involved in very tough competition between other neighboring high schools. Members were quizzed on various trivia questions and this year's highlights included a televised competition against Belleville.

The Mock Trial team had yet another successful year. Advised under Mary Jo Belott, and Roseann Prendergast, the Mock Trial team competed in the Essex County finals for a second straight year. The members assimilated a trial and worked to better their plaintiff and defense arguments. The team, however, finished a very respectful second place.

A WHOLE NEW WORLD

This year International Weekend was a great success. Seventeen students from nine different countries joined 271 VHS students for a weekend of planned activities.

The foreign exchange students arrived on Thursday February 3, 1994 to a welcoming in the library where they met with their hosts for the weekend. Friday they came to school and attended classes with their hosts. Throughout the day panel discussions were held in the library so other VHS students had a chance to meet and speak with the foreign students. Friday night a buffet and Japanese exhibition were held and many students joined in the school spirit at the hockey and girls basketball games later in the evening. Olympics were held on Saturday afternoon, but the fun wasn't over yet. The most successful part of the weekend was Saturday night at the dance held in the cafeteria. Sunday concluded the weekend with a brunch held at Keith Ferguson's house and then the exchange students were on their way to travel to another destination.

IT'S TIME TO TOOT YOUR OWN HORN

Under the direction of Dave Tintle and Max Morden, VHS's music ensembles once again enjoyed a successful season. The 60-member Marching Band performed at football games and many competitions including one at Giants Stadium and The National Band Festival in Orlando, Florida during the month of May.

The Concert Band must prepare for three concerts during the year under a demanding schedule. "The commitment to band goes beyond rehearsals, because the music has to be played not only correctly, but with feeling and intensity. In some cases, it must be memorized," says senior Drum Major Kristine Jannuzzi.

Mr. Morden, once again achieved great success with the 21-member Jazz Band. The Jazz Band traveled to compete against many bands receiving such honors as: Best Brass, Best Woodwinds, Best Rhythm Section, Best Trombone Soloist, Best Overall Band; and Superior ratings. Mr. Morden's goal for his music students is to obtain superior performance skills while learning different styles and improvisation.

This year's choir group was directed by Elsa Cass. The group performed at the Christmas concert, and for the Martin Luther King assembly. Members also participated in Christmas caroling at the elementary schools and some members also caroled at a local nursing home.

Future Government Leaders?

The Student Council consists of about 40 members. These students were elected by their fellow classmates to lead a successful school year.

The Student Council sponsored energetic Spirit Week, the first school dance and many other activities. They traveled to Whippany Park in December to see how other Student Council systems work.

Each class holds a number of fundraisers each year to collect enough money to support their class. Student Council is led by Athletic Director, Mr. Richard Meyer.

The members meet about two times a month, sometimes before school. It takes a great deal of leadership, responsibility, and devotion to reach the goals of the Student Council.

This year's Student Council is made up of: President Danine Alati, Vice-President Matt Papera, and Secretary-Treasurer Kim Gervasio. They work hard together to come up with ideas to support, not only their Senior class, but also the entire student body.

Pounding It Out

"Whoomp! There It Is" was the chant that could be heard echoing from the boys' locker room on weekdays before football practice. Whether they were going best on best, practicing their plays or just goofing off, the football players always seemed to have a great time during the week. On the weekends, however, players got serious. They knew that Saturday afternoon was the time to pool their efforts to pound their opponents.

Although the players' rowdiness was generally appreciated on the field, on one occasion it seemed to cause a stir, creating a rather memorable game. Late in the fourth quarter of a game against Montclair Immaculate a brawl broke out between both teams. As the benches were cleared, coaches, referees, and police arrived on the scene to mediate the violence. No one was injured, and Verona had the last laugh — Victory!

The team ended the season with an overall record of 5-3-1. Lineman Joe Carrollo felt that the team "worked hard and the successful season was very rewarding to all who participated — even if we didn't go undefeated!"

Bus-time Camaraderie

"We love you, Janice!" were the final words sung by the girls' soccer team every day that they traveled to an away game during the 1993 season. Since they suffered a losing season, they found solace in the sometimes lengthy, but always enjoyable bus rides with their favorite bus driver, Janice.

These "bonding experiences" were a major part of the girls' season. Whether the girls engaged in a full team gossip session, or held private conversations, they regarded this quality time as perhaps the most worthwhile time of the day. Their bus-time recreation ranged from telling often senseless jokes, to listening to music, to watching Nicole Savino and Melissa Spinella "freaking out" in the aisle.

"Since we are all good friends," player Laura Gambuzza explains, "it was easy to go crazy and have fun together!"

The girls agreed that the games are not the memories that they will take with them this year. Instead they will remember the moments on the bus when the stories were so funny that they thought they would wet their pants, and some remarks were so stupid that they nearly cried in hysterics.

Captain Jaime Simeonidis does not feel that the teams' unsuccessful season reflects poorly on players or the captains because the girls' "good times together prove that winning not always everything!"

Just for Kicks

If any member of the 1993 boys' soccer team is asked what he will remember about the season, he might answer yellow and red cards and joking about who would be drafted for the World Cup Team. The chances of anyone really being drafted were slim, but the team liked to think that maybe Tim "The Onion" Goodwin and Steve "The Left Foot" McDermott might be picked #1 and #2.

The boys also decided that the numerous daily laps and drills would not be worthwhile without having a little fun. Brendan Hearne was one player who just would not conform to running the assigned laps, and he did whatever it took to avoid them. "One day," Pat Filoso recalled, "we were practicing at the middle school field, which is not level, and Brendan lay flat on the ground so that the coach could not see him from the far side. When he got caught, he claimed that a bee stung him."

The winless season was not without a few highlights, however, including goals by Matt Papera, Doug Volkert and Brendan Hearne. Although the team's record was poor, it didn't depress the players. It is the funny times of fooling around that they will remember for years to come, not their losses.

Running on Empty

The cross country team at Verona High School has not always been the most popular team. Compared to the other fall sports, cross country is the smallest. It gets the least amount of funds and uniforms are shared with spring track. Most of the uniforms are older than the students who wear them. The lack of funds and the unpopularity did not prevent this year's runners from having a rewarding season.

Cross country is a unique sport. It involves long grueling practices that test the limits of each runner. The team was creative in finding ways to alleviate the pressure of practices by visiting local businesses during the run. J.T. Myers commented that his experience on the team have given him strength, determination, and a great appreciation for Poppa Tony's pizza. The hard work and tough practices paid off in the end. Chris DeLia had a great season, leading the team along with captain J.T. Myers. DeLia, running the fastest 3-mile on the team placed seventh at the county meet. The girls, led by Kristen Muller, showed the most improvement. All of the members of the girls team improved their times. Among the highlights were Kristen Muller placing at the county meet and Katie Clancy placing first at the Junior Varsity championships.

"Overall, the season was a good one," comments Junior Naomi Wychules. "The team members did a great job working as both individuals and as a team, making the season one that I won't forget."

Success at the Nets

For the first time in two years, the Varsity Girls' Tennis team breezed through the 1993 fall season victoriously. The Lady Hillbillies placed second in the conference with a record of 15-3 and made it to the semi-finals of the state tournament.

The highlight of the season involved the new rivalry with Mountain Lakes. The Hillbillies played the Lakers three times this season—twice for the conference and a third time for the state-tournament. Although Verona was defeated in the first match at Mountain Lakes, they redeemed themselves two weeks later with a victory at home.

Having lost to and defeated Mountain Lakes, the girls were given the chance to prove themselves the better of the two when they were matched up for the semi-finals of the state tournament. Verona traveled to their rival's home courts for the event. According to senior captain Julie Camp, due to "the lack of sportmanship and questionable line calling on (the Lakers') part, the match was not a pleasant one." Verona lost a grueling match 3-2.

Later that week, the Lady Hillbillies lost the match for the conference despite a marathon hour and a half hour match played at first singles.

Though devastated by these losses, Verona battled back to a successful conclusion to their season.

Work It, Girl

"You better work it, girl," could be heard echoing through the gym and lobby as both fall and winter cheerleaders prepared to add spirit to sporting events this year. However, the girls' job requires a great deal more effort than simply shaking their pom-poms.

The football cheerleaders had an anything but ordinary season this year. Although the weather was often wet, their spirits were never dampened. The season began with morning practices in the summer and a car wash fundraiser in early September. With the newly added Spirit Week, the cheerleaders worked twice as hard to put together a dance routine to perform at the Spirit Week game.

As a form of relief from all of the hard work, cheerleaders could be found "taking a Holiday" before games, feasting at a gourmet breakfast. To burn off calories the girls would cram into their cars and bop to the tunes of "I Will Survive" and

"Hey Jealousy" as they passed by rival Cedar Grove.

The winter cheerleaders were equally as busy with a schedule including both basketball games and wrestling matches. Although with this hectic schedule, it was hard to fit in practice, they managed by practicing at night and after games. The girls also got help from both Nets and Seton Hall cheerleaders at an all day clinic at VHS, where they learned new dances, cheers, and stunts which enhanced performances at basketball games.

This year's cheerleaders' dedication was evident as they boosted the spirit of their team. The essence of the girls' seasons was best captured by a Converse ad, "Cheerleading is not just some powder puff after-school activity. It's a sport. It takes practice, dedication, and sweat. There's no room for anyone who takes it lightly."

Hoopsters Have A 'Ball'

While most seniors were counting the days to graduation, Mike Ball's countdown had a different focus. Mike was counting to 1000 . . . 1000 points scored in his high school basketball career, that is.

The stands were packed on Friday night, February 18 as Mike took to the court needing 24 points. The crowd was large and rowdy. All eyes were on number 15. A countdown mounted on the wall by supportive fans read 24, then 10, then three.

Needing three points, Mike drove to the basket, hit his shot and was fouled. As he stepped to the foul line, needing just one point to reach 1000, not a single person was left sitting. Signs reading "Sink it" and "Lean, Mean #15" waved in the air. Hearts raced in anticipation. The ball went up and down through the hoop cleanly and Mike had his 1000.

The game was interrupted as fans streamed from the stands to congratulate Mike, throwing him in the air and carrying him on their shoulders. "The best moment that night was when everyone emptied the stands and I knew I had finally done it. I can't describe the feeling, but I'll never forget it."

The hoopsters this year depended on senior leadership from Mike, Colin van Antwerp, Keith Gibian, Scott Valentine and sharpshooter Mike Baker. Although the entire team was thrilled to be a part of Mike's personal milestone, they were somewhat disappointed that they did not reach all of their team goals, finishing slightly under .500 for the season.

Mother Nature, ENOUGH!!

While the girls' basketball team didn't play many scheduled games, they, along with everyone on the East Coast, got many opportunities to shovel, scrape, skid and slip this season.

The girls had a little more than opposing teams to compete against this year. Mother Nature decided to serve as the team's biggest rival. And for a few weeks, everyone thought that the only victories gained would be hers. Snow, ice and unusually cold weather resulted in cancellations and re-scheduling nightmares for athletic directors throughout the conference. In addition, the grueling weather conditions resulted in a slight loss of team morale.

"Everyone was getting so frustrated," commented senior Aimee Benemeli, "We just wanted to get out there and play, but the weather seemed to always get in the way."

Despite the frustrating conditions, the girls' basketball team managed to have a good season. With the help of both upperclassmen and underclassmen, the team managed to win a few games. One of their finest victories came against their long-time rival Cedar Grove. With this victory under their belt, the lady Hillbillies gained more enthusiasm to finish out the season with the traditional spirit accredited to the Verona Girls' Basketball Squad.

Senior Jamie Simeonidis says, "This year's games were tough, but although there were a lot of frustrations, I think everyone had some accomplishments to be proud of this season."

Poison Control, or Wrestling?

This year's wrestling team was a collection of various types of characters. Ranging from the team clowns Joe Vece and Mike DeSantis to the team leaders Mike DeMiro, Joe Carollo, and Herb Maisenbacher, this team was truly different, and each member had interesting experiences. Even the coach of the team, Gene Murphy had his share of embarrassing moments.

At a match against Delbarton, Coach Murphy inadvertently poisoned senior captain Mike DeMiro. When Mike got a bloody nose, Coach grabbed a rag to wipe his nose. What he did not realize was that the rag was soiled with ammonia and alcohol. The smell of the fumes caused Mike to become nauseous and pass out, but eventually, he recovered and handily won his match 14-1.

These humorous times were coupled with shining accomplishments as well. Proud moments were when Lou Violante placed first in the West Orange tournament, and Marcello Hernandez placed second in the Newark Academy tournament. Although the team was young, they improved greatly and did experience victories.

Junior captain Herb Maisenbacher said, "The team worked very hard this year, and I am looking forward to the success that we will hopefully continue to achieve next year."

The embarrassing, humorous and proud moments typify the success and hard work the wrestling team experienced during the 1994 season.

The Candyman

After two successful seasons in the American "B" Division, the Verona Ice Hockey Team approached the year with cautious optimism, as they elevated to the rugged "A" Division. Although they lost three key players to graduation, players were hopeful that they would complete a successful season.

The team reflected a mix of various personalities. Although winning was important, players realized that it was always important to see the humor in things. "Some of the things that happened during year, were so funny that I know I will never forget them," confesses Tim Goodwin.

One of these memorable times was at the away game against Toms River East. Just before the VHS team walked out onto the ice, an elderly rink attendant entered the locker room, mistaking VHS for the other team. The players all stared at the man's jacket which read "Tom the Candyman," and chimed in with their requests for candy. Tom reluctantly passed out sweets and then left the locker room.

After Tom left, the team was in hysterics. Coach Gary Farishian later described it as "the strangest thing that had ever happened to me in my five years of coaching at VHS." The team's light-hearted spirit was reflected in that game and set the tone for the rest of the season.

With their sense of humor, the ice hockey team showed that winning was produced not only on the ice, but off the ice and on the bus rides as well. From Janice's crazy antics to the back seats of the bus, the "1994 Hillbillies of Hockey" gave humor a new importance in Verona sports.

More Than a Splash

To most swimming means slipping into a two piece or shorts and wading into the pool or tanning at the beach. But to members of the Verona High School's swim team, swimming meant putting on up to five suits, a rubber swim cap and goggles, jumping into a cold pool, and swimming more yardage than fifty football fields before going home. But according to the swimmers, swimming really isn't that bad. Freshman Erica DePalo says, "I don't particularly enjoy practicing, but I love that feeling of accomplishment after I win a race, or when I get one of my best times."

The growing swim team attends two meets representing VHS. Essex County Championships were held on January 14, 1994 at Seton Hall University, and New Jersey State Championships were held in March. Because swimming isn't a popular sport at VHS, the team has never had an opportunity to have a relay team. But this year with three new freshmen, the team was able to have two relay teams. The 200 medley relay including Lauren Sprengel, swimming backstroke; Gretchen Hildebrandt, swimming breaststroke; Katie Clancy, swimming butterfly; and Mary Clancy, swimming freestyle, came in first place at Counties. The 200 free relay including Mary Clancy, Gretchen Hildebrandt, Katie Clancy, and Erica DePalo, placed second at Counties. Because the boys team only has two members, T.J. Onorato and Nick Mathers, there was no relay team for the boys.

This year's swim team was the largest ever in VHS history. Senior Gretchen Hildebrandt says, "This season has been great, I couldn't believe we took the medley relay! I hope next year there are some more new swimmers so that VHS can keep the title."

Up To Par

What could motivate twelve boys to arrive at school at 7:30 in the morning with clubs? No, they were not planning on committing any crimes — these clubs were drivers, putters, and five-irons to practice golf.

Since Montclair Golf Course was where the golf team played their home matches, they needed somewhere to practice, and 7:30 a.m. in the gym seemed to be the only available time and place. In addition to these early morning practices, team players often met at local driving ranges to improve their skills.

Although the nature of the sport dictated that the team practice together for only short hours at inconvenient times, their lack of practice time was not reflected in their performances at matches, since they experienced a rather successful season.

"I really love playing golf in my free time," expressed Mike Barron, "and I'm glad to have the opportunity to improve my skills through the school team."

...And One For All

Individual determination and united team spirit are two principal elements that motivated the track team. Unlike many other sports, in track each participant is in competition with the opposing team, as well as members of his own team, and himself.

Although track was often viewed more as an individual rather than a team sport, according to Eileen Scully, "in order to have a successful team as a whole, we each must work to achieve our personal best, while supporting our teammates."

Whether participants ran sprints, or distance, threw discus, or javelin, did jumps, hurdles, or pole vault, they all learned something about their own ability, and how to improve at their events.

In addition to achieving success in their events, Coach Ray Bowes also stressed self-discipline and responsibility. Erin McAleer recollected a funny time "when Mr. Bowes lectured us on being irresponsible about leaving our equipment at meets, and then that same day he left his keys on the bus."

Even for those few team members who were not so inspired by the sport, track proved to be worthwhile because it was a great way to keep fit while working on getting a tan.

Field of Dreams and Mud

"Crack!" The ball was knocked high into the air soaring over the heads of the outfielders, down the hill and almost to the door of F.N. Brown School. Although this scene was not always common, when a player made contact like this, it was an unforgettable feeling. "Nothing compares to the feeling that you get when you are running around the bases, and you realize that the shot you hit is a home run," explained Dave Anico.

With a mixture of sleet, rain and mud in the forecast for this year's baseball team it seemed as if the boys would never get their chance to achieve greatness. Because of the combination of sub-zero temperatures and numerous blizzards resulting in a marshy field, it was a miracle when the season finally began.

First year varsity coach Joel Throne was worried that the weather would disrupt the playing schedule, but once the season began, everything ran smoothly.

Playing To Win

"What a nice group we have here!" muttered Mr. Meyer in his usual tone about this year's softball team. Although the team was mainly young, and composed of few seniors, the efforts of each player reflected hard work and resulted in an enjoyable season.

The team lost some valuable hitters, which seemed to be an initial weakness. However, each player brought with her unique capabilities, and each exerted herself both at practices held indoors during the inclement weather, and at the games when it was finally possible to play on the field. The goal of the team was obviously to win, but the girls' main objective was to have fun, of course. Laura Apostolik commented, "We should have known what was in store for us this year, after Michelle (Foran) slid into first base last year!"

Although the girls' goofy antics often drove Coach Dave Conlon to a point of frustrated insanity, they insist, "at least we made each other laugh."

Winning Respect

Yes, Verona, there is a volleyball team!

Since volleyball is unusual from the other spring sports in that it was the only one played inside, it did not have a large fan following. In addition to winning, this year's volleyball team concentrated on gaining the respect that they their sport deserves.

Even though volleyball was the only spring sport that was played inside a gym, the team constantly was pushed out of the VHS gym and shoved to the middle school until mid-April when the other spring sports relinquished the gyms and moved to outside fields.

After completing a tough season, the team hopes that they gained the respect of more people. For the first time, the volleyball team spent time ranked in the county. By proving that they had the talent and the drive to be a successful team, the girls hope to have more fans next year. With the new coach, Paula Bentley, and the six returning starters, the girls are optimistic. Emily Koliopoulos explains, "our team goals have stretched as far as to strive for a championship volleyball banner on the gym wall."

Love Your Opponent Not Yourself

What's love got to do with it? Tennis is the only sport in which a person does not desire to have "love," since this would mean that he has no points. The players attempt to score, while keeping their opponents at love.

Most of the players on this year's tennis team returned from last year and improved drastically. Even though two key players did not return from last year, the team looked better as a whole.

"Everyone has worked really hard this year, which is nothing new," commented T.J. Onorato, "but it has really paid off."

Although players could not sight any drastically different preparations for the season, or occurrences at practices, the team seemed to improve.

"The advantage of having a young team for a couple of years," told James Skinner, "is that eventually the team matures into capable players who win matches."

Clockwise from right: Scott Neale warms up his stroke. Jon-Eric Burgess exhibits his forehand technique. James Skinner stretches before a match. Tim Goodwin works on his killer serve.

When I grow-up I want to go to college.

Having you for a daughter has been one of life's greatest gifts.....

For all you've been, for all you are, and for all you're yet to be.... We love you.

Kel,

Only kidding, we knew
You wouldn't be "UNB" material.

Love,

Kevin

If I work with animals
I would like to be the head of the zoo. I would go to school for zoology. I would learn about the many different types of animals and how they live.
Whatever I do when I grow-up, I will try my best to do a good job.

David:

"May the good Lord be with you down every road you roam, and may sunshine and happiness surround you when you're far from home. Be courageous and be brave, and in our hearts you will remain Forever Young.

... and when you finally fly away, we will be hoping that we served you well; for in the wisdom of a lifetime, no one can ever tell, but whatever road you chose, we'll be behind you win or lose, Forever Young."

Dear Dania

*Today from high school you graduate our precious Dinny dear
it's been a wonderful experience watching you through the years*

You took first steps, you grew your teeth you learned to follow rules and then one day to our surprise off you ventured to school

*The dolls and toys that you hold close were set aside for books
the crooked teeth, the ponytails were replaced with good looks*

Though life has played its tricks on you and some things have gone wrong, you never let it get you down you've proven yourself strong

The need for work and moral values how quickly you have learned respect for self as well as others you have managed to earn

You know that there are those around you who give you lots of love you've come to recognize the power of our Lord up above

Congratulations and much love we wish you from our heart as you complete your high school days and new adventures start .

WE'RE VERY PROUD OF YOU DINNY

Through conflicts and squabbles both large and small
 We three remained friends and made it through all
 Now it is time for each of us to part
 Knowing we'll keep shared mem'ries in our hearts
 Never forget our 'cross town trek
 When we feared that bats would bite our necks
 We argued and yelled, "We don't love you JULE!"
 And then fell in the street like stumbling fools
 We've traveled abroad to unknown foreign places
 But took comfort in seeing each other's friendly faces
 Bus time card games with Gretch made rides easy to bear
 And humor was found at the sight of Matt's crazy hair
 Remember the kitchen-totalled after the "Jello Fight"
 And how cleaning the mess almost took us all night
 We always got spooked hiking up into the woods
 In the dark someone would yell "Can't see so good?"
 Every New Year's Eve we've spent together for the last four Even when the champagne cork almost broke the door
 As Lauren greeted '92 with her head in the can
 Or we rang in '93 screaming in the streets at 2am
 Although we each have unique memories on our own
 We'll always have each other and we'll never be alone
 Goofy sayings and classic moments in our minds will remain
 Long after nothing else seems to be the same
 For years after graduation Neaners, Jules, and Laur
 Will recall unforgettable moments shared together with THE CLASS OF '94.

"Conventionality belongs to yesterday" When it all comes down to it I have 2 things to say,Watch out for the snowbanks and whatever you do, don't change. . .YOUR PERFECT!!! TRACY:Is it really possible to be so close and yet so far away. . .I guess so. You take the good you take the bad you take them both and there you have our prom weekend! "I'm a believer oooohh" The key is to look at all the ANGLES! Par le vu. . .whatever we survived! POOL-who needs bathing suits. What ever became of PEPE? All I have to say is "It's not easy being cheesy" and by the way you owe me $423,000,000.00 But who really kept track! ERIN:You'll always be more to me than just a "SIDEKICK" to me. I'm still feelin GROOV-E! Demerging w/ wally. BEAR-How did that get started again? SHORE Can we borrow your jetski? American Pie AHHHH! Walkin around the halls-I think it's time we take a seat! "I will survive" Hey Bear, never stop DREAMING! JAIME:"Nice Socks!" CHRISTINA M:You're like a sister to me! Long talks,long walks-"Where's the truck?" Thanks for always being there for me-ILU! ARIANNA G:Thanks for all the movies and Hot Cocol Joe M:If you ever need me to beat you up just call, I'll be there faster than you can say TICKMAN! MELISSA S:Thanks for being my Foot Stompin Honky Tonkin Pie Bakin Bid!! LIZ W:Where would I be today if we hadn't been attached at the hip?(L.S.) FRANCESCA S:I never could of survived with out you, Thanks! MOM,DAD,AND DUNKIE! THANKYOU SO MUCH,I LOVE YOU! To everyone who made me smile,I LOVE YOU !!!

TRACY-Laura:No matter what,nothing ever separates us. We definitely prove opposites attract! Remember cruisin w/ Wally,Dinner Friday Nights, getting lost in parking lots, GREASE, Angles test? Do we have notes?! Dear Abby, Dr. Ruth, Studying for exams at poolside, BATMAN-I'm really scared! The God the only man we agreed on! Loquacious, Prom Disaster, TCBY, Gotta go to that party! X-Mass shopping, Hey FLIP,wassup?! DIANA:6MOP Anyone? Anyone? Roth was Great! OLL-you debutante! Connie, Gibson, Antoinette, Young, who's next?! GSP one T-Shirt! gallons of ice tea snax in the car, AP BIO, FRANCE Vu le vu. . .Out to lunch always late. ERIN:Hey Bear! Still Don't know where that came from SIDEKICK, Chinese Firedrill, out to lunch, Frank dilemma, France. JAIME:Your always there, whether I want you to be or not! Kidding aside, Thank buddy! 90210 I gotta get out of here! He peed on my head! BK run-literally! OK-I'm coming over now! Buffalo w/ DEKE Shannon and Tara Ring-n-Run dark in the tracks! Finkle didn't help! Let's blow this joint! JON:Beaker,Froggie,Pain,Don I think I'm gonna stab someone Cut it out! Yea,I walked to your house-lar! But it's my nature to whine! Great times senior year-Thanx! MOM,DAD your the wind beneath my wings-couldn't have done it w/o you! Danny,Craig I'm so proud of you guys! Nanny no more laundry, your the best! Crystal stay young and beautiful. I LOVE YOU ALL!

Colin,

We are so proud of your Scholastic and Athletic accomplishments. We know your future will be a glowing success!

Mom, Wendy and Gram

Special Memories and thoughts of Mrs. Byrne:

A smiling face,
A caring heart
Always thinking of someone else,
Never of herself.
She was someone special to all.
We will never forget her
No matter what!
We will love you always
And want to thank you
For the special memories
And caring heart.
We love you!!!!

- Not any old animal crackers, but ShopRite Animal Crackers!!!!
- Jenn Mell
- The way she cared about her students. She always had time to talk to us or help us, no matter what she was doing. Mrs. Byrne was always there to listen.
- Aimee Benimeli
- She was like a mother to us.
- Michelle Murphy
- Her little red sports car and motorcycle
- Jenn Bachan
- Her love of animals — especially her raccoons and rabbits
- Mrs. Prendergast and Jenn Bachan
- "If you dress right, act right, and talk right, you will be alright. Well for some of you. . . hmmm. . . others we will have to talk."
- Michelle Murphy
- You never get a second chance to make a good first impression.
- Melissa Distefano
- Mrs. Byrne was the friendliest person I knew. She had a heart of gold. She will be greatly missed.
- Karyn Datzko.
- MRS BYRNE WAS NOT ONLY OUR TEACHER BUT OUR FRIEND AS WELL — WE WILL MISS YOU GREATLY. . .

CLOSING

just the end

OH, THE PLACES YOU'LL GO!

Congratulations!

Today is your day.

You're off to great places!

You're off and away!

You have brains in your head.

You have feet in your shoes.

You can steer yourself any direction you choose.

You're on your own,
and know what you know.

And YOU are the guy who'll decide where to go.

You're off to Great Places!

Today is your day!

Your mountain is waiting.

So . . . GET ON YOUR WAY!

Through our years together,
we've remained close at heart.

Graduation is here;

And it's now time to part.

The unique combinations of kids in the class

Gave this year's seniors
unmistakable sass

Distinct individuals of various cliques
make the Class of '94
one with . . .

JUST THE RIGHT MIX!!
